New drug gives relief to herpes victims

by Karen Smith

A new drug, acyclovir, which is sold under the brand name Zovirax, is giving relief to patients who experience recurrent herpes. It can be taken intravenously, orally or applied to the skin as an ointment. Acyclovir is prescribed to people who would otherwise be miserable, on an average, three or four times a year, because of reoccuring episodes.

Herpes is the medical name for a group of similar viruses. To most people, however, herpes is the common term for infections caused by the Herpes Simplex Virus (HSV). HSV infections take the form of blisters or lesions that tend to occur periodically, causing itching & pain.

There are two types of HSV. In most cases, Type 1 (HSV-1) causes cold sores or fever blisters, and Type 2 (HSV-2) causes genital herpes. The oral or ointment form of acyclovir is generally prescribed for patients with HSV-2.

Only 10 percent of the people with the disease actually need the Cedar Clinic in Menomonie. Most people with herpes have milder cases, much like cold sores that are located on the genitals.

Acyclovir is not a cure for herpes, but it inhibits the virus from reproducing itself. The inhibiting effect of the drug promotes the healing of the active lesions, which spread the infection.

The effects of the drug allow the herpes victim to manage their disease, enabling them to avoid giving the disease to others. Acyclovir is most effective when used during the first stage of an episode.

> "I see the problem as being that to many men and women are not being careful."
> —Dr. Schleifer

It has been found that 40 percent of herpes victims never have a reoccuring episode after the first appearance of the disease. Usually, however, the first eruption is the worst. The virus then lodges itself in the spine of its victim, laying dormant there until something triggers a recurrance. Stress seems to be a major factor in episodes of herpes virus activity.

Although acyclovir doesn't actually kill the virus, it is seen as an excellent method of treatment. "Acyclovir is an ideal drug," Deyo-Svendson said. "It isn't absorbed into normal or abnormal cells, making side-effects minimal." The few side-effects which may appear include nausea and headaches.

As with any drug, acyclovir has it's drawbacks. "It isn't as effective as penicillin is for strep, for example," Deyo-Svendson said, "because the effects aren't immediate." This occurs because acyclovir relies on the body's immune system for the actual recovery.

"It can also become expensive when used to prevent reoccurances," Svendson added. Taking daily doses of the oral form can be used to prevent an outbreak.

Dr. Schleifer of the UW-Stout Student Health Center, is concerned about problems arising from the possible development of resistance to the drug after prolonged use. "We are trying different protocol, such as 4-6 months on the medication instead of a year, for example, so patients don't develop resistance." Schleifer said.

"I see the problem as being that too many men and women are not being careful." Schleifer said. "Many girls think they are safe (from herpes) because they are on the pill." Birth control pills do not prevent herpes infection.

"I had enough cases last year that I think everyone should use barrier contraception," Schleifer medication, according to Dr. Deyo-Svendson, a physician at the Red said, referring to the use of prophylactics to prevent infection.

Students can receive treatment at the Student Health Center, but they are usually referred to a private doctor.

Someday soon, herpes may be treated by new, more effective drugs. Perhaps it will someday be prevented by a vaccine for a lifetime of prevention. Until then, acyclovir provides dramatic relief for many people with genital herpes and helps to prevent the spread of infection.

To learn more about herpes or its treatment, consult your physician or the Student Health Center. Acyclovir is available only by prescription.

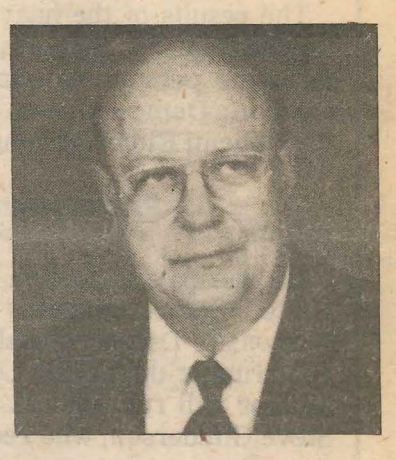
Community members roll out welcome mat

by Dale Bohnert



Mayor Stokke

Community members, area merchants and representative of student organizations joined to welcome newcoming UW-Stout students at "Meet Menomonie Night" on September 2.

An annual event, "Meet Menomonie Night" is designed to give incoming freshmen and transfer students an opportunity to get acquainted with community members and other students.

Representatives from area businesses and organizations combined their efforts to greet new students and familiarize them with services that they have to offer.

Duane Bauer, executive director of the Greater Menomonie Area Chamber of Commerce explained that "The primary purpose of 'Meet Menomonie Night' is to welcome incoming freshmen and transfer students and make them feel like a special part of the community." The Chamber of Commerce coordinated and provided funding for the event.

This year, the Fourth Annual "Meet Menomonie Night" was held in Wilson Park.

All new students were invited and provided with free admission tickets. Members of the general public were also invited to attend for a small admission fee.

Of an expected turnout of 1,500 students, over 1,400 attended. 100 area merchants also attended .

Among those participating were Mayor Charles Stokke and UW-Stout's Chancellor Robert Swanson.

Also attending were several representatives from Stout student organizations. Paul Nelson, president of the Stout Student Association (SSA) said that he was pleased with the "up-beat" atmosphere and good turnout. The SSA also co-sponsored the event.

Following a picnic-style dinner, brief comments were given by several local officials and organization leaders welcoming the students.

Prizes donated by area merchants were given away in numerous drawings.

Corey Garbisch, a freshman, expressed his reactions by saying, "I was amazed by the number of students. The lines to the food were long but that gave me a chance to meet a lot of new people."

Another freshman participant, Beth Milsten, said, "I was excited to see so many new people and it's nice to know I won't be alone as a new student on campus."

Area merchants who help sponsor the event do so to remind students that they are a welcome part of the community.

Other sponsors included the Stout Alumni Association and the Stout University Foundation Inc.

Bhopal brings suit

The government of India filed suit against Union Carbide on Friday, September 5, for an unspecified amount of damages for the December 1984 poison gas leak which eminated from a Union Carbide plant, killing at least 2,000 people.

The Indian government is asking for punitive damages "in an amount sufficient" to deter Carbide and other multination corporations "from willful, malicious and wanton disregard of the right and safety" of Indian citzens.

The trial is not expected to start until next year and may last for as long as fifteen years.

Stout restaurant provides experience

by Cosmas Anne Whitten

An extensive restaurant training program starts at UW-Stout as the new school year begins. This training program is called Corner III. With a turnover rate which gives it a new staff each semester, In order to run Corner III, which is located on the third floor of the Home Economics building, faculty members have to train ten crews to staff the restaurant facility. The staff to be trained are UW-Stout students. Faculty members Stephen Kissler, Phil McGuirk and graduate student Peter D'Sousa provide the training.

Each year Corner III serves approximately 32,000 guests which includes students, parents, and faculty members. Corner III is also a showcase of talent for the many recruiters who seek to employ Stout students.

Corner III has impressed many visitors to UW-Stout, including the President of Marriott Corporation, Bill Marriott and Stouffer Hotel and Restaurant President, Bill Hulett.

Unlike other restaurants, Corner III has a different menu and theme everyday. During lunch, which is served cafeteria style, you could experience Oktoberfest and German foods, Mardi Gras and Cajun cooking, or try using chopsticks for a meal designed to celebrate the Chinese New Year.

During the evening, the lights dim and Corner III transforms into a full service, elegant dining room. Dinner includes several courses and menu selections every evening. Food preparation methods differ as often as the themes do. These include an outdoor barbecue, or oriental cuisine prepared tableside, and don't be surprised if one evening your dessert is flaming.

Student managers plan weeks in advance for their meal. Each meal has a different team of managers while students rotate job duties so that the same tasks are never performed twice, thus learning all aspects of a restaurant from the kitchen to the serving of the meal.

> "We learn from them as they learn from us.
> —Philip McGuirk, Instructor"

Students preparing lunch are registered in Quantity Foods Production. The service is cafeteria style which can be convenient to students between classes. Corner III usually serves lunch to about 90 guests daily with an average check total of $2.25. This semester Corner III will be opening October 6 for lunch which will be served Monday through Friday from 11:20 to 12:30.

The evening dinner, which is run by Restaurant Operations students caters to a minimum of 50 guests a night. The first evening meal will be served October 13. Corner III will then be open Monday through Thursday every week, with an average check totaling $6.95 per person. Reservation can be made for times between 4:45 and 6:15 by calling x-2244 or x-1995.

Corner III is located in the southwest corner on the third floor of the Home Economics building. Since this summer, Corner III has had a salad bar which is incorporated into many of the meals.

Phil McGuirk, who has taught in Corner III the past 10 years, says he enjoys working with all the students. "I find that they (students) are creative in developing new and innovative ways in doing things, all of them have a great interest in working in different areas. We learn from them as they learn from us."

Bookstore implements new plan to help decrease shoplifting rate

by Laura Olson

"We'd rather deter them than catch them, and we'd rather catch them than miss them," said UW-Stout Bookstore Manager Bill Potter.

Potter noticed an increase in theft of specific items during the 1985-86 year. Potter said that the items included Scotch-Cross Pens, open display items and blister card merchandise, the type which hangs on metal hooks.

Although the Bookstore has security mirrors and signs warning would-be shoplifters of the penalties for the offence, the incidence of theft has gone up. This, according to Potter, is due to poor lighting and tall display fixtures.

The Bookstore is implementing a three-part plan to discourage theft. First, a customer is met with a sign asking that they leave their back pack on a shelf before entering the bookstore. Second, a bookstore employee is assigned to patrol the floor at all times to maintain surveillance. To fulfill the third part of the theft prevention program, three cameras were installed to monitor customers.

Bookstore employees are asked to keep an eye on the cameras. "We could not use the mirrors as effectively as we would like because of the poor lighting in the bookstore," Potter said.

The Bookstore considered installing a 3M security system like that in the UM-Stout library. This would have insured that merchandise was secured through the use of a laser computer code. The idea was disregarded for cost reasons.

> "We haven't caught anyone shoplifting yet this year.
> —Bill Potter Bookstore Manager"

Potter has suggested two more ideas to further decrease Bookstore theft. Merchandise could be stored elsewhere in the building. More floor space could make it easier to lower the shelving fixtures. This would solve problems caused by too many concealed areas created by merchandise stacked too high and packed into the store too densely.

"We haven't caught anyone shoplifting yet this year," Potter said.

Students seem to be responding positively to the new Bookstore security policies.

"One student told me he was glad we finally enforced security; he was surprised that we hadn't done it before," said Bookstore secretary, Rita Koshenam.

"Most students set their backpacks down without being asked," said Bookstore worker, Kay Weber.

Store manager Potter stated that the Student Activities fees of all students' will increase with the high incidence of theft. If the Bookstore shows a deficit due to theft, he said, the students will pay via an increase in the Student Activities fee.

Students suspected of theft will be prosecuted on civil misdemeanor charges which are punishable by a $300 fine.

Apartheid, a growing campus concern

by Suresh Seedo

South African aparthied is a highly controversial issue which has stirred active concern from university students. This growing concern is illustrated by demonstrations in support of sanctions against South Africa.

According to Josh Nessen, student coordinator of the American Committee on South Africa, 34 American universities have divested themselves from holdings in South African companies within the last one and a half years.

The American Committee on South Africa, based in New York, has a goal of helping and supporting refugee projects and the people subjected to apartheid.

Nessen emphasized that "the level of divestiture from the United States has drastically risen to $3 billion from April 11, 1986 to the present day." Also, he continued, "the state of Wisconsin was one of the first to divest from South Africa."

UW-Madison students have been very involved in protests supporting divestment.

Nessen added that on October 10, 1986 there will be a nationwide day of protest for those people who wish to express their desire for divestiture and sanctions against South Africa. Nessen speculated that the protests will continue at least until the end of October. Congress is expected to decide what policy to execute on South African issues toward the end of that month.

Student protests support sanctions and divestment as a way to pressure the white South African government into reform.

Protests are also being made at British universities. Many universities throughout Britain are engaging in disinvestment campaigns to eliminate the holdings of their universities in companies with South African connections. Presently, seven Oxford colleges withdrew their accounts from Barclays Bank in South Africa.

Most of the colleges withdrew their investments under the pressure of intense student lobbying.

Divestment from South Africa means that the country's annual deficit could increase. Pro- Vice-Chancellor of Durham University, Professor John Clark, said that this possibility was the prime reason that Durham decided not to divest from South Africa.

Since 1983, Barclays Bank of Britain claims to have lost 10 percent of the student banking market. Similarly, according to Nessen of the American Committee on South Africa, the level of U.S. investments in South Africa have dropped 1.3 billion, or 20 percent, in the past year.

On the 15th of August this year, the U.S. Senate voted 84-14 to impose an expanded package of new economic sanctions against South Africa. This package includes the banning of many imports from South Africa and barring U.S. investments and loans.

President Reagan continues to maintain a position of oppossition to sanctions against South Africa, although he deplores apartheid.

Meanwhile, the conditions in South Africa continue to deteriorate, despite the efforts of government officials to suppress unrest and journalistic freedoms. On September 3rd, the government of South Africa imposed strict restrictions on reporters covering the actions of security forces.

The restriction order, issued by General Johan Coetzee, Police Commissioner, was published the day before mass funeral services were held in Soweto for 20 blacks killed during unrest about two weeks ago. Even the funeral services were met with violence.

Unallocated funding for SSA block party

by Kelly Cohorst

The Stout Student Association(SSA) has been making plans for the 1st Annual Block-Party project, "Bash In The Grass." The project started out as an idea from SSA President Paul D. Nelson and has developed into a homecoming event.

Approximately $4000 was allocated to fund "Bash In The Grass." The funds came from the unallocated account of the SSA's budget. Nelson stated that "$4000 may not be enough for all the unforeseen expenditures. The funding committee may have underspent, if anything."

Unallocated funds are funds which are not distributed to specific organizations during the budget allocation proceedings. $5000 was allocated to the unallocated account for this year's budget.

"The block party is expected to have a turn out of 3000-5000 students and alumni," said Julie Weiss, Vice-President of Academic Affairs(VPAA). "The block party is also the best alternative for ALL students, rather than going up town and getting smashed."

Entertainment for the event would include three live bands: Gerard, The Metro North Stars and Slant, a local band. Food and non-alcoholic beverages would be served at the event.

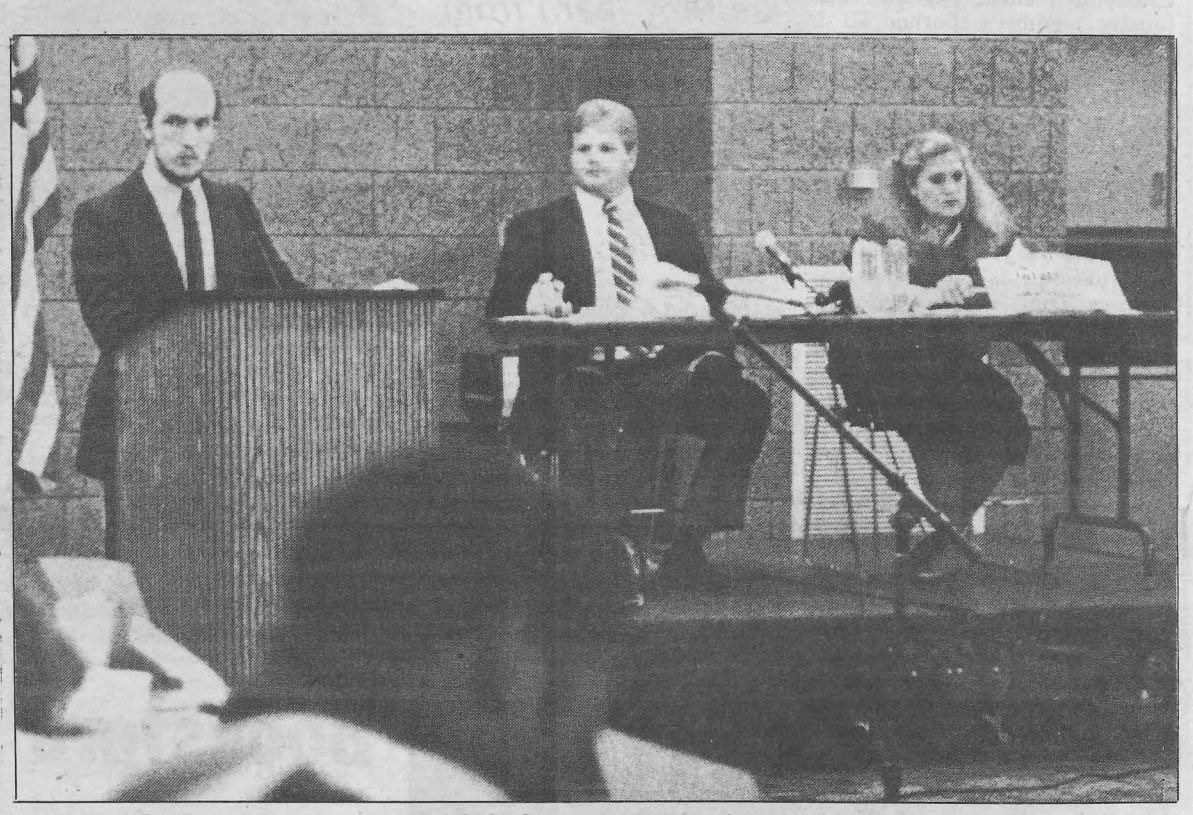
Newly-elected Mayor Chuck Stokke spoke at open forum at the SSA meeting on Tuesday night. Stokke said that nothing has changed in the relationship between the UW-Stout students and the citizens of Menomonie since the recent change in the structure of Menomonie city government. "It (the relationship) is still unsettled." Stokke said. He said that he feels the difference between students and citizens is more in the mind than in reality.

Vice-President of Financial Affairs, Gary Harder reported that the Cooperative Programing Board had their first meeting last week. Harder, who chairs the committee, announced that allocation of Cooperative Programing funds would not be approved by the Senate. The reason, he explained, was that it would have been too lengthy a process.

Applications for Cooperative Programing funds, turned in to the SSA office by Tuesday, September 16, will be reviewed on Wednesday, September 17 at the Cooperative Programing Board meeting. The Board will issue a decision on those applications on Thursday, September 18. This process will continue each week until the funds are distributed.

Dawn Dierkes was appointed to the Executive Secretary position of SSA by the Senate. Connie Schnelle was appointed to the Women's Affairs Senate position.

A motion was tabled for three weeks which would have allowed the Stoutonia reporter covering SSA to have an official non-voting seat beside the other Senators.



Robb Zimdars, United Council Director of the SSA, delivers his report at the fifth session of the 17th Congress. Connie Schnelle's appointment to the position of Women's Affairs Senator was approved by the Senators. Schnelle will travel with the UW-Stout delegation to this weekend's United Council meeting in Madison. (Stoutonia photo by Dan Banach)

Man charged with murder

A 26-year-old Crosby, Texas man has been charged with the murder of UW-Stout student Sani Tela. Tela, a Nigerian student, was allegedly murdered on June 19, 1982. Michael Neubauer, who turned himself over to the Menomonie City Police, has been bound over for trial. Neubauer posted a $100,000 certificate of deposit to meet the bail requirement. Neubauer's trial on charges of first-degree murder has been set for December 1 through 12.

Library charges for printing

The Library Learning Center Computing Laboratory has initiated user charges for printing services, effective September 3, 1986.

No cash or coins will be accepted as payment. Each user will need to get a Materials Purchase Card, available in $5.00 or $10.00 amounts. These cards can be purchased at the administrative offices of Learning Resources, Room 208 in the Library Learning Center. The office is open from 8:00am-4:30pm, Monday through Friday.

Lab attendants will punch out charges for each page used on the Materials Purchase Card, according to the amount and type of printing completed.

Sabatino resigns from staff

Over the summer, Dr. David Sabatino resigned from his position on the staff of UW-Stout.

Sabatino had already resigned as Dean of the School of Education and Human Services after two charges of sexual harassment were brought against him by graduate assistants employed in his office. Positive Action Committee number 4 (PAC number 4) heard the case, just before the school year ended, according to complaint procedures established in the Wisconsin Administrative Code.

PAC number 4 issued recommendations on the case to Chancellor Robert Swanson advised Sabatino of the need to "stay within the bounds of behavior defined in the UW-Stout Faculty Handbook..."

Sabatino submitted a letter of resignation from his post as dean effective September 1, 1986. Dr. Paul Hoffman is acting Dean of the School of Education and Human Services.

Laws effect students

There are a number of laws in effect in the city of Menomonie which students should keep in mind. Noisy parties and loud music, which have been a source of complaints from neighbors, can cause a person to be fined. The offense carries a penalty of $125 the first time and $250 for the second offense.

Bicycles are supposed to be registered with the city police within ten days of the date you bring the bike into Menomonie. The bond for possessing an outlaw bike is $21.50. The registration tags only cost $2.00 and are available at the Menomonie City Police station.

No dogs, cats or other pets may run at large in the City of Menomonie. Pets must be under the immediate control of the owner. Dogs must be licensed and the bond required to release an impounded animal is $21.20.

Building remodeled

Chancellor Robert Swanson reported that the remodeling project which will convert the old student center into a graphic arts and instructional photography facility should be completed in January of this year. Chancellor Swanson made this report in his first fall semester address to the staff of UW-Stout on Tuesday, August 26, 1986.

"Future projects," said Swanson, "will mean remodeling—not new buildings. Our emphasis will be to remodel existing space to convert it to changed needs."

The remodeled graphic arts facility will have about 37,000 square feet of classrooms and laboratories.

Students need amenable library system created

As the UW-Stout administration goes out of its way to eradicate cleaning and maintenance costs at the Library Learning Center the intended purpose of the library has been overlooked.

Now that the possession of empty containers in the library has been declared a violation the LLC may indeed be spotless but our concern is that few if any students will want to go there anymore.

The LLC's early closing hours remove the lone option many students wished they had to study late at night in a quiet atmosphere conducive to reading and writing. Now, Stout students are equally upset that the common habit of eating food and drinking beverages while studying has been disallowed in the LLC to the extent that students feel insulted.

Although drunk drivers kill thousands on America's highways each year Americans must be allowed to drive. Although an occasional student may handle either food or drinks irresponsibly in the LLC the remainder of the Stout community ought not to be penalized.

By enforcing the food and drink prohibition in the LLC the Stout administration ignores the serious investment by many students in terms of time and money to earn a degree that will be valuable helping them acquire a strong start in the career of their choice. Stout students are being treated like irresponsible party monsters who only threaten the peace of the LLC.

The combination of the difficulty caused for many students by the early closing hours at the LLC and the inability to relax and enjoy a soft drink while they study there leaves the LLC with a serious student relations problem.

The multimillion dollar investment required to build and maintain the LLC should encourage the administration to get its money's worth by attracting as many students as possible rather than turning them away with the implementation of rules that merely serve to make LLC upkeep convenient as possible. The LLC was built to serve the students and faculty rather than the druthers of the administration.

If student considerations were given equal weight with the adminstration's, then the situation may result where the students feel invited to study at the library while the administration benefits from the library's increased popularity at little cost to their budget.

Jef Maynard

Somebody once said that life was a tale told by a fool. You want to hear a funny story?

Welcome back to Stout.

What are you taking up at Stout...space? Every so often we search for meaning or knowledge or reality etc. and all we come up with is dustballs from the deepest recesses of our cranial caverns. Remember recess? That's when you know you are going to college, there's no recess.

This morning, I woke up 17 minutes before my first class. After a condensed version of my morning ritual, homage to the hot and cold trinity, I peddled off to the fieldhouse. Johnson Fieldhouse, what a catchy name. This old Rod Stewart song was rolling through my head, "It's late September and I really should be back at school." It all happened so suddenly. The last thing I remember was the Fourth of July. Now it's September and I really should be back at school.

Don't misunderstand me, I really don't mind spending over $700 for the opportunity to take gym classes. Nope, money is no object. I'll make it all back with my high income career which begins at Stout. I'll make it all back in the first week probably. Are you following all this?

You can't see this, but on the top of my Zenith VDT it says: "F1 Help." (Heaven knows I need it, but when I push F1, it doesn't tell me what to write, just how to write it.) Then it says: "JustOff," which means nothing to me. It might as well say "JustBecause."

After that the top line reads: "97(percent) Free." That's true of just about anything, I suppose. Then, "99 (percent) point." which I think refers to the Universal Law that states "99 percent of everything is bullshit." For example, shall I continue?

Sometimes various realities overlap. You feel like you are in two places at once. For example:

A Play Created From Two Seperate Plays Which Were Never Meant to Be Performed Together.

Jelliwell: You'll soon find out whether I'm mad or not.

Eddie: That will be fine. Then perhaps I can dance with you.

Dewlip [his gloom unrelieved]: It's very strange: I go away for one night, and the consequence is that, by the time I return, the entire world has lost its balance.

Mrs. White: I'll enjoy that. Goodbye Edward.

(Note: Edward and Mrs. White are in the wrong reality and don't seem too upset about it.)

Jelliwell: [striding fiercely up and down]: I'll give you balance if you talk to me. (Sure you will).

Mrs. Rutherford: Have you seen my cigarette, Professor White?

Jelliwell: Anyway, Julia will bear me out; no one likes a joke or a bit of wholesome fun more than I do. I don't really even mind –

Mrs. White: Here is the last trick. I led hearts and you discarded.

Julia: Johnny, it would be so nice if you would come to the point. (You, dear readers are probably saying much the same thing).

Professor White: Anything is liable to happen to Mrs. Rutherford.

Jelliwell: Alright, the point is, for months and months, you've been making love to my wife. Now: do you deny it?

Eddie [returns through the side door] I'll bet that's the hottest she's been in a long time.

"To be or not to be. Whether tis nobler in the mind to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune..."

"To be or not to be. Whether there is no blood in the mind..."

--Brian Hogan.

In Brooklyn, it goes, "To be or what?"

You want the whole thing to make sense. There is nothing wrong with that as a concept until you get to the application. Then it all makes as much sense as a tale told by a fool. That's Life 101.

Subject: Democrat assesses issues confronting Gunderson's attempted re-election

by Tim Hopkins

Chesie Lee, runner-up in the Democratic congressional primary to Lee Mulder in Wisconsin's 3rd district this past Tuesday, visited UW-Stout to talk to students about the issues. Lee entered the race last January after she was convinced that Congressman Steve Gunderson (Republican, Osseo) was vulnerable due to his congressional voting record. She differentiated herself from the incumbent Gunderson concerning the issues. She has a law degree and has worked as a public defender and now shares a law practice with her husband William.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS THE DISTINCT DIFFERNCE BETWEEN CHESIE LEE AND STEVE GUNDERSON?

LEE: I would be a person who would be voting the interests of this district, where I feel that his votes have been more inline toward promoting large corporate farming and to increase our deficit in order to increase the military at the expense of the interests of this district, like education.

STOUTONIA: WHAT HAS BEEN YOUR BASE OF SUPPORT IN THE CAMPAIGN?

LEE: My base of support has been from all walks of life from working women to professionals to farmers. The farmers are really angry. I have a lot of students who are involved in my campaign.

STOUTONIA: STEVE GUNDERSON IS REPORTED TO HAVE THE FARMERS' SUPPORT. WHAT SORT OF SOLUTIONS DO YOU OFFER THE FARMING COMMUNITY?

LEE: We need to save the family farm. 85 percent of the subsidies go to 15 percent of the farmers. the way we give out subsidies really helps large corporate farms as opposed to family farms. We have a minimum wage for laborers. We should have a minimum price for farmers to see that the costs of production are covered. We're telling farmers that they are producing surpluses but they can turn on the tv evening news that tells them that there are starving people all over the world, even in our own country. We need to find a way to get the food to the people who need it. Abuse of chemicals that are destroying our groundwater and stopping our topsoil from washing down our rivers are two main concerns being voiced by farmers today.

STOUTONIA: HOW DOES YOUR STAND ON FOREIGN POLICY COMPARE WITH STEVE GUNDERSON?

LEE: Steve Gunderson voted for aid to the Contras. I can't give any reason for giving aid to the Contras. First, they didn't account for the aid we gave them last year. Second, I fear we're just driving the Nicaraguan government into a close alliance with the Soviet Union. In any case, the U.S. should not be overthrowing other governments. I would support the Contadora peace process and incentives for the Nicaraguan government to become more democratic.

Chesie Lee

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS YOUR RESPONSE TO THE ADMINISTRATION'S CONSTRUCTIVE ENGAGEMENT POLICY CONCERNING SOUTH AFRICA?

LEE: I would support strong economic sanctions against South Africa to encourage them to move toward rapid reform.

Bottom Line

On the time warp

Rich Brueckner

"When I see the future, I close my eyes." --Peter Gabriel

You are about to enter another dimension, not one of sight and sound--but of time. At the signpost up ahead, it's The Quinine Zone.

SCENE 1: Somewhere high atop the administration building...

"Why hello there, Buffalo Bob. Are you excited about the new school year?"

"Oh, you're darn tootin' I am, Howdy. I have something special for everyone to do this first week. We're going to pretend that Wednesday is Monday, except that after 5 PM, we'll stop pretending until the next morning."

"Bob, that's the most assinine idea I've ever heard. Are you out of your frotting mind?"

"But that's not even the best part, Howdy. I'm also going to schedule Thursday classes on Saturday."

SCENE 2: It's Thursday morning in the Memorial Student Center. A Stoutonia columnist is approaching his office when he is struck by de ja vu; the Campus Crusaders are showing their anti-rock video on the cobblestone court again. A little Blue Devil appears on his shoulder and exclaims:

"Jesus Christ! Are those guys going to show that frotting propaganda shit every God-damned week?"

"I sure hope not," says the columnist. Just then, a little angel appears on his shoulder and says:

"You two really piss me off; these people are trying to save you. Just listen to that AC/DC; doesn't it make you depraved as hell?"

The Blue Devil then shouts over to the angel: "Yeah it sure does," he says, grabbing himself between the legs. "Here, suck on this, you frotting homo!"

SCENE 3: It's Friday night on the deck behind the Tap. Bob's bullshit schedule has taken its toll. Students, totally confused as to which day it is, decide to drink triple gin and tonics until they become totally confused as to what their name is.

Suddenly, a distraught young man climbs atop the fence and poises to jump.

"I told my girlfriend to meet me here Friday night and she hasn't shown up yet," he says to the crowd. "She blew me off; life isn't worth living."

"Wait, don't jump," says a voice in the crowd. "I think tonite is Wednesday night, isn't it?"

"No, no, no, it's Friday night." says another voice. "Go ahead and jump!"

SCENE 4: It's Saturday morning and the "Man and the Environment" class is in full swing. The students are hung over as hell and barely aware of their environment. The instructor is lecturing on the pollution caused by animal waste.

"Animal waste is a predominant pollution problem in this area," says the instructor. A student (who looks like death warmed over) sticks his tounge out and responds:

"Yeah, I know all about that," he says. "I swear that some dog shit in my mouth last night."

SCENE 5: Meanwhile at the Administration Building...

"Say Bob, I don't think that Saturday class is going over too well; Brueckner and some other students are out there picketing the building."

"Oh no, what's that little prick up to now?" asked Bob.

"Well, the signs say SATURDAY CLASS? UP YOUR ASS! "

I will meet with my classes and see what the students response is. Well it is probably necessary to get the proper number of class hours in for a semester, but it does make things a bit awkward.

I think it sucks. I do not like to get up early, especially on a Saturday.

I am so confused already as it is. I am a transfer student and do not understand the way things are done here.

It is going to start the program off, with an unusual practice. They have to get into the swing of things, and making up classes is only natural. We pay to go to school so we might as well get our money's worth.

Melody Palmer,
Junior,
Psychology

I think that it is stupid. I had to work until 3:30 in the morning, and I am tired today, but you have to get the classes in, what can you do. I think I can put up with it for one Saturday.

Cryptic Notes

Bloopers and practical jokes

Tim Hopkins

Feeling badly about missing this summer's mayoral election? If you're a student, you'll be glad to know the City Council didn't want you to vote even if you were here. Several people have said that anarchy will result from students voting here. I am afraid they were scared about what would happen if things should CHANGE IN MENOMONIE.

As a method of insuring that students have every opportunity to witness Stout Student Association meetings, the Tuesday night gatherings will be video taped. Dick Clark may talk with SSA President Paul Nelson about producing the series SSA Bloopers and Practical Jokes.

A friend recently hospitalized due to his inability to fall asleep was happy to hear about SSATV because it offered a simple solution to his chronic insomnia.

Questions arise about whether there will be a motion-by-motion announcer or an SSA analyst. It will be interesting to see the costume changes at SSA meetings now that the senators know their constituents will be watching. It's show time.

I could sense the change to videos was coming the day SSA got the argon lights hoisted over their entranceway. I would rather they had a popcorn machine in the office. You can always look forward to coming attractions.

Stay tuned to learn how the former Stoutonia editor in chief reacts to derisive comments from The Stoutonia about the same SSA which he lambasted time and again last year until he took over. The changing of the guard should provide fun comparisons.

You better appreciate our United Council membership while it lasts. If Stout shows up at the next U.C. meeting without a Women's Affairs Senator you'll be happy to know the United Council will be sending you a check for 50 cents. That's the amount you paid as part of your tuition so you could be a United Council member.

After my representation as the Minority Affairs Senator for a week last year I know how much SSA likes warm bodies. I offered to be Women's Affairs Senator using my background as Minority Affairs Senator as a strong reference. If I could represent I Minority Affairs there's no reason I couldn't do the job as Women's Affairs Senator. I was sexually discriminated against as the SSA focused on women applicants with lesser qualifications. I'm talking to the Men's Affairs Senator tomorrow about the injustice.

I'm off to check the inverse relationship between tuition increases and educational quality. Back now to your regularly scheduled programming.

Especially when an HP calculator can get the answers you want—in time to get a good night's sleep.

For instance, our HP-15C Professional Scientific Calculator has more built-in advanced math and statistical power than any other calculator. Our HP-41 Advanced Scientific Calculators have even more potential.

That's because there are better than 2500 software packages available for them—more than for any other calculator.

There's even a special plug-in software package (we call it the Advantage Module) that's designed to handle the specific problems an engineering student has to solve in his, or her, course work.

No wonder professionals in engineering and the physical sciences widely regard HP calculators as the best you can get.

Hidden Dimension

Grain and politics

Ali Vazirabadi

I read it, but I could not believe it. President Reagan ordered that the U.S. sell the subsidized grain to the Soviet Union. It was yesterday when he called the Soviet Union symbols of evil and now he wants to sell them American grain. It wasn't a long time ago that he was criticizing the Carter administration for being soft on Moscow, and asking Carter why he wasn't taking a stronger position against the occupation of Afghanistan.

But when we look more in-depth at the latest trade of U.S. grain to Russia we see the Senate election is around the corner. Reagan wants to win more Republican seats in the Senate from the agriculture states.

As a result the Reagan administration no longer cares so much about the Russian symbol of evil when faced with the Republican party's desire for a few more seats in Congress. This short term policy, which might help a few Republicans get seats in Congress, will have disastrous effects on other countries, such as Afghanistan.

Afghanistan is suffering from six years of occupation by the Red Army. At the same time the administration is warning the American people that the Communists are coming to the States through El Paso, Texas, it is selling the subsidized grain to the Soviets. That grain is going to feed 100,000 Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan.

The biggest problem with this administration is it is always looking toward the short term political goals while failing to consider the long term effects.

Once again an American airliner became the target of a terrorist attack. The attack, which started in Karachi, Pakistan ended with more than 15 deaths and the wounding of 100 innocent people.

Days before the terrorist attack on the Pan American 747 the American government warned that Libya was planning and preparing for a new terrorist attack on American targets. Meanwhile Qadafi denied any responsibility for the recent attacks at the Karachi airport and the Turkish synagogue.

The question is, are there any connections between these two incidents? The Reagan Administration continues looking for more information implicating the country responsible for the attacks.

The deaths that resulted at the Karachi airport raised the question whether the Pakistani commando's storming of the Pan Am 747 was the wisest action. One reason for the fast reaction against the terrorist hijacking was it happened in Pakistan, a country run by their military government. The question is, who or what will be the next target?

There are different attitudes about dealing with these kinds of situations. One proposed solution is that they should be dealt with by a stronger response to prevent the recurrence of similar situations. The question must be asked, what is the cost of a strong military reaction? Innocent people are almost always injured or killed as the result of terrorist hijackings and there appears to be no answer concerning the best method to respond to terrorist attacks.

The experience shows that terrorist attacks happen if the terrorists know they will get the publicity they want via media coverage. The hijacking of the TWA flight to Beirut set up another situation where media coverage directly effected the outcome of events. Later, the media's overreaction to the hijacking was heavily criticized for possibly adding to the problem. On the other hand, if the media does not cover events than it is not doing its job, which is to inform the people.

It is impossible to prevent future terrorist attacks, yet an effective method for dealing with them may be attainable through maintaining a consistency in American foreign policy in the Middle East which includes a "strong positive" role of the U.S in the Middle East peace negotiation.

New art faculty members a dynamic duo

by Jef Maynard

Filling a gap in gender balance, the UW-Stout art department hired two female faculty over the summer. Working under one year contracts, Karen Acker and Kitty Kingston will be teaching foundation courses, primarily Fundamentals of Design and Drawing. If first impressions are any indication, their characters and personal dynamics will be a benefit to the department.

Acker, who, as an undergraduate, attended a merger school with the admixed name of Case Western Reserve University, in Cleveland, Ohio. She could be said to specialize in ambiguity. Those readers expecting to read quotes by Acker about her new position and work will not read them here. Acker asked not to be quoted because she believes that quotations in newspapers do not function in context.

Kitty Kingston

Acker's undergraduate studies were in art history, with a personal preference for 16th century and 20th century European art. Her MFA degree was earned through Central Michigan University. There, her studio interests were sculpture and ceramics.

When asked about her work, she explained that it would be difficult to describe, especially in light of her opinion that without seeing it, a verbal description would be a reader's impression of a reporter's impression of her impressions. All of which is dangerously close to a direct quote, yet ambiguous enough to remain close to the truth.

Kingston, attended UW-Stevens Point initially, majoring in marine biology, "but I was the one who was always taking specimens back to my room to draw them," she said. "That didn't go over too well."

She originally had a desire to attend Leighton College for art, but her family reaction to art as a career was prohibitive. "In lieu of Leighton, I went to Stevens Point."

> "I was always the one who was taking specimens back to my room to draw them.
> —Kitty Kingston"

She left the frozen tundra of northern Wisconsin to attend the University of the Americas in Mexico. She remained there for two years. During this time, she changed her major to art. "Trying to take calculus spoken in Spanish was just too much," Kingston said.

Acker works with sculptural forms of mixed media, usually porcelain, steel, plaster bandage and oil paint. She described her the theme of her work, not surprisingly, ambiguous. Acker explained that if she understood her work too well, she would be suspicious of its validity. She felt that if one of her pieces failed, it was usually a failure of the idea.

Acker could also be described as a person immersed entirely in the river of current events. When asked whether or not she would like to continue instructing at Stout, she said that she had not given the subject much thought. Without wasting time on cerebral speculation into the unknowable future, she prefers to concentrate on the present.

Having earned degrees at UW-Madison, including her MA and MFA degrees, Kitty Kingston specialized in printmaking, graphic design, and papermaking.

Kingston would prefer to settle at Stout. "I'd rather not be a gypsy teacher," she said. She had praise for the student/faculty ratio in the art department and for the exceptional facilities. "The printmaking studio here is probably the best in the UW system."

Pawn live entertainment fills bill using diverse coffee house style

by Barb Klimek

If you are looking for exciting, relaxing, or even magical entertainment some evening, the Pawn may fill the bill.

Being new to the university, it is difficult getting used to being away from home while adjusting to college. New students often need a place to help them meet people and relax while helping them to forget their loneliness.

According to Kay Peterson, advisor for the Pawn Live Commission, The Pawn offers a wide range of entertainment.

Don't expect a large dance band or hard rock-n-roll because that is not the coffee house style. The Pawn offers unique performers presenting original acoustical musical performances, spontaneous dialogue and audience interaction.

Peterson said the commission expects to see more acoustical performances and usage of the key boards plus performers using original and cover tunes.

She was impressed by the line up of scheduled performances as she suggested that students take just 15 minutes of their time to come check out the variety of performers offered this fall.

Peterson's work helping set up the variety of performances scheduled is demonstrated by the range of demonstration tapes and promotional glossies which fill her office. The committee tries to select the best quality and style to please everyone.

Students have expressed their concerns about the sound problem created by the Recreation Center bowling alley right across the hall and the need for a general improvement to the atmosphere experienced in The Pawn. Plans are underway to enhance the decor and upgrade the sound system. Some of the changes discussed included closing in the back wall, using glass barriers, carpeting, ordering a new sound board and adding unique interior decorations.

> Don't expect a large dance band or hard rock-n-roll because that is not the coffeehouse style.

Peterson stated, "It's going to be a real challenge but I think they can overcome the problems with the help of contractors, committee members and the technical crew."

The funds needed to pay for these improvements will come from The Pawn Live Commission budget set by the activities board plus the sum of $25.00 per student which is taken from the tuition fee.

Cooperative programing is also under consideration. Under cooperative programming funds will be available to The Pawn Commission on the occasion any other student organization chooses to The Pawn Live sponsoring a certain performer to perform here.

The Pawn Live is all volunteer. Along with advisor Kay Peterson there are up to five commission members who work on entertainment selection, promotion and set up for The Pawn.

Kay Peterson said that she would like many more people to get involved, and encouraged anyone who is interested they should contact her at the Student Activity office, on the second floor of the Student Center. No experience is needed, just a person willing to put in his or her time and effort to have the activities run smoothly and effectively.

The Pawn Live presents, for the rest of September...

Joseph Baird, Fri. and Sat. Sept. 12 and 13. Baird presents original acoustical music and much more.

Willy Wonka and the Chocolate factory, Sat. and Sun. Sept. 20 and 21. An original motion picture starring Gene Wilder.

Duos, Fri. and Sat. Sept. 26 and 27. Featuring former Allman Brothers bassist, David Goldflies, Duos is a new progressive rock band, featuring high energy, and introducing new age jazz.
(Co-sponsored by the performing arts organization.)

WE'LL MAKE A THINNER OUT OF YOU.

Campus Cuisine

Off campus cookery

Denise Cain

It is 2705 Harvey Drive and Bob O'Reilly and Eric Tidquist are hastily preparing their nutritional, yet cost efficient supper. Bob and Eric are like a lot of other UW-Stout students; they are living off campus for the first time and are sometimes short of ideas as to what to prepare for supper each evening.

Both being athletes for Stout, Bob a superior swimmer and Eric an aggressive tennis player, they demand foods that are quick and easy to prepare while bursting with nutrients. These nutrients not only have to supply them with enough energy for stimulating classes and excruciating practice, but will also have to allow them enough adrenalin for an invigorating night at the library.

Bob and Eric feel that they have conquered some meal planning barriers and would enjoy sharing them with the rest of the campus. In turn, I will try to incorporate a new food item into their small recipe file. This way they can continue to stun their roommates and friends with their culinary skills.

Bob & Eric's Easy Pitas

white or whole wheat pitas
Chicken of the Sea tuna packed in fresh spring water Miracle Whip
alfalfa sprouts grated cheese
lettuce leaves
Kraft Creamy Cucumber dressing

Mix the tuna with the Miracle Whip. Line pita with lettuce leaves and add tuna mixture. Add grated cheese and alfalfa sprouts. Spread cucumber dressing over sprouts, seal and eat.

Bob & Eric's Stir Fry Chicken

chopped chicken breast pea pods bean sprouts chopped onion broccoli flowers sliced green pepper mushrooms
thinly sliced carrots
1 tbsp. teriyaki sauce

Cook the chicken in skillet, fry pan or wok over medium high heat in a small amount of oil. When chicken is almost done, add all vegetables and teriyaki sauce. Cook over low heat until vegetables are tender-crisp and hot. Serve over a bed of Minute rice. Accompany this dish with a glass of sparkling spring water.

SATI Poster Sale

Cover your drab dorm rooms and the cracking paint on your house walls with colorful posters of Australia, Jamaica, Israel, Korea, and many others. Sponsored by SATI, posters will be sold in the Student Union, Ballroom B. Hours are Thursday and Friday, September 11 and 12, from 8 a.m.-5:30 p.m.

MTG Launches Season

Season tickets are on sale for the three plays that will highlight the Menomonie Theater Guild's 27th season. Brochures have been mailed to patrons currently on the MTG mailing list. The brochures describe the plays FOXFIRE, HELLO DOLLY! and THE MOUSE THAT ROARED which will be presented during the 1986-87 season.

The brochures contain an order blank which allows patrons to purchase season tickets for $15, a 20 percent savings. Persons not on the mailing list may obtain a brochure by writing: Brochure, Menomonie Theater Guild, Box 325, Menomonie, WI 54751.

The guild expects the season to be a popular one because it includes a powerful comedy-drama, a well-loved musical and a delightful comedy.

Short Stories, Tall Tales

"Short Stories and Tall Tales," a play featuring James Lawless and Kevin Kling, of the Guthrie's "Artreach," will be performed on Saturday, September 13 at 8 p.m.

Set in the early 1900's, "Short Stories and Tall Tales" is a comedy about a travelling storyteller working with a new-fangled contraption called Radio.

Ticket cost is $6.50 in advance, $8 at the door. In conjunction with the performance will be two workshops on Friday, September 12 from 1:30-4 and on Saturday, SEptember 13 from 11-1 p.m. Friday's workshop will deal with scenework, timing, and movement, while Saturday's workshop will deal with character development. The workshops are free of charge, but are limited in enrollment. For more information, please call 235-9726.

Vacationers entertain by bringing jazz, rock and reggae to Pawn

by Noreen Spraner

The Famous Vacationers entertained their enthusiastic audience with a high energy variety of rock, jazz and reggae at The Pawn Friday night Sept. 9.

Tim Southwick on guitar, Eric Wermanger on drums and Scott Stevenson on electric grand and synthesizer electrified the near capacity audience. Their introductory Pat Metheni-like jazz/rock number especially showed off the expertise of guitarist Southwick.

Being eclectic, their next song was a piece of warped humor about winter vacationing in South Dakota, from here they launched into a pretty credible version of Bob Marley's reggae classic "Stir It Up." And then to make sure we knew what was really happening they moved right back into jazz flavored rock with a rambling tune called "It's All Nonsense."

Even the blues could not escape their tongue-in-cheek treatment as they performed a low down lament about bringing up baby daughter to be a blues queen, complete with a scaled down baby pink strapped lilly white electric guitar.

One thing especially noteworthy about the evening was the lack of noise emitting from the bowling alley next door. This was due entirely to the fact of the Vacationer's louder, more electronified sound. Well, that's a possible cure for a rather chronic problem I thought. I asked Mark from Pawn Live about this possibility. He said, "Not really.....We're trying to give the students more of what they want..not just folk. The student center will be doing more to block out the bowling."

The Vacationers are certainly a good enough band that they need not rely so much on humor to get them through a show. I would have preferred to hear more of Southwick's jazz guitar work. But, nevertheless they managed to hold a pretty full Pawn crowd to their seats with their lively show.

Bob and Eric did mention that their breakfast cuisine was a little limited. The recipe I am giving them is easy to make, nutritious, and can be eaten on the way to practice or the library.

Bran Muffins

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine & stir well:
2 C whole grain flour
1½ C bran
2 tbsp. honey
¼ tsp. salt
1¼ tsp. baking soda

Beat:
2 C buttermilk
1 beaten egg
¼ C molasses
2-4 tbsp. melted butter

Combine the dry ingredients with a few swift strokes. Fold in before dry ingredients are entirely moist: 1 C nuts & raisins. Bake in muffin tins for 25 minutes.

Season outlook optimistic for spikers

by Katie Keran

The women's volleyball team is "On the rise" this year. They began their season Monday in a home tri-meet by defeating UW-Green Bay 15-4, 9-15, 15-13. Then they went on to lose to UW-Superior 14-16, 7-15.

Despite the loss to Superior, second year coach Linda Lee remained optimistic about the Lady Blue Devils' future. Last year the team accomplished the best record in the history of Stout volleyball by winning 22 games. And this year they're out to do even better.

> "We have not, as of yet, reached our potential.
> —Linda Lee"

The Blue Devils now have a new addition to their coaching staff. Kathy Thompson has been named assistant coach. Kathy is from Colfax, Wisconsin and was a player for two years in Eau Claire.

Regarding the tri-meet on Monday, Coach Lee credited this year's co-captains, Mish Espe and Valerie Devries with strong, consistent playing. She added that the team played very well offensively and that enthusiasm was strong. Although this year's team is low on setters, Lee said that the bench has a lot of depth and will be helping out on the court. This year's bench is relatively young with seven freshmen.

Senior Wendy Morrow did well serving on Monday with five aces in the first match, and Freshman Jo Braun added three aces. Both Sheila McNamara and Barb Carlson had some impressive kills in the first match. Sheila had six, while Barb had five.

The Blue Devils are on the road this week. They will be playing Augsburg on Wednesday and then proceeding to the Winona tournament on Saturday. Coach Lee hopes that this year they will finish at least 5th in the conference. "We have not as of yet reached our potential," she said. "We had some weak spots in our serves and blocking on Monday." But Lee feels that the team's offense and their scrappiness will help them to continue winning this season.

The Blue Devils' next home game is a tri-meet against UW-Eau Claire and Luther College on Tuesday, Sept. 23 at 6:00 and 8:00 p.m. Admission to all matches is free.

Stout golf team shows promise; places first in Blue Devil invite

by Jenna Martin

Twenty-four players were out qualifying all last week for the twelve open spots on the UW-Stout men's golf team. It's a 54 hole process.

The final team roster has not been determined yet, due to the weather, but will be announced soon. There are six varsity and six junior varsity spots to be filled.

Player Brian Widder, was exempt from qualifying. He was last year's most improved player.

The Blue Devil Golf Team shows promise of an outstanding season. Their talent was well displayed last weekend in the UW-Stout Blue Devil Golf Invitational.

The two Stout teams displayed an excellent performance. The varsity team placed first and the junior varsity tied with UW-River Falls for sixth.

Coach Sten Pierce shows a lot of enthusiasm towards this year's team. "We had a very good year recruiting, the best since five years ago".

Coach Pierce says he has eight excellent freshman prospects. Two of them are Charlie Brown of Racine Horlick High School and Jim MaGuire from Green Lake, Wis.

"They made immediate contributions this fall. They played fourth and fifth in our Blue Devil Tournament. We have some really nice talent," observes Pierce.

Paul Byron from Wausau, Wis., Steve Mongerson from Rice Lake, Wis., and Jim Nord of Elk River, Minn. are also outstanding players. These three returning members are leaders and models for the whole team.

The following are results from the UW-Stout Blue Devil Golf Invitational:

STOUT VARSITY - 627
Brian Widder - 154
Paul Byron - 155
Steve Mongerson - 167
Charlie Brown - 159
Jim MaGuire - 159

STOUT JV - 646
Jim Nord - 154
Tom McLleland - 163
Dan Holt - 167
Steve Kostka - 170
Dan Bulger - 162

Stout varsity placed first out of nine teams and the junior varsity tied with River Falls for sixth. Other teams participating were UW-Oshkosh, UW-Stevens Point, UW-Parkside, UW-Eau Claire, St. Mary's and UW-Superior.

Drug tests aimed wrong way

Paul Wydeven

Today, more than ever, there is a hot debate on drug testing in professional sports. I think that this is totally the wrong place to fight a political battle.

If drug testing is going to be forced on any group of people, let's start with those in public office — you know, the people that are paid with public tax money. After this group is all tested, let's test the officers of the law to make sure they practice what they preach.

Another group of people that should be tested is those who are involved with the law such as lawyers and judges. I suppose all the FBI and CIA agents could do the same.

Most important, let's test the testers, like the doctors, nurses, lab technicians and administrators, those who can get drugs easier than the average person.

The drug testing in sports even affects the management decisions when selling television rights to NBA games. One executive from Cap Cities, the new boss of ABC Sports said, "Paying the NBA that much more money will mean higher salaries for players. And higher salaries will contribute to the drug problem in athletics today."

If this is the case, what about our corporate leaders like Victor Posner with a salary and bonus of $12.7 million in 1985, or Lee Iacocca following with $11.4 million? I wonder how much of that money contributed to the drug problem in business.

One argument professional team owners have is the amount of attention on these athletes. That should mean we the test actors, actresses and news people because they also are in the public eye and receive a lot of attention.

The last two points I have to make is the simple fact that these pro athletes are paid to perform. If they don't, they will be replaced and if a player is on drugs and doesn't perform, his or her team may lose. What if an airline pilot doesn't perform. Who and what will be lost then?

It doesn't make any sense testing athletes before other professionals. These athletes only play games. Other professionals may have another person's life at stake. Let's test him or her first.

It's play ball for Nebraska

Nebraska football players had their eligibility restored by the NCAA until a hearing Tuesday. Some 60 players were suspended for improper use of game passes and would have missed the opening game against Florida State last Saturday.

It's play law for Minnesota

Minnesota Vikings general manager Mike Fynn and other board members are being sued by financier Irwin Jacobs and Twins owner Carl Pohland for abusing corporate funds. The suit filed by the plaintiff's will attempt to take control of the team away from Lynn.

Coffman goes back to Kansas

Former Green Bay Packer tight end Paul Coffman signed with the Kansas City Chiefs Tuesday. The former Packer signed a two year contract and began work outs with the team Wednesday. Coffman, a former Kansas State University star made the Pro Bowl three times when with Green Bay.

Orioles Manager Retires

Earl Weaver manager of the Baltimore Orioles will not be back in the 1987 season. Late Tuesday night, team owner Edward Bennett Williams confirmed Weavers decision. Asked if he could be persuaded to change his mind, He said: "I don't think so."

Stout gridders drop season opener, 35-0

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout football team lost their season opener to the Grand Valley State Lakers last Saturday by the score of 35-0.

From the start of the game the emotions of the gridders were at a low. The players and the coaching staff both agreed that this was the major factor for the lopsided score. Members of the staff agreed that an intense defense needs to be an agressive hitting force. This is a necessity for a defense in a tough football conference such as the WSUC.

Some of Stout's bright points in this loss included the performance of punter Bob Lindberg, who had an impressive 38-yard average, and the linebacking crew, which had some fine defensive plays. Despite these performances, there are many points for this first-year staff to look at and improve. Coach Rich Lawrence said, "It will give us an evaluation point for us to evaluate our personnel." Possible changes will be in store for next week but Coach Lawrence wasn't ready to comment on this just yet.

The opening drive of the game began at Grand Valley's own 31-yard line. The Lakers executed an impressive 12-play drive capped by a 6-yard pass to Grand Valley's Tim Scribner. Stout's offense began there only to be stopped after one series of downs. They were forced to punt, turning the ball over to Grand Valley at their own 48-yard line. Grand Valley began a ball control offense and held the ball on a long drive which ended in a score, this one being by Guy Schuler. Kicker Nick Hennhonen added his second extra point of the game, making the score 14-0.

The gridders began another offensive drive on their own 32. This also ended after one series and once again the Blue Devils were forced to punt. Another fine punt by Lingberg gave Grand Valley the ball at their own 44.

Grand Valley once again started another fine offensive series, scoring their third touchdown early in the second quarter on a 3-yard run by Ray Buckner. Hennhonen's kick made the score 21-0.

The teams exchanged the ball back and forth for the next couple of series. Grand Valley started up one more successful drive before the closing of the half. This one was capped by a 6-yard Schuler run. This closed the half giving Grand Valley a 28-0 lead.

Grand Valley later added another score in the second half on a 1-yard run by Ray Buckner. This ended the scoring at 35-0.

The coaching staff, headed by Rich Lawrence, feels that this one game will not destroy the player morale. The team is not about to let this opening loss set them back and looks ahead to Moorhead here at home this Saturday.

Packers, Vikings come up short; Bears victorious over Cleveland

by Paul Wydeven

The Green Bay Packers disappointed everyone with their opening loss of 31-3 to the Houston Oilers last Sunday. Forrest Gregg said it best when he commented that Kenneth Davis and the offensive line played well, but "the rest of the football stunk."

It looks like the Packers are going to have a rebuilding season and the Pack fans are going to have a long year.

The Minnesota Vikings lost to the Detroit Lions 13-10 in their home opener. The Lions running back James Jones gained a career-high 174 yards and scored Detroit's only touchdown.

Vikings coach Jerry Burns said, "Big plays come from players capable of making big plays." He added that Minnesota has those type of players, but "just didn't pull the trigger."

The Chicago Bears beat the Cleveland Browns 41-31 last Sunday. The Bears and their fans both miss the famous 46 defense against the Browns' Bernie Kosar. The Bear defense only produced one sack. That came from Richard Dent.

Walter Payton scored two of the Bears' touchdowns rushing for 113 yards in 22 carries. Quarterback Jim McMahon's shoulder was injured with only 11:23 left in the game and he is expected to be out for the next three weeks.

Last week I picked nine games right but missed five. This week I'll take New England over the New York Jets, Cincinnati over Buffalo, Houston over Cleveland, Dallas over Detroit, Green Bay over New Orleans, Miami over Indianapolis, Kansas City over Seattle, Washington over the Los Angeles Raiders, Minnesota over Tampa Bay, Chicago over Philadelphia, Atlanta over St. Louis, San Diego over the New York Giants, San Francisco over the Los Angeles Rams and Denver over Pittsburgh.

Sports, exercise programs provide stress relief and physical fitness

by Jenna Martin

Another school year has seized us. We face the Stout maze, a wall to conquer wherever you turn. This everyday routine can really get a person down.

We all need at least one outlet to ease the pressure being placed upon us. Involving yourself in a sport or any other exercise program is an excellent way to escape the monotony of classes, homework and meetings.

You don't have the time to be on a Stout team? Your schedule is too demanding for cheerleading or pompons? What about aerobics, calisthenics, Jazzercise?

This year there seems to be an increasing amount of exercise programs being sponsored around the area.

Werth Medical Center is offering five classes:

"High Rev Workout"
"Let's Get In Shape"
"Aerobic Workout" (two courses)
"Alphakinetics"

The class fee is $12.00 for an eight-session ticket or $2.00 per class. For further information call 235-5531.

The Leisure Center at 1412 6th St. is holding Jazzercise classes. The first session started Sept. 11 but you can call 235-1787 for info on future sessions.

Stout also provides minicourses in aerobics and calisthenics. Registration has already taken place for the first sessions which run through the middle of October.

Keep watch for posters so when the time arrives for 2nd quarter registration, you'll be there. The cost is $5.00.

Intramural activities are another good way to relieve tension from school. This fall there are several being offered.

You can join Mud Volleyball, Flag Football, Archery, Outdoor Volleyball and Basketball. There is also Table Tennis, Softball and Slide-a-Puck.

One-time events will be held too. You can participate in an Archery Tourney, a Bike Road Race, Basketball Tourney, Cross Country Run, Free Throw and Skill Shooting, Raquetball Singles Tourney, and a Badminton Tourney.

Grab yourself a blue UW-Stout Intramural Calendar from the fieldhouse for further info on these activities.

There are Club Sports to join too including Alfresco Outing, Bicycle, Frisbee, Bowling and Martial Arts. Join Men's Volleyball, Men's and Women's Rugby, Scuba, Skiing, Soccer, Weight Training & Fitness or Women's Fast Pitch Softball.

The Recreation Center in the Student Center also provides outdoor equipment and other activities to keep you moving.

You can always enjoy working out on your own free time. Read the schedule printed in The Stoutonia each week to find out hours for the pool, weightroom and open gym.

Don't pass up the opportunity for physical fitness. It will exercise your brain and body both. Taking time out from your schedule can actually boost your energy level by relieving excess tension.

Keep your body toned! Meet people! Enjoy yourself! Get involved!

QUESTION #1.

WHAT IS THE RIGHT CHOICE FOR MOST COLLEGE STUDENTS?

a) AT&T—for everyday discounts of 40% to over 50% off weekday rates on out-of-state calls.

b) Short bursts of intense study followed by hours of frantic partying.

c) AT&T—for exceptional value and high quality service.

d) AT&T—for collect, third-party and operator-assisted long distance calls.

e) Any class that does not conflict with "The Love Connection."

If you picked A, C and D, you're destined for great things. Like AT&T Long Distance Service. AT&T offers so many terrific values. Like a 40% to over 50% discount off our day rate on night, evening, and weekend out-of-state calls.

Imagine what you'll do with the money you could save. Imagine what your parents would do if they found out.

Of course, you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections any place you call. And AT&T gives you immediate credit for wrong numbers.

To find out more about why you should choose AT&T, give us a call. And if you picked B and E, call anyway. You could probably use someone to talk to.

Call toll-free today, at 1 800 222-0300.

THE STOUTONIA

Mayor speaks to SSA; urges involvement

by Joan Janson

Newly-elected Mayor of Menomonie, Chuck Stokke, spoke at the Stout Student Association (SSA) meeting Tuesday, September 9. This was a positive step by both the city of Menomonie and the students of the University of Wisconsin-Stout to work towards greater cooperation.

A chasm between the two groups was widened this past spring when the Menomonie City Council agreed to hold the mayoral election in September, but later rescheduled the election for July 29.

Last spring, SSA President Paul D. Nelson was informed by Alderperson Jay Schroeder that the issue of scheduling the mayoral election would be brought to the floor at the City Council meeting on May 5. Nelson called an emergency SSA meeting on Sunday night, May 4, to develop a formal statement opposing the scheduling of the election at a time when the majority of students would not be present in Menomonie.

During the City Council meeting, a motion was made to hold the mayoral election the same day as the general election scheduled for the fall. The motion passed four votes to three. Later, during the May 19 City Council meeting, the issue was brought to the floor again. A motion passed by a five to two vote that set the election during the summer.

The mayoral election took place on July 29 and Postmaster Chuck Stokke, who ran against Alderperson Jay Schroeder, was elected mayor. The part-time mayor will draw a $5,000 salary.

> "...A positive step towards greater cooperation"

Mayor Stokke chose not to dwell on this issue during his address to the SSA. Rather, he stressed the development of greater student involvement in city government that will be possible in the future.

April 7, 1987 has been set as the date for the spring election of City Council members, and there will be a concurrent change in the form of government.

In the past, the city has had a manager form of government, with 7 alderpersons elected at large. During the April 7 election there will be a change to the mayoral form of government with eleven council members elected from eleven wards.

Students comprise the majority of voters in approximately three of the city wards, Stokke pointed out, and provided students are willing to participate, this new change could assure student representation on the City Council.

The SSA feels strongly that students should be informed and involved citizens of Menomonie. As such, they have formed a committee to seek out students interested in filling a council position for the two year term. Interested individuals should contact Wes Stead, SSA Administrative Assistant and head of the Search Committee, 232-1450.

Although relations between the City Council and the UW-Stout student body have been strained due to the mayoral election issue, it appears that both parties are interested in greater involvement and cooperation.

UW-Stout Vets' Club receives U.S. Government medal

by Cosmas A. Whitten

Only 5,000 Vietnam Veterans' National Medals were minted by the U.S. Government to be issued to outstanding veteran's organizations. The cast is now broken. The Univers ty of Wisconsin-Stout Vets' Club was one of the distinct organizations to earn the honor.

The medal is inscribed, "In honor of those men and women who gave of themselves in an effort to ensure democracy and peace throughout the world, this medal is struck, by act of Congress---1984."

The award was presented by the American Legion to Stout Vets' Club on September 6, 1986 in Woodville, Wisconsin. The Vets' Club had made a cash donation which helped to bring the traveling replica of the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Wall to Woodville.

The Memorial Wall replica arrived in Woodville for a seven day stay. 20,000 people came through the town of Woodville, population 778, to view the Wall. After the week was completed, Greg Graves, past-president of the Vets' Club, received the award on behalf of the Stout Vets'.

Stout Vets' raised money through proceeds from the Vets' Club Snowmobile Speed Run held last February. A world record was broken at the Speed Run when a snowmobile reached the speed of 159.3 per hour on Lake Menomin.

> "In honor of those who gave of themselves..."

The next Speed Run will be held January 24, 1987 on Lake Menomin. Mike Oliver, current Vets' Club president, hopes that this year's Speed Run is another great success so that they may continue to donate funds to causes such as the Memorial Wall replica.

Besides donations to the American Wall, Stout Vets' also donated to the Donna Kado Liver Transplant Fund. Thanks to generous donations from the Stout Vets' and others, Kado was recently flown to the Mayo Clinic and underwent ten hours of surgery. According to Oliver, she is currently doing fine.

The Vets' Club was also one of four recipients of the Beth Bettenhausen Award in the spring of 1986. This award, presented by the University Programming Board, was given for their outstanding contributions to Stout and the community.

The Vets' Club is trying to promote itself and make people more aware of their activities. The club is open to all Stout students who are veterans, as well as those who are members of the National Guard and Reserves.

Koch insults Soviets

Tass, the official news agency of the Soviet Union criticized New York Mayor Edward Koch for remarks he made during a meeting with Soviet children.

The Soviet children, touring the United States as performers in a play about friendship between the superpowers, were attending the proclamation of Peace Child Week. Mayor Koch issued the proclamation and then said, "I cannot let this occasion go forward without making some comments about the Soviet Union, which I believe---not the children in the Soviet Union, not the people in the Soviet Union, but the government---is the pits."

Rotarian women

The Seattle Rotary Club has risked expulsion from the Rotary International because it has allowed 15 women to join. The group filed suit in U.S District Court on Monday, charging that its parent organization violates Washington state law prohibiting discrimination.

Employees respond to drug test

A union representing federal employees filed suit Tuesday to block the institution of widespread drug tests for government workers. The chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on human resources introduced legislation which would limit drug testing to cases where there is reason to suspect an employee of drug use.

The suit, brought by the National Treasury Employees Union, and the subcommittee's action were responses to an order issued on Monday by President Reagan, requiring civilian employees holding "sensitive positions" to undergo mandatory drug tests.

Roll Aid for children

A radio station in Mobile, Alabama is organizing a benefit, titled Roll Aid, to aid students of the Mobile County school district. The school board, facing a $5 million deficit in their budget this year, requested that children bring janitorial supplies to school, to help ease the cost of maintaining the district school system.

Dick Hilton, program director for WKRG in Mobile, said that the radio station is organizing the benefit because, "We want to spare our children the embarassment of having to walk to school with toilet paper in their hand."

Restitution plans for youth

The Wisconsin state legislature is considering a bill that would require counties to establish restitution programs to enable young offenders to earn money and pay the victims of their crime.

The bill, introduced by Senator Lynn Adelman (D-New Belin) and Representative Thomas Barrett (D-Milwaukee), was based on the success of the Waukesha County Restitution Program, which compelled youths to pay $90,000 in court-ordered restitution. Adelman said only 1.5 per cent of the offenders affected by the Waukesha program had to be placed in correctional facilites for subsequent offences.

Taping service helps disabled students

by Joan Janson

The University of Wisconsin-Stout Reader Taping Service held their annual recruitment drive Tuesday and Wednesday, September 8 and 9, in the Memorial Student Center. Reader Taping Service (RTS) needs volunteers to read textbooks onto cassette tapes for use by students with disabilities.

RTS's motto is "Students Helping Students."

RTS hopes to recruit 30 volunteers to keep pace with the increasing demand for taped texts. Last year volunteers read over 1,000 hours and completed 70 texts and educational publications. This year there are 38 students receiving textbooks on tape.

RTS began in 1979 as an experimental program with four volunteers and two students utilizing the service. The need for the service has grown along with the overall student population and as disabled students become aware of the services available to them. Need for the service has also increased as educators more readily recognize learning disabilities.

Ann Yurcisin, Director of Services for Students with Disabilities, states that, "The Reader Taping Service was developed due to Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which provides for availability of auxiliary aids which may include taped texts. The purpose of the Act is to simply give an equal opportunity and to allow students with disabilities to participate more fully."

The Stout Reader Taping Service is a model program which has received national recognition.

Christy Lendman, Assistant Director of Services for Students with Disabilities, runs the program. "The table at the Student Center is only part of our effort to recruit volunteers. We also place volunteering articles in the Stout Community News, send speakers to community organizations and have volunteers speak to classes. This year we're fortunate to have one of the students who utilizes the service, Ron Anderson, as a speaker. He's very open about his disability and it helps everyone understand the needs of students with learning disabilities," said Lendman.

Lendman asks volunteers to spend one hour in training and then read a minimum of one hour per week. "The flexibility of the program," said Lendman, "is one of the greatest assets to the volunteer. Our office is open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and volunteers can come in any time to read; they don't need an appointment or a set time."

Career Planning & Placement to host "Career Preparation Week"

by Dale Bohnert

The UW-Stout Career Planning and Placement Services will be sponsoring "Career Preparation Week" in the Crystal Ballroom of the Memorial Student Center, September 22-26.

Career Planning and Placement Services is an office designed to assist all UW-Stout students in their career development.

Staff members of the Placement Office are trained to teach students proper employment preparation and various job-searching skills. Staff members also help students obtain employment related to their major or concentration.

Workshops, taught by Placement Office counselors, are designed to help students develop skills in career preparation. "Career Preparation Week" will consist of a series of such workshops dealing with resume writing, interviewing skills, job-hunting techniques, and co-op/internship orientation.

The workshops will be held in the Crystal Ballroom of the Memorial Student Center. Each will last approximately one hour.

Designated time between workshops has been scheduled to allow the counselors present to answer students' questions on a one-to-one basis.

There are also scheduled periods during "Career Preparation Week" when students who have not registered with the Placement Office may do so. By registering with the Placement Office, located in room 103 of the Administration Building, students have access to the many services the office has to offer.

All students may register with the Placement Office. However, registration is not required to participate in the seminars at the Student Center.

An orientation to the Resource Library, located in the Career Planning and Placement Office, will also be held. This library contains information and directories listing the names and addresses of hundreds of companies with jobs related to the majors and concentrations offered at Stout.

The schedule below and flyers throughout campus may be checked for the times and topics of "Career Preparation Week" sessions.

Pat Freer, Placement Specialist for the Career Planning and Placement Service, explained that the purpose of "Career Preparation Week" is to teach students how to reach their career goals. "I'm hoping that we can assist those who attend to develop the skills needed to do a thorough and effective job search", said Freer.

Freer also explained that, though this is the only time "Career Preparation Week" will be held this semester, the services offered at the Placement Office are available throughout the entire year.

On-campus recruitment, another service offered by the office, consists of employment-related interviews for students arranged by Placement Office counselors.

Career Planning and Placement Services also publishes weekly listings of nation-wide job vacancies associated with the majors and concentrations offered at Stout.

Other services the office provides for registered students include cumulative credential files, personal consultation, summer jobs, internships, and co-op position listings.

Freer stresses that all students at Stout are able to utilize the services available at the office.

International Relations Club plans events for International students

by Suresh Seedo

This past summer International Students were brought together by a trip to the Minnesota State Fair and a potluck picnic at Riverside Park. These two events were organized by the International Relations Club (IRC).

Rainford Martin, the organizing secretary for IRC, said that a total of 51 students from several countries attended the Minnesota State Fair on August 31 with the group.

Newly-elected President of IRC, Che Sammudin Abdullah of Malaysia, remarked "The trip was really a successful one. It was the first for this year and many more to come."

According to Abdullah, the bus journey to the fair left Menomonie at 8 a.m. The students visited exhibitions on farming, agriculture and industries.

The bus returned to Stout at 11 p.m. Abdullah said that the students were very happy that they attended the trip. Many of them told him that it was a bit tiring, but worth it.

Abdullah said the all-day trip was organized by IRC but was sponsored by the Menomonie business community.

The other IRC event that took place during this past summer was a potluck picnic on August 29 at Riverside Park attended by 60 people. This picnic was planned by IRC, the Friends of International Students and the 1987 Friendship Families.

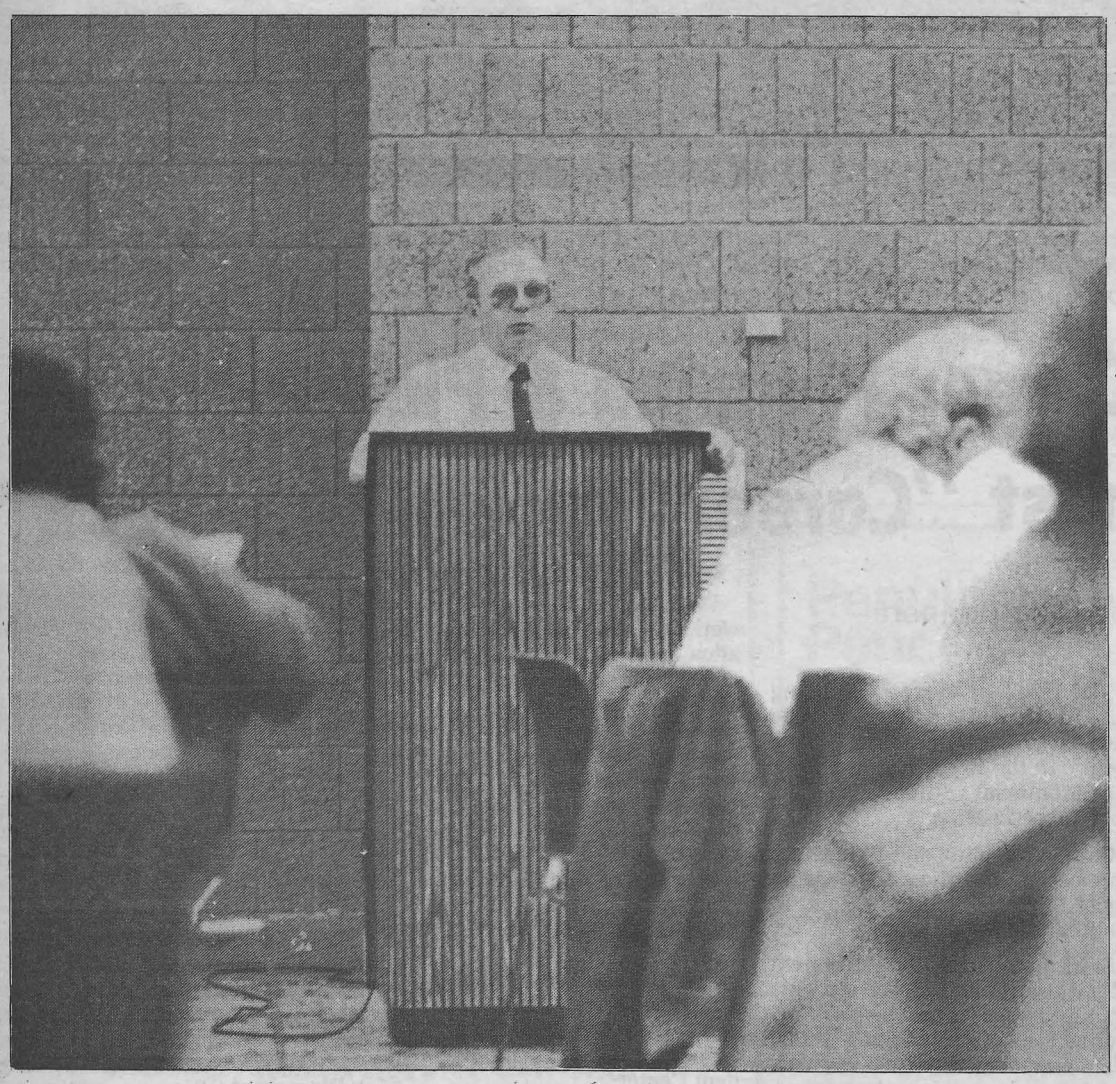
> "We have a few fantastic ideas..."
> —Che Abdullah

Abdullah emphasized that the picnic was primarily aimed at making the new foreign students feel at home in Menomonie. He also said that meals were individually prepared by most students. Many students made their native dishes, while others added an American touch to theirs.

Several games were also played with volleyball being the most popular. Abdullah wishes to thank the Friendship Families, who act as host families to foreign students, for their great efforts in making the students feel comfortable.

Abdullah said that all the activities sponsored by IRC are aimed at closing the gaps between different goals and interests. He further revealed, "We have a few fantastic ideas for IRC this year."

IRC plans to organize films and recreational activities from different countries so that foreign and American students will be able to understand each other better, both culturally and socially.



Dr. Richard Anderson, Dean of Counseling Services, spoke at the Non-Traditional Student Open House in the Crystal Ballroom of the Memorial Student Union on September 15. The event was intended to bring non-traditional students at UW-Stout together to meet each other and acquaint themselves with services available to them.

The Organization of Adult Students Involved in Stout (OASIS) co-sponsored the event with the Dean's office. The OASIS is under the direction of President Toni Kunstman for the second consecutive year. Kunstman would like to encourage all non-trads, those students who are not right out of high school but are just starting college, those who are going back to school for another degree or those who have a family to raise while they go to school, to join OASIS.

by Kelly Cohorst

At the September 16 meeting of the Stout Student Association (SSA), several issues which were passed at the United Council meeting on September 12 and 13 were discussed. United Council is the student government association for the University of Wisconsin system.

Vice-President of Academic Affairs, Julie Weiss attended the United Council meeting, which was held in Madison. Weiss said that several motions passed at the meeting, one concerning the Student Regent appointment.

Currently, the Student Regent, who is a voting member of the Board of Regents of the UW-system, is appointed by the Governor. The United Council passed a resolution suggesting that they should nominate the Student Regent candidates and that the Governor appoint one of the nominated students.

Vice-President of Legislative Affairs, Mark Nickels, had appointed a proxy, Angie Bias, to attend the United Council meeting in his stead.

Bias reported that United Council had resolved to stand in favor of placing a cap on the percentage of tuition that students pay.

The SSA has submitted a letter to Dr. Susan Nurrenbern, Faculty Senate Chairperson, requesting that students have voting representation on any UW-Stout Positive Action Committee (PAC) which deals with student-initiated complaints against a faculty member.

A Positive Action Committee (PAC) is a faculty body which hears complaints and grievances according to procedures established under the UW-System Administrative Code.

The letter to Nurrenbern presents a plan to appoint students to the PAC. A pool of eight students, appointed by the SSA, would be available on a rotating basis to serve on the committee.

Each student would serve a one-year term and the pool of eight students would also serve on the Academic Staff Positive Action Committee, where they already have voting rights, according to the SSA letter.

The SSA is organizing a protest against cuts in higher education. They will be staging the protest at the Menomonie Public Library Dedication Ceremony at 9 am on Friday, September 19. Barbara Bush, Vice-President Bush's wife, and Senator Bob Kasten will be attending the ceremony, also.

Paul D. Nelson, president of SSA, said, " I think this is a great opportunity to increase awareness among the students about what is happening and get them mobilized to work to restore these (higher education) funds."

Abernathy speaks

Civil rights leader, Dr. Ralph Abernathy will be the guest of UW-Stout on Tuesday, Sept. 23. Abernathy will give an address titled "The History and Future of the Civil Rights Movement" at 8 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center.

Admission is free, as part of the Speakers Series Commission's 1986 programming season.

Dr. Abernathy and Martin Luther King Jr. organized the Montgomery Bus Boycott in 1956 and was standing at King's side when he was assassinated.

Faculty development

This fall, UW-Stout has established its first Named Professorship program for the purpose of faculty development. Stout alumni Reinhold and Borghild Eng Dahlgren, left their estate to the Stout Foundation.

The Foundation monies have been used to fund an award of $7,500. This award will be given annually to four faculty members who can use it over a period of two years. The awards may be spent in a number of ways, except salary, to improve the faculty members' teaching.

Stout accredited

UW-Stout has been notified that it is receiving continuing accreditation by the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. The commission's decision gives the university continued accreditation for a ten-year period.

After visiting the university, a team representing the commission issued the written report. The team's report gave high marks to various academic units, as well as to support areas such as library, computer operations, student services and the Stout Alumni Association.

According to the report, "The hands-on emphasis, faculty dedication to outside activities and the large number of learning experiences beyond the formal classroom are real strengths (of the university)."

Nelson concerned

Paul D. Nelson, President of the Stout Student Association (SSA), is concerned with the fairness of the Library Learning Center policy change which levies user fees on those using computer printers.

Nelson reports that a box of paper is purchased by the Library Learning Center for $17.66. "From that box of paper, they garner $137.50, so they're making a profit of $119.89 from one box of paper."

Nelson requests that anyone with similar concerns contact Julie Weiss, Vice President of Academic Affairs, at the SSA office, Room 123 of the Memorial Student Union.

Prosecution deferred

John Clark, Professor of Social Science, was charged with disorderly conduct after an alleged incident occurred in Harvey Hall in late April. The charges resulted in an agreement between Clark and the District Attorney's office to defer prosecution in exchange for a letter of resignation, effective June 30, 1987, that Clark is to submit.

Burning the midnight oil may be necessary.

Burning the 2:00 or 3:00 or 4:00 AM oil is absurd.

Especially when an HP calculator can get the answers you want—in time to get a good night's sleep.

For instance, our HP-15C Professional Scientific Calculator has more built-in advanced math and statistical power than any other calculator. Our HP-41 Advanced Scientific Calculators have even more potential.

That's because there are better than 2500 software packages available for them—more than for any other calculator.

There's even a special plug-in software package (we call it the Advantage Module) that's designed to handle the specific problems an engineering student has to solve in his, or her, course work.

No wonder professionals in engineering and the physical sciences widely regard HP calculators as the best you can get.

So check one out. Then, when your mother calls to ask if you're getting enough sleep, you won't have to lie.

By the way, if you want more information, just give us a call at 800-FOR-HPPC. Ask for Dept. 658C.

HEWLETT PACKARD

Editorial

Library funding crisis was easily avoidable

Buy now, pay later has been the American economic policy which has fueled our economic growth through the years.

The Menomonie City Council misapplied this economic policy when it first approved construction of the new library. The City Council awarded the $350,000 plus contract without ever planning where the money was to come from.

The bill for $351,196 comes due this Friday, Sept. 19. Aldermen Richard Emmert and Jay Schroeder, who have opposed the library's construction from the beginning, refused to allow the City Council to borrow the $351,000 needed for 60 days until Menomonie receives the $2.2 million expected from Wisconsin in November.

As a last resort, Alderman Glen Schuknecht moved that the City Council transfer the needed money from the contingency fund originally set aside to pay operating expenses such as Menomonie's payroll.

Mayor Charles Stokke indicated the seriousness of the situation when he said, "There is the possibility the city will be without money before November."

Alderman Bill Josephson made perhaps the best point when he said, "I can't see what this arguing and bickering back and forth is going to accomplish." The issues ought to have been settled long before construction of the library was seriously considered. In a financial sense, the horses are out of the barn and it's too late to close the door.

It's too late to oppose the library's construction although it is disconcerting the way in which the City Council overlooked the two-to-one majority that voted against library construction in the non-binding referrendum.

The people's experience throughout the City Council's full speed ahead construction of the library ought to encourage Menomonie residents to take a much more active part in city politics.

Menomonie tax payers, including UW-Stout students, faculty and administration ought to be terrified by the City Council's example in this one case of making a major investment without seriously considering the effects on the community.

Asking city workers to sacrifice their payroll checks in order to pay the bill for an unpopular library doesn't smack of democracy in action. Taxation without representation is tyranny.

The best recommendation is that Menomonie residents get actively involved in city government in order to insure their fair representation.

Cryptic Notes

I'm so damn mad

What strikes me most about Stout students is our lack of freedom. We are caught up in a game of follow the leader.

"Manic depression touching my soul, I know what I want, but I just don't know," -- Jimi Hendrix.

What would happen if freedom was predominant at UW-Stout? I continually hear unhappy students lamenting the overcrowded classrooms, waiting in line for books at the Rental Resource Center, waiting in line for anything at the bookstore, the annual increase in tuition and on and on.

If Stout students got together to create a unified voice for expressing these common complaints, the resolution to these problems would result. If students would take a few moments off from their highly stressed work preparing their career paths, we might realize our ability to improve our lifestyle at Stout.

"Us against them" is the unhappy feeling existing today between Stout students and Menomonites. Word is that, "Menomonie would be a ghost town without Stout." These words have been said to me many times "off the record" by notable citizens of Menomonie.

Yet, the value of Stout students to Menomonie fails to come across to the students.

"What we have hear is a failure to communicate." It doesn't do any good for Stout students to complain among themselves about the lack of respect they receive in Menomonie. These issues need to be brought before the city via the city council. Whether or not the council likes it, Stout's student body represents over 7,000 potential voters in Menomonie. For that reason alone the city council ought to seriously listen to students' concerns about what's happening in Menomonie.

You got to walk before you can run. Stout students rarely attend Stout Student Association meetings Tuesday nights. As a result, it is difficult, if not impossible for the SSA to accurately represent the student body. How many times has your SSA senator spoken to you about the significant issues affecting your daily life?

What I see at Stout is a vast majority of students who want to enjoy the rights thought synonymous with freedom. Yet, these same students aren't willing to invest the time and effort needed to preserve these rights. As a result, the rights are gradually eroded away and all we hear is a slight whimper from the apathetic student body which has failed to take any meaningful action.

Freedom without responsibility is meaningless. In Russia, the state takes total responsibility and you know the freedoms the Russian people enjoy. We have gradually given up our freedoms as we allowed our state and federal governments to take responsibility for the tasks we would rather not deal with.

Our leaders must thoroughly enjoy the peoples' complacency today. I fondly remember the attempt by Peter Finch in the movie Network to get people acting on what concerned them. He played an anchorman for the network news who read distressing stories each and every day. He grew distressed that none of his viewers ever complained about the continually distressing nature of the news.

Finch released his frustrations by urging the millions of faithful viewers of the nighlty news to walk over to the nearest window, pull the window open and to scream as loud as possible the message that, "I'm so damn mad, I'm not gonna take it any more."

To prevent ending up as Peter Finch did in Network, we can work as a people to take responsibility concerning the direction to be taken by UW-Stout, Menomonie, Wisconsin, our nation and our world.

Spotlight /Amnesty International

Subject: Amnesty International works to human rights of prisoners

by Ali Vazirabadi

The following is an interview with Dr. John See, who is the advisor to the Amnesty International Club at Stout.

Stoutonia: What are the objectives of the Amnesty International Club?

Dr. See: Amnesty International works specifically for the release of prisoners of conscience, men, women, and children imprisoned for their beliefs, color, sex, ethnic origin, language, provided they have neither used nor advocated violence. Also Amnesty asks for the fair treatment of the individual.

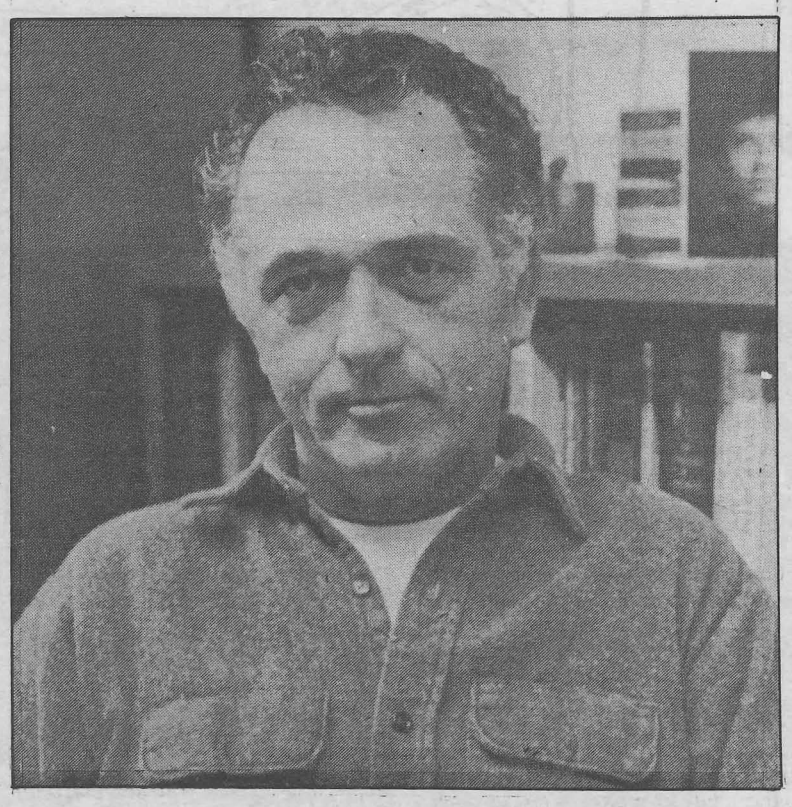
Stoutonia: Who is the founder and how old is this organization?

Dr. See: Amnesty is 25 years old this year, and the founder of it is John Healy. It started in England during the dictatorship in Portugal, which caused John Healy to organize an organization to eliminate human right abuses in the world. He wrote a letter to London Times to ask for public opinion for support.

Stoutonia: What are the achievements of the Amnesty International in the recrnt years?

Dr. See: Amnesty has the reputation of a human rights organization. It has recieved the Nobel Peace Prize. Initially, one Amnesty plan is adoption of prisoners of consience. Amnesty International members send letters, cards, and telegrams on behalf of individual prisoners to government officials. Constant action generates effective pressure. One well written letter to a minister of justice is not pressure; ten letters is.

Hundreds of letters were sent on behalf of an adopted prisoner detained for many years in a Soviet psychiatric hospital. Later he said that his release had been a direct result of the letters from Amnesty. He believes they were also the key to better treatment during imprisonment. Amnesty International met with more than half of the United States Congressional Representatives to voice their concern and outline Amnesty International's program to eradicate torture. Members also raise money to send medicine, food, and clothing to prisoners and their families.



Dr. John See

Stoutonia: How does Amnesty International help individuals?

Dr. See Since it was founded in 1961, Amnesty International has worked on behalf of more than 25,000 prisoners around the world. Last year 150 of the prisoners of conscience adopted by groups in the United States were released. A released prisoner from Malaysia wrote to a group member, "Today I took out all letters and cards you

Are the people heard?

We hear about sexual abuse of children, watch news broadcasts and movies about it, but we think, "What are the chances of that happening to my kids?," or "That only happens in bigger cities; we're safe here in Dunn County."

But it does happen right here in Dunn County. We know. It happened to our children.

Because this horrible thing struck our family, we want you to know that it can strike you and your loved ones too. And we want to ask for your support because there is something we can do about it.

While we cannot be so specific as to reveal any identities or details of the case, we want to tell our story.

There is a judge in Branch II Dunn County Circuit Court who, in our opinion, through his actions and decisions made from the bench, made it impossible for us to get a fair trial. This judge is the Honorable James Wendland.

We had a good, solid case prepared, involving many months of investigation and interviews. It was difficult for our children, as you can imagine. Even though they knew it was necessary, it was very painful for them to draw from their memory repeatedly, in great detail, all the disgusting things that had been done to them.

During the initial phase of the case, we had no complaints about Judge Wendland. He seemed fair and interested in seeing that all the facts be revealed in an unbiased manner. But when our case finally came to trial, Judge Wendland became an entirely different person. At that point, after the jury had been sworn, it was too late to ask for another judge. The case had to proceed to its end.

We know as much as the average layperson about rules of evidence. We know that some evidence or testimony is excluded by the judge because it is irrelevant, hearsay, and so forth. We understand the necessity of such decisions.

However, Judge Wendland used his "dicretionary judicial powers" to throw out the most damning evidence we had. This evidence was most relevant, first-hand and factual, and the judge's decision concerning it shocked many, even legal professionals and law enforcement personnel.

Exactly what kind of evidence did he disallow?

.....a detailed report from the State Crime Lab on an item of physical evidence -- evidence which would have directly linked the defendant to the commission of the crimes. He said he could not allow it

Mayor Charles Stokke

CAMPUS SLANT/ Should UW-Stout students have the right to vote for city mayor?

Text by Brian Kraimer

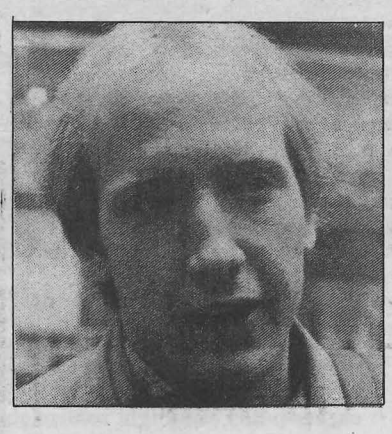
John Hein,
Resident of Menomonie,

If you have lived for a short time, no, but if you are going to really be concerned about it, and live here as long as we have, then I would say yes. I think that the students should be here at least two years before they should be able to vote, because, I am not saying all students, but on the average, they just do not give a damn.

Dave Bincent,
Sophomore,
Business Administration,

No, because we are not full-year residents and I do not think we have the right to vote because of this.



Tim Trihus,
Senior,
Hotel and Restaurant,

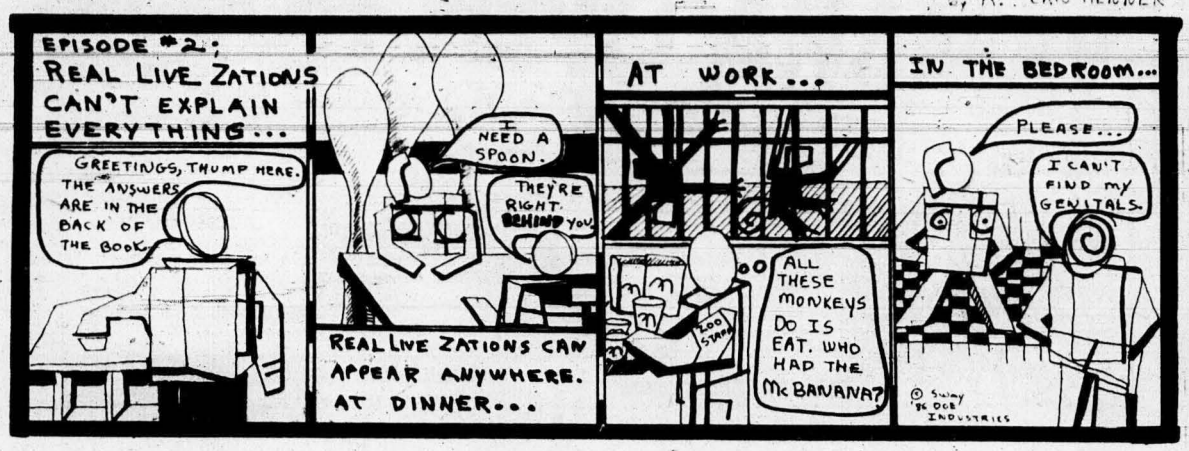
Yes, because he is representing you as students in this area. We are here three fourths of the year, which is a majority of the year, which is a good argument for us being able to vote.

Fred Itie,
Senior,
Industrial Technology,

Yes, both the citizens and the students should have the right to vote for the mayor, but the students that vote should be here at UW-Stout for five or six semesters before they could vote.

Julie Schuette,
Senior,
Clothing and Textile Design,

I think that Stout Students should have the chance to vote for the Mayor, because we live here nine months of the year, which is the majority of the time. Also the issues of the city greatly effect us.



Hidden Dimension

War of dictators

Ali Vazirabadi

This is the 6th year of war between Iran and Iraq. A war that created a total destruction to the both countries. The war caused more than 250,000 deaths to Iran, which is five times more than the number of deaths of American soldiers in Vietnam. Also the population of Iran is five and half times less than the population of the U.S. At the same time, Iraq with a population of less than ten million has the same disaster, politically and financially.

The war started in September, 1981 with the invasion of Iraq to Iran. During that time Iran was facing great internal political pressure from the opposition in the country. Iraq, with the idea of easy victory, occupied the Southern part of Iran. The Southern part of Iran is the source of oil and is a strategic area in the Persian Gulf for the West.

At first the Iranian Army and the people showed great enthusiasm to fight against the enemy in their country. Very soon Iraq found out the war can not be achieved by an easy invasion. After two years Iraq decided to end the war and started to ask for negotiations with Iran. The negotiation and peace talk did not bring peace to the area.

Both countries are suffering and getting great pressure from the people to end the war. The Iranian people lost their enthusiasm to continue the war, since the enemy has pushed out of the country.

There are numerous reasons for Ayatolah Khomeini not stopping the war. War with Iraq gives the Iranian government more authority to control the opposition activities in the country. Since the revolution in Iran, there has been more than 50,000 political executions. A large number of the executed include students and educated people who opposed the dictatorship of Khomeini.

Based on political predictions, 1986 is the last year of the war between the two countries. Who wins the war is the only unknown part of the war. Iran has a greater number of men, but they are untrained and too young; on the other side, Iraq has fewer men, but has more sophisticated armed forces.

So far, the United States declares neutrality in the war, but still Iran is obtaining their military parts from the U.S. and the Israeli market. Iraq at the same time is getting great support from the Soviet Union and France.

There have been a number of efforts from other countries to end the war, but so far there have been no achievements. One of Iranian demands to end the war is the resignation of the president of Iraq, which seems not easy to achieve. The other request of Iran is 50 billion dollars in damages due to the war, and condemnation of Iraq by the world as the aggressor.

Iran faces great internal pressure to end the war. The economy of Iran with astronomical inflation and unemployment, is destroying Iranian families. Most of the Iranian families lost their one or two young men in the war with Iraq. At the same time human rights in Iran are not respected and are ignored by force of gun and torture. Young men are forced to go to war, otherwise they are subjected to prison and torture by the Khomeini gang.

There are numerous oppositions to the government inside and outside of Iran. One of the strongest opposition to Ayatolah Khomeini is the Mujahedin Khalq, which has great support among people. There is other opposition to Khomeini, which is supported by the upper class in Iran. One of them is son of the last monarch in Iran, who is living in the U.S.

Iran is facing the most sensitive moment of their 2500 year history. The possibilities of new government in Iran is achievable only by unity among all oppositions of the dictator. This unity is not easy to achieve due to self centered ideology and method of struggle among them.

The other hope for Iran is the death of Ayatolah Khomeini, which will bring a great moment of freedom and change to Iran's history. When this will happen is unknown, but it seems all the oppositions are waiting for that moment to launch their last attack to overthrow the dictatorship in Iran.

because completion of lab testing was done just prior to the trial and the defense did not have enough time to do their own testing -- even though, months before the trial, several offers made to the defense to examine the evidence were not utilized.

.....viewing of videotapes, either in part or in entirety, filmed of our children when the initial complaint was made --tapes which detailed every charge and which would have helped corroborate our children's testimony at trial. Judge Wendland excused them as "unfairly prejudicial" because our child "was crying" when a certain portion was filmed (would laughing have been a more appropriate response?).

.....official statements taken by law enforcement during the initial investigation.

In general, in our opinion, the judge throughout the trial showed a marked prejudice toward the defense.

Stripped of such critical evidence, our case became a question of whose testimony should be believed; that of a child, or that of an adult. With the defense attorney emphasizing how children tell tales and fantasize, and without the substantiating evidence, an unfair, unbalanced picture was presented.

Prior to this ordeal, we had never met or even heard of Judge Wendland. We had absolutely no reason to expect anything but his unqualified fair and impartial treatment of the case. Our feelings are not "sour grapes." They stem from real events and genuine concern.

We are convinced that our children are incapable of making up stories about such as what happened to them. As a matter of fact, professionals who work with children, who know them, state that children are not likely to lie about sexual abuse.

We also know there is nothing we can do now in the courts. Our case is over and cannot be appealed.

There is, however, something we can do to ensure that this nightmare does not happen again --perhaps to your own children, brothers, sisters and/or grandchildren.

Our case is not the only one in which Judge Wendland has made such incomprehensible decisions. There are others. We leave it to those victims to tell their own stories, as they are doing throughout Dunn County.

We ask you to join the effort of those of us who no longer will tolerate such poor interpretation of justice. Our laws do provide a remedy, and we are taking advantage of our right to ask for it. If you live in Dunn County, please sign the petition being circulated now which calls for the placing of Judge Wendland in a recall election. Better yet, please circulate a petition yourself. We need you!

Sincerely,
(Name and address given, but withheld to protect the privacy of all parties involved.)

Judicial power Examined

I remember in government at UW-Stout I came away with one strong conviction, that being people's rights. (1) People have a right to vote on whether to build a library or not don't they? (2) People have a right to vote in an election don't they?

(1) The citizens of Menomonie asked for an opportunity for a binding referendum to build a new library.

They lost their right because the council voted 4 to 3 against holding a binding referendum.

(2) The Stout Student Association requested that the election for mayor should be held so that the students could vote. On May 5, 1986 the council agreed but then reconsidered and changed the date so it could be held in the summer.

They, I feel, lost their right.

I am advocating one thing and one thing only. Let's be fair and give everyone a fair chance.

This is what I learned in government and will be forever grateful to that teacher for helping me to realize what our forefathers meant by a system of checks and balances.

I will continue to do everything I can to help everyone and promote justice.

Community Upset

We note with interest the significant lack of interest on the part of University students in the last election. We contrast that with the significant "interest" these same individuals displayed in last spring's election in which students were the deciding factor in upsetting what had been a stable community. We wonder about the effect free transport to the polls and free beer following their vote had on choices students made, or were persuaded to make. We find such vote-buying and such vote-selling to be reprehensible and non-democratic.

We would therefore suggest that transients to a community, as most college students are, should have no voice in determining policies, procedures or structure of any local governmental agency. They leave behind - and they do leave -destruction and chaos.

D.M. Wegner

Protest Planned

Even though the referendum on building the new Menomonie library was voted down by a 2-1 majority it was built with permission by someone or some group of people.

The people's vote did not count. Therefore, the individual or individuals who authorized the go ahead should be held accountable, not the taxpayers or the majority who opposed the building.

Therefore, all people including students who are interested, concerned and opposed to this action that was taken are asked to join in the protesting by picketing at the dedication Friday, Sept. 19 at 8:50 a.m. at the new library site.

Join the club students. You are just but another group that has lost your voice in Menomonie. It's about time we stand up for our rights.

"And the things that they fear are a weapon to be used against them" -- Neil Peart Service organizations often forget that they are just that. They blow things way out of proportion; you and I should have the same privilege...

It was business as usual at Haineyvision headquarters. Mr. Hainey was in the back room counting money.

"There is no better scam than being the only show in town, you know!" he told his manager.

The manager, Gilda, was now psyched up for her first customer of the day. He was a huge man who had been discovered using his friends cable box. He was pissed because she had sicked the cops on him. He was fined $72.50 for "cable fraud".

Arnold grimaced and turned his head slightly towards the Haineyvision counter. "You're a funny lady; I like you," he said, smiling. "That's why I'm going to kill you last."

This startled Gilda so much that her face almost showed human-like emotion. She quickly checked to see how much Arnold owed.

"That'll be an additional $12.50," she said snidely. "Remember, you agreed to pay your bill in advance when you signed our contract."

Arnold looked up and around the office from behind his sunglasses. He leaned forward and breathed a chilling warning: "I'll be back."

Gilda might have been terrified had she not been too ignorant to realize that Arnold had an even uglier disposition than her own.

The trouble began a long time ago. Haineyvision had been granted a monopoly by conscientious city fathers who couldn't be compromised by anything but finest adolescent hookers.

This monopoly enabled Haineyvision to charge extortionate fees for basic service because Hooterville was too far from civilization to recieve any TV stations.

They even had the gall to charge $12 dollars a month for two stations from each network. This made their service appear adequate to numerous illiterate Townies.

Haineyvision was not all bad; they even had a sense of humor. Nothing set them off like the letters they sent to late paying customers that read:

"We believe in you, not only as a customer, but as a friend; pay up now, or else."

Such a letter was delivered to the local college newspaper. The editor had not pre-paid the paper's bill for the summer. A phone call soon followed:

"You owe us money," Gilda told the editor. "We're going to disconnect you."

The editor was about to argue with her when he heard a terrible crash just before the phone went dead. His nose for news told him to get over to the Haineyvision office right away.

The building was demolished. He heard gunshots and screams. As he approached the scene, he saw Arnold blowing away the Haineyvision staff with a Mac-10.

Gilda and Mr. Hainey were the only ones left. Arnold picked her up easily and carried her outside, where he held her by one ankle above the bottomless pit of sewer excavation on 12th Ave.

"You remember when I promised to kill you last?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied.

He smiled and turned her flailing body to face him.

"I lied." With that, he dropped her. "Into the mud, skum queen!" he shouted. Her face speared into the muck with a satisfying splat.

Mr. Hainey, in the meantime, had quickly scammed out of the area. Arnold took off after him in hot pursuit.

The police soon arrived. They busied themselves filling body bags and helping Gilda (who had survived due to an innate ability to eat dirt) out of the mud pit.

"What was Arnold so angry about?" asked the editor.

"I called the cops on him for using his friend's cable box," she told him.

"You called the police on him for that?" he said, giving her his best Bill Murray impression: "Were you, Gilda, menstruating when you did this?"

"What the hell difference does that make?" asked a startled policeman.

"Back off man; I'm a journalist!"

The story you have just read is fictitious. Any similarity to any person or corporations, living or dead, is purely coincidental.

Stoutonia: What countries are violating basic human rights in the world?

Dr. See: A third of the nations violate human rights. I think this is a very important point especially for American college students because we have nothing to give us an idea what those human rights violations are all about. American college students don't know what the hell torture is. We never hear about it and it doesn't happen in our families. If you go to El Salvador for example, talk to a young man down there, there is not a person who doesn't have a relative thats been tortured or has disappeared.

QUESTION #2.

HOW CAN THE BUDGET-CONSCIOUS COLLEGE STUDENT SAVE MONEY?

a) Save over 50% off AT&T's weekday rates on out-of-state calls during nights and weekends.

b) Don't buy textbooks when "Monarch Notes" will do just fine.

c) Save 40% off AT&T's weekday rate on out-of-state calls during evenings.

d) Count on AT&T for exceptional value and high quality service.

e) Hang around with the richest kids in school; let them pick up the tab whenever possible.

If you're like most college students in the western hemisphere, you try to make your money go a long way. That's why you should know that AT&T Long Distance Service is the right choice for you. AT&T offers so many terrific values. For example, you can save over 50% off AT&T's day rate on calls during weekends until 5 pm Sunday, and from 11 pm Sunday through Friday.

GREAT DEAL!

Call between 5 pm and 11 pm, Sunday through Friday, and you'll save 40% off our day rate.

Ever dial a wrong number? AT&T gives you immediate credit if you do. And of course, you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections any place you call.

To find out more about how AT&T can help save you money, give us a call. With a little luck, you won't have to hang around with the rich kids. Call toll-free today, at 1 800 222-0300

Fine Line

Wanna buy some Sugar Smacks?

Jef Maynard

I was compelled to go to Don's Super Duper Value Extra Large Grocery Store that has just about everything. It's a nice store; I like it well enough. I went to see the limits, or should I say the vista of the expanding universe of Commercial Application.

I went to that aisle that has ten thousand boxes of breakfast cereal. Cold cereal, as it is sometimes called. One aisle long, three shelves full, I stopped counting at 91 "varieties."

Packaging, nutrition and graphic design majors take heart, there will always be room for you in the ever-expanding universe of Cold Cereal replication. If you are willing to blow your moral fiber right out of your bowels, there is career space available.

Let's start with, or start in on Quaker Foods. Rolled oats are ok, not much can go wrong there, unless you're a farmer. Just about everything else they do is a sin against thee and me.

Puffed Rice and Puffed Wheat are brilliant, just add air, makes its own sauce. It is a cheap additive, and not terribly dangerous. Then I read the ingredients on Quaker Corn Bran cereal: Yellow -6, red -40, blue -1. Well, color my world. And remember, this cereal looks just about colorless, a bland "corn" sort of color. What would it look like without the primary palette?

Another Super Nova food company is Nabisco. Once again, they have a safe product, timeless, harmless old Shredded Wheat. You've all seen those amiable little hay bales. But what else do they make? Team Flakes, cardboard soaked in vitamins and sugar.

The next selection was new to me but seems like the metaphor for all that this country represents. U.S. Mills' Uncle Sam cereal, "a natural laxative." That humble little red, white and blue box sort of brought a lump, but not in my throat.

General Mills was there with its vanguard troops of good eating. There was something called Fiber One. They must have got it right the first time. Next to it, Muffin Bran Crisp, or Crispy Bran Muffins, or Bran Muffin Crisp, I'm not sure. One thing for certain, it is probably good for a flotilla in the toilet if you know what I mean.

Skipping along past some of the less revolting boxes, I read: "Crispy Wheats and Raisins, Honey Touched Whole Wheat Flakes." Honey touched to the tune of 25 percent sugar. There is an old Beatles song with the line, "uh uh, honey don't."

Kix was there: "Better taste --ask your kids." Lord knows, kids are wise beyond their years when it comes to breakfast.

General Mills also makes Total. My Health class instructor put it best when he described this stuff: "100 percent of the minimum RDA, 26 tablespoons of sugar, and it costs $5 a box."

Post Foods Co. is in the ever-expanding cold cereal market. They make Raisin Grape Nuts for one. That name really makes me wonder, just what is a Grape Nut? Is it a grape seed? Is Raisin Grape anything redundant?

They also make some granola-like substance called Horizon. It comes in four variations. One has raisins, pineapple, peanuts and coconut. It is called Mountain Trail. Another has dried banana chips instead of peanuts, so it is called Tropical Fruit. Makes perfect sense to me.

Cereal box photography and presentation must be a special career field. One cereal, Fortified Oat Flakes, is pictured with blueberries and some milk drizzling down into it. The tiny print on the box says: Serving Suggestion. Another cereal right next to it, C.W. Post, has some wheat stalks and a small wooden scoop in it. That doesn't say anything. It probably is not a Serving Suggestion.

Natural Bran Flakes is photographically "Enlarged to Show Texture." The stuff looks like it was done with an electron microscope.

One of my favorite names is Kellogg's Product 19. As someone said to me in the store, what happened to the previous 18 products? I wonder what K-e-Double l-o-Double Good has in store as Product 20?

Another bizarre thing about cereal is the lack of competition in Raisin Bran. Kellogg has the market there. Even stranger, why, in the same product can you get these prizes: $1 back, $1.25 back, (which would you chose?), a coupon for more Raisin Bran, a Brush tip marker, or a Garfield bicycle reflector? (I have the Garfield reflector on my bike and I think it's just swell.)

With Quisp cereal you can play Space Trivia. With Cap'Crunch, besides getting a mysterious lubricated coating on the inside of your mouth, you can help Free the Captain, and earn a share of $1,000,000. It comes with a free rescue kit.

Ralston Foods, famous makers of Dog Chow, Cat Chow and Monkey Chow also make People Chow. This is a brief list of their offerings: Cookie Crisp, with artificial chocolate chip flavor, Ghost Busters cereal, Sun Flakes, lightly sweetened a whole new way, (which turns out to be Nutra-Sweet), and G.I. Joe Action Stars cereal. With one third sugar, I'll bet the kids see action stars.

In case your morning isn't all laughs and good times, General Mills also makes Pac Man cereal, something called Circus Fun, Lucky Charms, (which are magically delicious), Rocky Road, with chocolaty coated marshmallows, and S'Mores, which as I recall, used to be the melted Hershey bar, marshmallow, graham cracker tooth decay invention of camping trips past.

Some cereal has gone nostalgic. Life cereal wants you to guess which person pictured on the box is the famous Mikey, who eats anything, and is probably the richest kid in North America. And to think, just because he ate some cereal. It could happen to you.

Eating some of this crap must be like being beaten in the stomach with a breakfast club. I'm certain you've had enough. I've left out some monstrous favorites. As a last note, however remember this: if you buy Kellogg's Corn Flakes, "the original and the best," you can get a coupon for free milk.

Scholarship recognizes outstanding art students

by Karen M. Heagle

Every fall the Stout University Foundation presents approximately 250 scholarships to students who display academic excellence.

One particular scholarship that recognizes an outstanding student in the art program is that of the John and Frances Furlong art scholarship for the amount of $500. The recipient is judged on the basis of artistic ability and academic achievement.

Dave Williams, the foundation's executive director explained the intentions of the Furlong's, "The scholarship was begun by Dr. and Mrs. John Furlong of Menomonie, as a means to foster interest in the development of a fledgling art program at Stout at the time." Furlong played a significant part in the organization, and development of Stout's art program.

Furlong stated,"We feel it is very important that there be financial support for students in the art program at Stout." The art student faces the added expense of art supplies in addition to traditional college expenses.

This year the recipient of the honor was Jeanne Wilkinson. Wilkinson has been an art student at Stout for three years. She is honored to be recognized with this scholarship. "I've gotten scholarships in general areas, this one not even in that it is more money it was just more gratifying."

Wilkinson has had a love for art as long as she can remember, "I've always knew that I wanted to be an artist. It's just taken me a longtime to get to the point where I am actually doing it."

In 1969-70 Wilkinson was attending the University of Minnesota where she quit upon entering her junior year. She was caught up in the counter culture of the times, and eventually moved to a dairy farm in Boyceville. During the time she spent on the farm she recalled, "There was always this thing in the back of my mind that said 'you should be drawing and painting. What are you doing with these cows?'"

After ten years of farming, money became scarce and making a living was near impossible. Wilkinson and her husband sold the cows and sought out a new living. Subsequently Wilkinson was divorced. With her two children to raise she decided to go back to school.

Wilkinson was at the time unaware of Stout's art program,"I've lived here since 1972 and didn't hear about an art program here." Since her children were attending school in Boyceville she decided it would work out quite well to enroll in this program."It was really a fluke for me living right here so close to a school that had an art department."

After attending Stout for three years Wilkinson has found that few people are really aware of the art facilities Stout has,"I think this place is probably the highest quality in the state for undergraduates. It's a well kept secret, I think this place deserves much better P.R."

Wilkinson has found her self concentrating in the areas of painting and sculpture. She especially enjoys the constant challenge of painting. She has found that it is more of a struggle in 2D than 3D.

She is especially drawn in the art of the figure."I seem to be continually drawn back into the figure." Wilkinson has found she has particular interest in the female form. She attributes this to,"possibly from my own experiences as a women, and having children--I don't think I'd have the same focus if I had started doing this when I was younger."

She values all the previous experiences she has encountered, including the dairy farm,"I learned more about life and all these processes in people's lives that I

Guitarist's performance offers versatility, inspiration

Guitarist David Grimes performed a variety of music including American folk and classical at the Crystal Ballroom last Wednesday evening. (Stoutonia photo courtesy of Kay Gilbertson)

by Barbara Klimek

David Grimes, known to perform a large variety of guitar works, entertained a small crowd at the Crystal Ballroom Wednesday night, September 10. The event was sponsored by the Performing Arts Commission.

Although Grimes was a little disappointed with the small turnout, it did not get in the way of his masterful guitar techniques and sensitive melodic statements.

Grimes has a deep love for his instrument, and personal warmth to the music he performs. There's no vocal articulation, but his hands on the guitar become the vocal, versatile musical tool to inspire most anyone who enjoys a variety of classical music.

Most of his performances are solo, but he does appear with symphony orchestras and chamber ensembles. He plays classical music from the nineteenth century to the twentieth century; modern romantic, American folk, English ballets, and Bravura are a few of his melodic choices.

Grimes has no performing preferences, "I like it all, I really enjoy being on stage performing in front of an audience. It gives me a great feeling, and an absolute joy."

Based in California, Grimes origin through music was a little unusual, in that he didn't have any training or background of music as a child. He wasn't exposed to classical music until college, and has been playing now for twenty years.

Grimes travels throughout North America, and has a lot of favorite spots to perform. The Midwestern region is special to him, but Wisconsin weather is not favorable in his presence when performing in this area. He plans his performance schedule around his second job which is an instructor at the California State University, Fullerton.

Some future plans of Grimes' include; a major European tour. He does not want to do recording, but he feels it must be done. Grimes stated, "You need it for recognition and publicity."

Judging by his performance and the reaction of the audience, it is clear that Grimes has a powerful, emotional impact as a musician that will long be remembered by those who truly appreciate guitar playing.

Kay Gilbertson, of the Performing Arts Commission stated, "I think Mr. Grimes' performance was incredible. I wish more attended because those who missed his performance, missed an incredible, touching performace."

Gilbertson feels that there should have been more publicity done for Grimes' performances. "Bulletin boards are becoming old hat to most Stout students. I feel a need for more unique publicity tactics, and they are being considered. Some aides are being used such as audio visuals, posters, and displays."

Production receives remarkable reviews

by Jef Maynard

Every so often, editors give reviewers an assignment that sounds like two hours in the electric chair. When I was assigned to see the Artreach touring production of "Short Stories and Tall Tales," I felt a bit like Ethel Rosenberg did when she heard about her last assignment.

Paul Bunyan meets Garrison Keillor, let's do provincial community theatre I thought. I have never been so happily mistaken in my short journalistic career.

All the magic of live theatre was there, precision high-wire performance without a net, no instant replay. The Mabel Tainter Theater is a nearly perfect setting for this intimate type of performance.

The script, written on commission by John Olive, was a potential gold mine of acting opportunity, dug into deeply and richly by the three person ensemble, veteran Guthrie actors, James Lawless, Leslie Rapp and Kevin Kling. The material was embellished and delivered with such flair and precision that the audience had no chance of resistance.

Action in the play revolved around the story of a father and son pair of drifters in the 1890's. The father dies and the boy, David Quinn, joins forces with a runaway blind girl named Frankie.

Frankie and David's match is exquisite and special, yet because of a reward for the lost girl, they are seperated.

Thirty years pass and David Quinn evolves into a farmer and saloon storyteller. A likable, twisted swindler named Leon Schwab hires David Quinn to tell his stories on the remote prairie radio station Schwab transports with him. The legitimate part of Schwab's business involves the sale of radios through local hardware stores.

Quinn's stories about his "Poppy" and Frankie become very popular in the entertainment-starved prairie and radio sales boom.

The climax of the play involves Quinn's reunion with Frankie and the likelihood of Schwab going to jail because of the con scheme he has. Schwab uses the airwaves to solicit questions-for-a-fee for his non-existent psychic, Miss Emily. The new Federal Communications Commission has its doubts and the FBI has some questions for Schwab.

What makes the excellent script come alive is the delightfully exaggerated performance of Kevin Kling as Leon Schwab. While he also plays the part of young David Quinn, it is Leon that gives the play its top-end craziness.

Kling's frumpy clothes, his anxious posture and gestures, his

Abstract

Back to School Pessimism

by Julie Abel

The majority of the first stories written are pretty difficult to start. Usually, it takes a few weeks to get back into the swing of things, learning to open books again, making those pencils and pens fit into our hands, but most of all getting our summer sun brains back in first gear (but then again the weather is doing a good job of that!)

So how was my summer you ask? A good question - that is a good lead into a story, or is it? Probably not because summer was spent working and bar hopping. I must say that I have had better summers.

Not that I really want to know, but to be polite, I ask you. "How was your summer?"

"Oh, that sounds good - a lot of work, but when you need the money, well, you know what I mean!"

It's kind of nasty the way college makes students have such an obsession with money. A selfish need; because, just about everything we earn we spend on ourselves.

Speaking of obsessions what about that word "nasty?" I guess we can thank good ol' Janet Jackson for that one. Thank you for nothing Janet. I don't like your song anyway.

I'm not doing to bad considering that I didn't know what to start with?! What do you think? On second thought forget I asked. Disappointment is not on my top ten favorites list this week.

Well so far I have not been exactly bright and cheerful, have I? Quite pessimistic if I do say so myself.

Well, here is something cheerful - I have found that my second year as an art major has been quite a bit less expensive. I am sure that a good deal of that is to do with the fact that I have some major supplies left from last year.

Now that I've said something cheerful you probably don't give a damn. But I know that there are plenty of other art majors out there that know exactly what I am talking about.

Something else cheerful? Sorry folks I don't consider the Green Bay Packers as being cheerful. Oh well, maybe they will surprise us!

Well, all in all I guess that I am glad to be back - No, I take it back. I know that I am glad to be back. Sure it is a lot of work, but that is what we are here for, isn't it.

Have a good one anyway - you can be sur that you will hear more from me at a later date and time. How is that for bright and cheery?!!

Design students become involved in historical preservation project

by Noreen Spraner

Last Wednesday, Graphic and Interior Design students learned that they will have a good chance to enhance their portfolios this semester while working on the Menomonie Historical Preservation Project.

The project includes the intersection of Main and Broadway, including Main Street up to the Valley Bank. This area of Menomonie was built during the Knapp Stout Co's. hayday between 1883 and 1924. All of the buildings in this area, which include Bowman Hall, Ray Hall, and Harvey Hall have architectural similarities.

Dr. Claudia Smith presenting the proposals for preserving downtown Menomonie's historic character, now at the J. Furlong Gallery, Ray Hall. (Stoutonia photo by Wayne Parmley)

Unfortunately, over the years downtown Menomonie has become an ugly hodge-podge of plastic and aluminum signs, and mismatched store fronts. The project intends to rectify the situation by designing facades and signage that will enhance rather than destroy Menomonie's historical charm, giving Menomonie a sense of visual continuity, and maybe even inspiring some people to shop more downtown. Several businesses have already expressed a sincere interest in implementing the student's ideas.

Design student, Sue Gauger, was very enthusiastic about being involved with the project, and its value to design students,"we will be developing the actual signage for the facades, proposing a specific sign for each store front. ...We will also be constructing a model of the downtown area of what we proposed."

The model, of the proposed changes for the district should be completed this February in time for a national student design competition sponsored by ASID, The American Society of Interior Designers.

"I think anyone who has an Interior or Graphic Design major would be interested in this project. This is a way to see your work implemented. This is great for the portfolio." Gauger explained.

Currently, the drawings of what has already been proposed, along with photos of Menomonie's current look can be seen at the J. Furlong Gallery until October 3. The hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Spontaneous Combustion

No Music?

James "Unk" Falkofske

As the long, warm winds of summer slowly die, and the cool colors of autumn leaves appear in the sky, we head for a new beginning in life. UW-Stout, semester I, 1986.

After what has seemed to be all but an endless summer, school starts back in gear, and as usual, The Stoutonia has crawled once more out of summer hibernation. Along side the regular columns and articles will appear a new feature: this year the column SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION starts as a regular in The Stoutonia's fall lineup.

What is SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION anyhow? An unforeseen event or happening? A sudden crisis? Maybe the way that this column will be thrown together every week? I don't really know myself. What I do know is what the topic of this column will be. Music. It will search out how music changes our lives, what music is, who's hot and who's not, and new trends in the music scene.

It will also look into the roots and soul of rock and roll. So many times people say that rock and roll has lost its touch, its feelings and sincerity. I believe instead that it is just opening up to new horizons. I would like to explore these new areas with all readers.

But classical listeners need not despair, this will not be just another ROCK & ROLL column, because music is much more than just screaming guitar licks. Jazz, blues, and country will flow in and out of this column.

This column will also investigate the Stout music program, the world of radio and records, and even trends in the music industry (portable recording studios, the performing side of the recording industry, and much more).

Needless to say, it will not be able to cover all aspects of all types of music. No newspaper or magazine would be able to deal with so much material in so little space. It will cover a mixture of different types of music, leaning more toward the majority rather than the minority of listeners. If you feel that something would interest readers, then send it in. Let me know what you like: that's why America is so great. Everyone is entitled to their own opinions; what's the best, who's the best, and why they are the best.

For this reason, I would encourage readers to drop me a note on what they think are important happenings in the world of music. What would help me even more is if you could clip out articles about groups or performers that interest you (this saves me hours of research at the library).

wouldn't have known if I hadn't lived out in the country."

Wilkinson plans to attend graduate school but she hasn't settled on one particular school yet. She explained her ultimate plan, "I'd like to teach at any level. Selling my work is a far off dream--I'd like to have more time to develop my paintings and sculptures."

Wilkinson has found The John and Frances Furlong Scholarship to be some what of an approval from the public, "It was quite an honor; it was like permission almost--not that I haven't had it before in my own mind--but it was like public recognition, and the public domain is important to the artist."

Wilkinson is satisfied with the quality of the program here and a scholarship is beneficial to all students who are equally satisfied with the program. Dave Williams explained, "The scholarship and the art program at Stout have grown tremendously in stature since the beginning, and a great number of students eagerly seek educational opportunities through the program."

squint behind wire rimmed glasses and his nutty smile make the character of Schwab as visually laughable as that of the early Groucho Marx look.

And the things he says with his zany New York voice can never be duplicated on the printed page... "the magic of the ether," referring to the radio. "I'm a little bit tired, I haven't slept since I was 21," and his idea to increase local radio listenership, "we'll get the local fat lady to sing Stephen Foster."

Kling did something that was so funny, I dropped my pen from the balcony to the main floor. At one point, when the tension of his business was getting to him, he walked slowly over to the door, opened it and screamed like only Kevin Kling playing a neurotic, New York City Jewish swindler in the midwestern prairie could scream.

Another beautiful facet of this complex play was the skill with which Leslie Rapp portrayed first a young, exuberant Frankie, then later an older, mature, blind school teacher, skilled beyond her handicap. Rapp's own physical beauty was not lost on the audience in the intimate theatre.

Rapp spent some time with an instructor from the Minnesota Institute for the Blind to learn the use of a cane, and the general disposition of a blind person.

With Frankie, the audience went through a series of vivid, heartfelt sensations of the discoveries made without sight, which Rapp acted out with skillful gestures, literally down to her toes.

As Francis, the mature blind school teacher, Rapp had almost to create a second character to display the changes undergone in 30 years. Rapp's facial expressions were a joy to watch as she entranced the audience with "both" characters.

The third actor in the performance was the well-known, accomplished James Lawless. Lawless began the performance as tough but lovably mysterious "Poppy." He told stories with drink, delivered with such convincing Irish gusto and gruffness, a whole evening of the tales would have been a pleasure.

His transition to a grown David Quinn however was so smooth, so unforced and "correct" that the man seemed not to be acting at all. The role of Quinn seemed to be that sort of midwestern stability and earthiness that made the orbiting characters seem all the more on the fringe. Lawless' restraint in character portrayal was an intelligent device preventing a richly balanced performance from becoming an ungrounded farce.

After watching "Short Stories and Tall Tales," instead of feeling like I had been given a holiday suite on death row, I felt emotionally enhanced and lifted from the drone of life as only a consummate work of art can make one feel.

Mickey Mouse Meals

Denise Cain

The best thing about Walt Disney World is the attractions, right? Wrong. Those of us who live to eat believe the food at Walt Disney World to be the most breathtaking amusement of all.

Sandra Graf, a Junior in Hotel/Restaurant Management, completed her co-op at Walt Disney World this past summer. Sandra worked within the food service system selling popcorn in different areas of the park and working in two restaurants: The Cone Shop and Coke Corner. Sandra found her learning experience very rewarding. Not only did she get to serve food in a full-length costume, on hot, humid days, with a smile; but she also got to meet a lot of interesting people.

In her spare time, Sandra enjoyed eating in different areas of the park. She advanced to become the connoisseur of Mickey Mousekateer Bars and Mickey Mouse Ears. On her eating journeys through the park, Sandra mentioned coming across the "Cooking With Mickey Around the World" cookbook. This book contains recipes not only from the Magic Kingdom but also from the Epcot Center and the resorts located on Disney property. Sandra purchased this fine book and she has offered to share some of her favorites with us, the UW-Stout off-campus cookery club.

Here's a popular appetizer from the Polynesian Village Resort, that can be served either hot or cold. Fresh broccoli is recommended, but frozen broccoli can be substituted.

Cream of Broccoli Soup

4 cups broccoli stems, cut very fine
1 quart chicken broth
1 bay leaf
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
3 chicken bouillon cubes
1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup flour
1 cup half and half
1 1/2 cup finely cut broccoli buds
1/4 tsp white pepper

Combine broccoli stems, chicken broth, bay leaf and onion in a saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook for 10 minutes. Add bouillon cubes and cook three minutes longer. Strain and set broth aside. In a saucepan, melt butter and add flour. Cook and stir for 5 minutes over low heat, being careful not to brown. Add half and half and broth and stir until mixture boils and is thickened. Add broccoli buds and pepper. Let simmer over heat for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally.

This hearty main dish is served in The Land Grille Room, The Land, and Epcot Center. It is a time consuming dish to make so plan ahead.

The Woodsman

1/2 cup flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
3 lbs. beef, cut in 1-inch cubes
1/4 cup oil
3 cups water
1/2 cup dry red wine
2 beef bouillon cubes
3 medium potatoes, cut
3 medium carrots, cut
3 stalks celery, cut
1 large onion
1-2 tsp. chopped fresh dill
1 tbsp. chopped parsley dairy sour cream

Combine flour, salt and pepper. Coat beef and brown in oil in large saucepot. Drain off excess oil. Add remaining flour mixture, water, wine, and bouillon cubes. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer 1 & 1/2 hours. Add potatoes, carrots, celery, and onion. Bring to a boil. Cover. Continue simmering 1 hour or until meat and vegetables are tender. Stir in dill and parsley. Serve with sour cream.

Finally, dessert; Sandra's favorite food group. Don't forget the whipped cream and shaved chocolate to accent your creation. It is served in the France Showcase and in the Epcot Center.

Chocolate Mousse
(Boulangeri Patisserie)

5 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, melted
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1/4 cup cream
1 tsp vanilla
3 egg whites
1/4 cup sugar

Melt chocolate over hot water. Remove. Combine egg yolks and cream. Gradually add chocolate, stirring rapidly. Add vanilla. Beat egg whites with sugar until stiff peaks form. Gently fold into chocolate mixture. Chill until firm.

Entertainment provided by Stout bands

by Barbara Klimek

The U-W Stout Concert Band is conducted by Ervin Schlick, a man who loves his students and music.

The concert band consists of 85-90 members, which is the full band. The concert band performs for four important events during the year; the Homecoming parade and concert, a Holiday concert, Parents weekend, and Graduation. They also go on fall and spring tours.

A plan by the band and the advisory board is to take their fall tour to Madison, WI. This will involve two stops to high schools on the way to and from Madison. The band tours mainly in the Minnesota and Wisconsin areas.

Schlick stated, "I would like to see a full band. We like to have fun in our performing and to give pleasure to the person who listens to our performances. It takes a lot of work and dedication and many hours of practice by the students to make the band work."

The Concert band breaks down into three other active bands. The Pep band, consisting of 55 members, performs for excitement. As the name states "Pep" for home games. They performed for the football game on Saturday. The game just wouldn't be the same without a Pep band to perform.

Ervin Schlick was an instructor at Browerville, Minnesota 36 years ago. Then he moved to Montgomery, Minnesota, and then to St. Paul where he instructed for 26 years. All of these schools were elementary and high schools. Schlick came to Stout three years ago.

Jazz Ensemble, and the Dixieland band are two other sections of the Concert band. These two groups like to have fun with the instruments in a different kind of musical way. The Jazz band consists of 25 members and the Dixieland has 8 members. They're all students who like to perform and show they're musical talents.

Schlick teaches music appreciation and instructs the Concert band. The love for his students, job, and music is strong. Schlick stated, "I love all the kids here at Stout and to give them all I can through my teachings and my music appreciation, I feel like a father figure."

Schlick, was involved with a string band in college, in which he was able to tour the five state region. Upon coming to Stout he has become the main arm in the development of the Concert band. The band went from 22 members, playing very seldom, with little or no recognition, to a band of 85 to 90 members, but they are still receiving little recognition for the work they do.

Hours are spent by Schlick in selecting the music for the bands to play. He finds it very important to select unique music that is not over heard. He stated, "It takes me hours to select the right music that my students will want to play, it has to fit the band, and I want to find new music to the ear." Stout doesn't offer a major in music. The students that perform in the band are not forced to join the band, they joined the band because they enjoy insrumental music performance, meeting people, displaying their musical talents, and just having fun.

The Stout Student Association plays an important part in the area of funding and recognition, for the band. They provided sweaters for each of the members to wear during performances. Funds are received through a set budget, donations, and fundraisers by the band members. Schlick said,"I would like to thank the S.S.A. for their support, and to the students for their concern."

Jill Heinowski, senior at Stout and the president of the Concert band's advisory board, commented that,"I think it's a fun organization to be involved in, even though it's not a school for majors in music. We're all involved because we enjoy music and performing. It's something we can do to relieve tensions from college studies."

The main purpose for the band's tours and ambitions to perform are to basically promote Stout and to give recognition of some of the activities offered for enjoyment and academic involvement. Heinowski stated, "We tour to let people know what our college has to offer and publicity for our bands. We have fun doing it all."

The Concert band is becoming more involved with more activities and events then the past. They are finally receiving more invitations to perform for more organizations. Schlick explained, "Recognition is just coming to us, it pleases me to see that for the band. I'm glad that things are finally happening, it took a lot of work, but there are worthwhile rewards."

Handicapped musician entertains enthusiastic Pawn Live crowd

by Stephanie Weiss

He picked on Ola and Lloyd on Friday night. Nobody tried to stop him. He picked on Ola and Lloyd on Saturday night. Brian Matteson helped him do it. Everyone listened and applauded as Joseph Baird, singer/songwriter from Grand Rapids, Minnesota sang and picked his guitars, Ola and Lloyd.

Joseph Baird, and road manager Brian Matteson, came to UW-Stout to play the Pawn Live on September 12 and 13. Baird's performances included tunes by James Taylor, Michael Johnson, and best of all, much of his own work. Although a small crowd, Baird received high praise and compliments on his talents as a musician. "It's a shame not more people showed up. He (Baird) was very entertaining and much more relaxing than watching 'Rambo' on t.v," said Kurt Siebert, a new Joseph Baird fan. Added Terry Newman, "I greatly enjoyed the performance, especially his own music."

Baird's roots are in rock-n-roll bands and duos, but have since evolved into a solo act. He decided to go solo after previous bands and duos had fallen apart. Said Baird about his work with bands, "Just when things started going well, one member always left. We'd replace him and someone else would leave." "Besides," he added, "musicians are notorious for their egos and sometimes we clashed." Baird worked in a duo with good friend, Commander Foss, and also with brother Tony Militich for some time.

An interesting facet to Baird's performances are his Handicap Awareness Shows, which account for about a quarter of his performances. Being paralyzed from the waist down himself, Baird offers his experiences in hope of helping others overcome difficulties and problems faced as a disabled person. A combination of performing, lecturing, and open floor discussion, Baird's Awareness Shows focus on defining "disabled" as well as covering some of the various social and personal aspects and attitudes of being disabled.

> "I've been faced with some pretty monumental difficulties ... but it comes down to attitude.
> —Joesph Baird"

"I've been faced in my lifetime with some pretty monumental difficulties...but it comes down to attitude. In order to have a productive life you really need to have a positive attitude," commented Baird, "take the gifts the big guy gave you and use them to your advantage."

Baird definitely uses his gifts to his advantages and carries a positive attitude, but admits getting nervous before a show and not being fully satisfied with his abilities. "I've worked hard on my voice and I'm not satisfied with my ability," said Baird, "I'm really waiting to become a better musician and am working at a desperate pace."

Baird's performances, however, let you see nothing of a man who is nervous and nothing of a man who is dissatisfied with his abilities. You see a good looking man singing calmly, with expression, and sensitive lyrics accompanied by acoustic guitar. You see a man with a physical disability who can make others smile by sharing his talents.

While composing and singing music are his profession, one of Baird's pastimes is wheelchair racing. Baird competes in two or three races a year including the Kaiser Roll in Bloomington, Minnesota. It is understandable that Baird only races a few times a year when he says, "I have one real big fear...that I could hurt my hands pretty badly and I don't want to take the chance of ruining my music career because I was out goofing around."

Manager Matteson and Baird have traveled to many parts of the country including; Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, and Iowa. Future plans include breaking new ground in Arizona and California.

Joseph Baird's performance's are done for a number of reasons. One is for the personal satisfaction of performing and the love of music. Another is for sharing with others. "If I can take one person in my audience away from a problem...if I can distract them from their daily struggles...if I can enlighten them in some small way, maybe spiritually, that's positive, I guess I've done my job,"

Lady netters trounced by UW-La Crosse

by Paul Emerson

The 1986 Lady Blue Devils tennis team opened its season last week and found the going to be tough. The netters were bounced by a strong UW-La Crosse team who took the match by a convincing 8-1 margin.

Coach Bob Smith summed it up by saying, "La Crosse looked very tough."

The lone bright spot for the Blue Devils was Mary Malloy, who won her number one singles match. After losing the first set, she fought back and took the next two sets, including an exciting second set tiebreaker, 7-5.

Looking on the brighter side of things, the outlook for this season was and still is one of both youth and optimism. Coach Smith opened drills this year with 14 hopefuls out for the team.

Taking a look at this year's squad, Smith stated, "We are a very young team with a lot of freshmen and sophomores. We will need time to develop through the year."

The goals of this year's team are to "give 100 percent every practice and every match, and let the rest take care of itself."

Junior Mary Malloy holds down the top single's spot. Malloy is a two-year letter winner and took the M.V.P. and Most Inspirational Player awards last year.

A pair of freshmen hold down the next two spots. Julie Peters is at number two and Suzie Blietz at number three. The number four spot is held by Senior Jean Feyen, who won the Most Improved Player award last year.

We will need time to develop...
—Bob Smith
Tennis Coach

Sophomores Karen Blau and Tara Stahel step in at number five and number six, respectively.

The next six spots are looking like this: At number seven — Sophomore Liz Wessely, number eight — Sophomore Kris Anderson and number nine — Sophomore Tracy Kellerman. Three freshmen occupy the final three spots. Jane Hagland is at number ten, Cheryl Marty is at number 11 and Jennifer Denis is at number 12.

Michelle McClean, an ineligible sophomore transfer, and Freshman Katie Ritland, who is recovering from illness, round out the squad.

The Blue Devil ladies were also in action over the past weekend. They traveled to Oshkosh for the UW-Oshkosh Doubles Tournament. Once again they were faced with some stiff competition, placing sixth in the seven-team meet.

Team results had Marquette taking the tourney title with 23 points. UW-Eau Claire came in second with 18, followed by UW-La Crosse with 17. UW-Whitewater took fourth with 16 points, UW-Milwaukee fifth with 15, UW-Stout a distant sixth with 6 points, and host UW-Oshkosh took last with 2 points.

Stout's number one doubles team of Mary Malloy and Jill Peters placed sixth. They lost their first match of the day to Haug/Pederson of Milwaukee, 6-7, 6-2, 6-1. They then beat Pederson/Andreoiti of Eau Claire, 4-6, 6-3, 7-6, winning the tiebreaker and with it the match, 8-6. They lost their third match to Weitz/Peters of Oshkosh, 6-1, 6-2.

Coach Smith commented on the tourney saying, "We played some good doubles at times. There's some good potential here."

Jean Feyen and Tara Stahel made up the number two tandem, placing fourth. According to Smith, "They need more experience together. They seem to communicate well."

The number three team had Kris Anderson and Suzie Blietz paired up, taking sixth place. "Return of serve hurt us. The potential is good," Smith said.

A pair of sophomores made up number four doubles. Karen Blau and Tracy Kellerman teamed up for a sixth place finish. Smith said, "They need to work on footwork."

The netters were scheduled to host Eau Claire on Tuesday. The next scheduled home matches are tomorrow with Oshkosh at 3 p.m. and a double-header on Saturday against Whitewater at 9 a.m. and UW-Green Bay at 1 p.m.

Kickers blank Stevens Point, 3-0

by Katie Keran

The UW-Stout soccer team started out the season last Sunday by defeating Stevens Point 3-0 in a very intense and muddy match. Scoring the goals for Stout were Ken Jaslow, Kevin Sheehan and Steve Abrahamson.

The Stevens Point offense was completely shut down by veteran goalie Doug Hall, along with the strong defensive effort anchored by sweeper Tom Benson. The scoring began with a cross made by Kevin Sheehan to Ken Jaslow, who then made a tremendous header past the Stevens Point goalkeeper. The second goal was fired directly into the net from the top of the box by midfielder Sheehan.

In the second half, midfielder Steve Abrahamson ripped a shot that rebounded off the right goal post into the net. The game was a very intense one full of many sliding tackles and rough plays throughout the muddy field. But the Stout team showed their talent by playing superior offense and defense.

The team is psyched to win
—Dan Nelson
Soccer Club

This year's squad is expected to keep dominating their matches. Last year the Blue Devils' record was 9-2-2 and this year should prove to be another winning season. The team has great talent in the returning players and also has an impressive amount of new players out this year. Club President Dan Nelson is confident that the team could go undefeated. Nelson said, "The team is psyched to win. We have the talent and we also have the team's mascot, Bob the Cat, to boost our player morale."

The closest matches this year will probably be against UW-La Crosse and UW- Eau Claire. According to Nelson, the team is also looking forward to repeat their domination of the Chancellor's Cup. The next home game is against Northwestern College this Saturday at 1 p.m. Then on Sunday, the team takes on La Crosse at 1 p.m. Both games are scheduled to be played at Menomonie High School. Fans are encouraged to attend.

Also, the club is looking for more players. Women are especially needed so that two teams can be formed. If you are interested in joining the club, please call Frank at X-3581 or talk to Dan Nelson in person. Dan cannot currently be reached at home because he does not have a phone.

Tightrope

The Games are Fixed

Paul Wydeven

I remember when I first started to watch professional football. While watching the game every Sunday afternoon, my mother would say "Those games are all fixed."

Then this past weekend I was again home watching the Packers play the Saints with the same people I watched the game with back then and yes, my mother was still saying the game is fixed.

I never believed that these games were fixed, but enough evidence for my mothers case was built in one weekend.

The first game I watched was the Packer game and the first case came just before the end of the half when the Packers were in a fourth and one situation. The call was a pass to Ellerson, which was dropped. Again our television showed one of the Saints dragging on Ellerson, before he caught the ball. However, I did not see a little yellow flag to show defensive holding or interference.

Let's go to the next game I watched, the Rams and the 49ers. It was a Ram pass down field and the receiver, down on his knees, caught the ball, but it was ruled incomplete. Again my television showed the receiver catching the ball. This catch was soon confirmed by the commentator and the instant replay, but not the officials.

The best example of official negligence came Monday night, when the Steelers hosted the Broncos. The play was a lateral from John Elway to Gerald Whillhite, who in turn passed the ball to Steve Watson for an apparent touchdown. This time, the officials threw the the little yellow flag calling it a double pass.

Before the official in the press box could overrule the call, the Broncos had run another play. The press box official reviewed the call and a touchdown should have been allowed, but was not.

Today professional football is a big business and, like other big businesses, makes changes to keep up to date with what is happening around them. One example I can think of is drug testing, but let's look at the officiating of the game.

Why does the NFL only have part-time officials? It can not be the lack of money. These part-time officials seem to get more responsibility each year. That means these officials have greater control over the final results in each game. I think the results of the game should come from the teams performance and not from a referee's decision to throw the little yellow flag.

Now let's talk about the instant replay. Other businesses update with technology. Why not use the instant replay on more calls. I would say use it another weekend like this past one and other people will join her in saying, "The games are fixed!"

Spikers third in Winona tourney; lose by close margin to Augsburg

by Katie Keran

Last week wathen participating in the Winona tournament on Saturday.

The team played well in Winona, placing third out of six teams. Stout defeated UW-River Falls, St. Mary's and St. Teresa and then lost to Winona State and UW-La Crosse. Despite losing to Winona State, Coach Lynda Lee was happy that the team went three games in the match and ended up losing the third game by only five points. Winona State is a Division II team, whereas Stout is only a Division III team. Coach Lee attributed the loss to La Crosse, last year's conference champs, to "being too intimidated by them."

Lee was happy with the squad's overall performance at the tournament. She was optimistic about the play of two freshmen who came off the bench, Christy Omernik and Carol Bufe. Lee is also anticipating the return of 6-foot-3 Freshman Kim Vannoy who has not yet played because of a sprained ankle.

At Augsburg on Wednesday, the Lady Blue Devils lost 11-15, 11-15, 11-15. "We lacked communication and aggressiveness," Lee said. "We were playing at a slower tempo than usual." Lee did credit Senior Barb Carlson with some fine kills and also said that Junior Co-captain Mish Espe had numerous assists.

The team is on the road again this week. They will be playing UW-Green Bay and UW-Stevens Point on Wednesday, and then proceeding to the UW-Whitewater tournament on Saturday. The Lady Blue Devils already defeated Green Bay in their opening tri-meet and are looking to improve on their win.

"Our schedule is a lot tougher this year." Coach Lee said. "But we're still hoping to do well." Tuesday, September 23rd will be the next home game against Luther College and UW-Eau Claire. Game time is at 6:00 and 8:00.

Shown is play during the Intramural Mud Volleyball Championships. Some teams had such creative names Mudd Flappers, The Skroggers, The Boomers, Bud Lighters, Puce Place, Fudge Packers, Brian Ellingson, and The Jib Lounge Happy Sleepers.

Bears, Vikings both win at home; Packers throw game away

by Paul Wydeven

Well, the Green Bay Packers managed to lose 24-10 to the New Orlean Saints, the second worst team in the NFL. Why second worst? The Packers can have the honor of being the worst team, at least this week. The good news is that there are only 14 games left this year and it was nice to see the defense actually play ball.

Much of the Saints' win could be credited to the record seven interceptions thrown in the game by the Packers. Now, if the quarterbacks could just throw to the right people....

The Minnesota Vikings gave their new coach, Jerry Burns, his first victory 23-10 over the Tampa Bay Bucaneers. If a person was to look at the stats, this game could have gone either way. Tampa Bay had more time of possession and more yards rushing in the game, but the more talented Vikings came through.

The Chicago Bears pulled through in over-time over the Philadelphia Eagles. It was a hard fought battle on the field and on the side lines. Eagles' Head Coach Buddy Ryan, the Bears former defensive coordinator, was asked if the loss affected him personally, he said, "It's pretty tough." Punky quarterback Jim McMahon sat on the side lines with a separated shoulder injury, but may play against Green Bay Monday night.

My picks last week ended up 8-6, one behind my 9-5 performance the first week for a total of 17-11. This week it's as follows:

Cleveland over Cincinnati
Dallas over Atlanta
Denver over Philadelphia

Kansas City over Houston
L.A. Rams over Indianapolis
Miami over New York Jets
San Francisco over New Orleans

L.A. Raiders over New York Giants
Minnesota over Pittsburgh
Buffalo over St. Louis

New England over Seattle
Detroit over Tampa Bay
San Diego over Washington
Chicago over Green Bay

Gridders edged in defensive struggle, 9-7

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devils lost this past Saturday to fourth-ranked Moorhead State by the score of 9-7.

Head Coach Rich Lawrence felt that the team put forth an outstanding effort and that the emotions of his team were at a much greater level than the previous week. "The biggest change came on the standpoint of the athletes themselves."

At the opening kickoff the Blue Devils received the ball at their own 34-yard line. They were stopped after two short series of downs. They were forced to punt, giving the Moorhead Dragons their first possession. A tough defense by the Blue Devils refused to allow Moorhead a first down in their first two possessions. Moorhead's second possession ended with an interception by Stout's Doug Cwidak. An exchange of possessions by each team ended the first quarter with the score at 0-0.

The second quarter began with Stout opening a drive just shy of midfield. A tough Moorhead defense shut the Blue Devils down at the Dragons' 49-yard line. Bob Lindberg punted the ball down to Moorhead's 1-yard line. The Dragons were forced to rely on All-American Troy Hendricks' running ability to get them out of this jam. Hendricks answered with a run of 11 yards and another of 10 to give Moorhead the ball at their own 22.

The drive was momentarily stopped at Moorhead's own 24-yard line, but a dropped punt gave Moorhead the ball at Stout's own 22. A tough Blue Devil defense forced a 36-yard field goal after virtually no gain. This ended the scoring for the half, giving Moorhead a halftime lead of 3-0.

The Dragons began the second half with the ball at their own 31. This drive started like any other in the game, but on the fourth play of the drive, Mark Adams, Moorhead's quarterback, cut back on an option play taking it 57 yards for a touchdown. This gave the Dragons the lead of 9-0. The extra point attempt by Greg Johnson was no good.

The teams each exchanged drives, both of which were ended by fine defensive efforts. Then the Blue Devil offense began at their own 23-yard line only to be stopped at their own 42. It was fourth and one and the punting team came on the field. The ball was snapped into the hands of Blue Devil running back Brian Stringle and he ran forward for a gain of five yards, giving the Blue Devils a first down and keeping the drive alive. Stout then marched down the field and went in for a score, capped by a 2-yard run by Kyle Gunderson. The third quarter ended with the score 9-7.

The fourth quarter was played with as much intensity as a playoff game. The two strong defensive teams refused to give up ground. The remainder of the game was played around midfield. Each exchanged the ball back and forth, hoping the other would make a mistake. None were made and the Blue Devils made a final attempt to win the game with a 58-yard field goal attempt that came up short.

As in most sports the final score didn't tell the full story as Captain Brandt Olsen said. "We beat them in every aspect of the game except in the score, but that's what counts." The Blue Devils look ahead to next week when they will face UW-Superior at Superior.

Pompon squad aims to boost spirit

by Jenna Martin

The UW-Stout Pompon Squad is entering a new year. They have a lot of hard work ahead of them. Captains this year are Julie Lau and Kris Schleder. Choreographers are Kelly McCollough and Mary Lieser.

Together the captains, choreographers and the entire squad will all work to make this a great year, but they need your support.

What are the goals of this year's pompon squad? They hope to promote school spirit and build up the reputation of their group.

Julie Lau's goals as a captain are "to get a really developed squad, to make everybody work together well and mostly to have fun and keep everyone interested."

Julie feels that the squad needs improvement in school spirit and enthusiasm. "We need girls who are really dedicated."

Because of school starting late this year, not as many girls tried out for the squad. There wasn't enough time to put up flyers and a lot of girls weren't aware of the tryouts going on.

The squad is still looking for six to eight new girls so secondary tryouts will be held Sept. 22-25 from 5:30-7:00 in the wrestling room.

Anyone interested in trying out should attend this Thursday's meeting at 5:30 in the fieldhouse dance room. You can either sign up at this time or contact a squad member and let them know you're interested.

What does the squad plan to do differently this year? Captains Kris and Julie feel the audience really enjoyed the danceline routines they performed last year. They intend to have the squad do half danceline and half pompon routines.

The girls have plans for more fundraisers and improvement of public involvement through promotions, a good homecoming skit and participation in Air Jam.

The thing the squad appears to find most important is student support. They would like to see more people at the games. Kris wants to see the squad taken more seriously and their image improved.

Kris Schleder explains, "I feel that school spirit has really gone down as a whole. It's affecting the turnout of the games and it's affecting people's image towards us because when not as many people go to the game, then they can't see what we perform."

Julie Lau comments, "When you don't see as many people at the game you get bummed out and you don't do as well as you would if you had someone to cheer for you when you're out there."

Sept. 27th is the pompon squad's first performance. They will be having a pre-game warm-up with the little girls clinic. Then at halftime the squad will be performing Janet Jackson's "When I Think Of You."

The girls will be performing for every home football game. They feel it will be a great year. There is a lot of good talent on the squad. They want you to be there for them and for the team.

Attend the football games, cheer on our team, show your school spirit, support our Blue Devil Pompon Squad. They need you. Remember, Sept. 27th. Hope to see you there.

Protesters picket library dedication

by Dale Bohnert

After more than a decade of debating, decision-making and planning, Menomonie residents gathered on Friday, September 19 to celebrate the dedication of the new Menomonie Public Library--and to protest it.

For many, the opening of the new library signifies a step forward in pride and progress for Menomonie. "Library dedications signal a renewed commitment by a community to achieve educational and cultural goals," said Dwight Agnew, President of the Municipal Library Board.

For others, the building will serve as a reminder of the feelings of betrayal by city government they have experienced. "We feel that certain members of the City Council have completely taken away our rights as Democratic citizens," said Beverly Waller, President of the Concerned Citizens of Menomonie.

Last Friday morning, both library supporters and protesters met at the site of the new Menomonie Public Library to support their causes.

Inside the building, supporters joined in the packed lobby area of the new library to help celebrate its dedication. The crowd included area grade school students, citizens of Menomonie, local officials and guest speakers.

During the key-presentation segment of the ceremony, Mayor Chuck Stokke was presented with the library's keys by John Howe, the project's architect, and Dennis Endl, President of Dell Construction Company, Inc. Stokke then handed the keys to Dwight Agnew, President of the Municipal Library Board.

> "A very proud moment for Menomonie —Charles Buelow"

Mayor Stokke said that the opening of the library meant "accessibility to a large range of learning material for residents of Menomonie, Dunn County and, particularly, the young."

Special guest Mrs. George Bush commended the cooperation that brought the project together. The wife of the Vice-President of the United States, who is a leader in the fight against illiteracy, told those present, "I congratulate you, each and every one."

Charles Buelow, former president of the Municipal Library Board, was chosen to speak on behalf of Senator Robert Kasten who was unable to attend the ceremony as planned. Buelow described the meaning of the dedication as "A very proud moment for Menomonie. This library is how we will pass on what we know to future generations."

Meanwhile, outside the library building, protesters, despite the rain, formed a picket-line bearing signs with slogans such as "Library gets the gold mine, the people get the shaft," and "Taxation without Representation." Alderperson Jay Schroeder and nearly two dozen members of the Concerned Citizens of Menomonie were present for the protest.

Protestors claimed that their main concern was the neglect of their opinions on public matters. Specific reference was made to the advisory referedum held in November, 1982.

The final decision on the subject, however, was left in the hands of the Menomonie Common Council.

Resource Fair attracts students; campus clubs offer information

by Kristen Bailey

At the beginning of the school year, many students wish to find out what clubs and organizations are active on the University of Wisconsin-Stout's campus and how to become involved. At the Resource Fair, held in the Memorial Student Center on September 17 from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., Stout students were able to discover the variety of groups and activities available.

The Resource Fair provided students with an opportunity to find out what groups were about, ask questions and possibly join. The Resource Fair had something for everyone.

For the athletically-inclined, there are many groups to choose from. The Bowling Club plays for fun, yet does promote competition. The University Frisbee Club is for anyone interested in a variety of frisbee games. The club's recreations include frisbee golf and frisbee football.

A new club featured this year is Womens' Rugby; a combination of soccer and football. The University Dance Club promotes all types of dance and is open to anyone interested in dance. The Powerlifting Club teaches basic lifts and does offer competition. No particular skill level is required to join any of the clubs.

For the adventurous student who is looking for a good time, social clubs are available. Alfresco is an outing club which sponsors all kinds of trips in the outdoors. Kappa Lambda Beta Fraternity promotes a social life along with school. The fraternity also has a Little Sister organization, which helps with activities. The Veterans' Club, open to prior servicemen and those currently serving in the Guard or Reserves, offers camaraderie to its members.

On the entertainment end, University Cinema is one of the most active organizations. Their function is to bring movies to UW-Stout at a low cost. Contemporary Music Productions deals in promotion, bookings, set-up and security for concerts brought to the campus.

Student awareness groups are for those wanting to be involved with student concerns. The Stout Student Association (SSA) represents the entire student body on important issues. Students

Agenda set for trade talks

An agenda was approved by delegates to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Punta Del Este, Uruguay on Saturday, September 20. During the week-long conference, the 92-nation body will discuss barriers to foreign investment and copyright protection and reductions in agricultural subsidies.

The actual renegotiation of trade agreements between nations are expected to begin later this year or early next, and last for four years.

White House spokesperson Larry Speakes said that the preliminary talks in Uruguay are "an opportunity to expand trading opportunities for all nations."

Rebels threaten food supply

Sudanese rebels renewed their warning on Saturday, September 20, that planes carrying food to the starving in the south would have to have authorization from the guerillas to enter the area. Otherwise, the Sudan People's Liberation Army said, they would shoot the planes down.

The warning referred to the United Nations' emergency food airlift, based out of Khartoum, Sudan's capital.

Solvents contaminate lake

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources disclosedthat industrial solvents escaped a flooded Dow Chemical Company plant almost two weeks ago. Seven different solvents leaked as effluent into the Saginaw Bay of Lake Michigan near Midland, Michigan.

It is believed that the poisons may have contaminated fish and other life in two Michigan rivers and the Bay.

State

Wisconsin declared sanctuary

Governor Anthony Earl proclaimed the state of Wisconsin a sanctuary for Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugees.

An aide to the governor said that the declaration was not a legal challenge to the US Immigration and Naturalization Service, but the governor's proclamation did criticize the service for "discriminatory behavior" in denying protection to many Central American refugees while accepting those from other countries.

Government change discussed

On Friday, September 26, and again on October 10, the Public Affairs Council of Eau Claire County will sponsor a panel discussion on changing the government of the city of Eau Claire from a council-manager to a mayor-council form. The event will be held at 7:30 am at the Holiday Inn on both dates.

Jay Schroeder, a member of the Menomonie City Council, will be one of the panelists. Schroeder will explain the recent change of government structure in Menomonie.

Effects of 21 drinking age questioned

by Karen Smith

Changing the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 in Wisconsin seem to be having many negative effects that were not foreseen. Students and bar owners in Menomonie, as well as across the state, will be effected by the changes.

Richard Shoemaker, our local State Representative, was extremely disappointed in the change. Schoemaker is concerned about whether the changes will actually accomplish anything.

"One problem I see is the growing number of house parties," Shoemaker said. "Where will the liability and responsibility be?"

"A bar owner might take someone home if he is unable to go alone," Shoemaker said. He also wonders whether at house parties someone will do this, and if someone is injured who is liable? This and more questions were brought up.

"The drug of choice up to now has been alcohol," Shoemaker said. "Now that alcohol is being limited, it could be pushing up other drugs. Someone might find it easier to carry a joint around than a six-pack of beer," Shoemaker added.

He sees bars and drinking as a part of college life. "Underage students will still try and get into the bars with fake ID's," Shoemaker said. "So, we are not really solving the problem." He is also concerned about legal age students that are buying liquor for those that are not of age.

Bob Hoage, Campus Police Supervisor, said that more effects will probably be seen two years from now when the students living on campus will be under age. He has noticed some problems already. "I have noticed a substantial increase in violations of underage drinking," Hoage said. "Yet, I am not sure if it is because of the change in the drinking age, or not."

The penalties for the first offense of underage drinkers who are 18 or older is $67.50, including court fees. The second offense is $125.00. These also include mandatory court appearance and community service.

One underage student, who wished to be unidentified, said he did not mind living in the dorms. "You figure that we're all in the same boat," he said. "Everyone who is underage will hangout together and find things to do for excitement. What people have to realize is that if a student really wants to drink, he will find a way to get alcohol, or into a bar, legal or not."

Steve Remington, Hall Director at CKTO, sees potential for more problems to occur in the future. However, there has not been any more difficulties now than previous years.

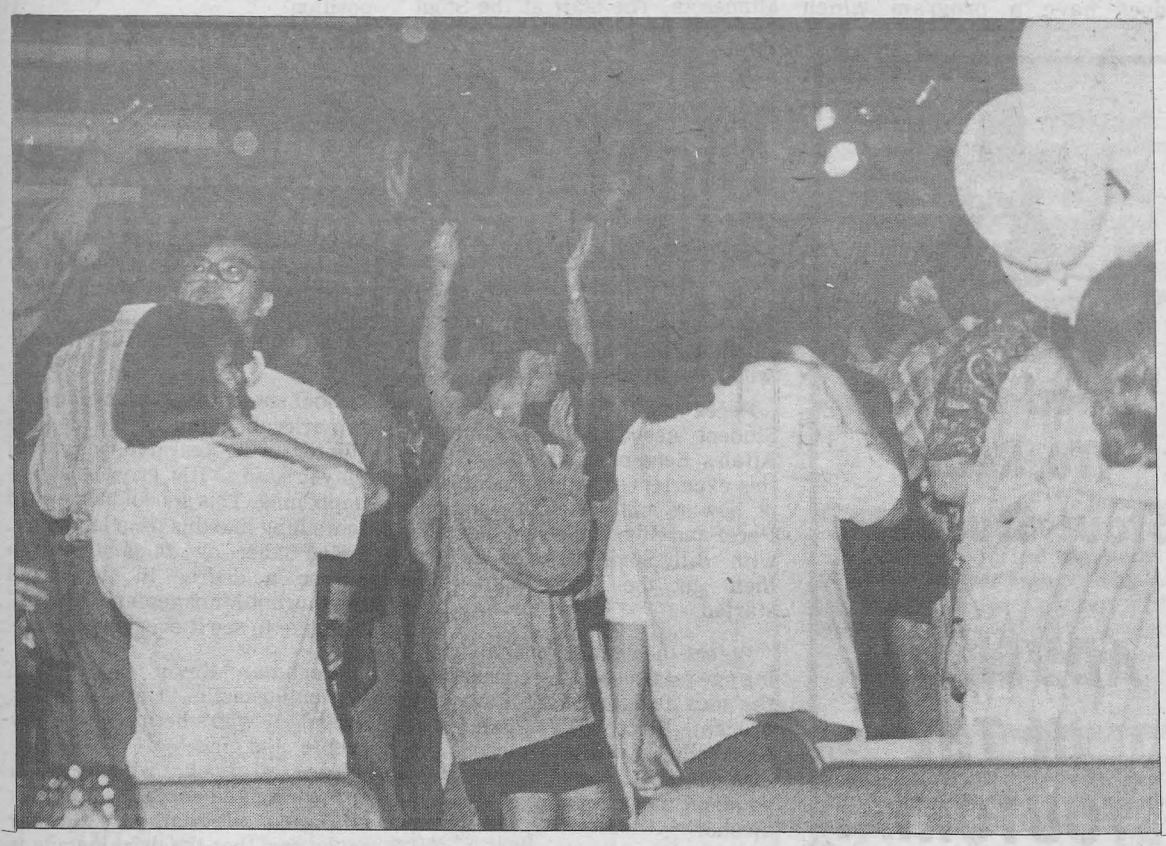
"We are going to try to keep problems from occurring by providing more non-alcoholic activities for the students to participate in," Remington said. Remington also mentioned that none of the official residence hall policies have been changed.

Joe Holland, a bar management teacher at UW-Stout, also sees a problem for students and bars in Menomonie. "This being a college town, the bars will have approximately 75 percent of their market eliminated," Holland said. "Eventually there will be just seniors and graduate students in the bars." As a result, Holland suggested that some bars may go under, or others may change to being non-alcoholic.

"The solution should be stiffer penalties, not denying access," Holland said. "Why the sudden magic age of 21?"

The fact that people are considered to be an adult in all other matters at the age of 18 bothers Holland, as well. "Some students may look at this as age discrimination," Holland said. The most troubling question, for Holland, was whether or not the effects were outweighed by the good they might do.

Bar owners may become more concerned about checking the identification of their patrons because of the change in the legal drinking age. From left, Chris Coupland is shown checking the ages of Marion Bar patrons Kris Klakow, Kevin Hovlid and Cory Overhiser. (Stoutonia photo by Julie La Fleur)



Organizers of Stout's Night Club work overtime to provide a place to dance, socialize and have a good time. Months were spent in attaining approval for the plan. Stout night club offers alternative to alcohol

by Cosmas A. Whitten

Guys in ties and girls in skirts and long shirts, all dressed to a "t" for a night on the town. Meeting people from different places. Talking and dancing under flashing, bright lights. This could easily describe big city nights, but it was all happening at the Memorial Student Union, Saturday night, September 20.

The Stout Night Club was in the Great Hall from 10:00 p.m. until 3:00 a.m. with a $1.50 cover charge to get in the door. The middle of the hall was the dance floor which was surrounded by huge speakers. Clothed tables circled around the room on the outskirts of the dance floor.

Members of the Student Center Catering Service worked as bartenders and waiting staff. Pop, sparkling water, Kingsbury Malt and mocktails, all non-alcoholic cocktails, were served.

The Stout Night Club was innovated by Derek Perez and Derek Gibson. Perez and Gibson were not very interested in the Menomonie uptown scene. They felt that the community had not provided any alternatives for night life.

To remedy the situation, Perez and Gibson held parties at a house called the "Beat Box" until city police put an end to them.

Even though the parties ended, Perez and Gibson stood strong behind their idea that an atmosphere which offered a great chance to socialize and meet and mix with people of different backgrounds and cultures, should be available in Menomonie.

Perez, from Trinidad, and Gibson, who is English, became involved in a group called Rainbow which is a multi-cultural group geared to increase interaction of all people. The Night Club idea did not succeed through Rainbow. However, members of Rainbow were at the Night Club passing out fliers about their organization.

According to Perez, Stout is one of the most international campuses in the UW-system. He said that he feels Stout students are too much

Reporter granted SSA seat on trial basis

by Kelly Cohorst

City Councilman Jay H. Schroeder spoke on the variety of governments in Menomonie at Open Forum during the Stout Student Association (SSA) meeting on Tuesday, September 23.

While comparing the governmental systems in the Menomonie area, Schroeder pointed out the strengths and weaknesses of the SSA, and the new Mayoral system in the City of Menomonie.

Mark Nickels, vice-president of legislative affairs, reacted to Schroeder's presentation, saying, "We can not rely on Jay Schroeder as the sole source of support and information in the SSA's quest for better relations between the citzens of Menomonie and the students here at Stout."

Inter-Residence Hall Council Senator Jill Shlimovitz, announced a meeting for any organization interested in running a booth at The Bash in the Grass on October 18. The organizational meeting will be held September 29 in the Great Hall East at 6 pm.

United Council (UC), the association of student governments in the UW-system, is petitioning for an increase in all the grant programs, maintenance of the eight percent interest rate on all Guaranteed Student Loans and reinstatement of the nine-month grace period for Guaranteed Student Loans and National Defense Student Loans.

If you are interested in supporting the UC in this effort, you can stop by the SSA-sponsored table, which will be on the Cobblestone Court through the week of September 22-26.

There is also a letter you can sign which will be addressed to Senator William Proxmire (D-WI), notifying Wisconsin's senior senator of the petition.

The SSA passed a motion allowing a reporter from The Stoutonia to sit at the table with the Senators as a non-voting member. The seat is available on a trial basis and has not been made official by a constitutional ammendment.

This non-voting member from The Stoutonia may not be a member of the paper's editorial board. The reporter will be allowed to ask questions freely, without having the floor yielded to them. SSA President Paul D. Nelson said the position will also help clarify the issues being discussed.

Peggy Coughlin resigned as Off-Campus Senator on Tuesday due to time conflicts and a recent commitment to her student teaching efforts.

Coughlin has been a member of the SSA for two years. She served as Senate Caucaus Leader during last year's Senate.

Coughlin's resignation leaves an Off-Campus Senator position open. Interested students who reside off campus are encouraged to drop off applications Monday, September 29 before 4:30 pm. Interviews for the position will be held Monday evening, September 29.

Host of cancelled local program accepts new position in Duluth

by Joan Janson

At the end of September, Spectrum 28 will no longer be aired on Wisconsin Public Television. WHWC-TV/28 is currently finishing up the Spectrum 28 series with a special group of programs entitled "Best of Spectrum 28".

The cancellation of Spectrum 28 was due to budget cuts originating from Madison. WHWC-TV 28 received funds from the Wisconsin Public Television Network to produce Spectrum 28. The programs were comprised of a variety of features of specific interest to West Central Wisconsin. Spectrum 28 was produced at the UW-Stout Teleproduction Center. Tim Fuhrmann, Production Manager, stated that "Funds were cut from about $100,000 to $40,000."

It will not be long, however, before West Central Wisconsin does have a program which focuses on local people and events. Prime Time Wisconsin will have its premier in January.

The show will consist of three to four segments per week and it is scheduled to run 13 weeks. Cultural arts will be featured, but the emphasis will remain on local Wisconsin stories. Similar shows will be produced in Green Bay and Madison covering each of the other one third of the state.

Around the time of the budget cuts, Max Herbach, the host and co-producer of Spectrum 28 was offered the position of director for Duluth Public Television. According to Fuhrmann, "The offer came at the right time and it was just an offer he (Herbach) couldn't refuse."

Herbach has also settled into WDSE/Channel 8 with his own program, Venture North. Like Spectrum 28, it features local news and events for the residents of northern Minnesota. The staff at the Stout Teleproduction Center wishes the best for Herbach and is confident he will enjoy his challenging new position.

into themselves and that there is much to be learned from others who have lived in different places.

Perez was involved in the Stout Student Association as Minority Affairs Senator last year. From this experience, he became aware of how to put ideas into action. Perez and Gibson then got together with Bill Siedlecki who helped them get the Stout Night Club started.

Before the change in legal drinking age was even being considered, the idea for the Night Club was brought before the Chancellor. Chancellor Swanson turned the idea down because he was concerned about the original plan to serve alcohol.

The serving of alcohol was eliminated from Night Club plans and it won the Chancellor's approval. The Night Club opened last spring on April 26.

The success of last Saturday's Night Club evening was easily proved by looking into the hall. There were nearly 500 in attendance; students of all ages and backgrounds having fun without alcohol.

Stout students had many positive remarks about the Night Club. Ron Hunter, a 21 year old basketball player said, "It's great that it's happening. This school has needed something like this for a long time.

Ken Sabec, age 24, is at Stout to pursue a degree in Hotel and Restaurant Management. He said, "I'd like to see it every weekend."

Freshman Kevin Charpentier was enthusiastic. "I'm a swinging single guy who's here to meet new people, and girls."

Kevin Tulloch, who drew a crowd when he danced, said "This is a great alternative to the bar scene now that the drinking age is 21." Tulloch saw the Night Club as an opportunity for minors to experience the bar scene without the alcohol.

October 11 is the next scheduled date for the Stout Night Club.

Library Opening

By a narrow four to three margin, the $1.2 million library project was approved.

Alderperson Richard Emmert, Glen Schuknecht and Jay Schroeder, council members who participated in that vote, still feel strongly about the votes they cast.

Emmert, who voted against the proposal, said "I was elected to represent the people. The majority of the people voted against the building of the new library. "Therefore," added Emmert, " that is my standpoint and I'm not changing my mind."

Schuknecht, who voted in favor of the new library said "The real question here is how high the library stands on the peoples' lists of priorities. Some people do not value cultural and educational activities very highly."

Schroeder, another opposed to the new library, attended the protest last Friday. He explained "If you want to spend the peoples' money, you have to have their consent."

In a recent city predicament, Emmert and Schroeder continued to stand by their opinions on the new library. Menomonie City Treasury Controller Vada Husby explained that the situation was caused by a City Council decision in April, 1985 to guarantee the Municipal Library Board the sum of $351,196 to be used in the completion of the Public Library.

Recently, Husby explained, Mayor Stokke brought to the attention of the City Council that, when the guarantee was made, provisions for exactly where the money was to come from were not. Since payment was due on September 19, the day of the dedication, the Council had to act fast.

During a Council meeting last week, Emmert and Schroeder voted against a plan to borrow the needed money for a period of 60 days at 7% interest. As a result, the five to two vote fell short of a three-quarters majority requirement needed to borrow money.

A second option, using money from the city's contingency fund, was proposed. This fund is appropriated at the beginning of each year for emergency situations. This proposal met the two-thirds majority required and was passed.

Afterwards, Mayor Stokke expressed his concerns by saying "There is the possibility that the city will be out of money before November. We will get through to at least October, but we will have to make some decisions then."

Those in opposition to the new library are also concerned that the city did not consider all of the options available to the new library construction.

Preserving the Mabel Tainter Memorial Building, where a privately owned library has been located for more than 90 years, was the most popular option. Says Waller, "That building is part of Menomonies' heritage."

Buelow, now a Municipal Library Board member, says that though the Tainter building is rich in historical value, remodeling it would be economically and practically senseless.

Mrs. Bush, who visited the Mabel Tainter Building, described it as "An institution that has served the community well for 90 years. However," she added, "the growth and demands of a community often dictate change."

Public library supporters say they are pleased with the many advantages of the new library. They say the advantages include a greater amount of floor space, lower shelving, readily accessible bathrooms and others.

Mary Ann Hoffman, who has needed crutches for nearly 20 years, commends the public library's provisions for the handicapped by saying, "It will open doors for the handicapped, literally."

The two opposing sides foresee different futures for the new library.

Buelow said that he expects the number of visitors to the library to increase by 300-500% within the first year.

Members of the Concerned Citizens of Menomonie say that rather than using the new library, they are willing to use the Stout library, go to Colfax or Eau Claire, or purchase their own books.

Mayor Stokke expressed hopes for oneness in the community by saying that, "The presence of a physical building will go a long way in bringing the community together."

Student killed in crash

Stout student Robert P. Drake, age 21, of Princeton, Wisconsin, was killed in a car accident on Friday, September 19 at 8:05 am. Apparently, Drake was coming out onto Highway 25 at the entrance to Homer's Mobile Home Court, on the south edge of Menomonie, when his car was struck by a south bound semi-truck.

Fieldhouse approved

The State Building Commission (SBC) approved the UW-Stout fieldhouse addition on Wednesday, September 24. The Concept and Budget Report of the five-million dollar project was approved by the commission, effectively granting the UW-system authority to plan, bid and construct the expansion of the present building.

29th Assembly District Representative Dick Shoemaker, is chair of the Higher Education Subcommittee of the SBC. Shoemaker said of the commission's approval, "The action literally assures the addition's construction."

Student opinion surveyed

Mark Nickels, Vice-President of Legislative Affairs of the Stout Student Association, has collected a survey of 105 students at UW-Stout. Nickels was attempting to gather information that would help him more accurately represent Stout students when voting on platform issues for this year's United Council plenary session.

United Council, the association of student governments throughout the UW-system, takes a collective stand, at the start of the year, on priorities for lobbying in the student interest.

The survey collected by Nickels shows opposition to aiding the Nicaraguan Contras and support for federal acid rain legislation. Two-thirds of those surveyed did not think students' right to publish should be guaranteed by law.

73.9 per cent of Stout students surveyed by Nickels thought that the percentage of the real cost of education paid by Wisconsin university students should be reduced from the current 33 to 25 per cent.

Understanding Drinking Responsibility (SUDS) is a group that encourages responsible alcohol consumption. The Organization of Adult Students Involved in Stout (OASIS) provides recreational and cultural events for the adult college student.

If ones' interests lie in the market or management area, there are clubs for them as well. The Society for the Advancement of the Tourism Industry is concerned with the impact of tourism throughout the world. Women in Management prepares women for management positions and explores different issues concerning women in the business world.

To get more information on any club or organization on campus, contact the SSA office, located in the lower level of the Memorial Student Center or call 232-2432.

The SSA office would like to request that all club officers turn in their names, addresses and phone numbers so that they can refer interested students to the organizations' leaders.

Voting rights denied

Ironically, Menomonie Mayor Charles Stokke urged UW-Stout students to become involved in city government when he first addressed the Stout Student Association last week. This occurred after Stokke was elected mayor when the vast majority of Stout students were away on summer vacation.

The City Council voted first to have the mayoral election concurrently with the regular November election at the urging of SSA President Paul Nelson. The City Council acknowledged the departure of Nelson and many others for the summer by deciding that Menomonie could not legally survive the summer without a mayor.

The City Council's action begs the question, should Stout students have the right to vote in Menomonie elections? The student reaction has been angry in many incidents. SSA President Nelson has said that a day doesn't go by without his being bothered by the consideration that Stout students were intentionally denied the opportunity to vote for mayor in the city where they reside and contribute significantly to the economy nine months of the year.

We admire and join in Mayor Stokke's recommendation that Stout students participate in Menomonie's governance. Now is the time for effective cooperation between Menomonie residents, Stout administrative personnel, faculty and students.

Our concern with the summer election is that it gave the message to Stout students that Menomonie believes it can run the city more effectively without student involvement. Arguments on this side state that Stout students are unfamiliar with local issues and are merely temporary residents here who have no concern for the future of Menomonie.

If in fact this argument is correct, then the city government suffers from a public relations problem. The question must be asked, what effort has been made to get the word out to Stout students concerning city politics so they may be encouraged to become involved?

Denying anyone the right to vote on the basis of the assumption that they are unfamiliar with the issues would leave most cities without any eligible voters.

If the "improper issues" are focused on by the electorate, then there must be a need for candidates focusing on the "proper issues." The opportunity to address the "proper issues" can only exist when the people Contitutionally provided the right to vote and participate in local government make the most of those opportunities. In this case, we believe Stout students were denied this basic right without just cause.

Hidden Dimension

Chile in turmoil

Ali Vazirabadi

It is only a few weeks after the assassination attempt of Pinochet, dictator of Chile, who halted all the political activities of the opposition with the use of military attacks. Great numbers of political activists were arrested in the 90 days of Marshal Law. Days after the assassination attempt on Pinochet, one of the opposition activists was found dead with 9 bullets in his head in a cemetery close to Santiago.

The political situation is becoming very difficult for Pinochet to control since the development of his bloody military coup in 1973. During the military coup, a great number of people were executed, arrested, or just disappeared. Today, one of the significant problems in Chile's future is the weakness of the democratic alternative after the crash of Pinochet. Experience shows that the leftist groups always take advantage of the democratic groups which fight for domination of political power.

After the bad political experience of the U.S. in Iran and Nicaragua, the U.S. is trying to change its old policy of supporting military dictators to supporting democratic alternatives. This policy strengthens foreign policy against Communism. An example of the new policy can be observed in the Philippines today, which so far has a happy ending.

One of the amazing messages of dictators like the Pinocet for getting support of President Reagan is warning him of Communism in Chile. These dictators think they, and not a democratic system can fight against Communism. The greatest disasters of Radical Right and the Left movement, are they can not see anything beyond their noses, and that is the time for both of these groups to massacre and torture anybody for their ideology. Clear example of that has been observed in Russia during the Stalin era and the Chile of today.

Now the question is how President Reagan can get rid of Pinochet, before the Chilean people rise against the U.S. support of Pinochet. One of the best moves Reagan could make at this time, is the condemnation of the Marshal Law in Chile. This first move will let the Chilean people see that, for the first time, the U.S. is on their side. At the same time, the U.S. should ask for the release of all the political prisoners with no discrimination of their ideology. The important factor in this process is the timing for a peaceful transition of a dictatorship to a democratic government.

The Christian Democratic Party is one of the largest political groups in Chile today. In the recent Christian Science Monitor interview with Gen. Fernando Mathei, one of four members of the governing junta criticized the democratic opposition for not making a clean break with the Communist groups. This statement shows that the ruling party is very familiar with the need for a new democratic government. But the only phobia to the military group is the threat of Communism in Chile.

One of the most important points during this transition is that the U.S. should not support any individual liberal party in the process, but support the people as a whole. This action will let the people and the parties feel more independent and not just puppets for another country. Such a bad experience was observed during the revolution in Iran and Nicaragua.

In Iran, parties and the individuals, who were closer to the Western principles and ideology, could get more power and authority, until the U.S. showed interest and support for those parties. To Iranian people, this was a sign of dependency on the West, especially on the U.S., which resulted to elimination of the liberal opposition in the country.

Subject: Recreation Center strives to satisfy student needs

by Paul Wydeven

Anne Buttke has been the Recreation Center supervisor and Recreation Commission advisor for the past two years. Anne, a native from Wisconsin Rapids, went to UW-La Crosse and graduated with a Bachelors degree in Recreation Administration.

Before coming to UW Stout, Anne was the activities director at the Stevens Point Holiday Inn and Holidome. She was also the senior program director of an adolescent camp for underprivileged Milwaukee children, sponsored by a United Way agency.

STOUTONIA: WHAT DID YOU THINK OF THE MOVE FROM THE OLD STUDENT UNION TO THE NEW UNION?

BUTTKE: I came here at an opportune time, it was exciting. Last year was very hectic. This year we are a little bit more organized, but we're still trying new things here and there.

STOUTONIA: WHAT ACTIVITIES DOES THE RECREATION CENTER OFFER STUDENTS?

BUTTKE: The Recreation Center offers a full line of students bowling leagues, billiard leagues and co-sponsors a table tennis league. We also offer a full line of camping and outdoor recreation equipment.

Anne Buttke

There are 15 different bowling leagues each semester and last year over 600 students were involved. There are also six billiard leagues each semester which usually have a good participation level. We also line up tournaments or special programs.

Is Schroeder concerned

I have been a full-time student and a full-time Menomonie resident for the last four years. I have two warnings for my fellow Stout students. Beware of comments made by alderperson Jay H. Schroeder, and do not become involved with the unconcerned group strangely calling itself concerned citizens of Menomonie.

Schroeder has a long history of distributing what could at best be called half-truths.

I have a few comments pertaining to his most recent bit of tripe that he sent in a letter form to The Stoutonia.

-His sentence structure is deplorable. He should have paid more attention while in his English class. He is not a representative Stout student.

-He obviously paid as much attention while in his government class as he did while in his English class. A representative form of government decided to build the library. THIS is democracy in action. To Schroeder, democracy in action means that HIS viewpoint has won out. If the opposition's viewpoint prevails, then he states that the voice of the people is being suppressed.

-The switch in voting dates for the mayoral election was due to the referendum that demanded a change to the mayoral form of government. Legal opinion stated that the election should be held as soon as possible.

-Schroeder does NOT help everyone and does NOT promote justice. His motives are to enhance his simplistic delusions of being a clone of the forefathers of this country.

Some highlights of his tenure in office include:

-raising a motion in a city council meeting and then having it defeated 7-0 (yes, he voted against his own motion).

-stating that he is a payer of Menomonie city real estate taxes of over $1000, meaning that he owns a Menomonie home valued at over $50,000 (a considerable accomplishment for a May graduate).

-while the City Council voted 6-1 for a mayoral salary of $5000, the one person voting against it wanted a salary of $25,000. This one happened to be running for mayor at the time. His initials were Jay H. Schroeder.

-failing to support decisions made by the democratic majority of the City Council and thus undermining our democratic process. This list could go on and on.

The students of Stout should do as Mayor Stokke and the SSA mentioned in the September 18th front page article. The students have a majority in three of 11 voting districts. The students should find a qualified STOUT STUDENT in each district and vote for them in April. Let THEM represent the student's concerns.

But again, beware of Schroeder and the unconcerned citizens group. Ask yourself if this group will support your issues when it comes down to decision making time. The answer should be that you yourself will be the only ones behind you. Ask yourself if Schroeder could possibly represent anyone but perhaps himself, his pocketbook, and maybe a retired

CAMPUS SLANT/ How do you feel the new drinking law will affect the bar you work at?

Text by Brian Kraimer

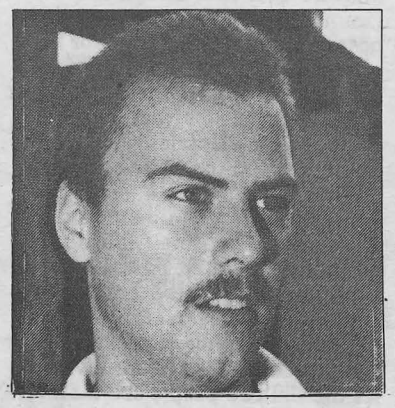
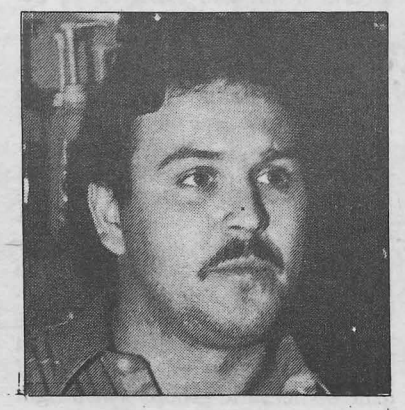
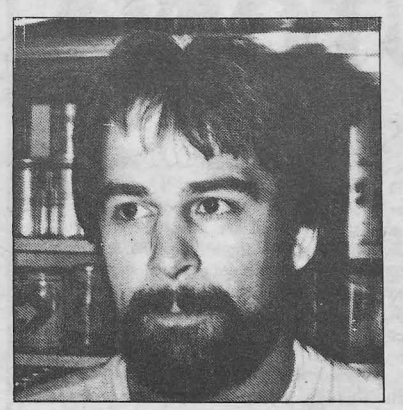
Danielle Anderson,
Bartender,
I do not think it will effect us for a couple more years because of the grandfather clause. The nineteen-year-olds can still come in now but in a couple of years things will start to die down.



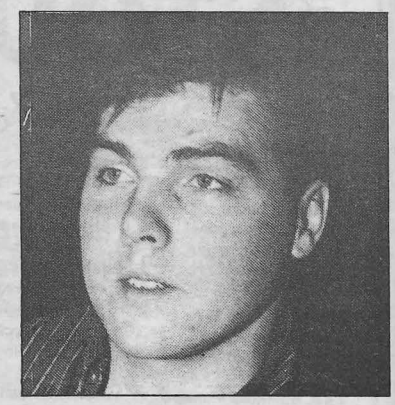
Tom Peterson,
Bartender,
It will effect every bar, but here at the Tap when we check IDs we have found that 50 to 75 percent of the people are already 21. I guess you just have to be optimistic and hope that your specials and regulars keep coming in.



Pat Brogan,
Bartender,
I do not think it will hurt us, for at least two years, until the grandfather clause takes its full toll. If anything right now, I think I have seen an increase in our business because it seems like the older people have the money and are spending it.



Daren Belfiori,
Bartender,
In the next couple of years I think that a couple of bars will be closing down, mostly because some bars get a younger crowd. I do not think the bars will be changing to non-alcoholic, you may have one.



Chuck Eurmann,
Bartender,
I do not think that the Silver Dollar will be effected that much, but the Tap, Spot and Marion will be effected more because they get a younger crowd. The Silver Dollar gets a lot of graduate students, professors and upperclassman.

Common Questions

Tim Hopkins

What is the most common stupid question? You're sitting in a room waiting for class to begin, the seat next to you is empty. A scholar walks up and asks, "Is someone sitting there?" I usually respond, "Yes there is, but he'd rather no one knew about it."

I was ready to take a vacation last week when I heard accusations not only that The Stoutonia was left wing but that Rich Brueckner was left wing. It is possible that the popularity of conservatism has led individuals to be so far right that they're left.

I don't resent Ronald Reagan but I just wish I could write off my contribution to his extended vacations each year. What's the fun of paying for a vacation that you can't enjoy. The one nice thing about Reagan's going on vacation is that sanity may briefly return to the White House.

A Republican friend, that's right they do talk to me, said recently, "The problem with you liberals is that you can't enjoy prosperity." If I get a Visa card, a Master card and an American Express card and proceed to purchase thousands of dollars in goods with these cards, am I prosperous? Let me answer that for you, I am in hot water.

Ronald Reagan is rather like someone with their first credit card. He is on an orgy of spending on military hardware we will never use and he isn't bothered by the prospect of collectors coming to his door.

In answer to my Republican friend, I can enjoy prosperity when I am indeed prosperous. Did you catch the president and Nancy's presentation against drug abuse? I figured you watched the end of the football game.

Ron's been a salesmen long enough that he ought to know that if someone wants something they're going to get it regardless of the impediments blocking his path.

No one has ever successfully stopped prostitution in America because all the work has been to get the prostitutes off the streets. Law enforcement would be wise to realize that as long as there are Johns and/or Janes on the streets prostitution will prosper. The way to stop prostitution is to make the Johns/Janes pay penalties equally as harsh as those paid by the prostitutes.

You aren't going to stop drug abuse by launching a campaign against the dealers. As long as there's a buyer there will be a dealer. If not a then b. Why not invest money in a program which educates everyone about the hazards of drug abuse? They could start with a Len Bias video.

Columnists are questioned

What are the requirements for becoming a Stoutonia columnist this year? Do you check for an intelligence level or do you look for people who come off sounding like a layed-off factory worker at bar time?

If you haven't figured out by now who I'm referring to, it is Rich Brueckner and his article, "On the time warp." How did this get past you? I don't consider myself a prude or a redneck but I found this article totally unnecessary. First, if pottymouth Rich feels that Saturday class is that much of a pain and it is hardly possible to live through such a dreadful or terrible thing, I would suggest to him to simply not attend class that day. I'm sure his presence would not be missed and the classes he's enrolled in would still be able to function. This is very similar to the prudes who wanted MTV removed from the airwaves. If you don't like it, turn the channel.

If Rich was upset about missing "The Smurfs," or some other intellectually stimulating Saturday morning programming, he should have had a friend with a VCR record it. This is probably a better suggestion for reporter Rich because, if he is indeed as intelligent as he sounds, he definitely can't afford to be missing classes.

Rich, what are you going to do when you do someday land a job (probably in the sanitation removal or food service industry) and you have to work more than five days a week? Will you again revolt in such a revolting manner, or will you accept the fact that some things are more important than sleeping off a hang-over?

In recent years, The Stoutonia has gone from progressive to regressive. There seems to be a steady decline in quality in the past couple of years. Not to be totally negative to The Stoutonia staff, there were some good articles and I'd like to say to them, keep up the good work.

Shawn Hantelmann

Let's review the facts

Your editorial of 9/18/86 "Library funding crisis was easily avoidable" is well titled. However, your facts are just not correct. Obviously your information came solely from quotes taken from published news reports, and not from your own investigation.

The "crisis," as you call it, could have been avoided had the learned Aldermen Schroeder and Emmert voted to meet an already established city obligation. An obligation agreed to by the City Council. Representatives Schroeder and Emmert as members of that approving council failed to meet their obligation.

Had you performed your own investigation rather than picking up on key phrases reported in local newspapers, you would have discovered the following:

1. The library costis $1.2 million to develop, construct and furnish. Not the $350,000 as you reported.

2. The city obligation of $351,196 approved by the City Council in 1985 was to come from current city funds.

3. Mayor Stokke's comment of the City being without money before November was directed to the two discontents Schroeder and Emmert because of their uncooperative behavior.

4. You misinterpreted Josephson's statement, "I can't see what this arguing and bickering is going to accomplish." He was telling the discontented duo that the city had an obligation. Your "horse and barn door" reaction is not accurate!

5. The City Council did not overlook the two to one majority in the non-binding referendum. During that political time, the Public Library was a dead issue. However, at the next election those who were elected were done so, in the most part, by those who wanted a new library. The political tide had changed. Those elected by the pro-library constituents worked toward the accomplishment of the facility. Democracy was and is in action!

6. The City Council has seriously considered the effects of the library on the community. During the past 10 years, a citizen group has investigated, studied, proposed and constructed the Menomonie Public Library. There was no capriciousness as you suggest.

7. Do not be mislead by the "cash-flow" problem." Again, had you investigated, you would have found that the State is slow in paying the City its share of collected taxes. As in the past, the City takes a short term loan to cover the city's short-fall. There will be no default in payroll or services.

You indicate that we should be terrified by the City Council's actions. It is the inaccurate reporting of The Stoutonia that should terrify the reading public. The editorial staff has an obligation to report the news truthfully and to have correct information in your opinion column. You should be embarrassed and ashamed by your lack of basic research.

Sincerely,
Thomas P. Phillips

Transients at Stout

Last week a member of the community, D. M. Wegner, labeled Stout students as "transients [who leave behind] destruction and chaos [once they leave Menomonie.]" This individual went on to further state that students "should have no voice in determining policies, procedures or structures of any local governmental agency."

I believe that Stout students, who reportedly bring $20 million a year into this community and represent approximately half of its population, do have the right to shape local policies, procedures and structures.

We students should not become disheartened by irrational remarks such as these. I have met many Menomonie residents who support our goal to become a decision-making element in this community. These fair-minded and concerned citizens not only believe that we were unjustly barred from the mayoral election, but have further expressed their willingness to help get students elected to the Menomonie City Council.

I am glad that Mr. Wegner made his sentiments known to all. His letter serves as a warning to students that certain elements must be voted out of positions of influence on April 7, 1987 if the City of Menomonie is to ever again resemble anything close to a democracy. This may be our last chance.

Paul D. Nelson
President
Stout Student Association

Home sweet home

I am responding to a letter submitted by D. M. Wegner in the September 18, 1986 issue of The Stoutonia. I am a student at UW-Stout and resent being called a "transient" by D.M. Wegner. This is my fourth year here in Menomonie and I consider Menomonie my home. I have found Menomonie to be a very beautiful community with generally friendly people. I have never caused destruction or chaos to Menomonie and I resent D. M. Wegner saying that I have, merely because I am a student. I am a legal resident, taxpayer and voter in Menomonie. I have the right to determine the policies, procedures or structure of its government even though D.M. Wegner thinks I don't.

If I had lived in any other community for the same period of time I have lived in Menomonie, I would never have been treated with such disrespect by any of its community members. In fact, I lived in Appleton, WI this past summer for three months and I was never treated with such hostility or disrespect as D.M. Wegner (displayed) in his/her letter. I believe the letter D. M. Wegner wrote was an embarrassment to himself/herself and to the rest of the Menomonie community of which I am a legal resident.

Sincerely,
Denise Hoeft

P.S. I am not an exception to your theory, D. M. Wegner.

Referendum questioned

The recent article in the Eau Claire Leader with reference to Mr. Schroeder's efforts to secure a binding referendum for four specific items regarding the City of Menomonie, has raised some concern in my mind.

The four suggested referendums include; (1) designate the Mabel Tainter Building the City Library and return books to such; (2) convert the new Municipal Library to a city hall; (3) sell the new Municipal Library to private interests for use as a hotel-convention center; (4) have the present Municipal Library Board re-established as a library board subject to City Council jurisdiction.

First of all, with regards to number one, the Mabel Tainter Building is an entity in itself and therefore not controlled, owned or governed by the City of Menomonie. I do not believe that the City voters can "bind" a private concern to do business with them. While it is certainly a legal question, logic says this is not possible. Should such binding be possible, I wonder if the City is ready to do business in this manner?

Along with this proposed binding referendum number one comes other concerns from my position as Mayor. It had been my hope that with the completion of the new Municipal Library Building, this issue could be put aside and we would go on to current matters including the settling of the matters with regards to the position of Mayor in the 18 months to go in this term, as well as the upcoming elections of 11 aldermen in April, 1987.

One of the concerns that has been mentioned frequently, especially during the mayoral campaign, was that we should improve our attempts to attract tourists to Menomonie.

The Mabel Tainter Building has long been a major attraction for tourists to this city. Its attraction being its unique design, construction and history.

The Tainter board is moving in new directions to increase the building's attraction and usage. They have viable projects for which they are now beginning a Capital Campaign. It is a concerted drive to continue to maintain, preserve and restore the building and to expand its programming. I would think twice before asking them to let the City re-establish a city library there.

Case in point is, we now have an additional building that can be considered as a point of interest to the tourists coming to our community. This is in addition to other fine points of interest already making our community and surrounding area a fine tourist stopping area. The new library building (no matter what you think of the problems in building it) does lend itself to a point of interest with its unique design. In addition of course, to its functional qualities.

With regards to suggested referendums two and three, they are moot, considering the fact that we cannot bind private interests.

Suggested referendum number four will have to be given some further thought on my part and from my position.

Chuck Stokke, Mayor
City of Menomonie

Another student offended

"Transients to a community... should have no voice in determining policies, procedure or structure of any local governmental agency." So stated D. M. Wegner in his/her letter to the editor last week.

Well. Speaking as one of the 7550 students who live, work, eat, play, spend and sleep here in Menomonie, I'm offended. I would have to consider anyone who spends nine to 12 months of the year here a resident, entitled to all rights and benefits inherent to that position.

"Destruction and chaos." Uh-huh. Ever been to a big city, Wegner? There isn't a street in this town that I'd hate to walk. I can't say the same for many other communities. This town is positively sedate.

I came to Menomonie because I was impressed by Stout. I've stayed three years because I'm happy both with Stout and with Menomonie. It's a great little town, surrounded by some of the most beautiful country in the state.

And that, D. M., is why, when some misinformed political fanatic tries to selectively discriminate against myself and other citizens of my town, I get the urge to wreak a little "destruction and chaos" of my own.

Menomonie is not unique in having some degree of trouble with its university. Our problems will be cured through the cooperation of local and student governments --not through one or the other tossing around threats, wild accusations and half-baked ideas to deny community members their basic Constitutional rights.

Most sincerely,
Robb Zimdars

Should students Vote

Last week I read a letter to the editor from a citizen named D. M. Wegner in The Stoutonia. It basically said that UW-Stout students should not be permitted to vote because they don't permanently live in the city and that they generally lack any interest in city affairs. It went on to say that Stout students were mostly "transients" who "should have no voice in determining policies, procedures or structure of any local government." It concluded by claiming that students of this community "leave behind destruction and chaos."

Who do you think you are? Anyone else who has lived in this city for 10 days is eligible to vote or run in city elections. Stout students are here in the community well over 180 days. They also support this community by annually spending roughly $20 million at Menomonie businesses.

As for causing chaos and destruction, only a minute portion of the student body are ever issued eitations for city ordinance violations. One should not imply that the students of Stout are destroying Menomonie, as most of them display a great deal of respect and care for this city.

Many students do, in fact, care about what politically goes on around them. One simply cannot bind up 7500 students, which make up one-half the community, judge them all to be the same and try to eliminate them from their right to vote. Might this reaction come only from the mayoral election not going his or her way?

In the future, writers should be a little more careful about their facts before jumping off the deep end.

Sincerely,
Chris Perri

I'll drink to that

There has been a lot of controversy surrounding the campaign tactics of Michael Wagner. His attempt to inspire greater voter participation in UW-Stout students through the use of giving away beer, has come under fire.

For the information of the community of Menomonie, George Washington put rum to political use when he ran for the Virginia legislature, giving each voter a barrel of rum, beer, wine or hard cider.

Where does Michael Wagner get off serving us just a glass of beer?

Eulogy for Dave

Tracy Lea Landis

Dave Fredrickson needed four amethysts to finish a jewelry commission, so he called art metals instructor, Humphrey Gilbert, on the evening of July 14, 1986. Humphrey told Dave that he was welcome to come get some from the art metals shop in the Applied Arts building.

When Dave got there, Humphrey says, his sunglasses were thick with bugs. Dave told Humphrey that it was too nice a night to ride with a helmet.

When Dave came back from washing his glasses, "his eyes were just like cherry tomatoes," Humphrey says.

Dave had been burning the midnight oil, again.

Ron Verdon, art program director, says that Dave worked long, hard hours. "We get a little wiser when we get older. I've spent alot of late working nights..."

But Dave wasn't going to get any older.

At 10:31 p.m., shortly after leaving the Applied Arts Building, at milepost 49 on Interstate 94, something happened that threw Dave off his cycle.

Dave "received multiple trauma injuries when his motorcycle collided with a construction barrier," according to the next morning's Eau Claire Leader.

There weren't any bugs on his glasses, though. Humphrey checked.

People packed both floors of the United Methodist Church in Elmwood on Monday, July 21, when they buried Dave. Others, who couldn't get in the church, stood outside.

Sometimes a person thinks about what they would like to happen when they die. Dave considered the eventuality of his own death, too. He had told friends he was glad that he had said all the things he needed to say to the important people in his life.

At Dave's funeral, the pastor of the Elmwood congregation executed a final wish of Dave's. The pastor performed an altar call.

Methodists don't do altar calls at funerals. Fundamentalists do altar calls and Dave was a Fundamentalist.

Some of those gathered at his funeral thought Dave would have been proud of the people who stood up when the pastor asked, "Would those people who have never accepted Christ as their Lord and would like to do so now, please stand?"

The altar call made some feel deeply uncomfortable.

Many of Dave's friends who had gathered to mourn their loss, did not agree with his beliefs. But it takes a special guy to have friends like that.

Dave was special and if he were here, he would be giving the maggot culture the hellfire and brimstone it deserves.

Has he gone beyond this veil of tears to a meeting with his maker, or broken from his karmic bonds to the illusion of the material world? According to your belief. But Dave is gone.

The divine works in each of us. Noble, gutsy, sincere people like Dave , however, are rare.

Monkey Around

H. A. Rey is out there someplace, according to ALIS. Somebody who either was, or wisely chose to refer to himself as H. A. Rey. This has a nice sound — H. A. Rey, more mantra-like than Hans Augusto Rey, his full name.

Sometime, way back in the deep, dark 1940's, this H. A. Rey character was writing books. Here is the first line of one of my favorites: "This is George." Heavy material, I think.

The first book by H. A. Rey I could find was published in 1941. It started this way: "This is George." In 1942, H. A. Rey released another book through Houghton Mifflin Publishing House. It started like this: "This is Cecily G."

In 1957, H. A. Rey released yet another book with that profound opening. And again in 1963: "This is George." Of seven different H. A. Rey books available, six start exactly the same.

That is one reason why I like the books so much. The other reason is that H. A. Rey also illustrates his own books. The books are all about Curious George, the monkey.

George originally lived in Africa. He was captured in a friendly way by his life-long companion, "the man with the big yellow hat."

My favorite Curious George adventure is the book where goes to the hospital. He gets a job as a window washer. After a while on the job, he goes into one of the rooms where painters are working, and paints the room up like a jungle scene. He gets caught while he is putting himself into the picture. He breaks his leg while trying to escape.

Check this out: the man with the yellow hat sees George on the front of the newspapers. Headline: Monkey goes to Hospital. Headline: Monkey Hurt in Fall, and so on.

While in the hospital, George, curious as always, uncorks an ether bottle and in a bizarre little six-panel sequence, has a first class hallucination. When the man with the yellow hat finds him, George is completely zoned-out on the hospital room floor with this monkey-euphoric grin on his little monkey face.

After a quick shower, George is up and around. Within minutes, for no apparent reason except to continue a storybook, George is signing a contract to work in a large movie studio. The movie was a smash. Was there any doubt?

So why is this guy wasting space on a children's book, you are asking yourself.

Here's why: There seem to be several forces, possibly malicious forces at work trying to make us "grow up." If you grow up too much you might turn into something fearful. Maybe a right-wing Republican or some similar anal-retentive type who suffers from a lack of life, or love or curiosity tolerance, or expression.

There are, of course, immediately, some of you dear readers who are going to take offense, or otherwise freak-out. For those who aren't already brain-dead, and there are many, (I've seen them), I'll explain further.

Growing up is ok, if you know the limits. Handle the things of adult life as best you can; parking, credit cards, wrapping birthday presents, grooming and so on. But when it comes to your outlook, maybe being something of a monkey, a curious monkey, can ease some of the squeeze.

I may sound as though I'm preaching. Heaven forbid. (That's a joke). I'm suggesting that if you listen too closely to those who are trying to preach you into a corner, everything will look to you like right angles.

"Back in the saddle: gets you sore." -- Stephen Tyler

Return to those thrilling days of yester-year. Men were men; they spat on the streets of dirt and swallowed in the presence of ladies.

Menomonie was a thriving logging community with its own college. The students in town were susceptible to all kinds of influences. Certain power-hungry fanatics were taking advantage...

"All right, this meeting is called to order," said the dwarf. He had a sort of charisma that made people take notice despite his height. "I'm Dr. Miguelito Loveless and I'm looking for followers."

"Our goal shall be to make everyone think and believe as we do," he shouted, his eyes lighting up a demented look. "I've got everything in the whole frotting universe figured out. Soon you all [illegible] light."

"But what shall we call ourselves?" asked a beguiled freshman. "We'll be kinda' like modern day crusaders, won't we?"

"I don't think that the name "crusaders" is appropriate for us," said Dr. Loveless. "After all, the crusaders did slaughter countless innocent people during the middle ages."

"I know! I know!" exclaimed another freshman. "We could call ourselves The Campus Cuckoos for Cocoa Puffs!"

"That's perfect," said Dr. Loveless. "We can draw lots of attention by standing on a pedestal by LLC and shouting, "I'm cuckoo for Cocoa Puffs, cuckoo for Cocoa Puffs!"--its catchy as hell. "Make your voice sound like Mr. Bill's for maximum effect," he added.

"But can I do it in the rain?" asked the first freshman.

"Certainly, young lad," replied Dr. Loveless. "--whatever pumps you 'nads."

The rest of campus ignored the group until a newspaper column complained about people who play records backwards. Dr. Loveless was infuriated. He stormed into the office and demanded to know who wrote it.

"I did," said the writer. "My name is West, James West. What's your problem, anyway?"

"I demand an apology, a reprint of the article (with corrections) on the front page, and my own column!" snapped Dr. Loveless.

"I'm sure we can work something out," said Mr. West. "Chill-out, will you?"

"I'm also going to talk to a lawyer," said Dr. Loveless.

"Look pal," said West, "How can you ask for special consideration and threaten me in the same breath? Get the hell out of my office."

Dr. Loveless became obsessed with silencing West forever. In all his Bible readings, he had apparently missed the part about turning the other cheek.

West did not know what to expect from a fanatic like Loveless. "I hope he doesn't try to stone me to death;" wrote West, "stoning is the most popular means of censorship in the Bible."

They came by night. West was stumbling out of the Meet Market at bar time when they threw a sack over his head and knocked him out.

He awoke to find his body chained to Bowman Hall. Dr. Loveless stood there grinning before him.

"So, Loveless, what sort of fiendish demise do you have in mind this time?" asked West.

"Surely a man as clever as yourself should be able to figure it out, West. It is a well known fact that a brick falls out of the clocktower every time a virgin graduates from Stout..."

"-And several members of your organization are graduating today." injected West.

"Yes, yes Mr. West," replied Dr. Loveless. "I'm afraid that your skull will break their fall. I must be going now; I wouldn't want to miss the ceremony."

West waited until they were out of sight and opened the secret compartment in his boot to get his plastic explosives. Alas, they were gone. He had forgotten that he had replaced them with a six-pack of prophylactics before he went uptown.

He stood in terror as he looked at the useless rubbers in his hand. Suddenly, a mammoth Amazon came out of The Den and approached him.

"These are yours if you can help get me out of this," he told her.

"These condoms aren't any good to me," she replied. "They're empty."

"I'll do anything you ask," he pleaded. "Please..."

West felt his balls crawl up to his stomach as he watched her bite through the chain like it was a breadstick. He escaped just in time to avoid the crashing bricks.

It was West's subsequent tumble with a fate worse than death that made him see the light. He gave the Campus Cuckoos for Cocoa Puffs their own column.

I don't know about you, but I'm looking forward to it.

OPERATE THESE LEAGUES AND TOURNAMENTS?

BUTTKE: I pretty much coordinate and manage the facility, I am the only full-time staff person that works here and I do have several students who help operate the facility. They act as tournament directors and mechanics. They do an excellent job.

STOUTONIA: HOW DOES THE RECREATION CENTER AFFECT THE RECREATION COMMISSION?

BUTTKE: The Recreation Commission is an organization not related to the center. It is a student progamming commission and that governs all the 19 club sports on campus, that are not intercollegiate and not funded by the athletic department, fall under the umbrella of the Recreation Commission.

STOUTONIA: WHAT DO YOU AND YOUR STAFF DO TO GET STUDENTS INTO THE RECREATION CENTER?

BUTTKE: We make out a complete marketing plan and we try to follow that. We set some goals for ourselves, our goal for this year is to increase participation in all of our programs and our marketing plan is made to obtain those goals.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO YOU THINK THE NEW DRINKING AGE WILL AFFECT THE RECREATION CENTER?

BUTTKE: I think it will be beneficial for this facility, if we can meet the needs of the students. With Menomonie being such a small community, there is not a large variety of things to do, other than to go to uptown on the weekends. We will have to weed out what the students want and try to offer them those programs and the atmosphere they want. This atmosphere here in the Recreation Center I think is a pleasant one. People will come down here to have fun and socialize and that's pretty much our responsibility.

STOUTONIA: WHAT DOES THE RECREATION COMMISSION DO FOR STUDENTS?

BUTTKE: Most of these clubs, operate mostly by students. It is run like other clubs with presidents and executive boards and often times those people serve as coaches and support staff. A lot of these clubs have really made a mark for themselves they are very successful in a lot of the competitions or just in the activities that they do. The Recreation Commission, as a whole, touches like five hundred people in direct membership and many other students as spectators.

STOUTONIA: WHAT WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE HAPPEN IN TO RECREATION CENTER IN THE FUTURE?

BUTTKE: Our primary goal is to satisfy more of the student's needs and touch as many students as possible. A lot of times a students leisure time can make or break their college education. We offer a wide variety, hoping to touch as many students as we can.

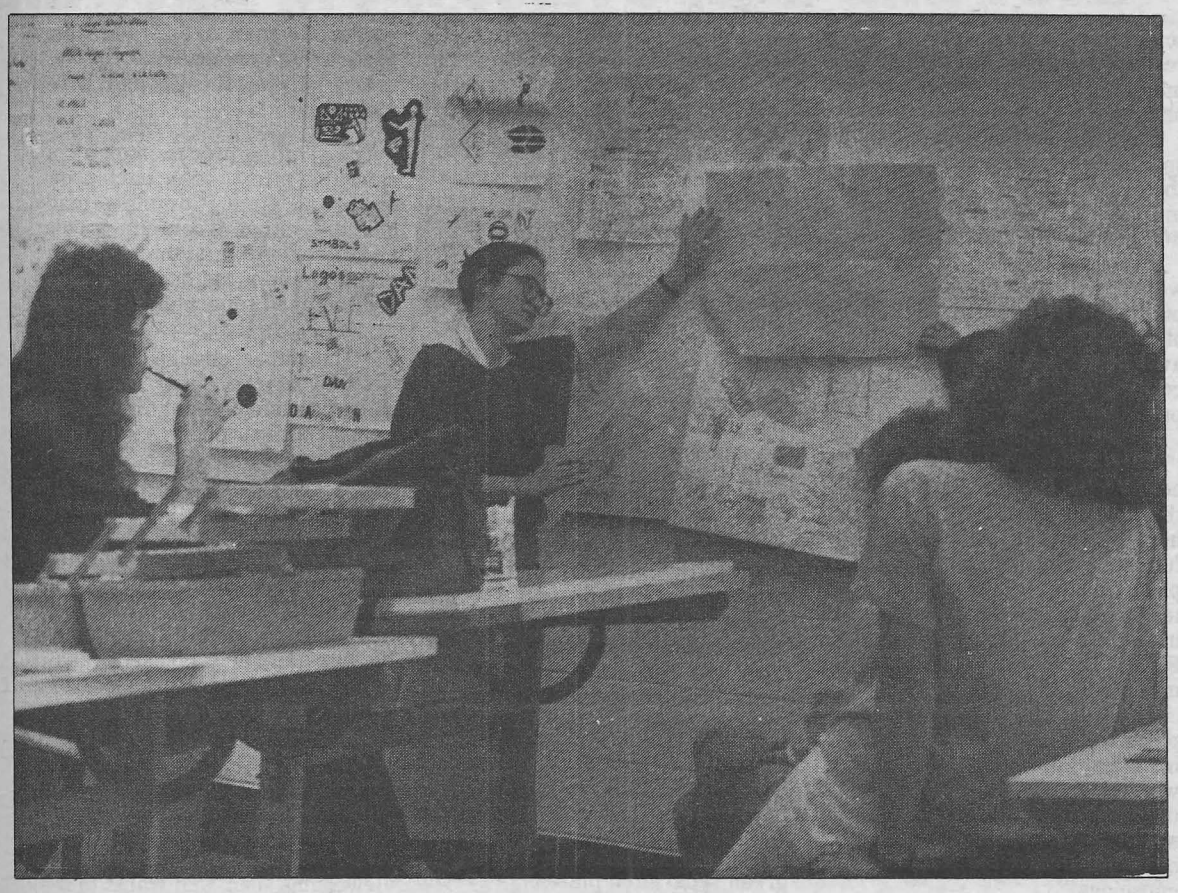
Design clubs encourage participation



Graphic Design Association Advisor Sue Hunt teaches a graphic Design II course. Hunt as well as the club's officers believe that professional design clubs are as significant to a student's development as the classroom. (Stoutonia photo by Wayne Parmley)

by Stephanie Weiss

Many people are afraid to get involved with new clubs and activities even though they may benefit by joining. Such a fear exists with many Stout students regarding professional clubs.

Some students are not fully aware of the opportunities professionally affiliated clubs offer. Others are not aware they exist, and some do not get involved because they are afraid to try something new.

Stout students are lucky to have many career orientated groups. Most majors offer an opportunity to get involved in a club related to their major. These clubs offer a chance to find out more about a particular career choice, to meet students further along in their major and to meet students who have graduated and are now working in their field. These clubs also help to establish contacts which may be useful resources in the future.

This article is the first in a series of spotlights on professional clubs. The article will focus on design clubs.

Some such clubs include the Industrial Design Society of America (I.D.S.A.), the American Society of Interior Design (A.S.I.D.), and the Graphic Design Association (G.D.A.). All three clubs are part of the School of Liberal Arts, Art Department.

These groups offer Stout students much insight into their fields. Membership is strongly encouraged by students already familiar with the club, as well as by the club advisors.

Jeff Weber, president of I.D.S.A., said, "We do not get enough underclassmen involved, we strongly encourage involvement...you can learn a lot from your peers and gain much insight to your profession." Agreeing with Weber's statement are Karen Johnson, president of A.S.I.D. and Karen Heagle, publicity coordinator of G.D.A. All three students stressed club involvement as being helpful to personal growth and career development.

"Anyone who is in one of these fields (Industrial, Interior and Graphic Design) should become part of their club. It offers a chance to mix with others in their field,and establish connections with working professionals," said G.D.A. officer, Heagle.

The Stout chapters of I.D.S.A. and A.S.I.D. are nationally affiliated in the Midwest Region while G.D.A., being only a couple years old, is trying to establish national recognition through affiliation.

Each of these clubs gets members involved various functions. I.D.S.A. sponsors two design speakers a semester, an opportunity to go toJeff Weber, president of I.D.S.A., at 235-9067 or advisor Ed Stevens at x-2206; Karen Johnson, president of A.S.I.D., at 235-5828 or advisor Magdalena Laszkiewicz at x-2196; or G.D.A. advisors, Sue Hunt and Bill DeHoff at x-1693.

Club involvement offers students a chance to explore their majors through others experiences, and speakers and activities sponsored by the clubs. Clubs also allow a chance for meeting new people and making new friends. As Heagle stated, "To actively participate in clubs is an important way to learn, grow, and make new friends."

Menomonie Theatre Guild Eager for Student Help This Season

by Noreen Spraner

The Menomonie Theatre Guild is busy preparing its current season. There are three plays being offered this season, "Foxfire," "Hello Dolly," and "The Mouse that Roared."

Auditions for "Foxfire" have already been held, and the play will be performed November 14-16, and 20-23. The play's director is Karin Falkofske, she is enthusiastic about directing "Foxfire."

"The play is about a family in the Appalachian Mountains. It deals with an older woman who is about 79 years old and whose son is a country music star." Falkofske continued,"There is also a real estate agent who wants to turn her property into condos. It is a play about love, but at times it is a comedy. It is very moving."

Falkofske thinks there is a real benefit for Stout students to get involved with the Theatre Guild, "There is an opportunity to work with all kinds of people, who are different ages. You get to know the community."

She also commented,"It requires much dedication to be in a production. I think the people involved with the Guild are the most talented people in the Menomonie community."

Falkofske has also found personal gain in working with the guild, "It is the most rewarding, exciting, thing I've ever done. I've worked for them for 20 years."

According to her there are all sorts of things for students to get involved in — from actually acting in the plays — to set construction, scenery painting, running sound and lights, making costumes, working the box-office, ushering, makeup and taking care of props.

Karin Worthley is directing "Hello Dolly," her husband, Jim Worthley will be musical director. The play is a popular musical about the matchmaking efforts of Dolly on behalf of her friend Horace Vandergilder. It's scheduled to play April 24-26 and March 1, 6, 7, and 8th.

Karin Worthley is enthusiastic about Stout students becoming involved with the Guild and with the musical "Hello Dolly." She feels it helps students feel a part of the community in a way they might not, otherwise by just going to school here. There are parts in the play for people from 17 to older adults. "We need singers, we need dancers. It is quite a large cast, between 30-35 people. Its got lots of fun music."

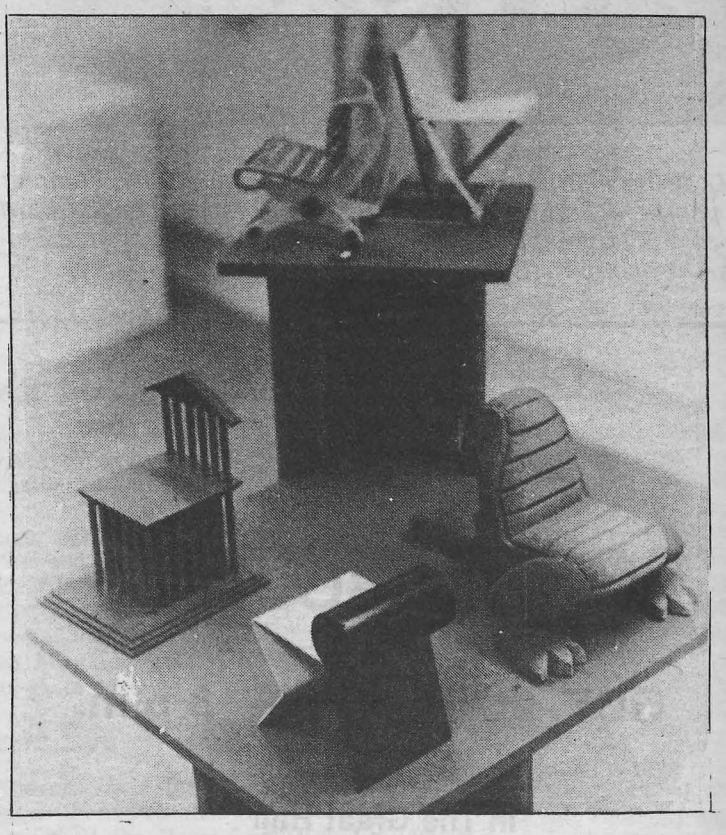
Worthley explained, "we can always use technical help. Anyone who is interested in helping backstage should come to the auditions. It is always a lot of fun to work on a big musical like that."

Rehearsals will be starting in January, so keep your eyes open for auditioning times.

"The Mouse That Roared" is another play coming up that has plenty of opportunity for students. Its director Chris Schmidt says, "It is a story about a little European country that declares war on the U.S. They are very old-fashioned." Schmidt added,"There is a real sweet love story between the duchess of the country and the hero of the country. It is sort of sympathetic with the little country. It is timely because there is a bomb involved. It is sort of like the nuclear issue."

Schmidt also explained,"I need all ages, all types. It is a big cast. The duchess is between 20-25 years old. I need an army of young men. Technically, the tech people I need are people that can paint, and are artists. I will take names anytime. The auditions will probably be in February." Schmidt's phone number is 235-4966.

Season tickets are also available now at reduced rates through November 1. They are at a special season rate of $15 for all three plays at a savings of 20%. Ticket orders and seating preferences will be honored on a first come, first serve basis. Brochures detailing the upcoming season, and containing season ticket order blanks may be obtained by writing: Brochure, Menomonie Theatre Guild, Box 325, Menomonie, WI 54751.



DESIGNER CHAIRS —

Artist learns from summer experience

by Jef Maynard

When I walked into his studio, he was tracing a drawing of a drawing of a brown trout. "What do you think, how do you like it?" he asked. "It looks like a fish," was all I could answer. The artist is Douglas Cumming.

During the past summer, Cumming led what he described as an "idyllic" life. The shine in his eyes bore that out. Among other adventures, Cumming and Nancy Blum, his wife, "spent the summer in southern France, learning German."

During the last school year, the couple purchased a beautiful home in the Pyrennes Mountains, at the foothills of snow-covered Mt. Canigou. Their balcony overlooked the Mediterranean Ocean 40 miles away. They are partners in the purchase with well-known German artist Eberhard Eggers. This is why they learned German. "All of the house guests were friends of Egger's on vacation."

West Germany also had a large impact on Cumming's artistic career. When he first arrived there on route to France, Cumming was offered a commission to produce a limited edition lithograph for the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, the largest and most widely read German newspaper. The offer came through Eggers from E. A. Quensen, a prominent print publisher in Germany.

Cumming described Quensen as, "one of the most amazing idea men I've ever met." Another project of Quesen's in the works is to produce sculptural commissions for every reststop on the Autobahn, Germany's highway system. "And he'll do it," Cumming commented.

The Frankfurt newspaper runs a special Sunday supplement, and as the centerfold for one edition each month, a reproduction of a lithograph will be included.

Twenty artists from around the world will be chosen for the publication.One hundred editions of the collected prints will be available to the public, either as a complete portfolio or as separate prints.

The theme of the edition was "Media and the Future." It concerned "the mass distribution of the news," Cumming said, "and how the news media relates to the future.... You were allowed complete freedom in what you wanted to say about the media, and this fit in perfectly with my new work... Finally there was a way to get the new work published."

The way Cumming handled the piece was very much in line with his latest approach to his work. "I wanted to push the print toward the environment.... I wanted the new work to be more socially oriented, more socially conscious."

The print was created from a drawing of a still life he constructed after arriving in France. The print contains elements recognizable as his personal symbols, bits of tape, rendered green brushstrokes, paper fragments. All this completed in a precise, "realist" treatment.

Other elements are visible in the work which develop them such as the initials for the newspaper, F.A.Z., as well as references to Mercury, the messenger of the gods. These are also statements about technology. "I wanted to combine the old and the new," Cumming explained.

Lessons from the actual printing process were "a tremendous experience just in themselves," he said. He had the highest praise for the lithography studio that actually ran the prints.

Upstairs was a commercial job printing operation with modern equipment. This was the financial backbone for the basement studio. This was run by a master printmaker and an apprentice.

When Cumming arrived back in Germany after his stay in France, he had four aluminum litho plates. One plate was a key plate with the black elements in the drawing, the other three were blue, red and green separation plates.

"Any little change you wanted to make, they'd shut down everything to get what you wanted," he remarked. "The master printmaker and his apprentice, who was a German artist, were only there to help you get what you were after, not what they thought would look good."

The printing process took a considerable effort. After each proof, or test printing, Cumming made changes, either in content, or color or registration, which is the aligninment of the different colors each applied separately.

"The paper changed size after several of the runs," Cumming stated, "which meant that I had to redraw almost everything at least twice, but it worked out."

The final print was highly successful according to Cumming, and was well received by Quesen. "I was one of the least known artists in the group, so he took something of a chance with work he [Quensen] knew little about, but he was genuinely pleased when it came out." Cumming also had a large bulk of sales on his earlier figure drawings while in Germany. He described the situation in Europe as profoundly different in relation to the collection of artworks. "Art in America has to be so safe, so exactly like what the viewer has seen, and wants to see. Art, true art cannot exist that way. Each new work has to be a true statement and the deepest possible exploration of that statement and the artist."

Foreign Films will examine present and future bellicosity

by Barbara Klimek

It is time again for the Foreign Film Series to open for another year of adventurous and inspiring pieces on film. They are provided by University of Wisconsin-Stout's University Cinema. Supervising the program this year will be Rob Price, an art instructor here at Stout.

This year's series will focus on specially selected films concerning wars that are past, wars that are possible, and the consequences of war. Film selection will be a little different from the past. The films are planned on subjects of past, present, and future topics of interest, rather than the variety of chosen subjects that have been shown other years.

Price feels that the thematic approach might be interesting to the community — if they are looking for a topic related to war, and have something to go by through the year as a based theme of interest.

A limited budget was set on this year's production, so a cut back directed Price toward a selection of six choice films. With the balance of the budget, he selected a few short films that tie in with the topics. The main films will be in foreign languages with captions and subtitles. Some of the short films will be in the English language.

The subject of war will show the way each director of these foreign films views and reacts to the subject of war; its conflicts on people, and the world's environment.

The foreign film offers an escape from mass consumption movies to more intellectual, and probing topics from foreign directors and producers. Foreign directors present a different film style. Not only that, they may have different motives, and moods compared to American directors. Price has a strong interest on the topic of war. He feels that it is time to offer films on this topic to increase the awareness of others about the reality of war and future expectations. What is happening? Why did it happen? And, what is going to happen?

Price stated, "It bothers me the reaction toward the topic of war from today's generation. Theres a lot of internal feelings, but not much outrage; vocal or visible reaction."

There is a lot of tension and mixed feelings of war and the issues we the people, our country, and the world will face today and tomorrow. One can go on and on about our countries or world problems of today to the future. There are so many views and opinions. Maybe this years Foreign Films Series examination of wars past, wars possible, and consequences of will touch base with some people, or contribute to some sense of consciousness.

There is no admission charge and all groups are welcome. All films will be shown in the Applied Arts building, room 321, with specific times announced on advance flyers posted throughout campus.

Price stated, "I want people to come and enjoy the films, and to think that the film they are about to see is one they can sink they're teeth into."

Price hopes the films "might provoke some thought and vocal view points about the subject, rather than just watching the film for amusement." Price then continued,"The attendance has been low in the past, I hope the idea of doing this year's film series on a main subject format that relates all in some way, will draw a larger crowd."

The Foreign Film Organization is in need of assistance. It depends on volunteers to help distribute flyers, and set up for the film's presentation. They may also have involvement with next years theme choice and film selection.

The Foreign Film Series, University Cinema opens its season with "Ballad of A Soldier" [Russian]. Its subject is a soldier in World War II, and our relations with the Soviets. Coming attractions include: "Gallipoli" [Australian], an emotional film about young men going off to fight in a war at Turkey, facing the reality of war, and relating to the subject of war.

Duos bring original sound to Stout through progressive jazz and rock

by Karen M. Heagle

Progressive jazz has found itself a large audience in college students, as well as the rest of the general public. The pawn is pleased to be presenting a band that specializes in this emerging sound. The band is Duos.

Duos will be performing Friday, September 26 and Saturday, September 27 at 9:15 p.m. The band is lead by David Goldflies, bassist and chief lyricist. Originally from Oxford, Ohio, Goldflies has been playing bass professionally for 15 years. In these years he has toured with the Allman Brothers Band in 1978-1982, and another international tour with the Greg Allman Band in 1982.

In addition to these tours Goldflies has played for Dickey Betts & Great Southern, and BHLT (Betts, Hall, Leavall, and Trucks). He has worked on three albums with the Allman Brother's Band including Enlightened Rogues which went gold and received a grammy nomination.

Since forming the band in 1983, Duos has opened concerts for Alan Holdsworth, Gil Scott Heron, and Jeff Lorber. In 1984 Duos performed at 42 colleges across the nation, as well as showcasing for four National Association for Campus Activities(NACA) Regional Conferences. They have showcased at several conferences like this one.

The sound of bass is very obvious in Duos music and promises high entertainment for bass enthusiasts but by no means limited to bass fanatics.

The group utilizes harmonious melodies with a jazz influence, and a rock background. A sound that Goldflies refers to as "new age." He explained,"In forming the group, I hope to offer one example of new age living--self-reliant, creative, and sensitive to peoples' needs for new exciting music."

> "I hope to offer one example of new age living..."

Duos is composed of two other members in addition to David Goldflies; they are Scott Henderson, and Scott Proffitt. Henderson is the band's guitarist. A native of Louisville, Kentucky. Henderson has been playing guitar professionally for eight years. He has performed with artists such as Nancy Wilson, Diahann Carrol, Donald O'Conor, Jimmy Raney, David Liebman, James Aebersold, Esther Scatterfield and several others.

Henderson has taught and tutored at several Jazz clinics in the states as well as in Germany and Denmark. Henderson has also performed with the Louisville Pops Concert Orchestra.

The group's percussionist Proffitt, from Indiana, has played throughout the northwestern region of his homestate. In addition to teaching he has also played in a national championship marching band. Being in Duos has given Proffitt a chance to excercise his musical abilities extensively.

This band and its style of music is continuously pleasing audiences--especially college audiences. Tracy A. Knofla, coordinator of student activities at Indiana's Southeast University wrote, "I found David and the guys very professional in their manner."

Knofla also added, "They were receptive to students' inquiries, staying after the concert to talk about their music."

Duos is made up of some serious musicians who get away from the top forty sound and present the emerging sound of progressive jazz. Keith Reynolds,programming chairmen for the student programming council of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale said, "excitement over Duos was not unfound."

Campus Cuisine

Dip Ahead

Denise Cain

The 501 poster is hung above the televisicn. Lightbulbs are installed in nearly every socket of the house. The refrigerator finally has more food than alcohol on its shelves. Let's face it kids, you have finally moved in. It is time now to open your doors and let John and Jane Q. Public into your lovely home. In another words; it is time to start entertaining.

Sunday afternoon is no time to do homework (other than write campus cuisine). It is a time to invite your friends over for some beer and nachos and forget about the rain. Concentrate on those Vikings, Packers, Bears and beers. It is time to whip something simple up in a pan, serve it and leave the dishes to be dealt with at a later date. So guys, do not be afraid to create this appetizer. Remember, the more you drink, the better it tastes.

Nacho Cheese Dip

1/2 lb. provolone cheese, grated
1/2 lb. American cheese, grated
3/4 cup heavy cream
1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese
1/4 tsp. garlic
3/4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1/8 tsp. cayenne pepper
1/8 tsp. yellow food color

Melt provolone cheese in top of double boiler over boiling water. Add American cheese and stir in heavy cream. Add cream cheese and stir until all cheese is melted. Remove from heat and beat in seasonings and yellow food color. Serve warm over tortilla chips, crackers or fresh vegetables.

And for the women of campus. Isn't it time we start planning that first lingerie party? I picked a dip that goes great with sparkling vintage (Boonsefarm Tickle Pink) or even beer. It is easy to make ahead of time and can be served all night long. But remember, even though silk and simulated silk do slide on, they will not hide the cellulite; so concentrate more on the fashions and less on the dip.

Spinach Dip

1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen spinach, chopped,(raw)
1 cup sour cream
1 cup mayonaise or salad dressing
1 pkg. Knorr's dry vegetable soup mix
1 lg. onion, chopped (optional)
1 can water chesnuts, chopped
King's Hawaiian bread, French bread, or sour dough bread.

Mix all ingredients together and chill. What makes this dip special is the bread you can serve it on. To prepare the King's bread, or any round loaf of bread, hollow out the middle until just the crust remains. Cut the hollowed bread into cubes and toast slightly in the oven. You can also cut and toast the French and sour dough bread. To serve this exuberant creation, fill the bread shell with the dip and arrange the bread cubes around it.

Finally, for the rest of the campus, a dip for people who are weight and health conscience. I hop both of you enjoy it. It is a true compliment to any fresh vegetable. It is creatively tagged; Vegetable Dip. It can be served with fresh cauliflower, broccoli, carrots, celery, green peppers, radishes, cucumbers, or even cherry tomatoes. By using a wide variety of vegetables you can make an appealing, appetizing tray.

Vegetable Dip

1 & 1/2 cups real mayonaise
1 & 1/2 cups sour cream
1 & 1/2 Tbsp. minced onion
1 & 1/2 Tbsp. parsley flakes
1 & 1/2 tsp. salt
1 & 1/2 tsp. dill weed

Mix in a bowl and leave in the refrigerator for a few hours or overnight to develop fascinating flavors.

Kevin Locke Brings Native American culture to Menomonie

by Noreen Spraner

Saturday, September 27, the Mabel Tainter will be the place to be immersed in Native American culture.

The highlight of the events will be a performance by Kevin Locke, a member of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe of South Dakota. He will be performing a traditional hoop dance and will also play the Lakota courting flute. His performance begins at 8:00 p.m. The tickets are available at $4.00 for adults and $2.00 for children 12, and under.

Kevin Locke will also be conducting workshops. They will be on Friday, September 26 from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. at the U. W. Stout Student Center for Stout students and staff. On Saturday the 27th, he will be conducting a workshop for the general public at the Mabel Tainter Building from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Both workshops are free.

A dinner featuring Native American cuisine with venison stew, wild rice, corn muffins, baked squash, wild blueberry cobbler with cream and wintergreen tea will be served at 6:00 p.m. The dinner will be catered by U.W. Stout service staff and the Rainbow Organization in the Mabel Tainter basement. Reservations can be made at the Mabel Tainter Administration office. Dinner is $6.00 per person.

There is also a photography exhibit of the Chippewa Indian Tribe from the late 1950's to the late 1960's. These photographs are on loan from the Chippewa Valley Musueum of Eau Claire. It will be on view in the Mabel Tainter lower level gallery from September 22 to September 29.

For more information and tickets please call 235-9726.

Stout Student Art Show

Works representing the five Stout Art majors: Studio Art, Art Education, Graphic Design, Industrial Design and Interior Design will be shown in Gallery 306 of Applied Arts. This exhibit includes works from the permanent collections of the Fine Arts Association. The gallery will be open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. through October 9.

Pawn Live

Claire, a talented singer, songwriter and vocalist will be performing at the Pawn Live. Two performances will be given on Friday, October 3 and Saturday, October 4 at 9:15 p.m.

DcVer At The Tap

"Rock and roll that must be seen and heard" will be provided by DCVer at the Tap. The gig will begin at 9 p.m. on Thursday, September 25.

Blast Into The Past

Student Activities and Kodak present "Blast into the Past," a rock and roll kaleidoscope of videos from the 1950's through the 1980's. The show will be held in the Student Union's Great Hall on October first. Show times are 11:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 3:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. There is no charge for admission.

Foreign Film Festival

The Russian film, "Ballad of a Soldier," will be shown in room 321 of Applied Arts this Thursday and Friday at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. at no charge.

"Ballad of a Soldier" portrays the encounters of a young soldier on a 72 hour leave to visit his mother. His story includes travel across the war scarred land of Russia where he meets a crippled soldier and a young girl and their relationships.

Spontaneous Combustion

Mosfets Replace Tubes

James "Unk" Falkofske

In the beginning there was no sound as a dim glow came forth from the vacuum tubes of my Music Man 150 head amplifier. I struck a chord as I rotated the Master Volume forward. Suddenly a fantastic array of high pitched feedback and harmonics shot forth into the room. For the first time in its life, my guitar seemed to breath and vibrate. It was alive. I thought to myself about this great wonder: with practice and determination. I too could become a jukebox box hero. I stood back and saw that it was good.

Ever since the day when I first purchased my tube amplifier, I found what musicians had been telling me for years. There is no substitute! For five years I had been playing on transistor amplifiers, never satisfied with the "voice" I was hearing; but with my the first few notes of my tube amp, I was smiling from ear to ear.

But why did the tube amplifier sound so warm and full as opposed to a standard transistor guitar amplifier? I started asking questions, and I found that the sound quality was simply a matter of how hot the amplifier got. When vacuum tubes were first incorporated into musical amplifiers, designers found that when the tubes became hot, extra distortion was added to the music. This distortion, which caused extra "noise" in the electronic circuit, was considered undesirable. For this reason the volume controls on early tube amplifiers would not allow the amplifier to increase its volume past the point of distortion.

But then one day, a guitarist (who was never famous anyhow) turned up his amplifier and played very loud for a very long time. The tubes inside the amplifier became very, very hot and glowed red in excitement. The amplifier strained against itself and finally began to overload. It began to give a buzzing, fuzzing sound. This is the same sound that tube amplifiers have now become famous for.

Unfortunately, if a transistor amplifier got as hot as a tube amplifier, it would go through a meltdown and blue puffs of smoke would slowly appear from behind the control panel. In simple terms, a transistor is like an electrical light switch: it can either be turned on or turned off; there is no in-between. When this switch starts to overload, it melts. That is why transistor amplifiers are great for listening to music on the radio, because they are clean; they add very little extra noise to the music.

Unlike the transistor amplifier, the tube amplifier acts more like a big water faucet handle. It can be turned fully off, and it can be turned fully on, but to get to either one of these states it has to go through an intermediate zone.

This intermediate zone is where distortion occurs, and it is also where the tube amplifier gets its warm sound. When the tube amplifier gets hot, it is as if the sound faucet gets switched on and off at a slower and slower rate. This is the point at which extra noise is added to the soundwaves. The whole reason why the tube amplifier has such a unique gutsy sound is that the amplifier is destroying itself (I have gone through 3 sets of tubes on my Music Man so far).

Well, now musicians around the world are facing a serious crisis. Tubes are no longer gouche in the field of electronics. Everything has turned to integrated circuits because of their lower cost, smaller size and smaller power requirements. Electronic companies are no longer producing tubes, and the limited supply of tubes has driven the price up enormously. A standard tube, the 6LG6, now costs over $13.00. Multiply this by 4 to 8 tubes in an amp and replacing tubes becomes a sizable investment. For the serious, sound-minded musician, there is one last hope.

Marshall, a company with a history of great tube amplifiers, has recently released a version of its MOSFET driven amplifier. This MOSFET amplifier behaves in much the same fashion as a good old tube amp but with two big differences; the amp is smaller and lighter, and it is solid state.

As for the sound of the Marshall MOSFET, I think the sound is even better than some of the Marshall tube amplifiers I have listened to. In fact, some of the guitarists I know turn on their MOSFET a couple of hours before a gig just to get their amplifier "warmed up" for the show. With this type of setup a lead guitarist can avoid sending his signal through a distortion box because the amp lends itself to being one of the best distortion boxes on the market.

That's all for this week. Next week we will look at some more of the performing side of rock and roll.

Lady netters defeated by Eau Claire, 8-1

by Paul Emerson

The UW-Stout women's tennis team was dealt a severe blow in action last week on Tuesday. Besides losing the match to UW-Eau Claire by an 8-1 margin, the team also lost the serves of number one player, Mary Malloy.

Malloy, a junior and Business Administration major from Menasha, WI, was struck in the head by a baseball which was from the field across the street from the courts.

According to witnesses, Malloy had just returned a volley on the baseline, when from the blind-side, she was struck on the side of the head, and it was lights out. The warnings of bystander's were too late to help.

Coach Smith had this to say, "the girls had a hard time after the accident, it really took the starch out of our sails."

Malloy was taken by ambulance to Menomonie hospital, where she was treated and held for observation, before being released Thursday morning.

As to the possibility of her return, "it is a wait and see situation," Smith stated. He added that her return is doubtful for this season, and that her complete recovery is of most importance right now.

When the going gets tough, the tough get going.

And that's just what the Lady Blue Devil's did. With the rain forcing play indoors, they hosted UW-Oshkosh last Friday, and squeaked out a 5-4 win.

The netter's took four of the six singles matches, but had to hold on finally taking number three doubles to decide the match.

Claiming wins in singles play were Susie Blietz, Karen Blau, Tara Stahel, and Liz Wessely, who was seeing her first varsity action.

Blietz won at number three singles, beating Fox, 6-3, 6-4. Blau, at number four singles, beat Neisen in three sets, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3. Stahel breezed at number five singles over Cooper, 6-2, 6-0. And Wessely, whipped Gartzke at number six singles, 6-2, 6-2.

Senior Jean Feyen, playing number one singles, lost a tough match. After taking the first set, 7-5, she faultered in the second, losing it, 6-0. And then lost the third 7-6, including the tiebreaker, 7-5.

Blau and Kris Anderson teamed up to take number three doubles, beating Cooper/Gartzke, 6-2, 6-2.

The netter's were not as fortunate against UW-Whitewater Saturday morning. Although there were some close matches, said Coach Smith,"the Lady Bluedevil's managed only one win, losing the match, 8-1.

Freshman Susie Blietz got the lone win. That coming at number three singles, winning in three sets, 6-1, 6-7, 6-3.

Sophomore Karen Blau, playing at number four singles, won the first set of her match, 7-5. But then lost the next two sets by identical 3-6, 3-6, scores.

Blau and Anderson, paired at number four doubles, were blanked 6-0 in the first set, but fought back to take the second set, losing it 4-6.

The netter's took a turn for the better in the afternoon match of the day, by trouncing UW-Green Bay, by an 8-1 margin.

Blietz won again at number one singles, winning in straight sets, 6-3,6-3. Coach Smith commented, "Susie had a good day today."

Jill Peters also won her number two singles match, this one in three sets, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2. At number three singles, senior Jean Feyen took her match in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2.

Freshman Jane Hagland jumped up to number five singles, and took a 6-0, 6-2 win. At number six singles, sophomore Tracy Kellerman was also victorious, again in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3.

The Lady Bluedevil's easily won all three doubles matches to ice the win.

On winning two out of three matches over the weekend, Smith stated, "I'm real pleased with the play, the girls have adjusted real well."

Looking ahead to this weekend, the netter's once again have three matches scheduled. On Friday they host Luther in a 3 p.m. match. Then another double-header on Saturday, both matches will be here at Stout. They take on Southwest State at 9 a.m., and St. Benedict's at noon.

Commenting on this weekend's competition, Coach Smith had this to say, "all three are very fine teams, this will be a good test for us."

Saturday is also Parent's Day for the Lady Blue Devils.

The netter's are scheduled to take to the road next week. On Wednesday, they travel to Eau Claire to tangle again with the Blugold's.

Stout gridders dominate conference opener; defeat UW-Superior, 35-6

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devils won their conference opener over the UW-Superior Yellowjackets by the score of 35-6.

The opening kickoff of the 1986 conference opener was received by our own Blue Devils. They began their opening drive, only to be stopped after two series of downs. This gave the Yellowjackets their first possession and on their first play from the line of scrimmage they fumbled the ball. The Blue Devils's free safety Scott Romenesko recovered the ball for Stout. This gave them a golden opportunity. An opportunity that the Blue Devils capitalized on in a hurry. This was capped by a Kyle Gunderson run of one yard, which gave Stout a 7-0 lead.

Then it was time for the Yellowjacket's offense to get going. Like most of the first half they never were out of the starting blocks. They faced the tough defensive front, lead by Wilbert Kennedy and Brandt Olsen. The Yellowjackets were quickly forced to punt. This gave the Blue Devil offense another chance to score. The Blue Devils capitalized on every opportunity, and marched in for another first quarter score. This time the drive was capped by a six yard pass from Bob Lindberg to number 86 Mark Rothwell. Another kick by Jim Gorecki opened the Blue Devils lead to 14-0.

The Blue Devil defensive line controlled the line of scrimmage for the remainder of the half and for the most part, the remainder of the game. Coach Lawerance commented on this by saying, " We went into the ball game telling our defensive line that they had to control the line of scrimmage and they did." It was this defensive effort that forced the ball to be punted by the Yellowjackets once again. This gave us another chance to score and we quickly did. Once again capped by a Lindberg pass to Mark Rothwell. This gave the Blue Devils a lead of 21-0. This ended up the scoring for the remainder of the half giving the Blue Devils a commanding halftime lead.

The second half opened with the defense on the field. The tough playing of the defense forced a punt on the Yellowjacket's opening possession. This gave the Blue Devils their first opportunity of the second half. This drive was like many before, but halfway through, Quarterback Bob Lindberg was injured on the series. The extent of his injuries are unknown, but he is probable for next week's game.

> "...they had to control the line of scrimmage and they did.
> —Rich Lawrence
> Football coach"

Like the opener, the controls of the offense were in the hands of Sean Boho. The young quarterback failed at his first attempt to push the Blue Devils in for a score. But, the defense quickly gave him another chance to lead the offense to a scoring drive. Boho took advantage of this one and marched down field with the assistance of running back Kyle Gunderson. Boho capped the drive on a 13 yard pass to Kyle Gunderson. This was followed by another kick by Gorecki, which gave the Blue Devils a lead of 28-0.

It was here that the Yellowjackets showed how a long offensive drive is done in Superior, which later lead to a score. The first play was a49 yard run by John Cyctosz followed by a 14 yard Bob Pellman pass to Dan Kelner. The point after attempt was blocked by number 90 Matt Schwab, making the score 28-6.

The remainder of the third quarter and the early part of the fourth, the Yellowjackets had drives that came close to scoring, but not close enough.This was due mostly to some fine defensive plays. This was the time of the game when our defensive secondary was challenged. But just like in the early part of the game it was the defensive effort that kept Stout in control of the game.

The Blue Devils managed to sustain one more offensive drive that eventually went in for a score. This one was capped by a 21-yard run by Sean Boho, and followed by another Gorecki kick giving the Blue Devils a final score of 35-6.

The defense did more than their share to shut down the Yellowjackets. Some of the fine defensive areas were in the line which was asked to control the line of scrimmage, and that they did. Coach Lawerance commented on various defensive areas by saying "... I felt the secondary as a whole played quite well..," Quite well probably would apply to the performance of Doug Cwidak, who recovered a fumble and intercepted two passes. Overall the line has received a lot of well deserved credit for the control of both lines of scrimmage. It is in the opinion of the staff that if the team plays with enthusiasm that they have been playing with the past two weeks, they have a chance of becoming a good football club.

Next week the UW-Stout Blue Devils will face Oshkosh at home parents week.

UW-Stout ruggers dominate Ripon, 54-5

by Slash La Freniere

Awesome. A total rout. That is what the Stout Centaurs Rugby Club did to Ripon College this past Saturday at Galloway park. The final total was 54-4 in Stout's favor with seven different players reaching the try zone. The Centaurs dominated in every aspect of the match, consistently winning the ball in scrums, rucks, and mauls.

The day started off on a bad note right away for the Ripon ruggers. The first 5 minutes of the game were played without 4 of their players. As soon as Ripon had a full side, Stout scored their first try when scrumhalf Jim McGuine rumbled in for a try from 10 meters out. McGuine had 3 more scores on the day, good for 16 total points. From that first try until the final whistle it was all Stout.

When McGuine was asked how he felt about scoring 4 tries, all that he needed was one word; "Good!"

Other players reaching the try zone for Stout were:
Tim Anderson 1 try
Brian Bohne 2 tries
Mike Hackworthy 1 try
Mark Miller 2 tries
Ed Reesman 1 try
John Wangen 1 try

Tim Anderson also converted 3 of 12 points after tries, good for 6 more points. Note: A try is good for 4 points and the kick after a try is good for 2 points.

"Considering that this was only our first game I feel that we played very well," said club president, John Wangen.

Even though the match was played on a very wet and muddy pitch, the play of the forwards and the backs was commendable. Stout controlled the ball most of the day, which helps to explain why Ripon had such a low score. With the wet conditions, players were doing various things to keep their hands clean. One player, Mark Miller, was even seen washing off his hands in a puddle.

Pat McDonnell, Stout's captain, who played the whole game with a sore knee, was a leader on the field with his intensity. McDonnell was not completely satisfied with the victory however.

"We played well Saturday, but there is room for improvement," said McDonnell. A very fitting comment, because next week the Stout Centaurs travel to the University of Minnesota for a tough match against a very good Big Ten school.

Stout's B side "Killer B's" also were victorious over Ripon on Saturday, with an 8-0 win. Scrumhalf Brad Hidle scored both tries for the Centaurs and he had a sound game overall. Needless to say, the matches and the party were unqualified successes. Stout Rugby would also like to thank all of the fans who showed up on Saturday to cheer us on to double victories.

NFL central report Bears lead

by Paul Wydeven

The Minnesota Vikings rolled over the Pittsburgh Steelers 31-7. The victory puts Minnesota second in the NFC central, only one game behind Chicago. Viking quarterback Tommy Kramer had a good day passing with three touchdowns and no interceptions. Kramer completed 19 of 27 passes for 257 yards contributing to Minnesota's offense, averaging 6.8 yards per offensive play.

The win also added some positive notes to the Vikings, one was the 24 point cushion was the largest since beating the Bears 35-7 on November 28, 1982.

The Chicago Bears beat the Green Bay Packers 25-12 in a close game last Monday night. The Packers still are having problems getting the ball into the end zone. Al Del Greco scored on four of five field goal attempts, the longest one for 50 yards which gave the Packers a 12 to 10 lead. Del Greco's last attempt for 52 yards was blocked at the line by the Bears.

The turning point in this game could have been after the Packer's Tom Flynn intercepted the ball at the Green Bay five yard line. The next play, quarterback Randy Wright stepped back into the end zone and ruled in the grasp of Steve McMichaels. Wright was grabbed by McMichaels, but then escaped as the official blew the whistle to rule a safety.

This made the score 15-12 in favor of the Bears and gave Chicago great field position after the free kick. That Bear drive ended in the end zone with a touchdown pass to rookie Keith Ortego for his first NFL touchdown.

The picks went bad this week as I was only 7-7, for a total 24-18. This week should be just as fun.

Atlanta What?

Paul Wydeven

The NFL football season is in week four, so far the talk I hear in this part of Wisconsin is the Packers are rising, the Vikings look promising, and the Bears stuggle, but win. Another hot issue discussed is the insant replay.

Then I hear talk about USFL players, who made into the NFL. Jim Kelly with the Buffalo Bills or Hershal Walker with the Dallas Cowboys. With all this information I try to pick who going to win and up till now I'm looking at 57 percent, not too good.

So I look at my past picks and see where I am going wrong. I pick the Packers in game one and two, but then I saw I picked the Atlanta Falcons to lose three times. This made for three wrong picks.

How could this happen, I looked back over the records and the Flacons were 4-12 the last two seasons. No exceptional players from the USFL or the NFL draft.

This took me back to do more research from Don Heinrich's Pro Review. The Pro Review made nasty comments of quarterback Dave Archer, after saying Dave was a tough competitor, "but then it remains to be seen whether he has the ability to be anything more than an adequate backup."

In week one the Falcons beat the New Orleans Saints 31-10, week two they won over the St. Louis Cardinals, and week they the slid by the Dallas Cowbays with only twenty seconds left in the game. Atlanta got the ball with 1:39 left on the clock with no timeouts. Dave Archer first tossed a 21-yard pass to Ken Whisenhunt. Archer's next pass came during a Cowboy blitz and was for 65-yards to Floyd Dixon, leaving Atlanta at the Dallas two yard line. The Falcon's Mick Luckhurt kicked a game winning field goal from 18 yards out.

These series of plays were over the Dallas Cowboys, a team that the Falcons have not beat in the past ten years and are 2-8 against overall. Cowboy coach Tom Landry said, "We had the game under control. But you just have to give Atlanta credit. The Falcons made the big play."

The Falcons are not looking ahead to far as veteran linebacker Buddy Curly said, " We've got to keep everything in perspective, go one week at a time, not look ahead." adding "When you have been 4-12 two years in a row, you remeber what it is like to lose."

Atlantas coach Don Henning said, "There is always a chance that if you get to the playoffs, you will have to beat them again if you want to go to the Super Bowl."

The Falcons offense came from quarterback Dave Archer, running back Gerald Riggs, wide receivers Floyd Dixon and Charlie Brown.

Archer's comments about the Dallas game were "We didn't want to leave here with the Cowboys thinking we were out of their league."

This is not to say, Atlanta is a sure shot at the playoffs, but the Falcons 3-0 with the four other 3-0 teams will make the NFL much more competitive and exciting football for the next three weeks. Atlanta's next game is against the Tampa Bay Bucaneers in Tampa.

Soccer team victorious

by Katie Keran

The UW-Stout soccer team increased it's winning record to 2-0 on Saturday. The team trounced on Northwestern College of Roseville beating them 5-0. This now makes it two games in a row that the Blue Devils have not been scored on.

Both the offense and the defense have been playing extremely well. "The No-Goal Patrol" has virtually shut down the opposition completely. Leading the "No-Goal Patrol" have been full-backs Joe Krawczyk, Kevin Thorstad, Mike Rieder, Brett Smitz, Dan Riener and the director of Stout defense, sweeper Tom "Benn-i" Benson. Making the key saves in nets have been Doug Hall and Brian Klausen.

The mid-field has also been doing an outstanding job of helping out the "No-Goal Patrol" as well as feeding the goal hungry front line. Center halfback Steve Abrahamson is quite confident about how the team has been performing. Regarding the game against Northwestern, he said, "Right from the first five minutes we knew we'd dominate the game."

Originally the Northwestern game had been scheduled for 1 p.m. on Saturday, but they didn't show up until after 3 p.m. Apparently they somehow lost their way into La Crosse. When the game finally did start, the Stout team was well-worn after scrimmaging on their own during the wait. Stout had assumed that Northwestern would not show. But they did show up and the Blue Devils showed no lack of aggressiveness. Midfielder Kevin Sheehan credited the teams complete domination to this reason, "We played extremely aggressive, Stout just did not give them any time with the ball."

The team is confident about keeping up their winning streak along with it's "No-Goal" philosophy. This should be accomplished easily if the team continues to play as "outrageous" as it has been. Bob the Cat, the team's mascot has continued to be a great booster of team confidence. In addition, mid-fielder Nate Aakre, stricken with a cold, has been giving great effort along with superior moral support. The team would like to welcome their newest to answer any questions regarding the team.

So far this year the offense has had no problem putting the ball in the net. Ken Jaslow and Dan "Boone" Nelson each had two spectacular goals against Northwestern. Also scoring a goal was Frank Lohror with a fantastic chip over the Northwestern's goalkeeper. The forwards this year are incredibly fast and have great agility. None of the defenders have been able to stop them from scoring.

Record of 7-9 after weeks play looks for stronger play

by Katie Keran

The UW Stout volleyball team experienced tough times last week. On Wed., Sept. 17 the team fell to both UW Green Bay and Stevens Point. Then they proceeded to UW Whitewater where they tied for second, but ended up getting third after losing a tie breaker.

Tuesday, Sept. 23 the Blue Devils competed against Luther College and UW Eau Claire. The Devils beat Luther, but lost their second match to Eau Claire.

Coach Linda Lee had alot to say about the Blue Devils playing. "We have not been playing at a high enough momentum." She the added, "Our inconsistency is taking away our playing power." Coach Lee is enthusiastic about the play of the freshmen coming off the bench.

Coach Lee blamed the tournament losses to Eau Claire and Whitewater on the fact that, as she said, "We rise to the occasion about one game a match."

In the Whitewater tournament, the team beat Concordia College of Chicago 15-2,15-5. They also beat Beloit College 15-3, 15-10.

Two players, Wendy Morrow and Carol Bufe had good performances at the tournament. Morrow had 18 kills during the match tournament and Bufe had 13 herself. Morrow also had six kills and five blocks in the Sept. 17 loss to Green Bay.

In the match with Stevens Point, co-captain Mish Espe had 33 assists. Coach Lee commented "Mish can set sideways, backwards and all over on the run." Adding more about Morrow, Lee said, "Wendy has been all over the net and above the net, making some great blocks."

Lee is looking forward to the rest of the season. The Blue Devils record is now 7-9. Coach Lee said they really have a lot of potential as a team when they play as a team and she added they benefit from having a lot of depth.

The young volleyball team only has three seniors, Barb Carlson from Lake Crystal, MN, Valarie DeVries from Wisconsin Dells, and Wendy Morrow from Crystal Lake, IL. Complimenting this crew of seniors are two juniors, Dawn Kreuziger and Mish Espe.

Next week, the Blue Devils are competing in the Superior Invitational on Sept. 26. Then they play Normandale and RiverFalls on Sept. 29. The next home game for the Blue Devils is Oct.7 against Northdale and Riverfalls. Looking to the near future, Coach Lee said, "I am anticipating that the team will be hitting and playing stronger."

Sensibility advised for potential dieters; health issue a key element

by Jenna Martin

"Diet," is a word heard more and more in our daily conversation. Surrounded by health magazines, I ask myself, why diet?

Good health is important. We are all aware of this. Dieting can also be both positive and negative. What are the reasons for dieting?

Some people are on diets to improve their health. The extra weight is putting a strain on them physically.

Another group simply finds themselves to be overweight. Some maybe are, some are not. What, however, is overweight? What is the right weight? What one person sees as overweight, another can view as being "just right."

Competition is yet another reason we diet. Competition can really play with a person's mind. Our society thrives on this. Everyone wants to be the best.

This attitude can also apply to weight. I see this game going on everyday at Stout. Who's the thinnest? Are they more thin then I am? The pressure surrounding you can force one to diet.

Attention is another factor. Maybe we feel lost in the crowd. By losing weight we feel it will get us noticed.

Fashion also influences us. Who wants to bulge in a pair of skin clinging stirrups or tights? How awful if our stomach shows in our sweater dress. Who wants their beer gut to hang out over their pants?

As I've said, dieting can be both positive and negative. I'm not here to give you a magical solution but, if you feel you must diet, why not go about it sensibly?

Doctor prescribed diets are probably the best option for those wanting to lose a substantial amount of weight. They can help you monitor your weight loss safely.

For those of us who just feel the need to lose weight, please do so sensibly. When asked how much we want to lose, many of us don't even know. Until we can't lose anymore? Until we feel good about ourselves?

Some have a goal to begin with and then are so proud of themselves they decide to press on, losing more.

I don't feel dieting should mean meal skipping, diet pills, or fad diets. I, myself, am a believer of eating three meals a day. I try to eat as healthy as I can.

This, to me, doesn't involve total elimination of alcohol and sweets either. At the end of a long week, I like to feel I can treat myself, without going overboard. The motto to my roommates and I live by is "What are weekends for?"

Are you aware of the theory that the more diets you go on, the lower your metabolism becomes and the less food you need to maintain your size?

There are several theories out there. Some of them even contradict each other. I'm not telling you which are right and which are wrong.

My intentions are not to judge your diet methods or to tell you what is the "proper" way to go about it.

I don't have all the answers. I'm no perfectionist when it comes to dieting. I play the game, I am aware of my faults. I do want you to realize that dieting has become a way of life.

Are you playing the dieting game? Are you playing it safe? Have you considered the long term effects of your diet or only the short term?

Many of us may feel healthy right now. How will we feel, however, when those nutrients we've been lacking cause harm to our bodies later on in life?

What are your reasons for dieting? Are you going about it positively or negatively? What are you doing to your health?

Why do you diet? Think about it, our health is important. Don't forget, it stays with us forever.

Walk for Life marches through Menomonie

by Rhonda Olson

The Dunn County Chapter of the Wisconsin Right to Life, Inc. sponsored a "Walk for Life" which passed through the University of Wisconsin-Stout campus on its way around Menomonie on Saturday, September 27. Approximately 50 men, women and children participated. They carried signs made by the children.

The walk began at the Faith Lutheran Church, located at 2117 Stout Road in Menomonie.

The main purpose for the walk, according to Pastor Jim Folz, of the Oak Ridge Brethren Church and organizer of the march, was to "create an awareness of the tragedy taking place in the United States and to influence people's attitudes."

Also, approximately $1,200 in pledge money was raised for the Pro-Life Chapter. The money will be used for Pro-Life brochures which cover topics such as fetal development, language used in the Pro-Choice argument and information about abortion in general. Pledge money will also be used for other educational purposes including speakers, films and texts to be donated to libraries.

Folz explained his reasons for being Pro-Life. He said "Abortion is killing humans and it denies a basic right to individuals." Folz explained that abortion is a denial of rights guaranteed by the Constitution; in his view it prevents the "opportunity of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Referring to those who chose abortion, Folz said "The women have a choice to be sexually active and to use birth control. When a woman is pregnant, she has another individual to consider. We're not talking about removing tumors. The vast majority of abortions are strictly a matter of convenience."

Saturdays walk, which began at the Faith Lutheran Church on Stout Road, was planned to be five miles.

Planning for the walk was minimal. The basic jobs were accomplished with little encouragement needed. "The walk will be successful because of people's participation." said Folz. "Thank God there are people who are willing to stand up for what they believe to be right. They don't just sit back passively."

Carol Banks, a participant in the march is a Stout senior majoring in Vocational Rehabilitation. She said "The main purpose for my involvement is to promote the preservation of life."

Another Stout student participating was Tom Coates, a junior majoring in Vocational Rehabilitation. "Many facts of abortion are left unheard," said Coates, "Women still die from legal abortions, due to complications. The long-term results are serious."

"There are high rates of miscarriages and sterility," Coates claimed. "After the first abortion, the ability to become pregnant again is reduced to 70 percent; after the second, 30 percent; and with the third abortion there is a chance of sterility."

Greg Plantz, a photo-copy service technician from Colfax, said "Abortion is murder. Most women who have abortions aren't aware of the consequences. They don't realize that the child is well-developed, not a blob. The child is aware and feeling. Just because the baby can't be seen doesn't mean abortion is acceptable."

Bridget Plantz, age 10, one of the many children involved, walked with her two sisters, Michelle, age 12 and Nora, age 8. When asked what they thought the walk was for, Bridget replied "It's for people

Bash on the Grass planned; Homecoming's non-alcohol event

by Joan Janson

The first annual "Bash on the Grass" is scheduled to kick off at 3:30 p.m. on October 18th, after the homecoming football game. The Stout Student Association (SSA) is sponsoring the non-alcohol event as a positive alternative to traditional revelry. Christa Sanicola, chairperson of the University Programming Board and SSA President Paul D. Nelson have taken on the duties of planning and organizing the event.

The Bash will take place in a large circus tent, 125 feet by 40 feet wide. It will be located on the grounds south of the Memorial Student Center. A stage will be set up along one end.

Campus organizations have been invited to sponsor food and activities which will line one of the long sides of the tent.

A variety of food items will be available including brats, popcorn, baked potatoes, corn dogs, and beef and vegetable shish kebabs. Commemorative mugs will be filled with soft drinks. Organizations are sponsoring events such as a dunk tank, dart throwing, computerized photographs, a car smash, a cow chip throwing contest and a pie eating contest.

The field house has been reserved in case of rain. Fourth Street will be closed during the event to allow room for service vehicles and utilities to reach the tent.

According to SSA President Nelson "The Administration told us we could expect to draw 5,000 (people), but we feel that is a very conservative estimate."

Although it is predicted that "Bash on the Grass" will be a success, the picture was not as colorful two weeks ago as it seems to be now. As evidence of the lack of communication between the university and the city, the Chamber of Commerce had been planning an Oktoberfest to occur on the same weekend as homecoming, and the "Bash on the Grass."

The plans for the Chamber's Oktoberfest had been in the works for over a year. The event was to occur in Wilson Park with a beer tent featuring Hibernia's

Libya sells Fiat stock

Libya has sold out its 14 percent share in the Italian automobile manufacturing company, Fiat, for a substantial profit. The Libyans sold their shares for about $3 billion. This brought them more than seven times the $400 million they had paid for their share of Fiat in 1976.

At the time of the Libyan purchase, Fiat suffered from severe losses and labor problems. In 1982, after diversifying their operations, the company made a startling turnaround. After the Libyan sale was announced, officials of Fiat and the country of Italy expressed their relief at losing the unattractive business partner.

AIDS drug test

A large-scale test of the first drug that appears to reduce the symptoms of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

The FDA has approved an application submitted by Burroughs Wellcome Co. to classify azidothymidine (AZT) as a treatment investigational new drug. The antiviral drug seems to temporarily improve health and prolong the lives among patients with AIDS, but it is not seen as a potential cure.

Bill increases drug penalties

On Sept. 30, the Senate gave overwhelmeing approval to a measure intended to combat illegal drugs. The election-year legislation passed with a 97-2 vote.

The House also approved a similar bill. Both versions include beefed-up enforcement programs that would make greater use of the military in preventing the importation of illicit drugs into the United States.

Defense Secretary Weinberger labeled the language of the House bill as absurd. The role of the military in helping to prevent the flow of drugs into the country has been heavily debated.

In order to ensure quick passage of the bill, a provision which would have imposed the death penalty for persons convicted of large-scale drug sales was dropped from both versions of the bill, even though the House had voted approval of the provision.

A House-Senate conference committee will try to reconcile differences quickly in order to get the legislation passed and sent to President Reagan before adjournment.

Shooting linked to war on drugs

Lawyers of a Sauk-Prairie police officer claim the man believed he was a federal agent carrying out the will of President Reagan in his war on drugs when he shot a handcuffed drug suspect on Sept. 16.

Officer John Mueller is accused of the execution-style shooting of John P. Graham after arresting him for suspected possession of marijuana.

The shooting occured two days after Ms. Reagan, in a televised talk said: "For the sake of our children, I implore each of you to be unyielding and inflexible in your opposition to drugs."

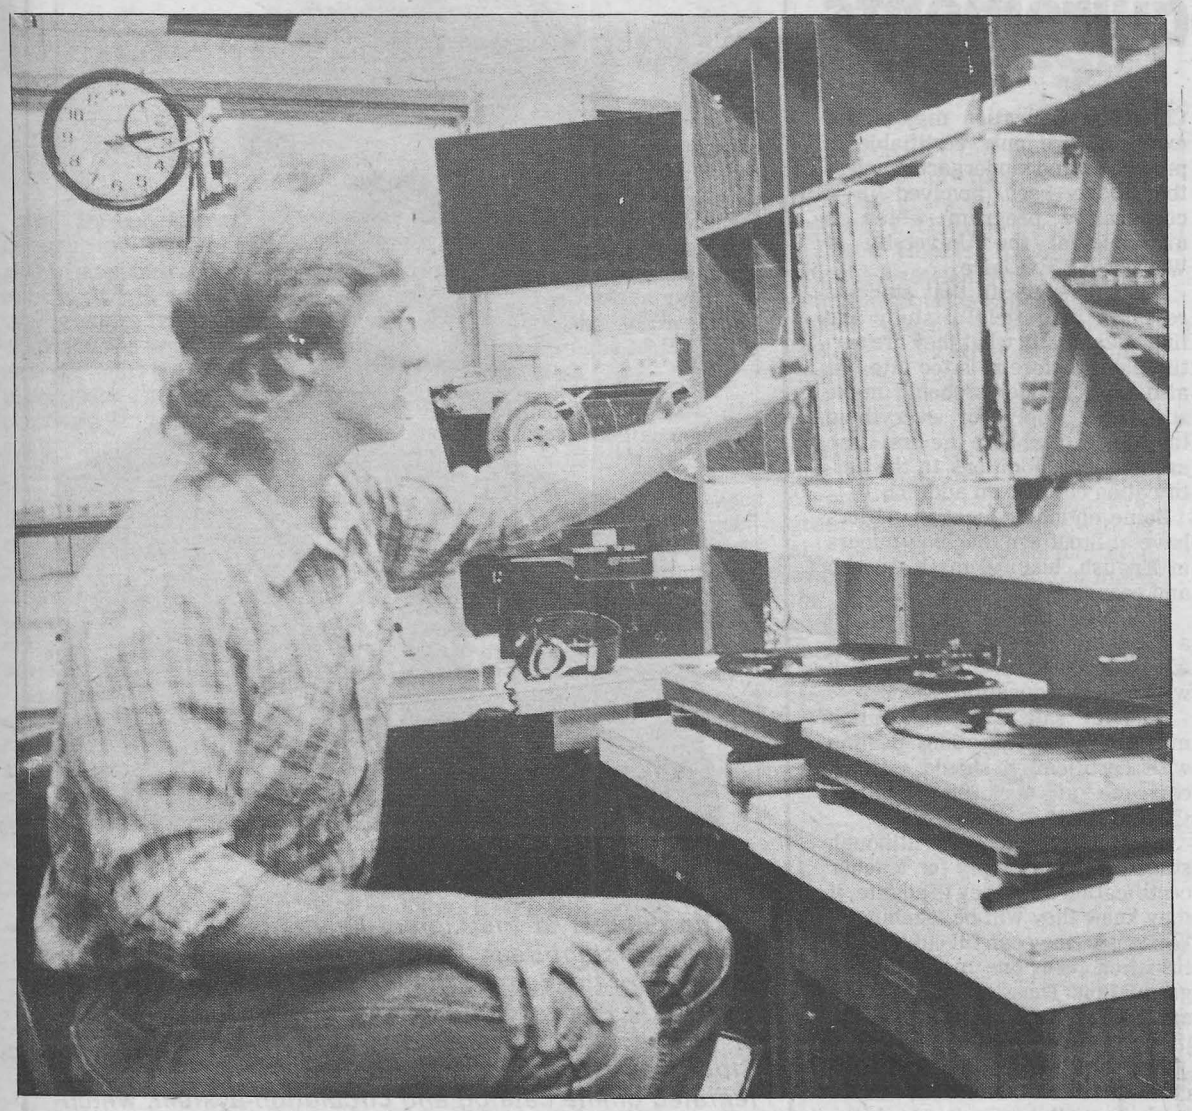
WVSS going cable with new format



Bill Hermes selects a record to play over the air at WVSS, UW-Stout's campus radio station. Hermes, a senior, is one of the Stout students who act as disc jockeys for the station. The broadcast originates from facilities in the basement of the Communications Building at Stout. All of the student disc jockeys have taken a semester course titled Radio Productions Management. (Stoutonia photo by Brian J. Pook)

by Karen Smith

The University of Wisconsin-Stout radio station, WVSS 91 FM, is changing the way it serves the campus. They will be going from a broadcast station which serves the local area to a facility which uses a cable format. After the change to cable, WVSS will be piped into the campus residence halls and also over the local cable television station. In this way, they hope to improve their reception.

WVSS is a non-profit radio station run by Stout students.

Results from a listener survey taken earlier in 1986 indicated to the station's management that women were not listening to the station. Brad Knigge, student manager of WVSS, explained that the survey indicated a need for a change in the music format, as well. "The survey showed that the last thing women listen to is hard rock, which is mainly what WVSS plays," said Knigge.

Changes in the music format at WVSS include adding a lot of pop music and not allowing disc jockeys to pick all the songs they want to hear, as had been done in the past.

Instead, songs will be picked from a list of the most popular 100 songs in the nation. Knigge mentioned that this would help because the disc jockeys will have to play similar sounds. Yet, students operating the station will still have a chance to play some music of their choice.

"We're not going to a top 40 station in any way," Knigge said. Pointing out that the change has already affected the station, he stated "The quality has already improved from last year."

Chris Dagget, a disc jockey at WVSS, thinks the change will be beneficial. "The music will be better updated," Dagget said. "We should know what the students want to listen to."

Soon everyone with cable and Cablevision will be able to hear WVSS. Ace Matthews, general manager of WVSS states that 75 percent of the students who live off-campus, subscribe to the local cable television channel. Matthews also said that 95 percent of the residence hall residents are already able to pick up the cable channel.

With the change to cable, WVSS will also be able to sell commercials. They expect to make enough money to eventually become self-sustaining.

Up to now, the funding has come from Stout Student Association (SSA). SSA Vice-President of Financial Affairs, Gary Harder, said that he thinks SSA would still have to fund WVSS after the change.

"SSA funds WVSS $5,200 a year," Harder said. "I can't see them funding themselves, at least for the next two years."

WVSS will have a two-year trial period to see if the change is beneficial. They will play classical music on 91 FM to maintain possession of their frequency. That way, if the experiment fails, they will still be able to go back to their frequency.

Brad Knigge also mentioned that WVSS will continue to add compact discs to their disc library. Knigge said that WVSS' main objective is to make students aware of the change in their format.

Druids protest with paper waste; administration explains lab fees

by Dale Bohnert

At 2:15 p.m. Tuesday, September 23, a computer printer in the University of Wisconsin-Stout Library Learning Center Campus Computing Lab (CCL) received a command to run 16,100 sheets of computer paper headed by a demonstration letter.

If not for the actions of a lab assistant on duty who stopped the form feed command, the printer would have continued to send the thousands of unused sheets onto the floor. Wasted. An anonymous informer claimed that he sent the command on behalf of a group called the "Druids" to protest a new policy to charge fees for paper used in the CCL.

Shortly after the "Druids" protest action occurred, Joe Jax, Director of the Library Learning Center and Marilyn Mars, assistant to Stout's Dean of Learning Resources met with Paul D. Nelson, president of the Stout Student Association (SSA) to discuss concerns associated with the CCL. The primary topic of the meeting was how and why the new fees for printing services were established.

The CCL was opened in 1985 to provide all Stout students and faculty access to computer resources. Jax explained, however, that no budget was alloted for supplies such as paper, ribbons, and printer cartridges for the lab.

Jax said that through reallocations of state revenue funding last Spring, money was made available for purchasing supplies for the lab. The materials were assumed sufficient for the 1986-87 academic year.

Jax went on to explain, however, that due to unexpected increased use of the CCL over the summer, those supplies were greatly diminished. Phil Schwarz, supervisor of the CCL, estimated that "Our experience over the last summer was such that we would have exhausted our printer and ribbon supplies by the end of February of 1987."

Jax said that the only option to closing the lab when supplies ran out was instituting fees to cover supply costs. From various alternatives, using Materials Purchase Cards was chosen. "We knew this would not be very popular," said Jax, "We're still hoping to find a better solution."

Mars explained that fee rates for printing were derived by obtaining the costs and life expectancies of printer materials, standard deferred-maintenance rates, and administrative costs. Those expenses were then divided among the average number of reproductions they would cover.

Therefore, the charge that users pay for each sheet is a sum of fees for numerous items. Jax stated, "It's the printing service we're charging for, not the paper."

Fees for printing services range from $.05 per printed output page for Epson and Decwriter printers to $.10 per sheet for Letter Quality and Laser Jet Printers. Jax explains that the differences in price exist due to differences in quality

Teacher Ed. Director passes on teacher certification requirements

by E. Erickson

Caution all education majors: Big Brother is watching over you.

But, in this case at least, "Big Brother" is an ally to help make sure certification requirements are met for teacher licensure.

Harlyn Misfeldt, director of the Office of Teacher Education, is the University of Wisconsin-Stout's Certifying Officer for students enrolled in education majors.

In fact, he is the one Stout official authorized to endorse Stout graduates for teacher certification.

"Anything that comes through the university dealing with teacher certification crosses my desk," Misfeldt said. "I make sure it gets to the appropriate department." Yet, a majority of his time is spent actually making sure students filling out teacher-certification forms are actually certifiable to teach.

Students applying for teacher-certification obtain forms from Misfeldt or the Department of Public Instruction (DPI). They must attach a $50 processing fee payable to the D.P.I. with the application when they return it to him.

Misfeldt said "Many students send the form straight to the Department of Public Instruction in Madison." This is incorrect, however, and will only delay the process, since Madison sends the applications back to Misfeldt.

The DPI will not accept transcripts marked "Issued to Students."

Instead, Misfeldt must be the person who receives the transcript from the Registrar's Office. He then reviews all requirements to insure they are fulfilled for certification. Any areas the student is not authorized to teach are automatically crossed off.

The student certification application is then sent to the state DPI office for final approval.

Once Misfeldt has endorsed the application and sent the form to Madison, the applicant is generally certified.

"The biggest problem that occurs is when people think they can be certified in one or two days. It generally takes four to six weeks to certify a student," Misfeldt said.

The busiest times for certification approval are the end of summer and the end of the first and second semesters. "This can be a double-edged sword, however, because a person doesn't want to get certified before they have a job. For each state a person gets certified in, it costs a fee. So, if you get certified in Wisconsin and find a teaching job in Minnesota, you've just wasted that fee."

Misfeldt generally feels students are well-informed before they fill out their certifications. However, some students are not aware of what they are certifiable in. He cited a recent graduate in Early Childhood Education who applied for certification in kindergarten through eighth grade. Early Childhood Education majors, for example, are only certifiable in pre-school and kindergarten unless they have been involved in a cooperative program which is available at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire.

Misfeldt suggests that students research their field of study and find out actually what they are certifiable in before it is too late. He also said "Students should make sure they apply for everything they're certifiable in the first time around. Any additions to the certification cost $50 an addition."

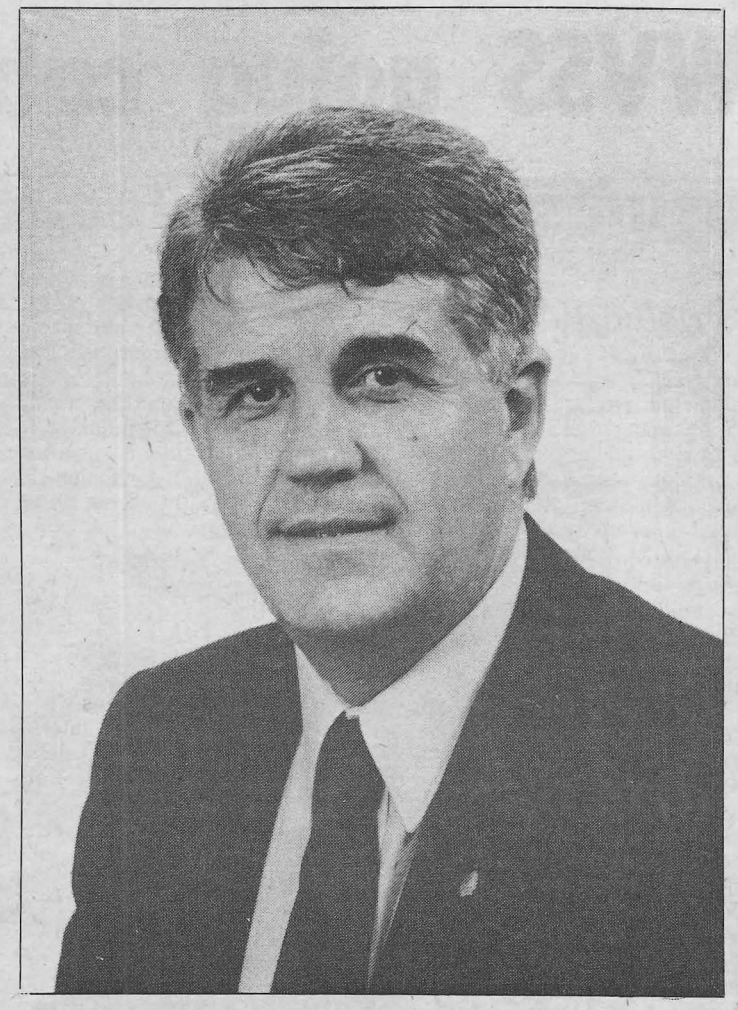
Some options education majors have at Stout are teaching minors in English, history, math, speech and economics.

Education majors may also add a Special Fields Certification which authorizes them to work with special education teachers.

Misfeldt said "Any education major who has questions dealing with certification should visit or call me at my (Stout) office (X-1088)."

He also suggested that, although students cannot apply for teacher certification until they graduate, if they know they will be teaching in Wisconsin, they can fill out the certification form one month before graduation. These students should ask to put their certification applications in a "hold" pile.

This will insure that when it comes to certification, these students will be in front of the line...or would "front of the class" be more appropriate?



Jax receives honors—

The director of the Library Learning Center at UW-Stout, Assistant Dean John J. Jax, has been named the Librarian of the Year by the Wisconsin Library Association (WLA). Jax was commended by the WLA for advancing new technology at Stout's facility. Under Jax, Stout was the first academic library to install an integrated online catalog and circulation system, which we call ALIS. (ITS photo)

Locke communicates use of Indian sign language

by Cosmas A. Whitten

Traveling hundreds of miles across the United States one never fully appreciates the luxury of communication. When a person pulls into nearly any filling station, the attendants understand the language. People communicate with ease.

An appreciation for communication is what Standing Rock Sioux tribe member, Kevin Locke, instilled into the minds of the audience on Saturday afternoon, September 26, in the Mabel Tainter Theater.

Locke's main emphasis was to teach the audience Indian sign language and the importance this form of communication had thousands of years ago. He also reflected on the importance sign language could have in the future.

According to Locke, thousands of years ago Woodland and Plains Indians developed a sign language that could be used to communicate between different tribes that did not speak the same languages. The language consists of large sweeping motions that can be easily seen from a distance.

There are approximately 3,000 signs in Indian sign language. Most signs begin with the hand near the heart and, from there, the hand moves outward in different ways, indicating many different meanings.

> "Six to seven.... languages die out in a year
> —Kevin Locke"

The Indian sign language is simple and, according to Locke, can be mastered in two weeks. What Locke does not understand is that the hearing impaired sign language was totally reinvented and that it is not internationally understandable between countries. "It's like reinventing the wheel," commented Locke.

Locke speaks fluent English and Sioux. He said that he feels the language a person speaks effects the way a person's mind thinks.

In the language of the Sioux, Locke explained, a different word can be more effective in describing something just by changing the prefix it follows.

The average person, speaking in Sioux, needs to know 15,000 to 20,000 words to effectively communicate. An English-speaking person needs to know only 5,000 words to get by in a lifetime.

In his presentation, Locke claimed that the English language is more complex than others and is more difficult to learn. Locke suggested that a person page through a dictionary to prove this point.

Locke told the audience that there are 3,000 different languages spoken on earth. North America has greater linguistic diversity then all other places in the world combined, he said.

Unlike the Wisconsin Winnebago tribe located in Osseo, who are noted for retaining their language by keeping up a close kinship, "six to seven American Indian languages die out in a year, and more are doomed," said Locke. He feels it is very important to preserve the ancient Indian sign language before it dies out as well.

In the future, Locke said that humankind will have to adapt to a new life-style, as more international travels and relations occur. He suggests that governments agree on a language "for the exact same reason the Indians did."

In addition to the sign language workshop at Mabel Tainter Theater, Locke performed a traditional hoop dance and played the Lakato courting flute. An evening dinner, featuring Native American cuisine, was prepared by the Stout Food Service staff and the Rainbow Organization, a multi-cultural student group from the Stout campus.

Oktoberfest beer, polka bands in the band shell, as well as German food and local arts and crafts for sale.

A spokesperson for the Oktoberfest said "It's too bad we underestimated the opposition from the university. We were trying to put together an event to draw all kinds of people from Menomonie and the surrounding communities. We're just going to have to work harder to get it to happen next year."

When asked how the change in the drinking age could affect Oktoberfest, a planning committee member said that they had intended to draw from such a broad base that it would not have had much of an affect. "It's time the university provided an example of how students can drink in a social non-destructive manner," said the committee member. "They (the university) are burying their heads in the sand and treating alcohol consumption like Prohibition," the member continued, "They aren't helping students to learn how to handle themselves by ignoring and denying the problem."

"Bash on the Grass" will be happening on October 18th; Oktoberfest will not. SSA has set aside $4,000 of its unallocated account to produce "Bash on the Grass," leaving $1000 in this discretionary fund.

Design Research Program assists businesses with product redesign

by Kristen Bailey

The Design Research Center, through the Design Focus Program, has sponsored a new service open to area businesses. The service provides teams of University of Wisconsin-Stout students who analyze current and potential markets for a product, explore new processes and technologies, and study human needs related to potential product areas.

The students are divided into teams to perform different tasks of the project. The teams also generate alternative product concepts for new markets, develop product illustrations and produce design drawings for potential development.

The Center program benefits manufacturers who will profit from product redesign. The students who participate in the program also benefit from the experience.

The Design Research Center was generated primarily to satisfy an educational need for students to work with professional designers on real problems. The Center can also be a resource for industry to use to address problems resulting from societal and technological change that it might otherwise be unable to address.

The first project tackled by the Design Research Center concerned the needs of the elderly.

The students involved completed a bathroom redesign for the elderly and disabled. Five teams worked on the problems encountered when using the present facilities.

The teams are made up of advanced level students from a variety of study areas. The excellence of the design program is built on a special faculty relationship where the fine artist and the designer share in the educational preparation of the design student.

Run through the Stout Art Department, the program is operated on an experimental basis through a grant from the University Faculty Research Program.

To be eligible, manufacturers must be located in Wisconsin. Only one-time requests will be honored; repeat requests will be directed toward private professional designers.

In the future, the program will be looking at living facilities of the disabled. The teams will redesign parking facilities, door widths, counter heights and so on. Program organizers also hope to be able to solve problems for those with specific handicaps and make the Design Research Center an exciting and valuable asset to Stout and its students.

Careers for all

All Stout students, freshmen to seniors, who want to broaden their career horizons or expect to gain employment after their graduation from the university, are urged to attend the annual Career Conference on Oct. 8 and 9.

Approximately 80 companies will have booths set up in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center on Wednesday, Oct. 8. That day, the hall will be devoted to the fields of business, industry, technology and child and family development.

On Thursday, Oct. 9, the Great Hall will be filled with the booths of 60 companies involved primarily in the hospitality industry.

A good share of the companies have set up interview schedules while they are on campus or later in the semester. Many students have found employment through the Career Conference for internships, summer jobs and full-time work.

Aid bill in works

A bill which would increase student grants and loans while imposing tougher eligibility standards is expected to pass in both houses of Congress before the current session ends.

The Higher Education Act of 1965 requires reauthorization every five years. The current bill expires at the end of September. A conference committee has approved a compromise version of the bill, which reconciles differences between versions adopted by the House and Senate.

Congressman Steve Gunderson, a member of the House-Senate conference committee, said the bill "...will help many students because it increases the maximum size of loans and grants and recognizes the growing force of the non-traditional student who may be older and attending school only part-time."

Some provisions of the bill are:

- Setting two years of self-sufficiency as a criteria for independence and the age of independence at 24.
- Excluding financial aid from income when determining eligibility for other federal aid programs, such as food stamps.
- Increases in the maximum amount available to students through the Guaranteed Student Loan program.

Steam lines installed

Traffic through the city of Menomonie along Broadway will be detoured around the construction site of a steam line linking the north campus facilities to the central utility system of UW-Stout beginning Thursday, Oct. 2.

This construction process, which will be accomplished in two phases, will link steam, electric and telecommunication services between the two parts of campus. The change is expected to reduce Stout's annual utility bills by about $170,000. Funding for the $1.2 million project comes from the Auxiliary Services, which is supported by fees from areas such as residence halls and food service.

Polling concerns

Stout Student Association President Paul D. Nelson has been given a place on the agenda of the Oct. 6 Menomonie City Council meeting. He will be speaking on the issue of inconsistencies in the placement of polling places for the upcoming general election in November.

Nelson is raising this issue because he feels that some students at Stout have less access to polling places than the spirit of the law currently allows.

Student reps appointed by SSA Senators

by Kelly Cohorst

Stout Student Association (SSA) President Paul D.Nelson announced at the SSA meeting on Tuesday that "Bash in the Grass is going very well." He reported that a $500 dollar donation from the Alumni would go toward the rent on the tent for the affair.

A memorandum sent to Nelson asked for nominations to a committee which will appoint a new Dean for the School of Education and Human Services. The position was recently left vacant by the resignation of Dr. David Sabatino.

Vice-President of Academic Affairs, Julie Weiss, was appointed to the search and screen committee as the SSA representitive.

A motion was passed by the Senate appointing Michael Thibado to represent the Guidance and Counseling program to the Graduate Student Advisory Council for the remainder of the 1986-87 Academic School year. Leslie Lundquist was appointed to the Council to represent the Education Guidance and Counseling program.

David Asp and James Falkofske were appointed to the Computer Laboratories Advisory Coordinating Committee for the 1986-87 Academic School year. These positions were opened up to students as a result of a meeting between SSA officials and library administrators.

Andy Previn, Off-Campus Senator, recently resigned because of time commitments. Previn's resignation left a vacancy on the Finance Committee of the SSA, which is the committee which makes funding decisions.

Mark Kruger, who was appointed to Previn's seat last week, was also appointed to the Finance Committee, this week, for the remainder of the 17th congress.

Under his report, Robb Zimdars, United Council Director announced that several people had submitted that they would like to attend the Leadership Conference in Green Lake. The event is sponsored by the United Council, the state-wide student government association of the University of Wisconsin-system.

Zimdars said that he interviewed those who had submitted applications and that it was very difficult to make a decision amongst them. Only seven Stout representatives could participate.

Aref Khatib, one of those chosen by Zimdars to attend the Leader-who have babies who want abortions."

Mary Schlosser, a housewife and high school teacher from Menomonie said "We're walking for life. Dunn County as a whole appears to be Pro-Life. The chapter is not a dynamic one because people in general are complacent."

Another organizer of the march was Lynn Fekete, a teacher at St. Joe's Catholic School. "The main reason for involvement in the walk is to increase public awareness and membership of the local chapter. We're not concerned with how the pregnancy happened, but what follows. We will do anything for a teenager to help prevent an abortion."

Many different religious denominations take part in the Dunn County Right to Life chapter. Due to the various religious stands, the chapter leaders declined to take a stand on the issue of access to contraceptives.

Some people who participated in the walk work with the Crisis Pregnancy Center (CPC), located at 444 South Broadway in Menomonie. Counseling is available at the CPC for any woman who needs help. The Pro-Life people and the Crisis Pregnancy Center work hand-in-hand to assist women in need.

A hot dog feed was held at the Faith Lutheran Church upon the walkers' return. Prizes to be awarded based on the highest dollar pledge totals included a 10-speed bike and Walkman radios. In a statement following the information about the prizes on the pledge sheet was the following statement: "We are walking because we believe in the vital importance of our cause; that all people have the right to live."

and speed of printing. "Ten cents sounds high per sheet," said Jax, "But when you consider the quality and speed of printing done, well, you have to pay for that."

Mars also explained that the lab operates on a 128 account which she describes as "a non-auxiliary, self-sustaining account which requires that all expenditures must be recaptured through the rate schedule."

Jax, in simpler terms, said, "We are not allowed to make a profit with 128 accounts," and added that running in deficit is also forbidden.

Alternative charging procedures were also discussed at the meeting between Library administrators and SSA representatives.

"If you had your druthers," Nelson asked Jax, "what way would you like to take care of the expenditures in the future?"

Jax replied that a segregated fee administered to all students and faculty allowing them unlimited access to the CCL "would be the most trouble-free." He explained, however, that the procedure for gaining university and state approval would take at least a year.

After hearing the position of the Library Learning Center administrators, Nelson said that he feels the fee "is probably the fairest route to choose when you consider the alternatives-- one of which is closing the computer labs on campus."

As a result of the meeting, an advisory committee to the CCL has created two positions open to Stout students. Contact your SSA representatives in their office on the ground floor of the Memorial Student Center.

Student reactions to the new fee policy and alternate charging proposals vary. The "Druids" said in their letter of protest "This is not right, there has to be an alternative," in regards to the fee for services. The anonymous informer said that plans for further protest will be carried out if the policies at the CCL are not changed.

Greg Herbert, a CCL lab assistant, said that he feels charging a fee was the right thing to do. "Something had to be done," said Herbert, "They had no choice."

Brad Higar, a Stout senior, said, "I think it's a little ridiculous. I thought the charge was included in tuition."

Melanie Wright, also a Stout senior, said that a segregated fee "would be unfair to those who own their own computers and printers."

Later, Khatib stated that he had not submitted his name and that he had not been interviewed by Zimdars. Khatib also said that he was aware of a person who had submitted that they were interested in attending and that they had never been called for an interview.

Vice-President of Legislative Affairs Mark Nickels reported that he and his committee are registering students to vote in the upcoming elections. A table has been set up on the Cobblestone Court on the ground floor of the Memorial Student Center where students can stop and register.

Opinions

Editorial

Town/gown relations reflect improvement

Life in a college town often features a natural disaffection between the residents and the college students. Lately, action has taken place which indicates the readiness of the Menomonie community and the UW-Stout community to work together.

Encouraged by the prospect of the Bash In The Grass to take place Homecoming weekend, Menomonie's Downtown Promotion Committee looked into having Octoberfest in conjuction with the Homecoming festivities.

The Stout Student Association notified Mayor Charles Stokke and Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Duane Bauer of their concerns about the non-alcoholic Bash In The Grass having to compete with Octoberfest festivities which included the serving of beer.

Recognizing that the Octoberfest program during the Bash In the Grass program created too much conflict, the Downtown Promotion Committee decided to table the proposed Octoberfest on Homecoming Weekend.

The idea of having Octoberfest in conjuction with the Bash In The Grass ought to be applauded because it was intended to bring the Stout community together with the Menomonie community.

Mayor Stokke along with Duane Bauer, Police Chief Dennis Beety and Alderman Jay Schroeder deserve thanks for their part in seeing to it that the Octoberfest did not end up competing with the Bash In The Grass.

There are several programs which effectively bring Stout students together with the Menomonie community. Kinship is one such program set up through the United Way of Dunn County for qualified college students to spend at least one day each week with area children, much along the lines of the Big Brother program.

The United Way of Dunn County campaign is another way that Stout students, faculty, staff and administrators can work with the community to achieve a goal that is beneficial to everyone.

The Budweiser UW-Stout Vets Club Speed Run is designed to work for the first time ever in conjuction with the Menomonie Winter Carnival. The hope is to bring the Stout community together with Menomonie residents and businesses to enjoy the event.

These projects share an earnest attempt at getting the Stout community working effectively with the Menomonie community. We applaud these efforts and look forward to more to come.

Cryptic Notes

The boxer rebellion

Tim Hopkins

I have noticed how easily we all become boxers while we hate being boxed.

When you are on the outside, the biggest box created for you results from your response to the question, "What do you do for a living?" The response, "I'm unemployed," often creates the emotional reaction, "So this person has not got much to offer."

People tend to react poorly to your saying, "I'm a valet parker." Valet parking is a well paid profession when you work in a big city and the job offers many intangible rewards.

A lady picked up on me in the Bennigans Tavern located just beneath the Westin Oaks Hotel in Houston. I always dressed well going to and from work and that is probably what threw her off.

This lady worked for an employment agency and when she learned I was a valet parker she treated me as though I had leprosy. I guess she was doing her best to be a female maggot but she would not lower herself to maggoting on a valet parker. You have got to draw the line somewhere.

Sometimes, people box you according to age although they have not the slightest idea how old you are. I will fondly remember the experience I had talking to a young lady, 21 years old, at Summerfest this year. We were getting along well until she asked my age.

When I told her I was 32 years old, she nearly fell off her stool. Her friendship for me quickly dissolved. It became clear she never contemplated talking to a 32 year-old when our discussion began. I had rapidly changed from popular to unpopular because of a factor over which I have no control, unless I choose to end my life.

Since I am 32, I don't experience the sort of problems suffered by traditional Stout students. My age allows me to be treated as though I am merely a Menomonie resident. Stout students who fall in the more traditional age range of 18 to 25 years old complain of discrimination they allege is practiced against them because they are boxed in the Stout student category.

Check cashing policies are questioned. Many students believe Menomonie police go out of their way to give Stout students a difficult time. Menomonie's sound ordinance has been a controversial topic of discussion for years. Students complain about parking fines and the fact that if the fines are not paid within 48 hours the amount of the fine doubles.

As the students object about Menomonie Police putting all Stout students in the same box, the students put Menomonie Police in an anti-student box.

From discussions with Police Chief Dennis Beety, I know the department desires a positive relationship with Stout students. A link of communication between Stout students and Menomonie Police ought to be created.

Then the members of each of these groups will have the chance to discuss and share ideas in such a way that misunderstandings can be aired out. Each group should grow to understand the perspective of the other in such a way that the two groups need not be confrontational.

If you have a complaint about the way you are treated here, don't just return to your friends and tell them how badly you feel. Take the time to understand the problem. Learn whom you have to approach with your concerns. Before you approach the other party, do your best to understand the problem from their perspective. You may well discover that this other person you viewed as an enemy will turn out to be a friend after you work to resolve the situation.

We all use boxes which set up artificial barriers between people although these boxes rarely have any basis in fact. Boxing is merely the simplest way of categorizing people without trying to communicate with them.

It is about time in Menomonie that the traditional boxes that have been separating people for years, be torn down so we can begin communicating in such a manner that we begin to recognize and work to achieve common goals.

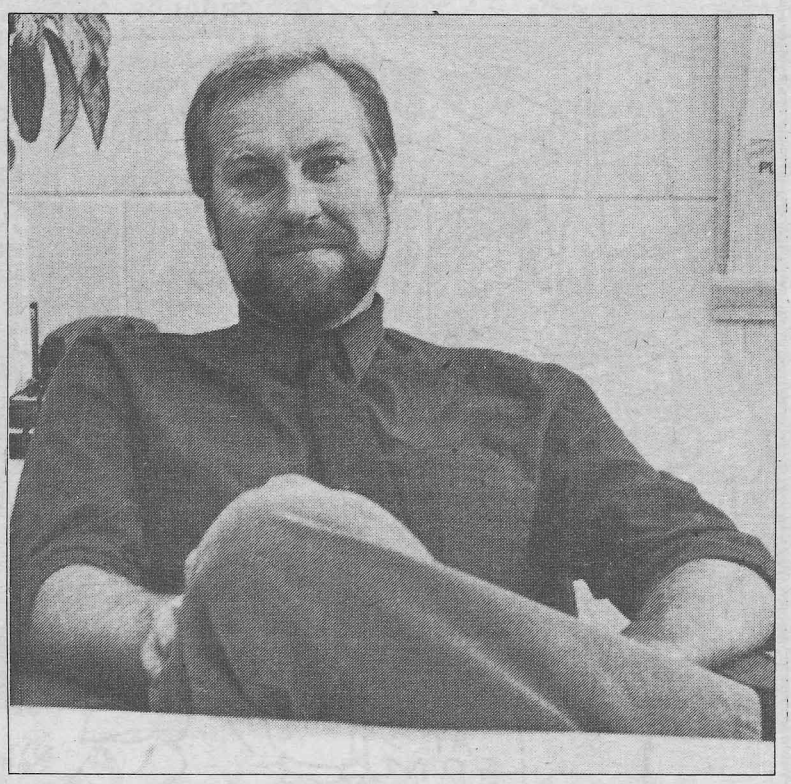
Subject: Art department bolstered by diversity; experiences major enrollment increase

by Karen M. Heagle



Gene Bloedern is chairman of the art department here at Stout. He has held that position since 1982. This title includes being director of the Design Research Center. Bloedern has been at Stout since 1971.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS YOUR BACKGROUND IN ART?

BLOEDERN: It's been a long round about trip. First I had to get a bachelors degree in art, and then I worked in business for a year. Then I received a teaching certificate and taught high school for three years, and then I got my master's degree in studio art.

STOUTONIA: WHAT DIRECTION DO YOU SEE THIS ART DEPARTMENT GOING IN TERMS OF ENROLLMENT?

BLOEDERN: The department is going extremely well with enrollment this year. This is the first year we've really had to put a stop to it. We've gone over our target. I see that we're going to be faced with that problem more and more in the future. It's a very popular program.

STOUTONIA: WHAT ARE THE PARTICULAR STRENGTHS OF THE PROGRAM?

BLOEDERN: Some of the strengths of the program are number one, the diversity. You have all these things in one department; fine arts, art education, and applied design areas. I think another strength in the design areas is they have a core in studio courses so we're preparing people to think as artists/designers.

STOUTONIA: WHAT ARE SOME OF THE MAJOR DEVELOPMENTS IN THE PROGRAM YOU HAVE SEEN?

BLOEDERN: The majors have grown dramatically, and the emphasis has changed from studio and art education areas to applied design areas so that graphic design, industrial design, and in-

Who can vote?

I am beginning to wonder who, in Menomonie, has a legal right to vote, and by past actions of certain City Council members and UW-Stout officials, I believe this is a matter which needs clarification.

The law does not and cannot discriminate against students; therefore, any individual who meets the requirements (to vote) qualifies as a bonafide elector.

On May 5, 1986 at the Menomonie City Council meeting, Paul D. Nelson, president of the Stout Student Association and three executive officers urged the council to hold the mayoral election during the normal Nov. general election to make the electoral process open and available to citizens, enabling all of them to exercise their legal right to vote.

At the City Council meeting, Schroeder made a motion to decide the exact dates of the mayoral election thus enabling the special election to take place during the Nov. general election. Seconded by Josephson. Yes votes — Rockwell, Josephson, Emmert and Schroeder. No votes — Furlong, Schuknecht and Kropp.

On May 19, 1986 after most of the students returned to their summer residence, the City Council voted to reconsider their earlier decision and changed the date of the mayoral election to July 29. The motion was made by Rockwell and seconded by Schuknecht. Yes votes — Furlong, Schuknecht, Kropp and Rockwell. No votes — Josephson, Emmert and Schroeder.

Neither the City Council nor Stout officials notified students of the change or informed them of their right to absentee ballots. It cost the city of Menomonie approximately $8000 to hold the special elections in July, which appears to have been an expensive maneuver to bar students from voting. Is this a travesty of justice?

On May 9, 1986 Mr. Charles Buelow, of Menomonie wrote the following letter to the State Elections Board in Madison:

"Dear Mr. Cronin:

The enclosed clipping from the May 4 Milwaukee Journal outlines some of the problems Menomonie experienced during the April 1 election. Frankly, I feel the problems were deeper than those outlined. Nevertheless, I am told there were no violations of the law. I am sure that the actions described in the article are a measure of elections to come. And that's sad. I would hope the elections board could seek corrective legislation.

Four elements compound the problem in college towns: uninformed voters who have not learned the value of their vote, free beer, free rides to and from the polls and the right to register at the polling place.

Carried to a ridiculous conclusion, the people with the most free beer and the longest bus will win elections.

Thank you,
Charles Buelow"

Mr. Buelow is the director of University Relations at UW-Stout

CAMPUS SLANT/ How do you think an increase in tuition will affect your education?

Text by Brian Kraimer

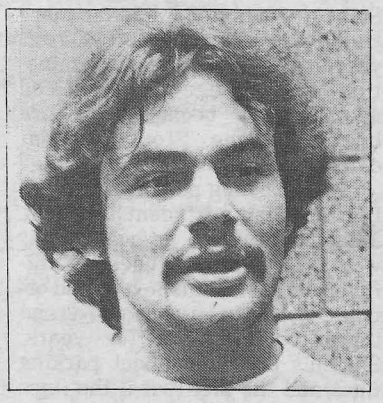
Lisa Belan,
Fashion Merchanising,
Freshman,

It probably will, because I pay by own way, so if it's going to be a large increase, from what it is this year, it will probably determine if I come to school here or not. If it is a large increase it will make me think about going somewhere else.

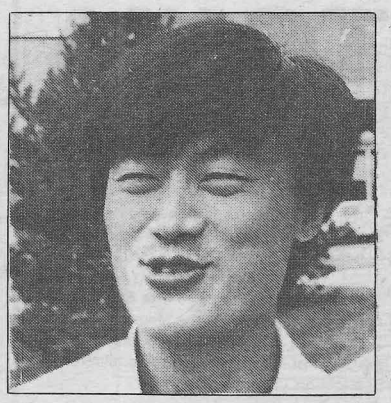


Carl Follegg,
Graphic Arts Management,
Junior,

Yes, it will cut down on beer consuption. I think I will be able to afford the increase, but I could really do without it. If they have to do it, they have to do it.

Richard Schmidt,
Home Economics & Business,
Junior,

It won't really effect me, see I've worked out there for ten years so I could go to school, so I took everything into consideration and have plenty of money, but if it keeps increasing, the money will get tight.



Seok Heu,
Science,
Graduate Student,

Yes, but I am a foreign student and must come back to finish school. I think it is fair that we have a tuition increase.

Kim Raddant,
Phychology,
Junior,

If I have all of my priorities in tact I will be able to afford the tuition. I think that those students that put their education first will find a way to cut back on other expenses, and be able to afford the increase in tuition.

Bottom Line

Revenge of the Maggots

Rich Brueckner

"Still, a man hears what he wants to hear and disregards the rest."–Paul Simon

I was in a bar recently (no kidding) discussing the local dating scene with several attractive young ladies. They raised their glasses and showed me their favorite toast:

"Here's to the men that we love,
here's to the men that love us,
But the men that we love
Aren't the men that love us;
So frot the men,
And here's to us!"

I don't think that any two people have quite the same philosophy about the opposite sex. It's a matter of perspective.

A comedienne recently told women that they believe they will marry the man of their dreams only to wind up 15 years later with a recliner that burps.

Some men have a different view: "Life's a bitch and then you marry one."

Marriage isn't for everyone. Last year, the Secret Society of Maggots made their guidelines of Maggot behavior known to the world. This year has been officially designated "The International Year of the Maggot" by the society's founders.

A special event is being planned. Before it can be announced, it is necessary to explain just what a Maggot is. Back by popular demand, it's the newly amended:

MAGGOT CONSTITUTION

(1) WHAT WE DON'T GET — WE TAKE.

All prospective Maggots must remember this as it will be the main force in their new life as a Maggot.

(2) MAGGOTS STICK TOGETHER.

A Maggot will do or say anything to support the activities of a fellow Maggot. This includes lying to whomever the date is that the fellow Maggot is Maggotizing.

(3) MAGGOTS DO WHATEVER IS NECESSARY.

A Maggot will do or say anything to accomplish the Prime Directive: "Throw another date onto the pile of wrecked women."

(4) MAGGOTS WILL DO WHATEVER THEY CAN GET AWAY WITH.

This includes juggling several dates at the same time and place.

(5) MAGGOTS GET THEIR DATES DRUNK IN ORDER TO TAKE ADVANTAGE.

Only in this manner will the next guideline be effective.

(6) MAGGOTS USE CAVE TALK.

This is the only sure-fire method prescribed by the current King Maggot. The following monosyllabic expressions are used: "Talk to me." and "So now what?"

(7) MAGGOTS TRY TO SEDUCE ENTIRE HOUSEHOLDS OF DATES — ONE AT A TIME.

Highly sought-after dates are usually attempted first in order to give the other dates in the household the illusion that the Maggot has a class act.

(8) MAGGOTS LIE TO THEIR GIRLFRIENDS BACK HOME.

If they didn't, trips back home wouldn't be quite the same. "I miss you," "I'm going crazy up here all by myself," and "I'm so busy with classes that I can't even go out at all." are often posted above the Maggot's phone for easy reference.

(9) MAGGOTS PROMISE THAT THEY WILL BE DISCREET.

This promise usually lasts until the Maggot runs into a roommate on a trip to the bathroom during recovery periods.

(10) ONLY MAGGOTS KNOW WHO THEY ARE.

A Maggot will never divulge the true nature of a fellow Maggot.

Every year, the Maggots crown the epitome of Maggotism during a big party. If you think you know someone who has the right stuff to be crowned King Maggot, send a personal profile with that someone's most Maggoty experience to:

KING MAGGOT COMPETITION

Please do not include any names of Maggots or those Maggotized. All entries will be turned over to the Society's founders for due consideration. The winner will be crowned at a time and place to be announced. Runners up will get their Maggot escapades printed in this column.

Female Maggots (yes, there are many) are also encouraged to apply. The Year of the Maggot Party is coming soon. Keep those cards and letters coming folks!

terior design are the largest concentrations in the department right now. It has come to the point where the strength in the design areas is not at the expense of the other concentrations. They are completely interwoven with the other programs.

STOUTONIA: WHAT DIRECTION HAS PLACEMENT OF STUDENTS TAKEN?

BLOEDERN: It's a bit difficult to say because students have to go away to find jobs. Then we rely on them to get back to us. Roughly 90 percent are placed. I can't verify that but I don't think that it is too far off. There is a lot of receptiveness in the real world beyond the campus walls. We get letters from companies frequently telling us that our students are very well prepared.

STOUTONIA: HAVE THERE BEEN PROBLEMS WITH FUNDING?

BLOEDERN: In the last decade the art department has been growing and prospering at the same time as general university system funding has been declining. The squeeze has been on. You have more students and the same amount of dollars or very modest increases.

The diversity of the program also requires additional funding for those diverse needs. We're not alone in it. We need to look beyond the university to find other kinds of support and we are in the process of doing that right now.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO THE FACILITIES COMPARE TO OTHER ART FACILITIES YOU HAVE SEEN?

BLOEDERN: First consideration is that we've grown so much. The facilities we occupied originally were purposed for art education and primarily studio art. Since we've evolved so much the rooms have needed refitting. We are now getting funding for a remodeling project that will assist us in getting some rooms that are more purposeful for their function. But our printmaking facility, for example, is one of the best around.

STOUTONIA: HOW DOES YOUR FACULTY COMPARE TO ART FACULTIES YOU HAVE SEEN?

BLOEDERN: The most important issue across the board is people involved in the instruction in this department are also continuously active professionals. They are committed to their artform or design. They have come to us with very good backgrounds. I can't think of any case where the individual is not involved at a very high level.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT THE FURLONG GALLERY PROGRAM?

BLOEDERN: That's suppose to be a resource not only for art students but for the other students, and the general community. I would really like to see more people involved and taking advantage of that resource. Just because it is empty or there is only 2 or 3 people walking around inside, doesn't mean you're intruding — go in.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO YOU THINK STUDENTS OUTSIDE THE PROGRAM FEEL ABOUT THE ART PROGRAM?

BLOEDERN: It always surprises me how frequently when I talk to people who are not art majors, about the program, they have very few ideas as to what goes on over here. They just know there is something to do with art over here. There is more than that; it's a resource for everybody.

Fine Line

Geek, gawk, gack

Jef Maynard

On the one hand, there are "geeks;" on the other hand, there are "freaks." "Everything is everything," composer John Cage once said. Assuming that statement to be too much nuclear, (or unclear) mass to work with here, let's suppose that there are freaks, right here in River City. (If everything were everything, this paper would be a monkey or a flower, and I know you just aren't ready for that.)

Freaks were in sideshows at carnivals. Geeks were the suckers in the audience, those gawking dumplings and weazlettes that came to behold the freaks of nature. Something like, "I can't stand here with these geeks a'gawkin' at me." (Don't confuse a weazlette with a Hooverette. It is not just a question of position. Corvettes have no place in this issue whatsoever. Their place is in the garage.)

In real life, there are still geeks, and freaks. The distinction between the two, however may have been dissolved, or it may be dissolving.

Freak used to be physical deviants, Elephant Man, Chang and Eng, etc. In the age where "faggots" are now "gays," and "colored people" are "blacks," it seems too out-dated to call "freaks" by that name.

Regardless, those are not the freaks of which we are concerned, and socially appropriate names aren't the problem. The issue is why some people freak-out and what to do about it.

Daniel Foss, sociologist at Rutgers University and charter member of the mousketeer Club, (no kidding), defines it thus: "Freaks... are visibly members of middle class youth subcultures which include a subcultural reality in complete discontinuity with the conventional reality. Freaks are walking counter-environmentalists who... assert the right to total control over their physical appearance and outward behavior — to total irrelevance of the culture and informal norms of those who dwell within conventional reality... except insofar as it is desired to stimulate disorientation among the cultural enemy."

What he is saying is that freaks want out of the regulation culture and into a minor league culture where they can choose. Part of the deal is to do it to an extreme so that the regular drones are forced to re-examine their own conformity.

This may sound to you like you've dug up a 1969 copy of The Stoutonia. Dismiss not the problem for it is still with us. It is made all the worse because it may never have been resolved.

Hair is a prime example. While anyone can have long hair, spiked, prismed, dreadlock or otherwise unconventional wigs, it still causes a reaction. In some extreme cases of moronic out-acting, some people have been mauled for their looks, and right here in ultra-butch River City.

I have some very likable friends and acquaintances who have had some brutal encounters, verbal and physical, with some steroid junkies because the former kids were not regulation.

What I know about this tells me that the freaks, if I can really call them that, had the desired effect. The reaction was primitive, not introspective. The boys with too many muscles were upset with the strangers because the boys with too many muscles couldn't handle the weight of tolerance.

There are, on campus, some offbeat looking boys and girls who have been described as "the dead people," among other more or less flattering names. Extraordinary fashions, frequently black, pale white skin, heavy eye make-up of assorted colors and so on. Punk looks, etc, are not just a conspiracy by the ugly girls to make the pretty Gucci-girls mess up their faces.

Is difference too much to bear? I somehow don't think so. If you don't look like the regulars, who, by the way, are probably ok people, you may encounter some resistance or unfavorable reactions. The worst will come from bung-hole fearfuls who are probably suffering from their own irregularity, if you know what I mean.

Tolerate them, each. You don't have to be Jesus anybody to see how smooth it could be. A lot of people are real darn happy being regular. If they're not happy, let's hope the courage will someday come to them to risk their biscuits. As for the youth on a limb, don't shake the tree. Life isn't such a peach.

and in 1985 he received approximately $43,000 salary from tax dollars. Mr. Glen Schuknecht City Councilman and director of Planning and Information Management at UW-Stout received approximately $43,000 salary in 1985. City Councilman Mr. John Furlong retired from UW-Stout as administrative assistant to the chancellor received approximately $48,000 salary. All three of these individuals have come to live in Menomonie because the University of Wisconsin-Stout is located here.

By the very actions of these Stout administrators as described above, it appears they do not want students to vote. It is ironic when the Stout students made up approximately 50 percent of the population of Menomonie, that these three Stout officials who make their livelihood because of students, appear to be denying the same students their legal right to vote!

Students, another valuable lesson you are learning at Stout is that some people who want your money, don't very much care about your rights. Do you think this is an important matter?

Sincerely,
Harvey Sutcliff

Cryptic what?

The Sept. 25 "Cryptic Notes" lived up to its title. Websters defines cryptic in part as 1. hidden, secret, occult. 2. mysterious, puzzling and ambiguous. Mr. Hopkins' remarks concerning Reagan's vacation are certainly puzzling. Imagine how relieved Reagan must be to realize that Hopkins doesn't "resent him."

I actually enjoyed his ramblings about prosperity and credit cards. He wrote, "Ronald Reagan is rather like someone with their first credit card. He is on an orgy of spending on military hardware that we will never use, and he isn't bothered by the prospect of collectors coming to his door." I wasn't aware that Hopkins was an authority on military hardware. He had better hope that we always have a surplus of military equipment that "we" never use, because to use it would mean we would be at war. I wonder if the thousands of people in the defense industry share his views on defense spending.

Mr. Hopkins' section on the President's war on drug abuse was, to say the least, abusive. It was obviously written hurriedly, without thought or research. How did he manage to miss the endless material on the dangers of drug abuse. It's clear that no matter how much time and money is spent on a subject, there is always someone who doesn't get the message.

Unfortunately, history shows that many great thinkers are not recognized during their life time. Mr. Hopkins now has the opportunity to tell the powers that be just how simple it actually could be to stamp out prostitution and drug abuse. If they will only listen to the simple finality of his direction, he will be recognized as a genius during his life time, and prostitution and drug abuse will immediately drop off the flat end of his small world.

Seeds of Change

Wimps in America

Gene Emahiser

I was reading a book the other day when I ran across the phrase "Wimps: Made in America." Like most other red-blooded Americans, I was angered that someone would have the audacity to say such a thing. We Americans are a tough breed...aren't we? the author went on to discuss the lack of real men in America. Real men don't back down. Real men have convictions that they live and die for.

When I stop and consider how many real men came to this country to worship God in freedom, and how many of them died to preserve that freedom, it makes me look in the mirror and ask the questions "AM I AMERICAN MADE WIMP?"..."Do I have concictions worth losing my life for?"..."Would I have the guts to die for them?"

America was founded by real men. Those real men had a faith which enabled them to fight principles. These roots are the very foundations of our country.

In the 1830's, French historian Alexis de Toqueville visited America. Upon his travels, he discovered the secret of Americas success. After searching state capitals, the nation's capital, and other monuments, he vistied America's churches and found them "aflame with righteousness." He found Americans to be self-governed people who loved God and had high morals based on the absolutes of the Bible. He concluded: "America is great because she is good. If she ceases to be good she will cease to great."

America has stopped being good and, as Toqueville predicted, she is also ceasing to be great. To become great again, we must return as a nation to the principles and morals that this country was built with.

Liberty, freedom and peace must be in the hearts and spirits of men. Because these things are simply outward manifestions of time before our nation sees liberty, freedom, and peace.

When we have returned to a nation that teaches the concepts and absolutes that were taught to our forfathers, those of God, country and family, we will see the wimps of America up and become leaders and champions. Then, and only then, will we be able to say, "Real men (not wimps): Made in America."

by Barbara Klimek

A crowd of about 800 were tossled on their toes by the performance given by the all time Minnesota legend, Johnny Holm and His Fun Time Band.

Contemporary Music Productions presented the Fun Time Band last Wednesday night, Sept. 24, in the Great Hall. It was the first time the band performed at Stout. The performance contained two sets, each 75 minutes long.

Christa Sanicola, the chairperson of Contemporary Music Productions, said "I was very pleased with the attendance, and the involvement Johnny Holm kept with the crowd was great."

"The people were very enthusiastic and seemed to enjoy themselves very much." According to Sanicola, "Mr. Holm said that Stout was one of the best colleges he has ever performed at, and that the crowd was absolutely terrific. They had a great time."

In the midst of the early 1970's the Holms started a legend. A legend that swept up many enthusiastic crowds in Minnesota and the surrounding states for twenty years or more. That is the legend that Johnny Holm is the alltime favorite fun band.

This band displays its diversity performing songs of original to traditional favorites. They tour mostly in the five state region, but they do perform as well as they are known as far away as Texas.

Johnny Holm was once put down for the way he performed. He was thought of as a heavy partier. The crowds at his shows would get pretty unruly dancing on the chairs and terrorizing about. Liquor had by then become an essential to his performance. Johnny saw a need for a change, a change not in his music, but in himself.

The band likes to get involved with their audience, making everyone feel at home and having a great time. The audience is part of the show, sharing their talents with the crowd by singing together or alone with Johnny.

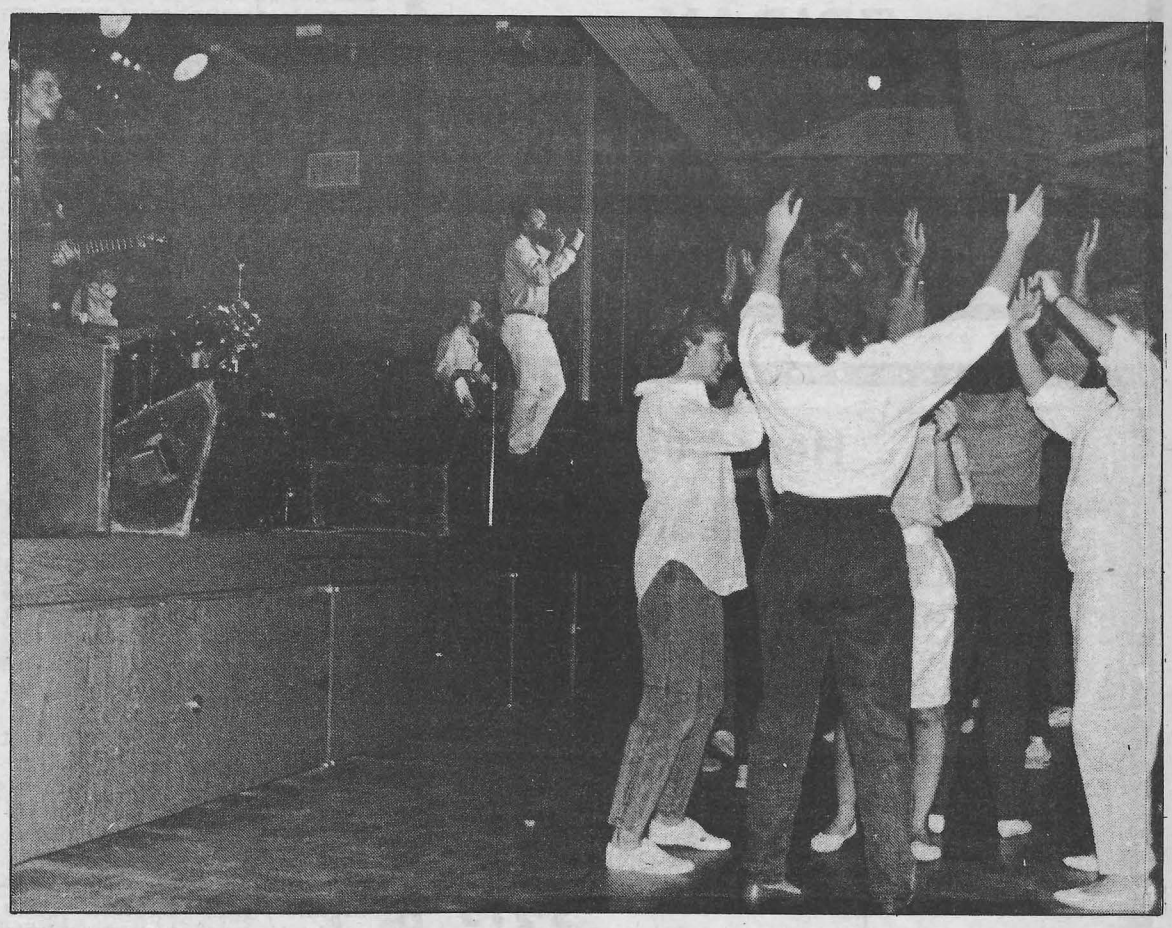
Johnny Holm was honored for his recording of Lightening Bar Blues, recorded by ASI Records in 1977. It was a hit single on National Billboard Country Charts for seven weeks. Also, during Johnny's entertaining years he has appeared on television specials and radio talk shows. Complements were given by well known performers such as Dr. Hook, Mel Tillis, Frankie Vali, Donna Fargo, B.J. Thomas and Pablo Cruise.

Johnny and his band are diverse, playing both country and rock'n'roll. He writes many of his own songs and selects special, well known tunes from various artists.

Holm loves to perform, but he does not consider performing work. "I have seen Johnny Holm perform for seven years and I think he is one of the great performers that Minnesota has to offer," said Sanicola.

Johnny becomes intimate with his audience and he portrays a friendly, down to earth personality. A few years ago Johnny Holm recorded a special song for the area farmers, stating his concern for their economic plight. The song was entitled "Poor Man's Land."

The turnout and the enthusiasm the crowd showed for Johnny Holm and his band bodes well for the band's return to this campus.



The audience enjoys the sound of Jonny Holm and his Fun Time band. Holm performed two 75 minute sets at his concert Wednesday. (Stoutonia photo by Wayne Parmley)

Ray Hall, more to offer than meets the eye

by Jef Maynard

Ray Hall has a quiet yet special distinction not visible from the outside. In a building that looks to some students like it may house bundles of brown paper towels or broken typewriters, there thrives the research of the Stout Art Department, faculty and staff.

As early as the inception of the Art Dept. in the mid-1960's, faculty has been provided with research studio space where the artists and designers who instruct those classes can maintain their own explorations.

According to Dept. Chairman Gene Bloedorn, the creation of the department was patterned after the successful program in UW-Madison. There, art and design faculty are provided with space where they can work. It was created "in the image of a quality art department, such as Madison."

The Art Department was originally started by Dr. Orazio Fumagalli. His goal was to provide both studio space and a teaching schedule that kept alive the vital interest in art. "He saw the need for the 'artist first,'" said Doug Cumming.

Cumming, instructor and Chair of the Studio/Space Committee feels that the benefits of the program of immeasurable. "There are a lot of schools that do not provide this kind of space, or any space to work... There are a lot of outside teachers that have resigned themselves to teaching only. That is why most of the instructors here continue to work — the time and space."

The history of faculty studio space is colorful. "It was a very romantic time in 1971," Bloedorn said. "We did not have the location in Ray Hall; we had studios in churches parsonages, factories, warehouses, old homes. Wherever the university was in the process of buying buildings and not tearing them down immediately."

"There were cases where the wrecking crew was there at the door and the artists did not even know what was about to take place," Bloedorn continued. "They were set up, doing their work and the crane was right outside the building," he continued.

Ray Hall itself has a long and interesting history. "The building is now included in the Menomonie downtown historic district," according to Claudia Smith. Smith, who teaches art history and is a member of a state level historic preservation association, said, "It is one of the three oldest Stout buildings, with Harvey and Bowman Halls. Ray Hall retains more architectural integrity than Bowman and Harvey."

When asked whether that will guarantee that potential condemnation and demolition processes will not be taken by the State, which owns the building, she responded, "No, it means it would be very nice if it would be preserved."

She pointed to the fundamental structural integrity and small interesting details like the "S" marks on the cornice, which of course stand for Stout.

Among the faculty currently enjoying studio space are: Cumming, Bloedorn, Smith, Fumagalli, Ed Wong, Alan Gamache, Ron Verdon, Sue Hunt, William Schulman, Todd Boppel, Charles Wimmer, Paul DeLong, Rob Price, John McCormick and Dion Manriquez.

The benefits to students are noteworthy as well. According to Ron Verdon, "The university has to invest in the people who are teaching. It is very healthy for students to see the studios and active artists. Role models, you could call them."

Cumming added, "It is more credible for a student to hear it coming from a working artist. The professional vitality of the staff comes through and keeps up the higher level of teaching activity." He added, in half-jest, "Artists have to work or they are really ugly people."

The future of Ray Hall studio space is not entirely secure, but most expectations are for continuing the program. Bloedorn and the faculty hope for expansion so that the "practising artists and designers can all have a central location. We hope to have them altogether."

There are faculty that do not yet have space in the building. Further, more display area for design/research is sought after.

Campus Cuisine

crunchies for study-time munchies

Denise Cain

What is it about the library, the aura of knowledge, the soothing lighting, the irritating bell, or the smell of the computer room, that enhances the taste of every food I have ever eaten at my study table?

Last year I used to eat my three square meals, four basic food groups, and in between meal snacks at the famed University of Wisconsin-Stout Library Learning Center. It was a joy to eat my Frito Lay potato chips, bologna sandwiches, and M & M's amongst the world's greatest authors. However, as everyone is aware, this year we have been advised to leave our picnics at home and study with dehydrated mouths and growling stomachs for the duration of our college careers.

I have complied with the rules so far. I have not brought in my mixer, blender, or wok to try out new recipes. I have even left my popcorn popper at home along side my cans of thirst quenching Diet Coke. But I do not know how much longer I can follow these cruel rules. After spending the past week at the library nearly every night, and realizing how my will power is failing, I have decided to plan ahead for the big breakdown. I have composed a few food products that I could perhaps safely sneak into the library for those really long, lonely nights.

Some of these recipes I am sure you have all tried, but maybe you are like my brothers, and either don't have the recipes or do not have the foggiest idea how to cook them. The foods I have selected are rather quiet, no carrots, celery, or Doritos, but they will

Start for songwriters

James "Unk" Falkofske

Although Los Angeles, New York and Nashville claim to have the largest concentration of people in the music business, there are many bands from small cities and country boondocks that make up a large segment of the music that we are exposed to. Minneapolis and Madison are small centers of musical experience in which one can see starving street artist all the way up to the superstars. But who are these people, and how do the big stars get started in the music industry? Today we will look at songwriting and its structure in the music business.

Songwriting is above all the most important part to a hit song. Even without superstars to sing them or great musicians to play on them, songs with emotional pull always become hits. Songs that do not have these won't.

Songwriting is therefore as much of an artform as singing, dancing or acting. It is an act of emotion and expression. Some even say that a good song can be the strongest form of persuasion (eg. Abraham, Martin, and John). Songs can carry a very important and emotional statement.

But where do songwriters get their start? Many songwriters continue to keep their music to a very private group. This is no way to become rich or famous! Others send their music to their favorite recording artists. These songs often end up in the circular file along with fan mail. The way to get into the music industry through songwriting is best accomplished by contacting a music publishing company.

RCA, A & M and RSO might seem like ideal companies to send a song to. Wrong! A person who is trying to break into the music industry will often be lost in the shuffle in such large publishing companies.

A skillful songwriter becomes a successful songwriter by starting with small publishing company, like BLOWN FREE PRODUCTIONS of Madison, Wis. When the songwriter has to compete with only twenty artists, as opposed to twenty thousand, the odds of having songs accepted for publication increase one hundred fold.

Although the songwriter may have one or two publishers in mind it will always be useful to send the song to as many companies as possible. The songwriter is in essence applying for a job. The more places that he/she applies, the more likely he/she is going to have his/her work accepted.

If a songwriter is sending many copies of their work out, music companies will be interested in knowing this information: The songwriter should include in his/her introduction letter a phrase that states that the work is being sent to other companies, and that it will be accepted on a first come, first serve basis. This will state your intentions, but it will also result in a faster response because of the possible competition for the song between publishing companies.

A few good tips for possible songwriters are given below, they are: 1) Be sure to type your lyrics and send two copies to each music publisher. 2) If possible, include a lead sheet (the notes that the singer would be singing in the song). 3) Try to find a talented person to record the song using only a guitar and one or two voices. (You are not trying out as a band, only a songwriter) 4) Send along a self addressed stamped envelope so that the publisher can quickly respond to your submission.

Finally and most importantly, before you submit any work to a publisher, have it copyrighted. Publishers will often throw out work that is not copyrighted because of lawsuits that might arise in the future. Copyrighting a song only costs $10.00, and this will protect your interests if a song is accepted for publication.

Once a song is copyrighted it is good for the life of the author plus fifty years after his/her death. This means that the songwriter owns the song and is able to collect royalties during that time. It also means that after the songwriters death the family of the songwriter receives the copyright for an additional fifty years.

For information on copyrighting a song, ask for a copy of the government form "PA" from the Register of Copyrights, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20559.

Abstract

Columnists defined

Julie Abel

Hello, hello, hello, hello. Here I am again. Back by popular demand. Ha! Ha! Only in my dreams! But yes, The Stoutonia is giving me a second chance to redeem myself as an arts columnist. So here we go again, on another roller coaster ride!

No honestly friends, relatives, and fans (ok! just friends and relatives), I do have a subject this week and it is not on how to make a column long enough to get it printed!

This week I would like to address a letter that was sent to The Stoutonia and printed in last weeks newspaper. The letter was written by Shawn Hantelmann. He/She asked what The Stoutonia's requirements were for columnists, in reference to Rich Brueckner.

No I am not Mr. Brueckner's girlfriend, nor am I interested. He is not my cousin or my brother; as a matter of fact I hardly know him. But I do have a certain respect for his ability to write of anything he wants. He is not at all worried about what others are going to think of him. He is crazy!

I admit it is slightly, well, very selfish of him, but that leads us back to our question. What are The Stoutonia's requirements for a columnist? Well, what are the requirements for a columnist of any newspaper?

In my opinion a columnist writes his or her opinion of whatever subject they desire. Columnists have a certain freedom with the subjects of their columns. Like an artist they can create a column, or they may write about something that affected their senses in some ways. Personal or not.

The strategy of a columnist is to create a reaction. I am sure that there are those that read Rich Brueckner's column and were amused, and those that were slightly horrified that someone would mock the Cablevision shooting incident in Green Bay this summer. Some are indifferent, and then there are those that react with anger which is exactly Shawn Hantelmann's reaction.

Shawn's reaction seems to make Rich a super columnist. Not only that but it gives him an intelligence level, much to the disagreement of Mr./Ms. Hantelmann.

And a little personal point about Shawn's letter. He/She said Rich sounded "like a layed-off factory worker at bar time." What exactly, Mr./Ms. Hantelmann, does a "layed-off factory worker" sound like? You sound like some big-wig official with a high paying job. Either that or you wish you were.

A little fact for Mr./Mrs. Hantelmann, the factory workers of our society keep the good ol' U.S. going.

Every once in a while factories lose business or go completely out of business because of the economy or other reasons. This leaves many family men/women high and dry. Are you insinuating that these people are stupid? Simple facts, right?!

I know this process very well; because, my father was a machinist for 20 years when Giddings & Lewis went out of business. He is now working with my grandfather in their own business. And you know what? He is not at all stupid, and neither are the others that he worked with.

There are many college students here that are somewhat supported by their factory working parents, and I am sure that they will wholeheartedly agree with me.

So, as a payroll columnist, I guess I just stated my opinion. Does that make me a real columnist? Well folks, I believe that all in all that is up to you to decide in the end.

Now be nice because I need my job! Better!???

NOTHING IMPRESSES AN EMPLOYER LIKE DROPPING OUT OF SCHOOL.

After several years of intense study, a lot of college graduates finally learn something. They're not qualified for the job they want.

Fact is, many graduates never find a career in their field of study. All their time spent in study. Not enough time in the field.

That's why there's a nationwide program for college students called Co-operative Education. It allows students to alternate studies at the college of their choice with paid, practical work experience in the career of their choice.

To participate in Co-op Education you don't have to fit into any particular socio-economic group. You don't have to be a straight "A" student either.

All you really need to be, is smart enough to leave school.

Co-op Education

You earn a future when you earn a degree.

Today's Navy offers one of the best opportunities you might ever have to develop leadership experience.

It's experience that has given a boost to a lot of brilliant careers in and out of the Navy. And it's an inherent part of a Navy officer's professional development.

Management openings in finance, inventory control and purchasing, scientific, engineering and technical fields offer a wide variety of opportunities to work in a challenging environment that can be very rewarding.

You may fly anything from the latest jets to helicopters, drive anything from the latest gas turbine frigates to nuclear powered aircraft carriers or submarines.

Exceptional benefits include free medical and dental care, 30 days' paid vacation each year, plus tax-free allowances.

Minimum qualifications require AA, BA or BS degree, U.S. citizenship, and security clearance. You must not have reached your 27th birthday by commissioning. An aptitude and physical test are required. For further information, call Navy Management Programs at 1-800-558-0068.

satisfy your need to "beat the system." The really fascinating thing about the recipes is that you can also eat them in the privacy of your own home.

A good sandwich to bring to the library is the basic Egg Salad Sandwich. My roommate Kelly Horan, feels she can make the best hard-boiled eggs on Fifth Street. This is her method: Put your two eggs in a bowl of warm water. (This is a preheating technique.) Fill a pan with one inch of water above the egg height. Bring the water to a boil, reduce heat so that it is very hot, but not boiling. Gently add the eggs and cook for 20 minutes. Immediately cool the eggs by filling your pan with cold water. Tap the eggs on the counter to remove the shells.

Egg Salad Sandwiches

2 hard-boiled eggs per sandwich, cooled mayonnaise or Miracle Whip minced onion chopped celery salt and pepper
lettuce leaves

Chop the eggs. Add the mayonnaise, seasonings and celery and stir well. Spread filling on buttered whole wheat bread that has been lined with lettuce leaves.

The following recipe has been approved by the football coaches at Johnson Fieldhouse. It is so easy to make and will satisfy any chocolate craving for weeks.

Scotch-A-Roo Bars

1 cup sugar
1 cup corn syrup
1 cup peanut butter
6 cups Rice Krispies

Use a heavy pan and heat the sugar and corn syrup over medium heat, stirring often. When the sugar is dissolved and small bubbles are forming at the edge of the pan, remove from heat and stir in peanut butter. (Note: if you let the sugar mixture boil too long you will have what I call "Rice Krispie Bricks", which I have also created on occasion.) Pour this mixture over the Rice Krispies mixing well. Gently press into a 9" x 13" lightly greased pan.

Chocolate Frosting for Roo Bars

6 oz. chocolate chips
6 oz. butterscotch chips
2 scoops of peanut butter

Melt the ingredients together over low heat stirring constantly. Pour over bars and let set for a couple of hours. Do not serve with anything but another bar.

Locke performance gives insight into true Native American culture

by Noreen Spraner

Kevin Locke, a member of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, gave a presentation Saturday night designed to give people a better understanding and appreciation of Native American culture.

Locke stood tall with his long, jet black hair tied in braids, making an impressive appearance in beaded moccasins, breeches and neckpiece. His red satin shirt was resplendent in colorful ribbons.

His presentation was designed to be as appealing to children as to adults. He alternated traditional songs played on wooodland Indian flutes with their eerily, beautiful tones to stories about growing up an Indian. He would often lapse into his native language to give the audience a sense of the richness and depth of Native American culture.

There were a lot of bits and pieces of dark humor interspersed in the show. One item that was particularly intriguing was to learn that Tonto in Spanish means fool, and Kimosabe translated in quite a few Indian tongues means sexual deviant. It will be hard to watch The Lone Ranger with a straight face again. Perhaps a white TV writer went up to a group of Indians, and asked them what an appropriate, respectful term would be for Tonto's friend.

He ended his performance with a hoop dance. The hoop dance is a way to show reverence to, and celebrate the many facets of, nature. The hoops, at least twenty of them were used, were white, yellow, black, and red. Locke would pick them up with his feet and somehow intertwine them into flowers, birds, sunsets, and sunrises, all the while dancing to recorded Indian music that had a very rigorous beat. The dance was worth the price of admission for its color and astoundingly beautiful moments.

Locke's presentation was definitely a worthwhile treat. He is performing a real service by taking the initiative to present a program like this. It was a program that gives people a glimpse of the richness of Native American culture without becoming bogged down with the cowboy and Indian mythology that most Americans were brought up with.

Turnovers help gridders top Titans, 17-7

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devils won this Saturday over the UW-Oshkosh Titans by the score of 17-7. This improved the Blue Devils record to 2-0 in the WSUC and 2-2 overall.

The game began on a semi-positive note with the Blue Devil defense stopping the Titans on their first series without even a first down. It was only semi-positive because in the beginning of the game, the team as a whole, both the offense and defense, were quite sluggish. When asked about this Ron Wise commented by saying, "We played allright but we didn't play nearly as well as we should have."

Then on the first offensive series for the Blue Devils Kyle Gunderson, who never seemed to get a handle on the ball, turned it over on Stout's own 37-yard line. This gave the Titans a chance for a score. Four plays later Frahm carried the ball from the one-yard line for the score. The point after attempt by Veit was good, giving the Titans the lead of 7-0.

It was late in the first quarter before the offense started a sustained drive. This one began on Stout's own 34-yard line. Sean Boho was in the driver's seat at quarterback for the Blue Devils this week, due to a nagging ankle injury to Bob Lindberg. Lindberg is expected back for next week's game. Boho was complemented by his teammates on his overall performance and as Chuck Carr commented, "I think Boho did an excellent job as a freshmen and as a leader himself." On this drive Boho did lead his team all the way down for a score and capped this ball control drive with a three-yard touchdown pass to Fredrickson. The point after attempt by Jim Gorecki was good making the score 7-7.

With practically the whole second quarter to go both teams found it very difficult to move the ball anywhere. This is a credit to the fine defensive effort of both teams. A fine example of this would be when Oshkosh had the ball on Stout's one-yard line. The defense played tough and didn't allow the Titans in for a score on their first attempt. Then on the second attempt the ball was fumbled into the hands of Stout defenders. This gave Stout the ball back and probably changed the outlook of the game as far as the first half was concerned. Instead of going down 14-7 at halftime, the team went into the locker room all tied up. This was an emotional boost that helped the team perform much better in the second half.

> "I think Boho did an excellent job as a freshman and as a leader
> —Chuck Carr"

The second half began with the Blue Devil defense shutting down the Titans after only one series of downs. Then it was time for the Blue Devil offense to get going. This drive began on Stou's 27-yard line and went to the Titan's 25-yard line. From there it was a field goal attempt of 42-yards by Jim Gorecki. The kick was good, which gave the Blue Devils the lead at 10-7.

The remainder of the third quarter and, for the most part, the remainder of the game was played defensively. Each offensive attempt to begin a drive had failed until early in the fourth quarter. This wound up being the turning point of the game. A drive had started at Oshkosh's own 29-yard line. Like many other drives, the Titans' offense didn't seem to be able to budge the Blue Devil defense. Then came a pass play on second and five from the Titans own 40. A long pass from Peterson to LaFleur would have given Oshkosh the ball at Stout's 13-yard line. But LaFleur fumbled the ball into the arms of Doug Cwidak.

From there the Blue Devil offense put the icing on the cake with a long ball-controlled offensive series that led to a touchdown by Brain Stingle. Throughout this drive it was the young offensive line that really seemed to make the difference. As Brian Stingle stated, "The offensive line was making holes and when the holes are there you can run a long way." It was this final series that cancelled out any probable chance for the Titans to pull out a win. This also ended the scoring at 17-7.

The team overall had a good enough performance to win, but they seemed to feel there was plenty of room for improvement. This week the 2-2 Blue Devils will travel to Eau Claire for UW-Eau Claire's homecoming. As Ron Wise stated, "There's no doubt in my mind that we have the team to beat Eau Claire."

This week the 2-2 Blue Devils will face Eau Claire for Eau Claire's homecoming. Be sure and go to route on our Blue Devils.

Offense shines in Bears' victory; Vikings embarrass Packers, 42-7

by Paul Wydeven

The Chicago Bears whipped the Cincinnati Bengals 44-7. The Bear offense came out of a sluggish route with the return of Jim McMahon. McMahon, out for the last two weeks with a shoulder injury, found wide receiver Willie Gault six times to give Gault 174 yards — his best record ever.

One of the passes Gault caught was a 53-yard bomb by running back Walter Payton. The Bears held a 21-0 lead over the Bengals going into the second quarter. The last time the Bengals gave up 21 points in the first quarter was 1981. The Chicago defense also came around with a season-high five interceptions, picking off three of the first four passes thrown by Cincinnati's Boomer Esiason.

The only team that looked as bad, if not worse, were the Green Bay Packers, losing 42-7 to the Minnesota Vikings in the Metrodome.

The Vikings' 42 points were the highest they ever scored against the Packers. Packer Coach Forrest Gregg, never afraid to say the way it is, said, "I don't know how a team could ever play any worse than we did today."

> "I don't know how a team could ever play any worse...
> —Forrest Gregg"

Viking's quarterback Tommy Kramer, a ten-year pro from Rice College, looked like a superstar completing 16 of 25 passes for 241 yards and six touchdowns.

The game began on an ugly note for the Packers' offense as quarterback Randy Wright threw an interception to Scott Studwell the first down the Packers had the ball.

Toward the end of the first quarter, Wright passed out in the middle of a huddle. Before passing out, Wright did not complete any of his five passes and was sacked twice.

Vince Ferragamo came in to replace Wright at quarterback, but could not produce anything. The Packers managed one drive, but beyond that, the offense could not run or pass the ball.

This weekend looks promising for some good games from these teams. The Bears meet the Vikings and last week's big losers, Cincinnati and the Packers, will be playing each other in Green Bay.

My picks last weekend were 8-6 for a whopping four-week total of 32-24. I hope things go better this week and it is as follows:

New York Jets over Buffalo
Cincinnati over Green Bay
Cleveland over Pittsburgh
Denver over Dallas
Houston over Detroit
San Francisco over Indianapolis
L.A. Raiders over Kansas City
New England over Miami
Chicago over Minnesota
New York Giants over St. Louis
Philadelphia over Atlanta
L.A. Rams over Tampa Bay
Washington over New Orleans
Seattle over San Diego

Runners gain first place in Duluth Invitational

by Nancy Janecek

Stout's cross country team came away with a first place finish Friday in the University of Minnesota-Duluth Invitational.

"This is the first outright win for us since 1982," recalled Coach Lou Klitzke.

Todd Fox, a senior, led the Blue Devils to the finish of the five mile race in 28:07 minutes.

"I was especially pleased with our two freshmen, Tom McGavock and Paul Housner. We were missing three runners and they pulled right up to fill the gap," Coach Klitzke commended.

The Blue Devil women continue to compete individually as they still lack the seven members needed for a team. Jodi Hubbard took fifth place in 22:12 on the soggy 5000 meter (3.1 miles) course. Coach Klitzke said, "Jodi has improved each meet she's run this fall. She can become a very competitive collegiate runner. This was her best race yet."

While most of us were searching for summer shorts last Friday, it was a different story in Duluth. The runners got an advance taste of winter — rain, wind, fog and cold. "The weather conditions were very similar to what we will have to run in at conference and national championship meets in November so it was good for us to experience these conditions early in the season," Coach Klitzke said.

Stout also previewed the course for the national championships Sept. 20, running in the Midwest Championship at UW-Parkside in Kenosha. The men finished 14th in the high quality field. UW-Madison won both the men's and women's divisions.

Paul Bons was Stout's top placer that day, completing the route in 26:21. Bob Hackley at 26:50 and Tom McGavock at 27:33 set personal records on the hilly course.

Sue Rabas ran the 5000 meters in 20:46. Jodi Hubbard and Lisa Heimmermann also competed for the Blue Devils and continued to improve their paces.

Coach Klitzke is building on these three freshmen women and several new faces on the men's team. Darron Vanman, a transfer student, caught the coach's attention in the season opener, the Stevens Point Invitational, Sept. 13. Although a low-key meet, the Blue Devils scored a respectable third place.

With only three races in October before the conference and national championships, the competition is sure to gain intensity. Saturday's cross country meet will be at St. Olaf in Northfield, Minn.

Spikers on record pace; finish second in tourney

by Katie Keran

The UW-Stout women's volleyball team has continued their winning season. The Blue Devils are now 12-11 after 23 games. Last year, they were 9-14 after 23 games and ended up winning more games than any other volleyball team in Stout's history. Last weekend they placed second in the Superior Invitational, and on Monday, Sept. 29, they defeated Normandale Junior College 12-15, 15-7, 15-9. Unfortunately they lost their other match to UW-River Falls 8-15, 10-15.

Coach Lynda Lee feels that the team does have a lot of enthusiasm but on the whole they are lacking consistency. She is very pleased with the support the bench has been giving the starters on and off the court. In the loss to River Falls, one problem she cited was, "We were serving poorly. Too many serves were going into the net."

Lee feels that the team this year is much stronger than in recent years. She said, "The conference is much stronger than in the past." The Lady Blue Devils have been having a tough time this year getting conference wins. So far they have only lost two non-conference matches but have only won two conference matches. In order for Stout to get to the conference tournament, they have to be one of the top six teams.

Playing well against River Falls and Normandale were Freshmen Jo Braun and Senior Barb Carlson. "Jo was spiking harder than I've ever seen her," Lee said. "And Barb really played some smart games. She was hitting the holes like crazy."

At the Superior Invitational, the Blue Devils brought home their first and only trophy so far in Stout volleyball history. They beat Lakehead, Vermilion, St. Teresa and St. Scholastica to gain their second-place standing. Their only loss was to Superior 14-16, 12-15. Lee said, "Wendy Morrow played real well in the tournament and Sheila McNamara has been showing some real improvement." She added, "Val Devries did a good job at the net, she was placing the ball well."

Coach Lee is looking to add more power and quicker blocks in their upcoming matches. In the River Falls loss, she said that part of the Blue Devils problem was "River Falls was hitting faster than our blocking." She is also hoping to start winning more conference matches.

The squad is back on the road again this week. On Wednesday, Oct. 1st, they will be playing Stevens Point, and then on Oct. 4th they will be competing in a tri-meet against Viterbo and St. Mary's College in Winona, Minn. The next home tri-meet is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 7th at 5:30 and 7:30 p.m.

Brawl costs big bucks

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle has fined 10 Minnesota Vikings and 19 Detroit Lions for brawling during the Sept. 7 season-opener. The fines ranged from $400 to $800. All players in the brawl were fined the $400 and the players that came off the bench to brawl were fined $800.

Red Sox catch Al East

The Boston Red Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 12-3 to win their first AL East title since 1975. After the win Red Sox's manager John McNamara said, "This was the ultimate." The Red Sox will meet the California Angels at Fenway Park, starting Oct.7.

Retton retires

Mary Lou Retton is retiring from gymnastics. Retton, 18 years old, said at a press conference, "My goals are now toward college." Retton is close to signing a contract to be a commentator for NBC to cover the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

Canterbury goes to nights

Canterbury Downs is going to weeknight racing. The races will start at 7 p.m., instead of 4 p.m., but the weekend times will remain the same. The President of Canterbury Downs, Brook Fields, said, "We're going to give it a shot." He added, "We'd do it sooner if we could."

Ruggers blanked by Minnesota U M

by Slash La Freniere

Saturday the Stout Centaurs Rugby Club was defeated 10-0 by a very strong University of Minnesota Rugby Club in a tough and physical match. The two teams were evenly matched as far as positions were concerned, although Minnesota's backline play was a little better than Stout's was. The Centaurs played well against a Minnesota team that had 6 members of the Midwest Select side rugby team playing for them. Select side rugby is for players who are considered among the best in their region.

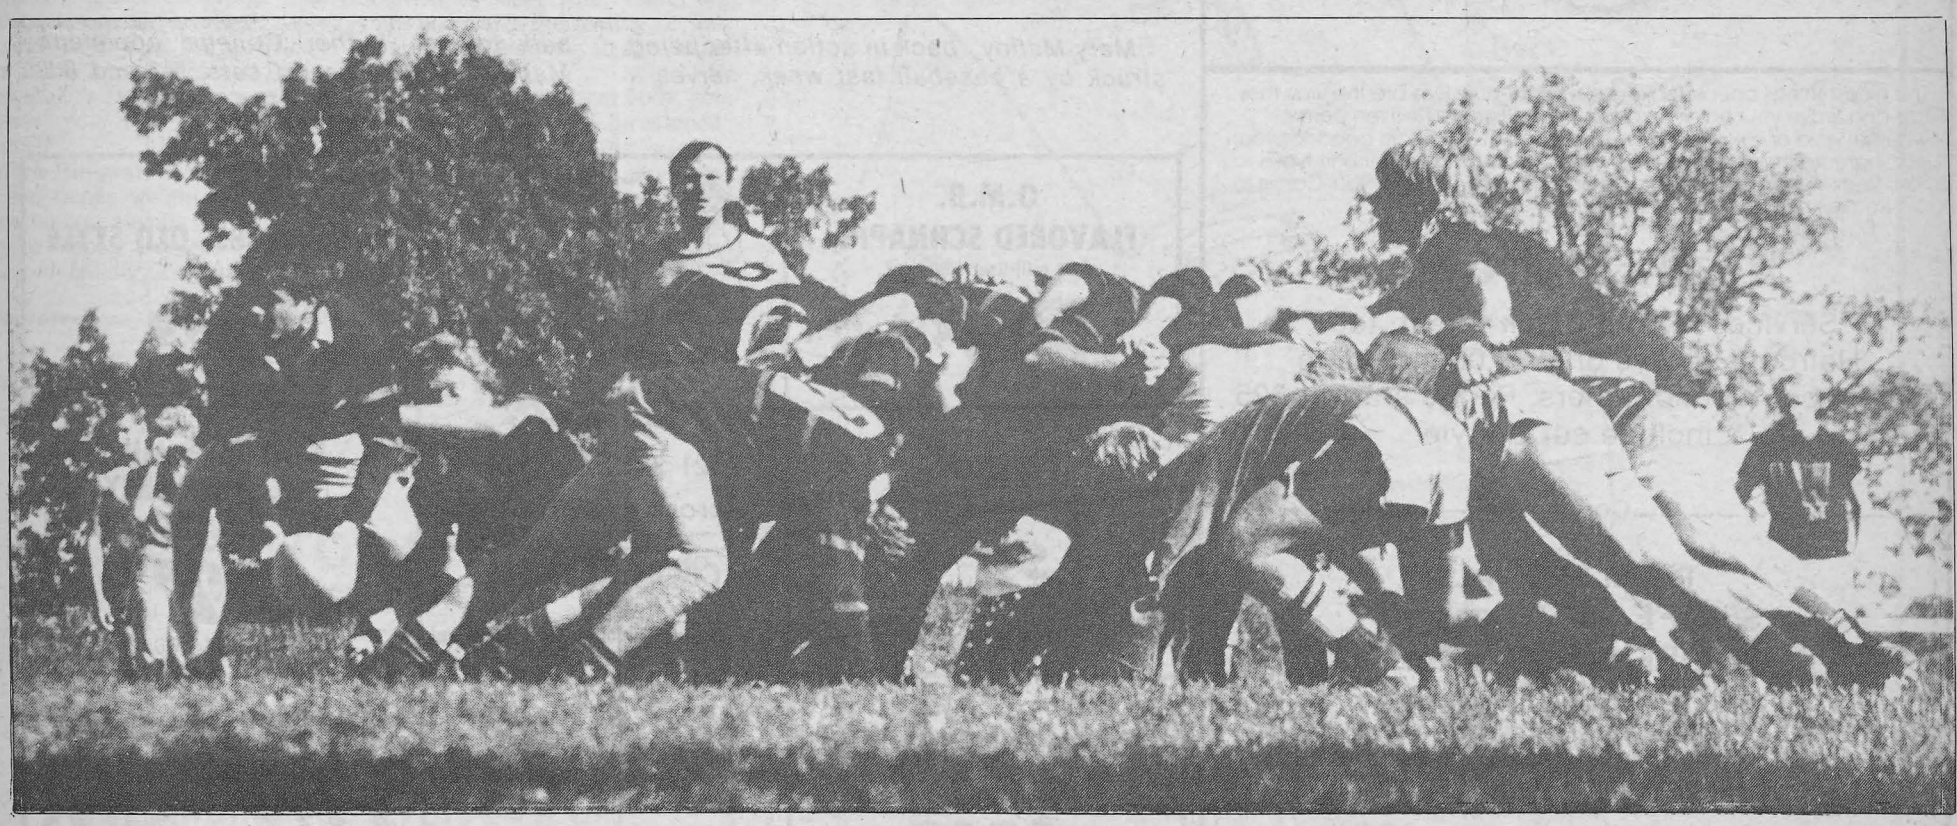
Minnesota's points came from 1 try for 4 points, a drop kick for 3 points, and a penalty kick for 3 more points, to give them a total of 10. Both Stout and Minnesota agreed that the refereeing was done poorly on Saturday, but it was unclear if it affected the outcome. The majority of the play in the second half was in the Minnesota end of the pitch and Stout was close to scoring many times but they couldn't seem to get the ball into the try zone.

The Stout Centaurs B side team, the "Killers B's," was defeated 19-4 by Minnesota on Saturday. Stout's lone try was scored by scrumhalf Brad Heidle, with a little help from the forwards in the scrum. The play of the B side was tough and improved over last week.

Stout Centaurs Rugby Club invites all students who wish to see them play this Saturday in Eau Claire. The pitch is behind McPhea gym. The match is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. and the more fans you have, the merrier the match.

Centaurs Coach Bill Morse said, "Overall we played well, but they just beat us." The whole club felt that if they could have scored one try, then surely more would follow. "This game was a good warm-up for Eau Claire," said Morse.

UW-Eau Claire. Just mention the name Eau Claire near a rugby player and watch his lip curl. They are the Centaurs' first match of the conference schedule. Rugby Club President John Wangen said, "Eau Claire has been our biggest rival for many years and this Saturday's game will be one more battle."



Top: P. J. Mcdonnell advances the ball for the Stout Centaurs Rugby Club against the University of Minnesota Rugby Club. Middle: Stout wins a ruck at the UM game which they lost 10-0. Bottom: Jim pitches the ball after Stout wins a scrum. Coach Bill Morse said the game was a good warm-up for this week's opponent UW-Eau Claire. (Complimentary photos provided by the Rugby club.)

Non-conference foes dominate netters

by Paul Emerson

The UW-Stout Lady Blue Devils tennis team went into non-conference action this past weekend, hoping to continue the successes they had had the previous weekend.

Their hopes were bolstered by the surprising return of number one singles player Mary Malloy. With the green light from her doctor last week Thursday, Malloy bounced back into action. This was just ten days after being KO'd by a baseball that struck her on the head.

The netters hopes, however, were quickly dashed. They found the competition to be too much to handle and dropped all three matches over the weekend. With more rain forcing play inside the fieldhouse, they hosted a strong Luther team last Friday and were blanked in the match, losing 9-0. Every match, with the exception of one, was decided in straight sets.

That one exception was Sophomore Tara Stahel's number six singles match. Stahel, a Hotel/Restaurant major from New Brighton, Minn., started quickly by taking the first set 6-1. But she then lost the second 6-4 and dropped the third 6-0 in losing the match to her Luther opponent.

In junior varsity action, however, two Lady Blue Devil netters were victorious. Sophomore Tracy Kellerman won her match 6-1, 6-2 and Freshman Jenny Davis beat her Luther opponent, also in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3.

The sun's rays came out of hiding on Parent's Day Saturday, and moved play outdoors for Stout. In the first of two matches for the day, the netters hosted Southwest State. State also proved to be a formidable opponent, and took the match by a 7-2 margin.

While taking just two of the nine matches, there were several other close matches. Claiming the lone win in the singles competition was Tara Stahel. After Stahel easily took the first set 6-1, she then took the match by default, when her Southwest opponent retired in the second set.

Freshman Jill Peters, an Industrial Tech major from Brookfield, Wis., lost a tough match at number four singles. She won the first set 6-2, but then lost the second 7-5 and the third 6-2 to lose the match.

In number five singles action, Karen Blau, a sophomore Hotel/Restaurant Management major from Waunakee, Wis., also lost her match in three sets. She took the first set 6-2 but lost the next two sets and the match 6-3, 6-4.

Number one singles player, Junior Mary Malloy, was back in action but lost in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3. Also losing in straight sets were Senior Jean Feyen, and Freshman Susie Blietz.

In doubles action, the sophomore duo of Blau and Kris Anderson won in three sets. Playing at the number three spot, they beat their Southwest opponents 1-6, 6-1, 6-3.

St. Benedict's was the opponent for the second half of Saturday's double-header. The Lady Devils had their hands full in this one, dropping the match by a decisive 9-0 margin.

All but one of the matches went in straight sets, as St. Ben's proved to be another very tough opponent.

Playing in the number four singles spot, Freshman Jill Peters won the first set of her match 6-4. But as was the case in several matches over the weekend, she dropped the next two sets, and the match, 6-1, 6-2.

Karen Blau lost a tie-breaker in the first set of her number five singles match, and then lost the second set and the match 7-6 (7-5), 6-0.

Coach Bob Smith summed up the weekend's matches on a positive note by stating, "These teams are very strong, I hope we can grow from this excellent competition."

With the three losses over the weekend, the Lady Devils are 2-6 on the season through eight matches.

The netter's were scheduled to take on UW-Eau Claire on the road Wednesday (yesterday) before traveling to UW-La Crosse for their invitational to be held on Friday and Saturday. Thet then have another trip to UW-La Crosse next Tuesday, Oct. 7.

Weight training: an 'uplifting' experience

by Jenna Martin

Weight room. What captures your senses when you read these two little words? Do you envision massive sweaty bodies or rippling muscles? Can you smell the thickness of the air or hear the "clang, boom," as the weights are lowered to the floor?

All of these are common perceptions of a weight room, however there is a lot more to one than that.

First of all, it is important to understand the difference between weight lifting and weight training.

Weight lifting is an international sport. It requires skill as well as great strength. Weight training is a basic form of exercise that is needed by anyone, athlete or not, who wants to develop strength and enjoy the physical and mental benefits.

Those intending to build strength should work muscles near their peak capacity. Between sessions your muscles will recover and become stronger.

To build muscle bulk use heavier weights with fewer repetitions. To tone muscles, use lighter weights and more repetitions.

Weight training is not just for the athletes and the muscle bound. You have to start somewhere. A lot of people are intimidated by the thought of working out with the regulars.

Should beginners or the less experienced feel intimidated? Larry Grein, a player on the Stout football team doesn't think so.

"When you start lifting, don't compare yourself to others but only to yourself. Meaning that, the next day you come in, if you can do better than the day before, you've beaten yourself and have become better."

Both Chuck Carr, another football player, and Larry feel that the use of weights is important for developing the necessary muscular strength needed for athletics but also encourage non-athletes to become involved.

Larry says that his girlfriend lifts all the time. Chuck and Larry view it as "a form of exercise that makes you feel good about yourself.

Mark Riesgraf, a Stout football player, thinks weight training is important for anyone who wants to stay in shape. "You don't have to be a bodybuilder. You can get different things out of it depending on your routine.'

A non-athlete told me he came to Stout as a wimpy freshman. His friends were weight trainers and got him interested.

At first he did feel intimidated. With encouragement, however, he stuck with it, developed his body and is now a regular. "Now I can lift more than some of them."

Jane Allen started weight training a year ago. She can notice the difference. "It's a good way to tone up your muscles."

Does she feel intimidated? Jane says that 99 percent of the time they don't pay any attention to the girls in there. "They are more concerned with their own workout."

"I don't think that girls should feel intimidated to go in there. When you go in there you should start out small. Don't go full force. Feel free to ask questions. Anyone is willing to help you out. They see you're motivated. It's a good feeling for them to help someone out."

How often should you lift? Mark replies, "If you decide to lift weights, keep at it. Don't give up in a week or two. You should go four days a week if you want to benefit."

"Probably the best for most people would be three days on and one off. Then you can work your different body parts with enough rest between each workout."

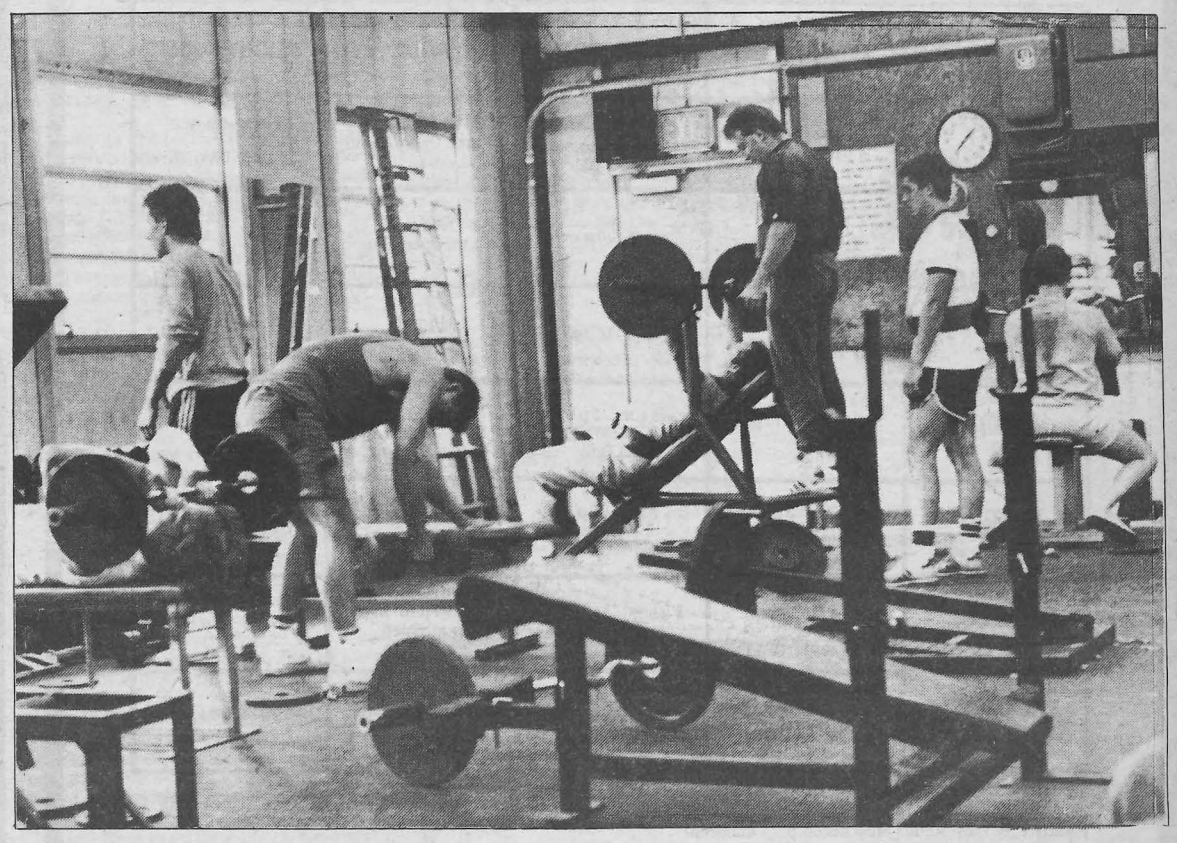
Why weight train? Jane feels both the physical and mental benefits. "You're working your body and toning your muscles. They become stronger. I also know I'm doing something good for myself."

According to Mark Riesgraf, "After working out I feel better. I feel like I've accomplished something for the day. It's never a waste of time."

"There are days when I don't feel like going, but once I'm in there I feel okay about it and once I'm done I feel great."

Weight training does develop you physically and mentally. The combination of seeing the results on your body and the feeling of accomplishment gives you a natural high.

If you want to tone your body, get into shape. Don't feel threatened by those two little words, weight room. Get out there, motivate yourself. Set those goals, keep at it and watch the results. It takes time, but, trust me, you'll find it's worth it.



Some people look at the metal building behind the fieldhouse and think the people inside weight lift, when most inside are actually weight training. (Stoutonia photo by Brian J. Pook)

"BUT I AM STILL HERE" Although my body isn't here right now, for all of you to see, I'm standing up here, next to the Lord, watching over thee. You will all be sad for a while, but time heals all wounds, and again you can smile,-You see, everyone has their time to go, the Lord needs us up there to help him know. I am still here if you need me today, this is the way that it happens, God planned it that way. I am making clocks for the angels, so they can tell time, and tables and chains, and even wind chimes,-I am making the best that I've ever made and thanking the Lord, for now I am saved-so when you are sad, just remember this, it's not me that you're missing, it's my body you'll miss. Tech educators gain information

by Cosmas A. Whitten

The 33rd Annual Technology Education Conference was held Friday, Oct. 3, in Jarvis Hall. UW-Stout Chancellor Robert S. Swanson and a past president of the American Arts Association started the day off with an introduction in the Great Hall to the conference participants.

The conference was designed for technology education teachers out in the field, to help them keep up to date with new technological developments. The conference was also open to Stout students and faculty free of charge.

The conference consisted of several special interest sessions which were run throughout the day. Sessions were held by experts in their field. Topics included: the olympics of the mind competitions, curriculum supplementation, manufacturing systems and equal opportunities in technology education.

> "It is possibly the best exposure. —Tom Novak Sears representative"

Technology Education Program Director, Len Sterry, was responsible for organizing the conference. Planning began last March.

The conference was not limited to Wisconsin teachers. Technology education instructors from Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and Michigan were also in attendance.

The conference included teachers from New York who introduced the New York plan for technology education to their region.

Organizers of the conference have attempted to have different speakers every year. They believe that teachers talking to other teachers make the conference more believable and interesting.

In addition to speakers, the conference also provides an area for 50 different exhibitors to introduce their materials to technology education teachers.

When asked why it is beneficial to exhibit at Stout, Sears representative Tom Novak replied, "It's possibly the best exposure." He also added that the exhibit area of the show is well lighted, comfortable and only a short drive from Minnesota, where his firm is located. The atmosphere is relaxed, he said, allowing ease in talking to people.

Richard H. Ludwig, exhibitor for South-Western Publishing Co., explained his reasons for coming to exhibit at Stout: "to display our products, and see people we do not always get to see in schools. This one [conference] is larger than the one in Milwaukee. We won't even be there this year."

Attendance for the annual Technology Education Conference grows every year. Over 600 attended this year.

Stout senior Tom Skaife took a day off from student teaching, driving over 200 miles to attend the conference. "It's interesting to see the different exhibits," he said, "and the motivation the teachers get out of the conference." Skaife also commented that he enjoyed seeing returning Stout graduates attending the conference and sharing their teaching experiences with other soon-to-be technology education graduates.

John Kinzler, from Luck, Wisconsin, has been attending the conference for 16 years, "I manage to pick up something new each year. It's nice finding out what other people are doing."

James Schultz, Local Vocational Education Coordinator for the Edgerton School District, said that the conference is a good experience for teachers. "Technology education is a changing field," he said, "and teachers need to talk amongst themselves about new ideas." This, he believes, allows them to think about broader-based programs, rather than the traditional industrial education program.

Gordon Overby, from Cumberland High School, said the conference has been good. "Chang-

UW Board of Regents President Weinstein visits Stout's campus

by Dale Bohnert

On a tour of five Western Wisconsin universities, President of the UW System Board of Regents, Laurence Weinstein, visited UW-Stout on Tuesday, September 30.

In addition to Stout, Weinstein also visited UW campuses in Superior, Eau Claire, River Falls and La Crosse last week.

Weinstein explained the purpose of the tour by saying, "I wanted to see first hand, really, what these campuses look like, talk to the people, meet with faculty, student government, and, members of the press about the issues that face the board of regents at this time."

The board of regents, as defined by Weinstein, is, "the governing body of the UW-System, which consists of all public universities, centers, extensions and UW hospitals and clinics."

Weinstein explained that of the 17 members who belong to the board, 14 regents are appointed by Wisconsin's governor for seven year terms. A UW student regent is also appointed by the governor for a two year term.

> "I wanted to see first hand what these campuses looked like —Lawrence Weinstein"

Two additional board members are elected to their positions by citizens and other board of regents members.

The purpose of the board of regents, as Weinstein explained, "is to develop broad policies that govern the UW-System."

"Those policies," added Weinstein, "are then implemented by the president of the UW-System, his staff and chancellors."

Board of regents members unanimously elected Weinstein, a businessman with degrees in accounting and law from UW-Madison, as their president in June, 1986. Near that same time, the board members approved a 12.4 percent tuition increase, effective this semester.

During his visit at Stout, Weinstein attended a luncheon with campus, community and legislative leadership in the Crystal Ballroom of the Memorial Student Center.

In response to Weinstein's request, members of area news media met with Weinstein at a news conference held in an adjacent room shortly after.

At the conference, Weinstein reported that the board of regents

Plane downed over Nicaragua

Nicaraguan Sandinistas shot down a plane they claimed was carrying weapons ammunition to rebels. Two American passengers on the plane were killed when the plane crashed in a remote jungle area north of the San Juan River.

Eugene Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wisconsin, survived the crash. Hasenfus is an aviation specialist.

The cargo plane which was shot down had picked Hasenfus up in El Salvador, where he has been serving as a military advisor, before crossing into Nicaraguan air space.

Nation

Grow your own on ballot

In the midst of the national campaign against drug abuse, the citizens of the state of Oregon are considering legalizing the cultivation of marijuana for personal use. Oregonians will be deciding how to vote on the issue this November, when they decide how to vote on Measure 5 on their ballot.

Proponents of the bill argue that if the bill passes, the battle against hard drugs could be made more effective by concentrating resources on the real problem. Also, they claim that by allowing pot consumers to grow their own, millions of dollars would be flushed out of the black market.

State

Madison chancellor resigns

The chancellor of the University of Wisconsin-Madison will be resigning his post to accept a position with a chemical manufacturing company. Irving Shain has served as chancellor at Madison for over nine years.

Shain started working at the Madison campus as a chemistry instructor in 1952. His resignation takes effect on Dec. 31.

Farm statistics released

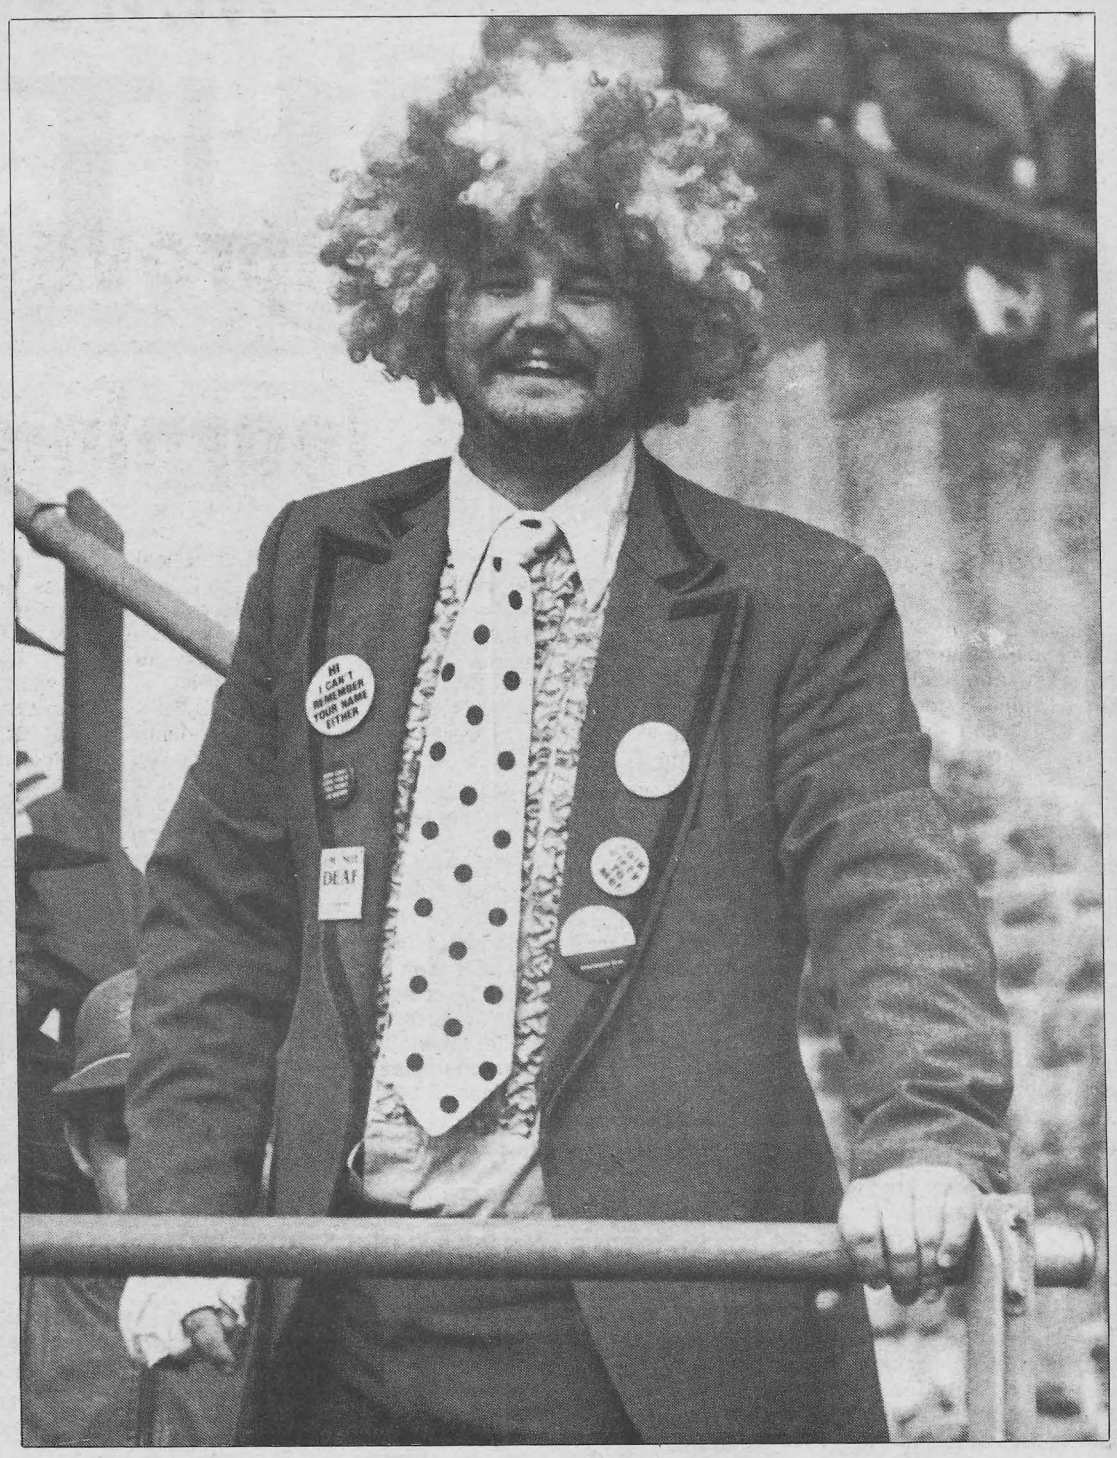
According to the Wisconsin Agricultural Statistics Service, more farmers went out of business in western Wisconsin in 1985 than 1984. Dunn County lost 60 farms in 1985. Only 40 farms went under during 1984.

The average size of the remaining farms in Dunn County continues to increase, as land that farmers sell goes to neighboring farms. Some of the lost farm land, however, goes to urban expansion or other development.

Wisconsin rains declared disaster

Five counties which have been hit by heavy rains were declared disaster areas by President Reagan this week. The declaration means that low-interest loans will be available to repair the damage caused by the weather.

The five counties are: Milwaukee, Sheboygan, Fond du Lac, Kenosha and Ozaukee.



Dressed for success—

Dressed for his home football game ritual, UW-Stout mascot, Deano, is set to rally Stout fans into an appreciative frensy. Deano, the high-priest of pigskin enthusiasm, makes an appearance at every home game and, so far, the Blue Devils have been undefeated at home. (Stoutonia photo by Dan Banach)

Model Store improves teaching and learning

by Suresh Seedo

The marketing students from UW-Stout and those from the Menomonie High School successfully began their fifth Model Store Program. The temporary retail establishment is called "What's Up"and is located on the Thunderbird Mall in north Menomonie.

The grand opening of Model Store occurred on Oct. 4. The Model Store is scheduled to operate during normal store hours until Thursday, Oct. 9.

The Model Store is the representation of an actual store where high school students are placed as employees into one of four departments. These department are: sales promotion, personnel, finance control and purchases.

Likewise, Stout students with marketing education majors are grouped into one of these specific departments. They act as the managers of the store.

The merchandise for sale included grocery items, clothing and some hardware supplies. All of these products were donated by the Thunderbird Mall merchants.

Dean Tabor, a lecturer in marketing education, said that there are three phases involved in the Model Store program. These phases are planning, pre-teaching at the high school and working in the Model Store.

Tabor's philosophy is that educators must take education beyond the walls of the classroom. "I think that all students should be able to see something, understand it and do it," Tabor said.

Jack Hart, a marketing education studentat Stout, said that he and 22 classmates take the course, which is listed as "Project Method/Model Store." Jack also happens to be the model store liaison for his class.

Hart revealed, "I feel that the model store simulation is probably the most beneficial class that is offered by the marketing education department."

Alan Marotz is responsible for channeling high school students towards the success of the Model Store. Alan is a teacher of marketing at the Menomonie Public High School.

Marotz said that his class of 54 students took an active part in all the preparations necessary for the Model Store program.

The high school students were interviewed by Stout marketing education students on Sept. 22 of this year. Based on this interview, students were placed into one of the four Model Store departments.

"This is the first year that the model store is using a computer," remarked Alan. "This computer is used to measure the inventory levels in the store."

Melanie Deutsch, the store's financial liaison, said "I was the first high school student who learned how to use the computer for the purposes of the store." As Melanie expressed it, "This store is giving me lots of experience and it is lots of fun."

Dan Meitzel, a high school student in the promotion department of the Model Store, said that his job was to advertise the store by the radio and newspaper media. Meitzel said that he felt quite privileged to meet some of the business men in the area. Meitzel plans to attend Stout after he graduates from high school.

Julie Nelson, another high school student said that the model store is helping her to develop her communicative skills. She also disclosed that she and her other classmates will receive credit for working six or more hours at the store.

All the profits made at the Model Store and the ending inventory from the store will be returned to the mall merchants who donated them. The "What's Up" Model Store was also supported by about 60 companies throughout Wisconsin and neighboring states.

Disabled explore job opportunities

by Carol Banks

Employment--that is the goal UW-Stout students strive for, but for many persons with disabilities, this is an unattainable goal.

The United States Census Bureau figures from 1980 show that over twelve million people of working age report a work disability, but only one-third of these people are working.

The President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped set aside the week of October 5-11, 1986 as National Employ the Handicapped Week. It is a time when the nation's employers and policymakers are expected to examine those factors which create working barriers for many disabled individuals.

The President's Committee has distributed a poster for this week with the following caption: "There is a will, if you provide the way. Change barriers to opportunities. Hire disabled workers."

UW-Stout has been helping to break down barriers to employment of the handicapped for nearly 20 years.

Stout has academic and service programs within the School of Education and Human Services that address the needs of the handicapped in the areas of employment and other special needs.

The Client Services Institute is located in the Vocational Rehabilitation Building just west of the library and is comprised of five service center programs that train students majoring in vocational rehabilitation. They also aid clients with varying disabilities in discovering their potential.

Two of the service centers at the Client Service Institute are concerned primarily with employment of the disabled worker. They are the Vocational Development Center (VDC) and Projects With Industry (PWI).

According to their brochure, the Vocational Development Center (VDC) "has been recognized as a national leader in provision of vocational evaluations and related services since 1968."

Jeb Kaiser is director of the VDC. He oversees undergraduate and graduate students doing practicums or field experience, as well as giving evaluations to clients.

Clients are usually referred for services from the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR), a state and federal agency. Notes Kaiser, "While we get referrals from this state and the Midwest, most of them come from the surrounding seven counties."

The clients of the VDC may have visible disabilities, such as cerebral palsy, or hidden ones, such as back problems, diabetes or learning disabilities.

Clients can have disabling conditions that could be mental, physical or educational. "Our people have to be DVR eligible, which means that they have to have a disabling condition that presents a barrier to employment."

The process of vocational evaluation gives the VDC a chance to find out what the clients' abilities, knowledges and strengths are, especially for those individuals who have been injured and must change their vocational focus because of their new physical limitations.

"We try them out on jobs, job samples or work simulations to provide vocational exploration. We also do counseling and provide resources to look at occupational information. What it is all leading up to is providing the person with the appropriate job matches, alternatives and options based on their backgrounds, characteristics and needs." said Kaiser.

An important point that Kaiser wanted to stress was that "we work with everybody as an individual--anybody coming through has an individual evaluation plan based on his individual needs."

The various service programs in the Client Services Institute often work together to coordinate the services that are needed by clients. The VDC works closely with other programs such as the Center for Independent Living, the Employer Assistance Center and other components of the Institute.

Quite often, clients are referred to Projects With Industry (PWI). Dave Swan is the director of PWI. As Swan observed, "you can see it (the range of services) is a con-

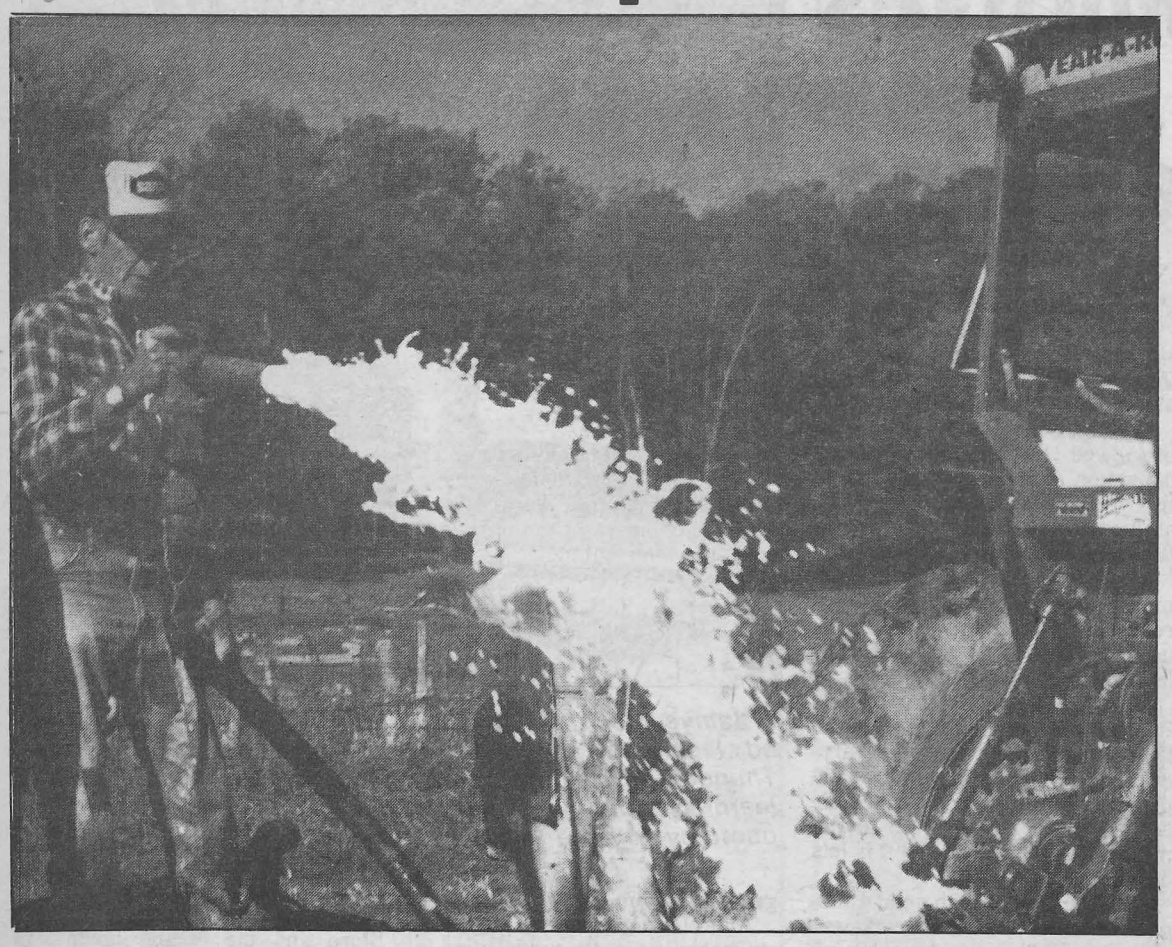
Farmers dump milk to protest farm policy



Reminiscent of a time when truckloads of milk cans were up-ended during farmers' protests in the 1930's, Rodger Jones and other farmers pumped milk out of a fertilizer tank onto a cornfield outside of Colfax.

About 2,200 pounds of milk, dumped in protest of policies that drive the price of milk down, was estimated to be worth $250. (Photo by Eric Johnson)

by Eric Johnson

Approximately 450 Western Wisconsin farmers participated in a state wide protest Wednesday, Oct. 2. Some of the farmers expressed their discontent at milk pricing policies by dumping milk in Colfax, Wisconsin. Other protesting farmers participated in programs which distributed dairy products to the needy.

Tom Saunders, one of the organizers of the milk dumping in Colfax, stated that "for the last 30 years, the government has systematically lowered the cost of farm commodities by lowering the loan rate." Saunders claimed that the reason for this policy was to move farmers off their farms.

"It's farm programs upside-down," Saunders said.

Saunders joined about 15 local dairy farmers at the Rodger Jones farm in Colfax Tuesday, Oct. 1. There they dumped approximately 2,200 pounds of milk, valued at about $250, onto a cornfield.

The protesting farmers hope to pressure government leaders into passing the "Save the Family Farm Act" — a bill introduced by Rep. Robert Kastenmeier (D-Wis.) and Sen. Thomas Harkin (D-Iowa).

The "Save the Family Farm Act" would control production on American farms by setting a minimum price for goods and limiting the amount that each farmer could sell. In addition, the group of disgruntled farmers are asking for a moratorium on farm foreclosures until agricultural prices stabilize.

"This is the beginning of a whole series of events designed to pass that bill and raise prices," Saunders said.

It currently costs about $15 to produce 100 pounds of milk in Wisconsin. That same milk is delivered to a creamery at $10.80, according to Lyle Moyer, an area milk producer.

Moyer, who took part in the milk dumping, says milk prices are being kept artificially low because agricultural commodity markets are flooded with imports from foreign nations.

These foreign milk exporters owe loan payments to major U.S. banks. The only way for the banks to collect on their loans, Moyer said, is if debtor nations are allowed to import their goods into the U.S.

"They'll let their own people starve and import stuff here in order to satisfy the big banks," Moyer said.

The protesting farmers are not represented by any national organization at this time; however, strong protest against farm policy has spread to many dairy producing states and it is being supported by several national labor unions. Farmers in New York, Maine and Vermont started organizing this summer and began dumping milk in September.

The participants in Wednesday's milk dumping protests expected the protests to continue until farm policies are changed.

"There'll be a lot more of this. This is just the start," warned Rodger Jones of Colfax.

The farmers who protested in Colfax last Wednesday have planned another milk dumping on November 1.

Student workshop set to prepare scholars for application process

by Karen Smith

A Scholarship Writing Workshop is being offered by the School of Home Economics and all students are welcome to attend. The workshop will be held in Room 208 of the Home Econcomics building on Tuesday, Oct. 14 at 4- p.m.

The intent of the workshop is to aid students in applying for the many scholarships that are available here at Stout.

Dr. Charles Metelka, of the Habitational Resources Department, will be speaking at the workshop along with Dr. Joy Jocelyn, the School of Home Economics Administator.

The workshop will explain how students should fill out a scholarship application, where errors are usually made and give some guidelines of what screening committees look for in applications.

All students are encouraged to attend, even freshmen, according to Dr. Metelka. "It is to the freshmens advantage to go so they can become more aware. (The workshop) will be preparing them for their sophmore or junior year, when they would apply for a scholarship," Metelka said.

Last year, $23,000 was distributed to Stout Students in the School of Home Economics in scholarship money, according to Metelka. This year is expected to be similar.

Considering the large number of scholarships and dollars being given to the students, the Scholarship Writing Workshop has not been very well attended by students in the past. Last year only 100 students attended and Metelka expects the same level of attendance this year.

"Just going to the meeting is an indication of responsibility, as is applying for a scholarship," Metelka said. "Not only will the student receive recognition in winning a scholarship, but it will show initiative. It helps you stand out a little in the career world."

Scholarship monies are donated by alumni, made as investments from companies and other firms who might want to help a student in a particular area of study.

Some scholarships have restrictions, such as requiring that recipient students are those pursuing a certain major or who hold a certain grade point average. Many scholarships do not have such restrictions and are open to almost everyone.

"Winning a scholarship," according to Metalka, "is like winning a competition. It's a way of standing out in a special way."

The Stout Foundation, although not involved with the writing workshop on Oct. 4, sponsors over 200 scholarships for undergraduate and graduate students each year. During the 1985-86 academic year, 267 scholarships were given out, totaling $108,000.

Dave Williams, Director of Stout Foundation, sees more advantages to winning a scholarship than just the financial help. "A scholarship is like putting a resume together," Williams said. "You are revealing yourself to an unknown group."

Many of the Stout Foundation scholarships are for students with financial need.

One general application from the Stout Foundation is sent to all on-campus students and is available, in various locations, for off-campus students. Foundation scholarship forms are collected each year in the month of Feberuary.

The Stout Foundation receives around 700 applications each year. Williams mentioned that there are many students who may need and could be eligible to receive a scholarship, who aren't applying. "Students worry about GPA," Williams said, "yet, most (scholarships) dont have GPA restrictions."

"Students need to know more about the scholarships available at Stout," Williams said. "Not only does a student receive money, but recognition, and it's an honor, sometimes better than the money they receive."

Executive advises learning

Addressing a group of graduates of Conneticutt high schools recently, Armstrong Rubber Company's Chairman, Frank R. O'Keefe, Jr., offered some observations on making the most of a college career.

According to Mr. O'Keefe, the most important lesson in college is learning how to learn.

"You have some wonderful living and experimenting to do before a career becomes the central issue," he advised. "Use the next few years well. You will probably never again have as much time to read, to explore, discuss and to grow."

O'Keefe's remarks were made during "Business Week 1986," sponsored by the Conneticutt Industry and Business Association.

Resucitation workshop offered

A mini-workshop which will teach participants how to do the emergency life-saving technique, CPR, will be held in the Johnson Fieldhouse wrestling room on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 14 and 15. The workshops will run from 7-9 p.m.

The CPR (cardio-pulmonary resucitation) workshop will be taught by Kay Carter, physical education professor, at the nominal fee of $3.80, which pays for the printed booklet participants recieve.

The CPR workshop, titled "Race for Life," is put on through the Red Cross and sponsored by UW-Stout Student Health Services.

Stout plugs into Town Meeting

UW-Stout will be recognizing World Food Day, on Thursday, October 16, by participating in the National Town Meeting. Between the hours of 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., a teleconference on the domestic and global food situation will be offered by the university. It will be held in Room 208 of the Home Economics Building.

Fund to benefit youngster

The Jill Weber Benefit Fund is encouraging organizations and individuals to contribute to the effort to raise money for the liver transplant of a three-year-old Menomonie girl.

Jill Weber, daughter of Fred and Jory Weber, is awaiting word that a donor has been found for her.

Collection canisters have been placed at several Menomonie businesses by the Maple Hills 4-H Club. A sign on each canister encourages business patrons to contribute to the fund drive for the expensive liver transplant operation.

Anyone who wishes to get more information on the collection drive or who has ideas for fund-raising, can call Pat Pickerign at 664-8767 or Donna Pickerign at 664-8530.

Congressman to discuss Gramm-Rudman

Congressman Steve Gunderson will discuss the impact of the Gramm-Rudman bill on the field of education at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Oct. 13 in Crystal Ballroom C of the UW-Stout Memorial Student Center.

The congressman's talk is sponsored by the Red Cedar Chapter of Phi Delta Kappa. Admission is free.

Library usage increases

Representatives of the Menomonie Public Library have announced that, during the first week of its operation, the new library has seen a nearly 225 percent increase in book and magazine circulation. This increase is a comparison to the usage rates of the library at its former location in the Mabel Tainter building.

Challenges and joys of parenting focus of "Magic Years" workshop

by Kristin Bailey

The years when a child is growing can be a hectic and uncertain time for parents. The daily challenges of child rearing bring many joys. They can also bring many fears, due to uncertainty and inadequate information.

"The Magic Years" is the title of a parent development program, held Oct. 7 and 14, which offers an opportunity to explore the concerns and joys about parenting. The program covers aspects of parenting from the miracle of birth to the preschool wonders.

The "Magic Year" program, sponsored by UW-Stout and Myrtle Werth Medical Center, promotes parent education.

This program is very beneficial to members of the Menomonie community who are parents. The workshops deal with many areas of child rearing.

The first of the two sessions, held on Oct. 7, dealt with the topics of family, child development, health and education. The second session, to be held on Oct. 14, will discuss interpeting child behavior and understanding the effects of parent-child interaction.

Workshop organizers work from the philosophy that children add a unique dimension to family life. The focus of the workshop is understanding and developing the parental role; balancing parental needs and child needs.

"Exercise, diet and sleep are basic to a child's health," said Deanne Applehans, director of "The Magic Years." Sleep patterns, proper exercise for young children, choices in nutrition and emergency aid procedures were discussed at the first workshop session.

Education is always a major concern with parents. How much education is too much, when does education come too soon and other such concerns were discussed. Strategies for encouraging a child's creative development were also touched on.

It was pointed out in the workshop that understanding developmental stages can aid parents in enjoying their children

Apparel Design students attend textile conference

by Jane LoPiccalo

Seventeen students recently returned from a week long study of the textile industry in Atlanta, Georgia. The students attended the Bobbin Show, which is the world's largest annual exhibition for the sewn products industry.

Each semester students in the Clothing and Textiles Design (CTD) department are offered the opportunity to study the textile industry of a major metropolitan area. This gives them a chance to see the apparel and textile industries in a realistic context.

In the past, members of the CTD department have traveled to the cities of Dallas, Los Angeles and New York.

The department chose to go to Atlanta this fall primarily because of the presence of the Bobbin Show. According to Dr. Donna Albrecht, attending the Bobbin Show "gave another perspective to the students' education."

As the world's largest annual exhibition for the sewn products industry, the Bobbin Show gave students an idea of both the diversity and magnitude of the industry.

Over 7,000 people attended the Bobbin Show on the first day. There were well over 3,000 booths representing various companies from all over the world.

Students, junior Kaleen Kenning, and senior Kim Mickelberg, indicated, it was a valuable opportunity to see what is actually happening in the industry, and to meet and establish contacts among those people they will soon be working with. Mickelberg, in particular, made several contacts which may very well lead to a future job.

During the conference, industry organizations also recognized Stout by presenting the department with a plaque for its contribution to the industry. Eight other schools also were recognized, including one school from Israel.

The plaque awarded to Stout, is the first of its kind. It was presented to UW-Stout by Womens Wear Daily and Bobbin Magazine, both apparel trade magazines, who recognized the Clothing and Textile Design program's continued effort and work towards educating people for future manufacturing, design and merchandising careers.

Voting sites reviewed

by Kelly Cohorst

Paul D. Nelson, President of Stout Student Association (SSA), spoke during the public comment session at the City Council meeting on Monday, Oct. 6.

Nelson proposed a change in the location of voting polls for Wards Five and Seven, which are currently located at the Menomonie Fire Station in Ward Four. Nelson proposed to change the location of these polls to the Price Commons, which is located in Ward Five.

"Nelson had an effective and positive presentation on relocating the voting poll," Menomonie Mayor Chuck Stokke commented after the meeting. "The only concern is the parking."

Stokke said the City Council was concerned that parking would be a problem. If parking could be resolved for the voting day, the mayor said that the proposal should go through at the November meeting.

Since Nelson's proposal would not have passed 30 days prior to the November elections, the change of the voting polls, if it is approved by the City Council, would not go into effect until the April elections.

Vice-President of Legislative Affairs Mark Nickels reported at this Tuesday's SSA meeting that his committee had extended their commitment to making voter registration available to students. The registration table will remain up from Oct. 15 to Oct. 18 on the Cobblestone Court, ground floor of the Memorial Student Center.

Vice-President of Academic Affairs Julie Weiss is organizing a petition drive. The petition drive will focus on the unfavored proposal amongst the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin-System for capping enrollment and limiting tuition increases.

The petition drive will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 21 and 22.

Attending the petition drive at Stout will be United Council President Bryce Tolefree and United Council Academic Affairs Director Ed Emerson. A press conference scheduled for noon Wednesday, Oct. 22 will be attended by several newspapers and local radio stations.

The United Council Leadership Conference will be taking place Oct. 10-12 at Green Lake, Wisconsin.

The Leadership Conference includes workshops dealing with the state budget process, minority student participation, how to fight back when the administration says no and how to combat tuition increases.

SSA members who will be attending the conference are: Mark Nickels, vice-president of legislative affairs, Jill Shlimovitz, inter-residence hall council representative, Henry Oboh, off-campus senator, Angela Bias, CKTO hall represenative, Denise Hoeft, media/advertizing coordinator, Dave Poplawski, JTC hall representative and Robb Zimdars, united council director.

It was incorrectly reported in last week's issue that David Asp was appointed to the Laboratory Advisory Coordinating Committee. Asp made the motion to appoint James Falkofske to that committee.

There is one off-campus senator seat open on the SSA. Anyone interested in appointment to the seat should contact Wes Stead at the SSA office, ground floor of the Memorial Student Center.

Regents

will be holding public hearings on plans and policies for the future of the UW-System "that we hope will bring us to the year 2000."

Weinstein said that in December, the board will adopt that plan as "our blue-print for the future."

Weinstein said that one of the most important issues facing the board is a gap between maintaining the quality of Wisconsin universities and the funding available.

"It is clear to us," Weinstein said, "that funding is currently lagging and there is a gap between us and the national average of some $88 million per year."

Weinstein said that there are three ways to bridge the quality-funding gap. They were: looking for more state funding (general purpose revenues), raising tuition or lowering enrollment throughout the UW-System.

One proposal facing the board of regents is to bring UW tuition to the midrange of others in the Big Ten Conference. "Relative to UW-Stout," stated Weinstein, "that would mean raising Stout's tuition by about $140 within the next four years."

Weinstein expressed hopes to encourage increased enrollment in UW System centers and extensions. "We believe that the centers could probably handle 2,500 more students without cost increases," Weinstein said.

Weinstein explained two possible initiatives to increase center-enrollments. They were: making credit-transfers from centers to universities easier and putting a greater distance in tuition between centers and universities.

UW-Stout Chancellor Robert Swanson and Vice Chancellor Wesley Face accompanied Weinstein on a Stout campus tour after the press conference.

The tour included visits to the Packaging, Chemistry and Computing labs as well as Corner III and the Library Learning Center.

After the tour, Weinstein described Stout as, "a superb institution."

Near the end of his visit, Weinstein met with Stout faculty, staff and students at an open meeting held in the Colonial Ballroom to discuss current issues that face the board of regents.

tinuum." This is where the client is referred to get prepared for employment and then get placed.

"The person must be interested in competitive employment and interested in maximizing their abilities," said Swan. "We're federally-funded, so it doesn't cost the client or DVR anything." DVR does pay for the Employment Readiness Training aspect of their program.

Employment Readiness Training gives clients the job searching and keeping skills needed for a person to be successfully placed on a job. Notes Swan, "This entails not only the whole job search but most specifically methods of presenting your abilities, rather than disabilities."

Over six hundred clients have been placed over the last four years, and 184 in this last year. PWI works with 15 counties, although the nine surrounding counties constitute their mainstay.

Besides providing direct client services, PWI also provides informational services which aid in breaking down many of the barriers to successful employment for their clients.

Swan pointed out that, the PWI "provides Technical Assistance to other employers. We also do formal awareness training to first line supervisors and any employers on the hiring and supervising of people with disabilities."

There are only 98 Projects With Industry programs distributed throughout our nation.

The PWI programs at Stout and the services provided by Vocational Development are helping to change barriers to opportunities and working to provide a way.

ing into the new areas of technology adds to our classes. I have been coming to the conference for 13 years and I learn something new every year." Overby said the conference "revs" him up and that it is always nice to see old friends here.

When asked why textiles and apparel manufacturing companies were not represented at the conference, a Stout faculty member answered that it is "not directly applicable to things being taught in high schools."

A concern of participants in the conference deals with discovering why females tend to stray away from technology education degrees.

Cathi Geisler addressed this problem in a special interest session titled "Serving the 50 Percent We Are Missing." The turnout to this session was tremendous, although predominantly male. The room was so full that some listeners had to sit on the floor.

Stout recently was granted funding from the State Department of Public Instruction to research and determine factors that inhibit females from teaching technology education. Len Sterry came up with the idea and wrote the research proposal which inspired the funding.

This research will be a three-year process which involves:

Finding factors that inhibit females from teaching technology education.

- Finding ways to eliminate those factors.
- Conducting pilot field tests in at least 33 school districts.

During the second semester of this school year, the school districts to be involved in this research will be selected. Technology education students from Stout will be involved in this project and results of the research will be brought into their classes.

When asked why the State Department of Public Instruction picked Stout to do this research, Sterry replied, "Because Stout has an excellent technology education program."

Parenting

while coping with their various growth stages.

Both the positive and negative aspects of parenthood were discussed during the first workshop session.

"Having children allows adults to be children once again," said Denise Skinner, a professor of family relations at Stout. Parenthood is positive in the emotional benefits and self-enrichment that it gives, Skinner pointed out. Parenthood also moves one into adulthood.

The negative aspect of parenthood is mainly its stresses.

The stresses of parenthood are categorized into four classes. The first type of parenthood stresses are the physical demands being a parent creates. These include the loss of sleep in order to be availabile to the child.

The second type of parenthood stress is the impact it has on a marriage relationship.

"In many roles, consciously or unconsciously, the woman assumes the role of (primary) care giver," commented Skinner.

Emotional costs are another stress related to parenthood. Rearing a child brings on many new joys and fears.

The final type of parenthood stresses discussed at the workshop are the opportunity costs and restrictions placed on parents; parents can not venture out as much as they once did or may like to.

Many statewide and regional events are being planned, with participation from the Stout community, which relate to the subject of parenting.

"The Festival of Youth and Families" will be sponsoring cultural day trips to various theatres. The 1986 Fall Youth Conference for Birth, sponsored by the March of Dimes is yet to be held. Family Camp, held Nov. 14 - 16, will give families a chance to get to know each other better through a camp experience.

More information may be obtained about any of these programs from the Office of Continuing Education, at 232-2164.

Human rights denied Chilean protestors

American foreign policy signals have been confusing. The Reagan administration practically exhausted its bag of tricks in gaining Congressional approval of $100 million in aid for the Nicaraguan "Freedom Fighters" while public polls showed most Americans opposed aiding the Contras.

Then Congress overrode President Reagan's veto of the recently approved sanctions against the South African government which has practiced apartheid without penalty for more than two centuries.

The plight of those fighting for human rights in Chile has been overlooked while these other two events received major coverage. America needs to seriously review its policy of supporting the fascist dictatorship of Chilean President Pinochet. Pinochet constantly defends the Chilean military government's violent opposition to protests as the only way to stop the spread of Marxism.

A state of siege has existed in Chile since the Sept. 7 assasination attempt on President Pinochet. The following day, President Pinochet announced, "The government will get tough in its war against Marxism; all those who are involved in human rights and those things should be expelled from the country or imprisoned."

The most disturbing aspects of the Chilean state of siege are the virtual suspension of the right to habeas corpus, the imposed right to detain people without explanation in places which are not official places of detention and strict control on the press, correspondence and most other forms of public and private communications.

Chilean students continue to organize their protests in the face of violent opposition. Hundreds of students have been detained, some have been shot and several have been killed by uniformed police sometimes supported by military personnel. Police and military personnel raided the Metropolitan University in Santiago, Chile where they arrested more than 100 students.

As the list of injustices perpetrated against Chilean students grows, America's leaders choose to look the other way. Overlooking the Chilean state of siege may have a heavy price for everyone who values freedom. The time is now to contact our governmental leaders to tell them we know about the daily injustices in Chile and we won't allow the American government to condone such activities.

ALL MEN ARE CREATED EQUAL.

Human rights violations have become a more obvious issue in recent years. The violation of basic human rights is being ignored in more than one third of the world's countries. In these countries torture is part of the government's policy to keep their bloody totalitarian government in power.

The general victims of these governments are people of all social classes, age group, trades, professions, and beliefs. The general reason their arrest and torture is just that they expressed their thoughts and beliefs, a basic freedom in the U.S. For example in Iran or El Salvador children have been forced to watch their mothers tortured.

In some countries instruments are used to perform the torture in a more painful way. In Syria methods include the "black slave," an electrical apparatus that forces a heated metal skewer into the bound victims anus. Relatives of wanted people in Syria, including adolescents, have reportedly been held as hostages and tortured to force suspects to give themselves up. In some circumstances, doctors may be present to insure that the victims survive for future torture.

Torture most often occurs during a detainee's first days in custody. These vulnerable hours are usually spent incommunicado, the detainee denied access to relatives, lawyer or independent doctor.

Sources of evidence about torture include an increasing number of first-hand accounts from victims shortly after torture.

More than a million people signed a petition to the United Nations calling for an anti-torture resolution, a step that helped stimulate the Declaration on the Protection of all persons from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

Today, due to these national and international efforts of detainees and their families, lawyers are more aware than ever before that international support is available. Urgent Action network, established by Amnesty International in 1974, allows a speedy response by cables and letters from individuals (including Stout students) around the world on behalf of a person known by name who is at risk of being tortured.

The world which is becoming smaller, needs more attention of other people in the other countries. One of the important factors in the struggle for basic human rights is that all the individuals have to know that they can make a positive difference in the other people's lives.

The other important factor is that Stout students are not an exception to the above concept. They can act in a direction that can eliminate torture and other inhuman treatment around the world. However writing letters for one short semester is only a start for success.

One of the ways to help and to get involved is to join organizations whose objectives are to struggle for human rights for all the people around the world. Amnesty International is one of the organizations, which dedicated its effort to the elimination of torture and violation of human rights.

Involvement and participation tells those people who are under torture and pain that there are people in a small part of the world, called Stout, who care and are concerned about them.

It eliminates the distance between people and creates a number of unknown friends around the world. The greatest part of having these friends is they then will be free just like you and can remember you as an unknown friend.

One such person was tortured in a Latin American prison and became the subject of a letter-writing campaign. Later he recalled, "the letter said Take heart. The world knows you're alive. We are with you. Regards, Monica, Amnesty International.' That letter saved my life." The most important fact about torture in the eighties is that you can do something to stop it. MAKE A DIFFERENCE.

Subject: Dedicated to drawing out the talent of himself and others

by Tracy Lea Landis

Dr. Patrick Liebergen

Dr. Patrick Liebergen, Associate Professor of music, has been teaching at UW-Stout for eight years. He is the director of choral activities at Stout.

Liebergen directs the University Choir, Symphonic Singers and the newly-renamed Jazz Ensemble. He also teaches class voice and advanced voice courses.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS IT THAT YOU DO AT STOUT?

LIEBERGEN: The most important thing that I do is that I teach people to become the best that they can be, through music.

STOUTONIA: DO YOU THINK THAT THE STUDY OF MUSIC CAN CARRY OVER TO OTHER UNRELATED FIELDS OF STUDY?

LIEBERGEN: In terms of the student becoming what they can become, yes.

I think that what I'm teaching them to do is to find out how good they can become and how to work at something in order to achieve success. That's important; that there is a certain amount of work and dedication involved in anything that you want to seek.

As a music educator, I'm trying to help people become the best that they can be; as musicians and as people. I'm trying to teach people that, with a sense of dedication, you can learn much more than what you ever thought you could learn, just by applying yourself.

STOUTONIA: IS THERE A PROGRESSION, IN TERMS OF INCREASING EXPERIENCE, IN THE DIFFERENT CHOIR GROUPS?

LIEBERGEN: I don't really look at it like that. For example, this semester in University Choir (UW-Stout's all-women's choir), we are doing the Ceremony of

A question of maggots

Finally, Rich Brueckner has found someone his own size to pick on. I congratulate him for directing his uninspired ire at a worthy target, the maggot. I have heard that Rich is, in person, a rather nice boy. This leads me to think that he, in his role as a cheap baiter and cynic, is after mass readership. He wants to stand out, to make a name for himself, an understandable aim in a world smothering in petty mindlessness. Good to know that Rich is out there keeping a firm hand on the pillow.

Who knows, someday he may be as well known in our time, as, say, Joseph Goebbels was in his. Goebbels, in his position as Hitler's Minister of Enlightenment and Propaganda, dedicated himself and his skills to creating and perpetuating harmful and grotesque stereotypes. Goebbels took his anti-human logic to its natural conclusion when he killed himself, his wife and his six children in Hitler's besieged bunker in 1945.

I am waiting breathlessly to see what Rich Brueckner does with his budding talent.

Jeanne Wilkinson

Profanity questioned

I would like to thank (Julie Abel) for her opinion of what a columnist should be along with her idea of their strategy. My reaction to Richie's column was not exactly one of anger but rather one of sarcasm.

When a columnist uses profanity in a manner in which Rich Brueckner used it, he seems to have lost something. My point is not that America's backbone (factory workers) or Rich Brueckner is stupid or unintelligent; but rather by using the terminology, which Rich so readily signs his name to in a printed college publication, he reduces his respect or credibility in the eyes of many who regularly read The Stoutonia.

Your focus on the plight of the American factory worker is way off the point. My point is simply this: after working in a factory situation, for some years before returning to school, and living through various strikes and layoffs I have had the opportunity to hear what factory workers can sound like at bar time.

There is usually a bitter feeling of deprivation which is most often accompanied by profanity. There is a feeling of being ripped off, that something that was rightfully theirs has been taken away. I guess Rich felt that Saturday, Sept. 6, 1986 was rightfully his to do with as he pleased and he sounded like one of the above described individuals in voicing his feelings.

Is this dialect one that would be considered by most as intelligent sounding? NO, I hardly think so. Is there another way in which Rich could make his point without giving you the feeling that you have gone from reading our school newspaper to thumbing through the latest edition of Hustler magazine? Yes, I think there is.

The summer was extended, by state law, to provide students who are employed in some aspect of Wisconsin's tourism industry a chance to work through the official summer tourism season. This gave us all a few extra days at the expense of one Saturday at the beginning of the semester and one at the end. BIG DEAL! Why are we here at Stout? To complain about how we feel after consuming too much

CAMPUS SLANT/ What are your feelings on WVSS broadcasting on a cable station?

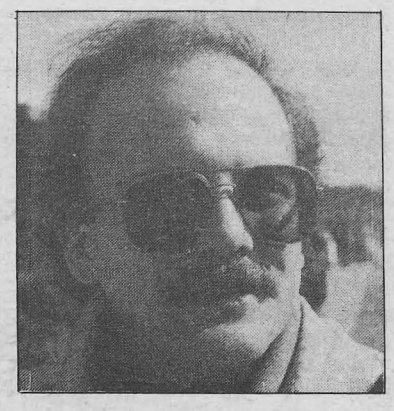
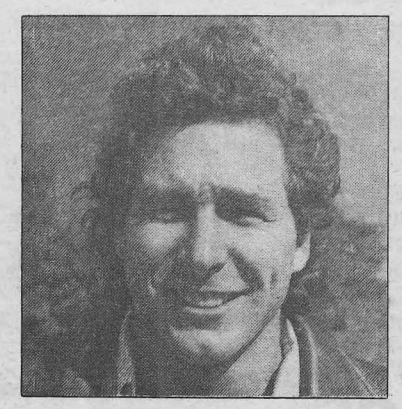
Curt Beile,
Hotel Restaurant Management,
Senior,
I don't think it's a good idea, because I think it should be sent over the local TV network. If it where sent over the local network the students could just turn on any TV and find out what is going on locally or campus wide, rather then having to pay to here WVSS.

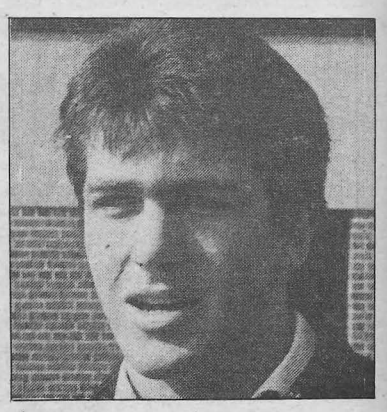
Debbie Jensen,
Fashion Merchandising and Business,
Senior,
If they offered good programs I think it would be a good for the students and the community around here. If you could see what they are talking about, you would learn more.



Bob Manor,
Management Technology,
Graduate Student,
I am indifferent on it because I don't listen to it. I think that some of the students would be deprived if they didn't get cable. If it's on cable I think it will be limited access.



Rich Ulman,
Fashion Merchandising,
Junior,
It will increase are listener-ship for one, there would also be clearer reception. It would just make WVSS a better quality radio station.



Paul Gordee,
Hotel Restaurant Management,
Sophomore,
I think it would be better for the variety of choice, and for the simple fact that static and reception would be better. Right now we have interference problems from appliances and the hair dryer in the morning.I think cable would help these problems.

Fine Line

Pining for Stout

Jef Maynard

Since so many of us use our dry, dry, dry history books to press the pretty falls leaves, and leave them there until the winter snow melts, (uncovering them so we can send them on their migration to Rental Resources,) I thought it would be helpful to give the new students, and those older students, (those born before 1963 but after 1908), a brief and nearly accurate history of the placebo we call UW-Stout.

It might be appropriate to introduce the cast of characters responsible for the creation of this adorable mutant of higher education. There were the three partners in the Knapp, Stout, and Co. Company: James Huff Stout, Colonel William Puff Knapp, and silent partner Captain Andrew (Blow Your House Down) Tainter. Although Tainter was the loudest one of the three, he liked to be called the Silent Partner.

There was also a wheeler dealer named Wilson, but he didn't show up until after the first reel. He was in the lobby, getting popcorn. He lived in Washington D.C. He was a lobbyist.

Stout had three children, one of each sex. The girl was named Moe, although her full name was Motown. The two older children were Everett Thaddius, known as E.T. and Arnold Schwartzen Stout, who was known as Pink because of his interest in women's clothes.

During the early lumbering years of Menomonie, (and Menomonie has continued to lumber for some time since,) there was little for the children of school age to do. There was a school but there were no teachers, except a Miss Rotunda Floyd.

Little is known about her, except that she lived alone in a small house near the jail, and played the accordian. Since she had almost no interest in children, school was generally unattended.

The members of the Knapp, Stout, and Co. Company board of directors thought that while it preferable to have workers who were uneducated, they hoped their own children would have more opportunities. This seemed probable since they owned most of twelve counties.

Since ownership and wealth doesn't automatically bring education and culture, the members of the Knapp, Stout etc. Co. decided to bring the Great Panderess: Higher Education, to their children, and all the future children, that were bound to happen along. So they drew straws; Stout lost.

Planning began for a school to be called The Huff and Puff School for Industrial Continuance and Domestic Subservient Arts. Since the Knapp, Stout; and so on Co. owned all the trees and the trees were all pine and cedar they decided to build the school out of oak. "It'll be a really hard school that way," joked Wilson. It was a joke too.

All the oak was owned by the Johnson Wax and Floor Company of Racine, and since they wanted to make wagon wheels and floors that needed plenty of wax, they wouldn't sell Knapp... the oak.

"It's going to be alright," said Tainter in a loud voice, "we'll build the whole mess from pine." The whole board plugged their ears and nodded their heads.

The workers began to make desks, pencils, and so on from the wagon factory owned by Knapp. Knapp wagons were once the most famous wagons of all. In fact, for most of the 19th century, people would take Knapp wagons over any other. Whenever someone had a tough job to do, they'd say, "I think I'll take a Knapp."

Construction began on the first building in the spring of 1896. Naturally it was a teacher's lounge, and built of the finest pine. It was a splendid piece of craftsmanship. Unfortunately, it burned to the ground on July 4th when a errant Roman candle landed in the unfilled pine swimming pool.

After this disaster, the construction speed doubled, and so did the tuition. The next building was the field house, gymnasium and the first pine baseball diamond in the US. It was also the first domed baseball stadium in collegiate ranks, named after the man who whittled most of the cedar shakes, Alonzo Conn. It was known as the Conndome.

Hoping to open the school in the fall of 1897, Stout directed the crews to start building the necessary classrooms.

For the Manual Training program, they constructed a steam powered industrial education center. It had a iron foundry designed by Edward Wingnutt Losten. It was called The Losten Foundry.

Next to this building was the woodworking education center named after Elvis Probbly. This was the Hall of Probbly Wood.

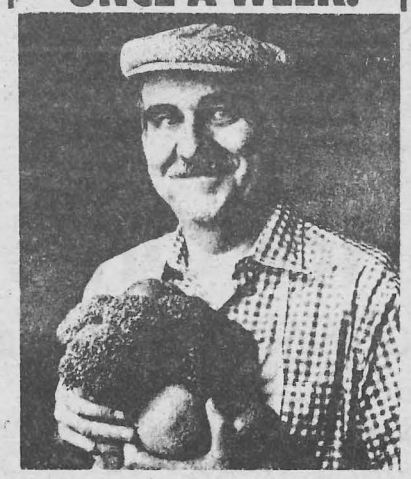
For the future young women of Huff and Puff, the first building was Vaccuum Hall. It was a long corridor with dozens of closets along both walls, containing bins of various forms of dust, and newly invented, hand-operated "suction brooms."

The next building for women at Huff and Puff Institute was for the Domestic Food Distribution Sciences. It was similar to a prison food service and run by a since forgotten character named Billous McQuirk. It also had a large number of sinks where the women would practice washing dishes and hands.

Before the Huff and Puff Institute of Perpetual Training opening in the fall of 1897, tuition had been raised three times. The football team hadn't lost a single game and the name was changed to Stout Manual Training and Perpetual Domestic Responsibility Institute.

Much has changed since those lost days but some things haven't. Some of the pencils are still made of pine, the Placement Office still considers "marriage" as "placement," and the Conndome is still very popular.

FOR THE BEST DEFENSE AGAINST CANCER, SEE YOUR DOCTOR ONCE A YEAR AND HIM ONCE A WEEK.



He may not look like everybody's idea of a cancer specialist.

But there's strong evidence that your greengrocer has access to cancer protection you won't find in any doctor's office.

Like broccoli. Peaches. Canteloupes. Spinach. And other sources of Vitamin A related to lowering the risk of cancer of the larynx and esophagus. Not to mention sweet potatoes, carrots, pumpkin, winter squash, tomatoes, citrus fruits and brussels sprouts.

Vegetables such as cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, kohlrabi and cauliflower may help reduce the risk of gastrointestinal and respiratory tract cancer.

In short, make sure you do what your mother always told you to do. Eat your vegetables.

NOTHING IMPRESSES AN EMPLOYER LIKE DROPPING OUT OF SCHOOL.

After several years of intense study, a lot of college graduates finally learn something. They're not qualified for the job they want.

Fact is, many graduates never find a career in their field of study. All their time spent in study. Not enough time in the field.

That's why there's a nationwide program for college students called Co-operative Education. It allows students to alternate studies at the college of their choice with paid, practical work experience in the career of their choice.

To participate in Co-op Education you don't have to fit into any particular socio-economic group. You don't have to be a straight "A" student either.

All you really need to be, is smart enough to leave school.

Co-op Education
You earn a future when you earn a degree.

Cryptic Notes

Chronic misconceptions

Tim Hopkins

Each Thursday afternoon The Stoutonia is printed, the editorial board members get to contrast their hopes for that week's paper with the final product. The task is informative and enjoyable as we set our sights on our goals for the next Stoutonia.

The common mistakes made each week in the race to meet the deadline often create pleasant memories when we take the time to collectively catch our breath and review the facts.

Things are rarely what they seem. If we end up relating the news in such a way that everyone happily agrees with that week's report, then I will be concerned whether we have given up our right to think creatively.

One of the dividends from being an editor is that the job allows you to enjoy the way in which the most innocently created headlines end up with a totally different meaning than was intended and the message ends up being outright ludicrous. Writing headlines is an acquired art that is difficult to learn because it is the final task of the day for copy editors to complete before they get to head home.

Some classic headlines told to me by the city editor of The Denver Post included one about the entertaining sport of pickle storage. The headline How to put pickles up yourself must have turned a few heads. Please pass the K-Y Jelly.

I am told that the Brady Hospital nurses did not receive the publicity they had expected when they threatened to strike. I am sure many read the story, Brady nurses put out. The question is, was there a significant increase in the number of patients seeking loving kindness. If they were not already upset I am sure many nurses had high temperatures when they headed to work the next day. Brady nurses upset, just does not grab the reader in the same way.

It is often interesting how the pressure created by tragedy is released through hilarity. No matter how much experience you have writing about death, the job does not get any easier. Therefore, I have this theory that whoever wrote the headline for a story about a man decapitated at a nightclub, Headless man in topless bar, was truly disturbed by the man's plight but could best react with humor.

And now, the headline you have all been waiting for, may I have the envelope please. High school girls set for inter-course tourney. At least the coach did not have to go out of his way to achieve good attendance at the practice sessions. Whatever you might say about this headline, the inter-city high school golf tournament will never again be viewed from the same perspective.

Carols by Benjamin Britton. That is an extremely sophisticated work; it is not a beginning piece of music, by any means.

We have enough musical leaders in the group that they are helping to teach the others, who have not had as much experience in choral singing.

You can teach just about anything to anyone. It really doesn't matter if a person is a music major or in any other field. You can really teach music to anyone.

And you can change peoples' lives through music; through the kinds of experiences we have as musicians. A sense of singing, not only musically together, but also being one with our minds, in one musical thought. That can be tremendously fullfilling. Also, singing to an audience and hearing the applause; having these experiences that maybe a person never had before anywhere else.

STOUTONIA: COULD YOU TELL OUR READERS ABOUT THE PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES YOU ARE INVOLVED IN?

LIEBERGEN: I'm going to be giving a lecture to music teachers at the Wisconsin State Music Conference in Madison.

I will be giving a lecture titled "Rehearsal Procedures for Achieving Pulsation in Choral Music."

I will also be guest-conducting a choir from Spring Green, Wisconsin at the convention, to show that by using certain rehearsal procedures, you can effectively teach a piece of choral music to a group of people. The technique has a lot to do with the things we have been doing in my classes; rythmic speaking, stepping rythms, singing on "do," "po," staccato, subdividing the beat.

I use all of these teaching techniques at Stout. I have heard teachers talk about them thoughout the country, and I have experienced them when I was singing in some leading choirs.

I sang with the Chicago Symphony Chorus, in which Margaret Hillis, for example, did rythmic speaking.

I do alot of judging for the Wisconsin State Music Association choral competititions and, so many times, I see that choirs are well prepared because they have used these techniques, while other choirs have never used them.

What I am going to do is go down to the convention to show people how it is done.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS YOUR EDUCATIONAL BACKGROUND?

LIEBERGEN: I am from Green Bay, originally. I went to St. Norbert College in DePere, Wisconsin, to get an undergraduate degree in vocal music education. Then I taught high school in a suburb of Chicago.

I went on for my master's in choral conducting at UW-Madison. I taught another while and then went to the University of Colorado-Boulder for my doctorate in the history and literature of choral music.

All the while, I conducted alot of choirs. I conducted at the universities I attended and I conducted numberous church choirs. I also did alot of singing as a baritone soloist.

STOUTONIA: YOU DO NOT ASK YOUR STUDENTS TO ADDRESS YOU AS DR. LIEBERGEN. WHY IS THAT?

LIEBERGERN: The custom around the music department was rather informal when I came here, and I just left it that way.

STOUTONIA: YOU ARE A PUBLISHED WRITER OF CHORAL WORKS. COULD YOU TELL US ABOUT YOUR WORKS?

LIEBERGEN: I started writing choral works in about 1981, 1982. Now, I have had numerous pieces published, by seven different publishers, the most notable being Columia Pictures Publications and by Shawness Press.

Some have been recorded for national distribution. "As The Leaves Fall" has been sung around the country, as have many of my other works.

This "Resonete in Laudibus" that Symphonics is singing, has been recorded with the Nashville Symphony Brass.

STOUTONIA: COULD YOU TELL US ABOUT YOUR FAMILY?

LIEBERGEN: I have a wife and two boys, aged three and seven.

STOUTONIA: AND DO YOU LIVE IN THE TOWN OF MENOMONIE?

LIEBERGEN: I live just outside the city limits. I just bought a lot and I am building a house. My wife and I designed the house, so it looks like we are settling in for awhile.

"You know, I've seen a lot of people with tombstones in their eyes."--H.X. Axton

An individual that I'm not very fond of recently asked me: "Who the hell do you think you are writing all that trash in the paper? Nobody understands what you're writing."

"I write jokes," I responded. "Nobody cares what you're writing."

He hasn't even pretended to be friendly ever since. The guy has no sense of humor.

A sense of humor is the best cure for stress. The world, unfortunately, is full of people who live their whole lives without a sense of humor. Others I know just seem to lose it one week out of the month.

Perhaps some of these people take themselves too seriously. That's alright though; it balances out because no one tends to take them seriously.

There is the opposite extreme -people who don't take anything too seriously. Believe it or not, we really aren't that bad when you get to know us.

We have priorities and all that; but we try not to let them interfere with an overall good time. If we have any common philosophy at all, I suppose it's: "Don't sweat the small stuff."

Some think that we are crazy. I can't speak for the others but I don't think I'm crazy. I'm somewhere between crazy and Chronic.

What is a Chronic? It's none other than the featured species on today's episode of Mutual of Omaha's WILD KINGDOM. But first, a word from our sponsor.

Outrageousness! It's nothing more than a way to wake people up!

I tend to agree with columnist Steve Marmel who wrote that Jim McMahon should really say, "Outrageousness! It's nothing more than a way to piss people off!"

Let's delve into some outrageousness and see if it has the desired effect...

"Hello, this is Marlin Perkins. Today we will investigate the hedonistic habitat of the North American Chronic. Thousands of Chronic and ex-Chronic alumni descend on this community every homecoming. It's a true spectacle of nature.

We begin our observation on a cold October evening. It's 7 pm. The subject is leafing through his physics book for the first time this semester. He has an 8 am exam and one hell of a bad attitude. The phone rings:

"Hey Dick, let's go drink some sauce," says the voice. This terminology leads us to suspect that the caller is also a potential Chronic.

"I can't go," responds the subject, "I've got a frotting physics test tomorrow." He then sneers at his lonely physics book. "Where should I meet you?"

This confirms that the subject is indeed a Chronic; he blows off studying with little or no coercion.

The Chronic then finishes the beer he was drinking while "studying" and performs the customary ritual of harassing his roommates to join him uptown.

His first stop is the Log Jam. Several iced teas later, he feels prepared to do some serious drinking at the Meet Market. The bar is crowded and we sense that things are about to get out of hand because the Chronic is buying multiple rounds of shots.

At this point, we decide that we have no choice but to use the capture stick on him. We are about to snare him when he trips over his own leather shoelaces (which refuse to remain tied because repeated beer spills have hardened them).

As the Chronic falls, he shoves the noose off to one side. It snugly loops itself around one of the ample breasts of a nearby, rotund bar patron. She is not amused.

The capture has been botched, much to the delight of the Chronic's drinking buddies who have begun to chant, "Boob loop! Boob loop!"

The shocked bouncer stands there motionless as he watches the enraged bar patron whap us repeatedly upside the head with our own capture stick.

"Throw this perverted old relic out of here!" she screams at the bouncer.

We wait outside the bar until one of the Chronic's drinking buddies emerges with the rotund bar patron. We decide to follow them since we believe that he is also a Chronic.

As the sun rises, we find ourselves on the brink of an unprecedented scientific discovery: the Chronic Coyote Syndrome. Will the Chronic lift his arm up off the pillow and wake her up? Or would he rather just chew his arm off?

These and countless other mysteries may remain forever unsolved in the natural order of things that comprise The WILD KINGDOM.

alcohol? To find out what it is like to sit through a class with a hangover? These things might occur during a college career but I don't think these are the MAIN reasons why most of us are here.

A college education should be a choice that we make for ourselves. The choice is, or should be, our own. Attending class on one Saturday is just something that comes along with that choice.

Are wimps righteous

I agree with several points in Gene Emahiser's recent article, "Wimps in America." Liberty, freedom and peace must remain part of this country's principles. We all agree that the men and women who had the good sense and courage to work at such a dream did us all a great service. They were indeed "righteous" dudes.

This is where Emahiser's logic falls apart and he loses many of his readers. America did not prosper, because it was "aflame with righteousness." And, what about those "absolutes" of the Bible Emahiser praises? The Puritans who lead stark, rigid lives based on such absolutes are no longer thriving. America achieved greatness through a wonderful set of ideas on government, hard work and stubborness. Somewhere in the scheme of things God smiled and gave us a break and this too allowed us to prosper. But, we shaped our destiny; we built this country through our efforts with His patience.

But, poor logic is not Emahiser's biggest problem. It is the inability to embrace his audience. We all at times need a gentle reminder to examine the direction our lives are taking. To be preached at about Biblical absolutes and Doomsday predictions of our country's future serves no useful purpose. Emahiser would do better to concentrate on his audience and his message which is important. He must recognize that we too want the good things from our lives. He must speak to us gently, for he wants to help shape our hopes and dreams — our fragile futures.

Sincerely,
Molly Olsen

Students not fooled

The Harvey Sutcliff letter of last week tries to fool the Stout student. He states that those who earn wages at the University are the same ones who want to disenfranchise students from the right to vote. This is not true.

Had you missed the letter, Sutcliff's complaint regarded the change of date for the vote to elect the mayor. At one time, the date for the election was established by the city council to be during the regular Nov. 1986 election. This would have made the election of the mayor seven months after the referendum to change the governmental system.

In retrospect to that election delay decision, sensitive aldermen felt that such a long break would not be fair to the newly elected mayor. The wait until Nov. would have been 29 percent of the mayor's term. This is just not right to anyone who runs for elected office to have nearly one-third of their term unproductive.

In addition, it would have been unfair to the city to go without elected leadership. Seeing the problem, the city council corrected the inequity by establishing a more prudent date.

Sutcliff states that the city council or "Stout officials" did not notify students of the change or inform students of their right to absentee ballots. It should be understood that the Council publishes its affairs in The Dunn County News as its official paper. The council has no obligation to inform any group specifically. The "Stout officials" are responsible for notifying students about Stout affairs and not about city affairs.

Should the eligible Stout student voters be concerned about the political life of this community, they should attend city council meetings. If it happens that they are not able to do so, the next best means of being informed of the city's actions is to purchase The Dunn County News, the official newspaper of the city of Menomonie. Information on the change of election date and how to vote via absentee ballot were recorded in this publication.

We all should be pleased that the councilmen in question did not succumb to political pressure. They saw what was best for the city and performed their elected duty well.

Stout student involvement in future elections is forthcoming. Until that time, the city council meetings are open and there is time on the agenda to hear from you. Looking forward to seeing you there!

Sincerely,
Thomas P. Phillips

Contributions highlighted

The news story "Bash on the Grass planned; Homecoming's non-alcohol event," which appeared in the Oct. 2, 1986 edition of The Stoutonia, contained a misconseption that I would like to clarify at this time.

The story incorrectly stated that Christa Sanicola and I "have taken on the duties of planning and organizing the event (Bash on the Grass)."

A great many people more worthy of praise, who have contributed a great deal more of themselves than I have, were not mentioned. So in order to give credit where credit is due, I would like to take this time to recognize Dave Asp, James Falkofske, Kay Gilbertson, Diane Hjelter, Denise Hoeft, Mark Nickels, Lucy Nicolai, Christa Sanicola, Bill Siedlecki and Julie Weiss for all they have done to insure that this first ever event will be a resounding success.

"Bash on the Grass" would not be so very close to completion without their support and dedication. My own role in the planning of the event has been overemphasized.

'The Foreigner' presents touching humor

by Noreen Spraner

The University Theatre is opening its 1986-1987 with Larry Shue's, "The Foreigner." "The Foreigner" is a very funny play about a man called Charlie, who is depressed that his hospitalized wife does not like him very much. He decides at his friend's suggestion to take a vacation at a resort hotel.

Charlie is so depressed that he do not want to talk to anyone. So his friend, Crowley, suggests that he pretend he is a foreigner so that he do not have to communicate with anyone. At first Charlie is not happy about the idea, but after hearing an embarrassing conversation he jumps headfirst into the role of foreigner to hide the fact that he had overheard them.

This change in status leads to a lot of funny and touching situations in the play. Charlie, for once in his life becomes a sought after individual which greatly improves his mood. The owner of the inn, played by Sandy King, is so thrilled to have a real live foreigner as a guest that she dotes on him and even undertakes teaching him English.

Natalie Bothwell is directing the play. She got the idea of doing the play from an old student of hers that decided to leave Stout and major in theater. He had seen its original run by the Milwaukee Reperatory Theatre in 1983 and really liked it. Apparently others did too because from there it moved on to Broadway, where it won critical acclaim.

Larry Shue the play's author grew up in Kansas, as did Bothwell, and writes from a midwest perspective. He has written two other plays beside "The Foreigner" that are well-known, they are "Wenceslas Square" and "The Nerd." Larry Shue died tragically in September of 1985 in an airplane crash, just as his playwriting career had seemed to be getting off the ground.

"This is one show you want to Graduate attributes success to richness of Stout's campus life

by Jef Maynard

It is a reassuring thing among studio artists to hear of a Stout graduate who has been making a living solely from sales of artwork. One such story goes by the name of Greg West.

West recently returned to Stout from his Phoenix, Arizona home and studio to visit friends and faculty still here, "and to do some serious trout fishing," West said.

Having graduated from Stout in 1980, West applied for graduate school programs, ultimately being accepted by Arizona State. After three years and acquiring his advanced degree, West remained in Phoenix and pursued his profession.

Remembering his Stout term, West said, "I had a great time when I went to school here." West mentioned drawing instructor Doug Cumming as a special guiding force and friend beyond what a student would expect.

"I learned as much on the bar stool as in the classroom," he said half-joking. "We used to hang out in the Log Jam for hours talking about art and life, that kind of stuff... Doug and I were the first ones to put up a dart board there," he said with some pride.

Discussing the art department and that aspect of his education, West said, "I'd be here in the studio all the time. I had a key to the place because I let people in on Sundays. I lived here."

Unlike current trends in the department which seem to be running stronger in the design fields, rather than studio arts, West had some memories of the strong studio group that worked in Applied Arts.

"We had a really tight group. Sometimes it was almost too tight, people got too close working together and sometimes that was trouble. But even that trouble was healthy."

Often the group had "outrageous parties." West recalled having people "from other majors plead with me to take them to the art parties because they were the wildest affairs. The behavior was beyond what people were used to."

After being accepted to Arizona State, West "felt really good about going to a new place where I didn't know anybody. I could be just about anybody."

West enjoyed the privilege of having his own University sponsored studio on campus. "If they had not given me the studio, I would have packed up and and left. Painting in your apartment is crazy and impossible."

For the first month, West basically hid in his studio and worked. "I did not meet anybody, I just worked. I did not even talk to the people who were on my grad committee. I wanted to have something to show first."

When asked what he liked best about grad school and what advancements were possible, West said, "At Arizona, they leave you alone. They gave me a place to work and did not bother me. I have this thing about hard work. I was in there twelve hours a day. It does not matter whether you feel like working, you just work, you have to."

After a month, West "finally got up the nerve" to invite his committee over to his studio to begin their advisement on his work. At this meeting, he finally met the head of his committee, Rip Woods.

"The guy was fantastic; we talked for four hours. I have developed a special fondness for him, we had a great rapport right from the beginning."

Currently West is showing his work through Riva Yares Gallery. He methodically produced "about seven or eight pieces a year." He has sold all five pieces finished this year.

"One thing people here should think about is the whole big business world. Nobody watches out for you in that world. You have to think about tough things like

Wide selection, pleasant vocals highlight soloist's performance

by Eric Hampton

It is scary being assigned to review a performance by a solo musician, particularly a performance given in an establishment that bills itself as a "listening coffee house." One has a tendency to associate such terminology with embarrassing flower-power posturing that is simply out of place in a modern context.

Thus, I viewed Claire Rohwader Van De Crommert's performance with some apprehension. Thankfully, there was no such posturing in evidence at Claire's (as she's billed) Pawn Live show last Friday night. The sparse audience was simply treated to two hours of engaging music.

Prior to her performance Claire strolled around the room soliciting song requests from her extensive playlist, getting a call for a few old war horses that she worked naturally into the first set.

Claire's first set got underway at 9:15. After some initial jitters on "People Still," Claire settled down turning out particularly affecting versions of "Hearts" and "Cat Came Back," which she explained is from Garrison Keillor's "A Prairie Home Companion."

In fact the only problems with the performance were purely environmental

The vocals were pleasant with a clear, midrange tone that lent itself well to her music selection. She also avoided overimprovisation while seeming very comfortable with the material. Her self-accompaniment on acoustic guitar was skillful and varied, without lapsing into overindulgence.

In fact the only problems with the performance were purely environmental. I had to listen through constant chatter from a nearby table, despite posted requests for patrons to refrain from conversation. I also doubt that Claire intended to accompany "Mr. Bojangles" with the sound of falling bowling pins. Perhaps the P.A. system could have been turned up a little. Those are, however, minor annoyances in what was a thoroughly enjoyable show. Maybe it is time we opened a few more "listening coffee houses."

Stout students encouraged to join professional clubs

by Barbara Klimek

There are over 140 student organizations at Stout to choose from. They range from professional and community service, to religious, special interest and activity planning organizations.

In continuation of the articles on clubs offered to students here at Stout, the spotlight this week will focus on organizations related to degree programs in the school of Home Economics.

These organizations have a lot to offer Stout students who have the interest and a strong insight to their self development which will prepare them for their fields. They know there is an "art" to the development of their professional well being.

The organizations all are priced at a very nominal fee per semester or yearly. They all provide opportunities to learn a variety of useful skills, such as development of relationships with other students and a chance to converse with professional people, as invited speakers.

There are 17 organizations to choose from, each related to the degree programs in the school of Home Economics. They range from a wide variety of career aspects. To find a club of your interest, seek them out.

Each club's special events, dates and location of meetings are posted on the organization board located in the Home Economics building, second floor stairwell or contact a member. Names of presidents and information can also be found in the Advisement Center, H.E. 211, plus check bulletin boards throughout campus.

Membership is strongly encouraged by students already familiar with the clubs, club officers, and the Academic Advisement staff.

H.E.L.P., is a group dedicated to helping officers from each club. It meets weekly. They discuss upcoming events, plan for special speakers, and keep up to date with each club's progress or answer any questions they may have related to their club.

Each organization gets members involved in various functions that are on campus or within the community. They promote professionalism by teaching ways to apply knowledge and skills in order to achieve a desired outcome in one's career. Field trips, professional speakers, fund raisers, and importantly to receive the opportunity to interact and socialize with others that have similar career goals, are all reasons for becoming involved with clubs.

A questionaire was presented to the H.E.L.P. board which listed questions related to the Home Economics organization's opportunities to students and involvements each club has to offer a club member.

Carolyn Berger, president of the Women In Management (W.I.M.) was asked, what does W.I.M. have to offer students? Berger said, "We offer students a chance to get involved and learn more about their career, being a woman in the work place."

Sandy Rosandick, president of the Apparel,Textile,and Design Association (A.T.D.A.) was asked to name some of the upcoming speakers, events, or activities club members or students can look forward to. Rosandick said, "On Nov. 19 in room 208 H.E., we are presenting Lisa Gandre, a bridal designer. We also do industrial sewing projects such as the can cooler which is to be constructed by our club members and sold as a fund raiser during Homecoming."

Kathleen Daley, president of the Restaurant and Tavern Management Association (R.T.M.A) was asked if there any new ideas planned within the R.T.M.A. club? Daley said, "We have fund raisers, such as selling candy bars. We are planning a field trip to tour a restaurant/club in Chippewa Falls, Nov. 14."

Kathy Rucker, president of the Menomonie Association for the Education of Young Children, was asked about some important goals of the club. Kathy stated, "To promote welfare of young children, provide information to members on children and childcare."

Spontaneous Combustion

On being mind fried

James "Unk" Falkofske

On being mind fried.

Music, as life, has many directions. For a band starting out choices flood the senses, and for many bands, it becomes difficult to see the forest through all the trees. Choices must be made in order to gain the most satisfaction for the least amount of effort (maximizing life's utility).

Music also follows a life pattern. This pattern ties directly into the individuals of the band to develop into their unique selves. Life and bandhood walk hand in hand.

First, there is birth. A band unites from several smaller subunits (called musicians) and merge into a solid entity. But, for some, a birth may be too traumatic to deal with, and soon the band dies.

If the band progresses past the birth stage, the identity stage follows. Once the group has formed and become one they must decide who they are, what they stand for, and why they are on stage... the purpose of being.

Many groups are unsure of who they are so they emulate several "supergroups" in hopes of having success bestowed upon them. They are following role models in the same fashion that children will imitate what parents do in order to gain recognition and acceptance.

This is all well and good until it takes over as the entire goal of the band. No band can become its own success by copying another band's music. The group must develop its own style and character in order to be successful. This is the time of adolescence.

Part of this growing process is writing and playing new material. The band has to remove itself from other bands and become unique and to itself. The band must find its new identity.

Often, this is the time when the band replacements come in. A lead guitarist with an attitude problem is replaced with a less experienced but more willing musician. A lead vocalist who is into drugs (and not into music) is dropped for one who is more committed to the cause, and so on. Nevertheless, successful groups will survive and grow more and more toward individual freedoms within the group.

At this point, the group has passed into young adulthood. The most potentially hazardous of situations will occur during this time. Until now, the individuals of the groups have not had to make life long commitments. But now comes the turning point in the career of a musician. I call it the mindfry. But we'll discuss that next week.

The mindfry is a period of life where the central nervous system is constantly shocked and jolted, as well as having the mind being stuck in overdrive twenty-four hours a day. For people who have not seen a guitarist break his hand punching out a wall, or seen a singer scream at himself until his voice cracks, there are examples on campus of people under similar stress.

Mindfry occurs when someone has learned so much about so little that they attempt to conquer the world with virtually nothing. For the college student, mindfry occurs when he/she tries to get away with balancing a full load of classes, two or three part time jobs, and several clubs and organizations. In essence, they burn themselves up. They get the notions that they can be king of the mountain from parents and peers always pushing them to be better. Mindfry is dangerous.

And so it goes with bands. Sooner or later, someone is bound to crack. Trying to balance band and work commitments get to be too much. Social life takes an enormous slide downhill, and soon, playing is more pain than pleasure. Under conditions like these, bickering turns into full-fledged, chair breaking combat. The band is affected from one person's inner turmoil, because by this time, the band has become family.

Like a family, a decision has to be made, and with many groups, the decision is to disband. Other groups find strength from such conflict and are able to pick themselves up and start over. Still others give the band member or members a choice, it is: ship up or ship out. Those not pulling their load are replaced by majority rule. If this stage is passed successfully, the band will continue on growing stronger from this point onward.

Finally, inevitably, the band will die. The death can be as real as the Budd Holly tragedy, where a sudden accident dissolved legendary group forever. It can be slow, where members, one by one, decide to pursue solo careers. It can be freakish, where one night the band plays and the next night, an inner squabble sends musicians flying in different directions. Finally, the band dies.

The life of a band is much like real life, because it involves real people. People have needs, wants, and desires, and the band must accomodate these wants. It is important when looking at the topsy-turvy world of rock and roll to realize that situations are not unique to certain bands. This same life4 cycle occurs in almost every group of musicians.

prices, like 'How high can I go.' I have seen people price themselves right out of the market. But you also have to eat, pay rent, and try and be comfortable."

West related a recurring nightmare he has before openings of new shows. "I heard this story about a guy who sold everything in his first show. The next year, he doubled all his prices and when the show opened, no one came, nobody. He supposedly played cards all night with the gallery director. Now before all my shows, I am a nervous wreck. I always buy a deck of cards just in case."

On the subject of his success, West said candidly, "I think that when people say that it's all connection and politics, I think that is bullshit. It might be something, but I doubt it. I think it's all work. If you do not have the canvases there to show, no amount of talk is going to get you a sale. You have to have the work and that's all there is to it. People say I have been lucky. Maybe that is so but if I did not work as long and hard as I do, what would I have to show?"

One final comment summed up West's work ethic. He said, "The more you realize what you are after, the less anyone can do for you."

Tainter Theater carries on tradition

The Mabel Tainter Memorial Theater will continue a tradition that began in 1980. This tradition is featuring an autumn organ concert. The performer to be featured is Rosalind Mohnsen.

The concert will be held Sunday, Oct. 12 at 2 p.m. at the theater. In the past, material composed by performers such as Bach, Boellmann, Sears, Schumann, Mendelssohn, and Handel have been performed on the three story pipe organ found in the theatre.

The organ is made from cherry wood and carved mahogany. The pipe organ has seen many skilled performers since the theatre began honoring American women organists. In fact, the theatre plans to continue this annual event until 1990 when the theatre building celebrates its 100th anniversary.

This year's featured performer, Rosalind Mohnsen, has received degrees from the Universities of Nebraska and Indiana. Mohnsen also spent time studying in Paris with Jean Langlais.

The annual organ concert will feature Rosalind Mohnsen.

Mohnsen is an active recitalist having performed for five national conventions of the Organ Historical Society. In addition to this she also serves on the Boston Chapter of the American Organist Guild as a secretary. She serves for this organization's organ projects committee interested in organ restoration.

Mohnsen has recorded an album on the AFKA label along with Earl Miller, "A Pfeffer Odyssey". The album was recorded on organs in Iowa and Missouri. In addition to this she has taught colleges in Iowa as well as served in churches in Boston. Currently she serves as organist at Immaculate Conception Church in Molden, Massachusetts.

The Mabel Tainter Memorial Theatre has a lot to offer individuals of all ages. The annual organ with this year's featured performer Rosalind Mohnsen concert is no exception.

The performance is set in a 1890's flavor, and features many masterpieces of organ sound. Tickets for the concert are $3. For information or tickets call 235-9726.

see. The plot is hilarious,' said the play's director Natalie Bothwell. "Our rehearsals are great fun as everyone is bubbling over with laughter. "The Foreigner" is one of the funniest plays I have ever read. It has been a treat to direct. Visually it will be fun, as scene designer, Dr. James-Michael Miller has a few technical surprises. Our season opener is a winner."

Bothwell is very happy with the way the play is coming along and is optimistic also about upcoming University Theatre seasons."It seems this year there are a lot of freshmen getting involved with the theatre and more men. Fortunately this time we are really lucky, I usually have a hard time getting men. This year we are having more men." Bothwell continued. "A lot of the cast are freshmen. They are good actors and actresses. I am impressed with their quality. They are very dedicated. A lot of kids have put in some good, long hours working on this show."

The play opens Thursday, Oct. 16 and runs through Sunday, Oct. 19. Performances are at 8 p.m., and Sunday the performance is at 1:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale now at the Harvey Hall box office and are $1.50 for students and $2.00 for adults. The box office is located in the Harvey Hall basement and is open from 11-5, Monday through Friday. For more information call 232-1468.

"It is just a real funny, funny play," said Bothwell. "At rehearsals we have had such a fun time. It is one of the funniest shows I have ever read." With this much enthusiasm it sounds like it is a must to see over Homecoming weekend. An event at Stout that can not be missed, and at $1.50 it is a good bargain to boot.

"Here's a new and very different kind of beer from Leinenkugel's."

Bill Leinenkugel, President Jacob Leinenkugel Brewing Co.

3 years' work results in a most unusual new beer

We've been working on this new kind of beer for a long time. After we agreed on what kind of beer we wanted, it took us nearly 3 years to create just the right taste . . . a taste different from anything on the market, anywhere.

A super premium American beer.

The market is loaded with European-style beers. Heavy-sounding names and lots of castles on the labels. Some are good, but we wanted ours to be different . . . and better. We wanted an American beer. Having brewed beer here since 1867, we know an American beer can be every bit as good as a European, in fact better.

The advantage of being a small brewer

Being small, we didn't have to "brew down" to some theoretical national taste. Being small, we knew we could brew a beer that would be the finest anywhere in the world.

How do we make Leinenkugel's Limited?

We can't tell you everything, because one or two of our competitors would love to know. But it's a mixture of 4 different barley malts, 3 of which are the heavier European kind like Munich; the other is a special one we grind ourselves here at the brewery. The hops are domestic cluster and cascade. We use approximately 1500 to 1800 additional pounds of barley malt per brew. And then . . . we age the brew 35% longer than any beer we know.

What does it taste like?

More than 800 tourists who have visited our brewery tap room this past year have tasted this remarkable new beer (but they didn't know it!) These people described it in different ways. First, they noticed the unique hop aroma. Then, the taste started with a delightful tingle on the tongue and finished with a highly satisfying memory.

Leinenkugel's Limited

A SUPER PREMIUM AMERICAN BEER

For people who appreciate a very fine beer.

Our drinker will be a person who knows a good beer. He or she has done some traveling and has tasted many beers. Our drinker is not a beer snob, and knows the secret to making a good beer is not whether it's brewed in Germany, Holland or Denmark, but what goes into the brewing process. Our drinker will be willing to pay more for a beer of this kind.

What does "Limited" mean?

This beer is intended for a couple of months in the fall . . . after the summer beer season . . . and when colors and tastes are changing. Regular Leinenkugel's will be there year-round, steady, friendly, available. Our Bock will be there in the spring, with its dark color and heavy body. "Limited" is brewed in one batch in the spring, then aged all summer, and on the market in late September. Only a strictly-controlled number of barrels was brewed.

Will you do me a favor?

Please buy some of this very different new beer. It will be available in six-packs, 24-bottle cartons and on tap. Over a period of a few days, sample 7 or 8 bottles. This, I promise you, will be an experience. Then write me a note (see address below) and tell me what you think. I'll have your name inscribed in a special place in our brewery where it says "Here are the names of the beer lovers who have tried and enjoyed Leinenkugel's Limited."

Don't wait too long.

This beer is "limited" in the strictest sense of the word. The exact number of barrels brewed is a secret but it's certified in the office of our accountant. This special beer is available right now. When it's gone, it's gone until next fall (1987).

Thank you,

Bill Leinenkugel

Soccer club continues domination of foes

by Katie Keran

The UW-Stout soccer club has continued to dominate all opponents faced this year. The team has remained undefeated so far this season, their record has now increased to 5-0. So far Stout has literally not even given their opponents a chance of winning. The defense has only given up one goal all season and the offense has scored sixteen goals.

Last week was a hard one for the squad. They had games scheduled Thursday, Friday and Saturday. On Thursday they played UW-River Falls, Friday they played the Stout Nigerian Club and Saturday they played Northwestern College in Roseville.

But the only close match was against River Falls on Thursday. The team won 2-1 with the help of two goals from Dan "Boone" Nelson. One of his goals was a penalty shot resulting after a River Falls defender was called for taking down Nelson in the penalty box. The other was scored when midfielder Steve Abrahamson gave Nelson a well-placed through ball which he proceeded to rifle off the right hand goal post into the net.

In the game against the Stout Nigerian Club, the team defeated them 4-0. Forward Ken Jaslow scored to give Stout the lead and then Dan Nelson helped out by adding another two goals. Defender Joe Krawsch got his first goal of the season by bulleting a shot around the Nigerian Club's goaltender. The Nigerians played a good game but never were consistent enough in their playing to threaten the Stout club.

On Saturday the squad took to the road early in the morning to play Northwestern College. At first the team was a little slow and shaky, but they pulled together quickly to defeat Northwestern 2-0. Scoring for Stout was Ken Jaslow and Steve Abrahamson.

This weekend the team will be travelling to Eau Claire to compete in the Chancellor's Cup. Stout is the reigning champ of the four-team tournament. Also participating will be UW-Eau Claire, UW-La Crosse and UW-Stevens Point. "We are well prepared after our tough schedule last week," President Nelson said. He added, "We are looking forward to repeating our domination of the cup."

With the high scoring of the forward line and the notorious "No-goal patrol," Stout should prove to be tough competition at the cup. The defense is currently averaging .2 goals against per game and the offense is averaging 3.3 goals per game for Stout.

On Saturday, Stout will be taking on Stevens Point at 3 p.m. If Stout defeats Stevens Point, they will play the winner of the Eau Claire-La Crosse match on Sunday at 3 p.m.

The team will be without the help of its team mascot, Bob the Cat, this weekend. Bob is currently missing from his residence. If anyone has any information or has seen Bob, please call Kevin, Dan or Doug at 235-8419.

Netters show overall improvement despite struggling through losses

by Paul Emerson

The UW-Stout women's tennis team ran into some very strong competition last week, dropping four matches in four tries. Coach Bob Smith had this to say on the strength of the opposition: "Eau Claire and La Crosse are the conference powerhouses. We've played Eau Claire three times and lost three times, but there has been overall improvement of play, and that's encouraging."

The Lady Blue Devils have struggled since number one singles player Mary Malloy got hurt. Coach Smith noted that the injury has really hurt her confidence, and he hopes the injury will not have a lasting effect. "Although we have not been winning, they are playing better," Smith said.

The netters started out the week last Wednesday, traveling to UW-Eau Claire to take on the Blugold ladies. They gave them a tough battle, but still lost the match by a lopsided 8-1 margin. The final margin does not tell the whole story, however. The Lady Devils were frustrated throughout the match as four of the nine matches went three sets, and they came out on the short end four times.

The Lady Devils' lone win came at the number three singles, where Freshman Susie Bleitz, a Hotel/Restaurant Management major from Edina, Minn., won easily in straight sets 6-0, 6-3.

Senior Jean Feyen, a Menomonie native and Industrial Tech. major, lost her match in three sets. After dropping the first set 3-6, she came back to take the second 6-4, but then lost the third set 3-6, and the match.

Sophomore Karen Blau, playing at number five singles, lost her match in three sets 6-4, 3-6, 1-6. And at number six singles, Sophomore Tara Stahel also lost her match in three sets. After losing a tough first set 6-7, she won the second 6-3, but faltered in the third, losing it and the match 1-6.

> "Although we have not been winning, they are playing better."
> —Coach Smith

The most frustrating match of the day came at number one doubles. A pair of Freshmen, Susie Bleitz and Jill Peters, won the first set of their match 6-4. They then lost a close second set 6-7. That set the stage for the third and final set. After racing out to a 5-1 lead in the set, victory eluded their grasp as they dropped the next six straight games of the set and lost it 7-5, and the match.

In junior varsity action, Freshman Jane Haglund won her match in straight sets 6-4, 6-0 while Liz Wessely, Tracy Kellerman and Jenny Davis all lost in straight sets.

Over the weekend the Lady Devils traveled to UW-La Crosse for their invitational. On Friday the netters were once again matched up against UW-Eau Claire and once again lost the match 8-1.

This match was decided early, as the Lady Devils dropped all six singles matches and later dropped two of the three doubles matches, all in straight sets. Number one singles player Mary Malloy played better, but in a losing effort 6-3, 7-5.

In number one doubles action, revenge was on the minds of Freshmen Susie Bleitz and Jill Peters. Again they played a tough match, but this time they won, taking the match in three sets. They took the first set 6-4, but then lost the second 5-7 before winning the decisive third set 6-4, in winning the match over Pederson/Andreotti of UW-Eau Claire.

In other matches, Freshman Jane Haglund won twice. In her first match against Euting of UW-Milwaukee, she won 10-6. Then against Tricia Stalling of UW-La Crosse, she won in straight sets 6-4, 6-4.

On Saturday, the rains came again and forced play indoors. The Lady Devils had two matches on the day, and took on the University of Northern Iowa in the first match. Northern Iowa, a Division I team, was very strong, and took the match easily by an 8-1 margin.

Sophomore Karen Blau, playing at number four singles, won her match 10-2. Two of the other matches did go three sets. At number

Rugby club blanked in hard-hitting match, 6-0

by Slash La Freniere

This past Saturday the Stout Centaurs Rugby Club was defeated by UW-Eau Claire 6-0 in an evenly-matched and hard-hitting rugby game. The Centaurs played a tough game and outplayed the Eau Claire ruggers, but once again the difference in the game was 1 try and a conversion, to give Eau Claire their 6 points.

Stout nearly did score 1 try, but the play was ruled out of bounds. Mike Hackworthy had the ball at the time and he thought that he was still on the pitch, but his foot went off of the field of play. A few minutes later Hackworthy had to leave the game due to severe cramps in his calf muscles, which made running virtually impossible. Brian LaFreniere came in for Hackworthy to finish the rest of the game.

The whole game featured many hard tackles and end-to-end action with the Centaurs controlling much of the play. Stout Rugby President John Wangen said, "Without taking anything away from the fine play of the Eau Claire team, I feel that Stout dominated much of the game."

Stout Captain Pat McDonnell said, "We can't blame anybody for this loss but ourselves. We've got to get our winning edge back." The whole team has to agree with McDonnell and all players plan to dig a little deeper to find their own individual edges.

The lone bright spot for the Stout Centaurs was that the "Killer B's" B-side ruggers defeated Eau Claire's B-side 9-8. The B-side match featured the same hard-nosed play as the first game and had aggressive play by all players.

Stout's scoring came from Steve Poser, who broke through from a lineout to score a try for 4 points. The lineout is a play to put the ball back into play from out of bounds, and either team can win the ball from them. Al Closs made the conversion after the try for 2 points, and Al also made a penalty kick for 3 more points to bring the total points for Stout to 9.

Stout rugby's next match is against UW-La Crosse on Saturday in La Crosse. This match will be the final away game for the Rugby club, as they will be at home for the remainder of the season after Saturday's game.

Toga Beer Slide

Paul Wydeven

Traditionally the more popular sports found in uptown Menomonie are pool, darts, fooseball or different types of video games. If you were to look at the many non-traditional sports, the list is almost endless. The list goes from simple sports like beer bongs to complicated sports like the I-94 road march. A new non-traditional sport quickly emerging is the Toga Beer Slide.

The Toga Beer Slide, or in short known as the TBS, has rules like any sport. I was first introduced to the sport about two weeks ago at one of Menomonie's finer drinking establishments. It was about 11:45 p.m. when one of the TBS participants started to explain the rules. I think he may have missed a few in his explanation and a few more were missed because of the outside interference during our conversation.

The rules were pretty informal, but, like most other sports, you need a playing field. For TBS you need an area for the slide. The slide should be smooth, but be careful — a wood floor may cause injury to the participants via splinters. In addition to being smooth, the area should be long and free of obstructions.

The next requirement for a good TBS is preparing the participants with togas. The toga can be any color and any size. Each toga is usually designed for and by the participant. The most functional togas I saw that night were ones made from plastic and duct tape. This type of toga is ideal for two reasons — the properties of water resistance and the disposability after the toga is used.

Another requirement for the TBS is the beer and this establishment, like any other, had plenty. Several things are done with the beer. First, most, if not all, of the participants drink the beer. Then the participants spill beer on the floor and wear the beer on themselves. The more efficient participants can do both in one move.

Now that all the requirements are filled, play begins when the participants and the floor is full of beer. One takes a running start and dives on to the beer soaked floor, sliding until the participant is stopped by another person or a wall, whichever one comes first. Again the more efficient participant can do this in one move.

Some things that help in a good TBS is a theme song for the approach to the dive and a strong desire for bodily abuse. The TBS does have some nebulous rules and they are as follows:

1). Never wear good clothes.
2). Have lots of beer on hand.
3). Everyone with a toga gets wet.
4). Everyone without a toga gets wet.
5). Remove obstacles from slide area.
6). Wear something underneath or you may end up as an exhibitionist.
7). Remove glasses and contacts.
8). Avoid dry patches on slide
9). Avoid belly flops.

As I mentioned before, I may have missed a few in the conversation, but that's not too important because rule ten will affect all of the above. It states that the rules are thrown out at midnight or whenever you please, because there is no way to score a slide and if there was a way, nobody would really care. So if you are bored with the traditional uptown sports try the non-traditional Toga Beer Slide.

Care to Walk/Bike/Run

On Sunday, Oct. 12 the Menomonie area can help World Food Day by participating in the Crop Walk/Bike/Run. People from area churches and organizations will raise money for hungry people in the world. Twenty-five percent of the proceeds will go to supplement the Dunn County Food Pantry Program. Registration for the ten-mile event which starts at 1 p.m. at the United Methodist Church. Recruitment forms are available at the Jock Shop and the Recycle Bike Shop.

Schembechler wins 200

Bo Schembechler became the eighth Division I-A coach to win 200 games as a college football coach. Schembechler is the head coach of Michigan University and has a 200-55-7 record. Asked about the 200 wins, he jokingly said, "It means I'm an old coach, that's what it means."

Brewers finish 75-84

The Milwaukee Brewers ended the season by sweeping the Toronto Blue Jays in a double-header last Sunday night. This gave the Brewers a final record of 75-84, only 19 1/2 games behind the Boston Red Sox and 4 games ahead of the last-place Baltimore Orioles in the AL East.

Raymonds retires

Marquette University announced on Monday that athletic director Hank Raymonds will retire effective August 1987 at the end of his contract. Raymonds, 62, worked for the university for 25 years, six as a basketball assistant coach, 16 as a head coach and ten as the athletic director.

Bears' defense shuts out Vikings; Packers come up short again

by Paul Wydeven

The Chicago Bears' defense returned to form from last year's Super Bowl, shutting out the Minnesota Vikings 23-0. The Bears' defense sacked Viking quarterback Tommy Kramer seven times and held Minnesota to 45 yards total rushing.

The Minnesota passing game was not much better as Kramer was held to a total of 159 yards. The closest the Vikings came to the end zone was at the Bear 20-yard line early in the fourth quarter, but the ball was backed up with two penalties, an intentional grounding and an unsportsmanlike conduct.

Chicago, 5-0, had showed another dimension to their already-potent offense with six passes to wide receiver Keith Ortego for 157 yards, including a 58-yard touchdown pass from Jim McMahon.

The Bears gave the ball to "Sweetness" Walter Payton 26 times. Payton scored one touchdown and used the 26 carries to gain 108 yards for his 76th lifetime 100-yard or more game.

To finish the Bears' scoring effort, place kicker Kevin Butler hit field goals of 24, 32 and 42 yards.

The Green Bay Packers scored four touchdowns but still came up short against the Cincinnati Bengals 34-28. The loss leaves the Packers with a 0-5 record — the worst in Green Bay's history.

The 0-5 start should leave Pack fans happy knowing that their team is no longer playing inconsistent or mediocre. The good thing coming out of losing is a good draft pick and maybe a new coach.

The Packers scored first with a touchdown by running back Gerry Ellis on a two-yard run. Green Bay held onto the lead until the second quarter when the Bengals scored every time they got the ball, giving Cincinnati a 27-7 lead at halftime.

One bright spot in the game was when wide receiver James Lofton caught a 15-yard touchdown pass from Randy Wright. This pass gave Lofton his 490th career catch to pass Don Hutson on the Packer career receiving list.

This leads me to the picks. I was 13-1, missing only the Detroit-Houston game, making a total of 46-24 in five weeks. Week six looks a little harder, and is as follows:

Miami over Buffalo
Chicago over Houston
Denver over San Diego
Green Bay over Detroit
Kansas City over Cleveland
Los Angeles Rams over Atlanta
San Francisco over Minnesota
New Orleans over Indianapolis
New England over New York Jets
New York Giants over Philadelphia
Tampa Bay over St. Louis
Seattle over Los Angeles Raiders
Washington over Dallas
Cincinnati over Pittsburgh

Runners second in invitational; anticipate national recognition

by Nancy Janecek

"We've had two weeks of strong running and should gain some votes for NAIA (National Athletic Intercollegiate Association) ranking," predicted cross country coach Lou Klitzke.

Blue Devil Paul Bons was second across the finish, but was the first collegiate runner to complete the St. Olaf Invitational Saturday in 26:08 minutes. Stout's team finished second in a field of 14 behind UW-LaCrosse. The race was won by Tom Ansberry, running for Lay Wirness for Christ.

For the first time this year, Stout sent a women's team to compete on the new 5000-meter course in Minnesota. Although finishing 11th out of 16, Coach Klitzke was encouraged to see a full team and felt they had a good day. "Stacy Schuiter allowed for a complete team finish — gutsy race!" Coach Klitzke charged.

The individual winner was Rochelle Swiggum of Luther College with a time of 18:59. UW-Oshkosh led in the team standings.

Sue Rabas again was number one for Stout, running in 20:54. Lisa Heimmermann, 21:45; Jodi Hubbard, 21:52; Debbie Lucas, 22:22 and Stacy Schuiter, 25:42 brought life back to Blue Devil cross country.

But what an initiation for these women. The hilly course around the St. Olaf campus featured shoe top-deep water for five or six strides and mud seeping up to the ankles for 40 to 50 feet.

The men's team showed increasing strength against nationally recognized teams. The College of St. Thomas has been voted number one in the NCAA Division III polls.

Stout's 93 points came from Bons' first place; Todd Fox, eighth; Darron Vanman, 20th; Bob Hackley, 26th and Tom McGavock, 38th. "Captain Todd Fox and Paul Bons ran quite well, both in the top ten," Coach Klitzke said.

Coach Klitzke is also happy with the performance now and the future for Freshmen McGavock from Pewaukee and Paul Housner from Sun Prairie. "Darron Vanman, a transfer student from DuPage Community College in Glen Ellyn, Ill., is also running strong for us," Coach Klitzke added.

The next cross country meet will be Saturday in Eau Claire at the Blugold Invitational. Coach Klitzke is looking past that race; "We will train right through it. We'll consider it practice and a chance to see the course where the conference championship will be held."

Pacing, so important in each individual race, is also vital to season strategy. With the right pacing, the Blue Devil team will peak in November — championship time.

Tips help fit exercise into busy lifestyle

by Jenna Martin

The world is full of procrastinators. I should know, I'm one of them. We all are at times. We set goals for ourselves and then put them off until a future date.

It's nice to have good intentions. Where will they get you, however, if tomorrow never comes?

Exercise is an easy task to put off. Once you get going and feel the benefits, keeping up with it isn't as tough. It is that initial push, our first attempt at motivation, to begin, that is so difficult.

The most frequently heard reason for not exercising is the busy schedule. Most of us do have busy schedules. It isn't easy cramming our daily lives into 24 hours.

Are you too busy to become involved in the exercise craze? Does your life consist of racing from one meeting to the next? Is work taking up most of your free time? Do you have a full class load?

If this sounds a lot like your lifestyle, read on for ten basic ideas of fitting exercise into your busy schedule.

1. Don't drive, walk! Running to and from your car isn't going to help your heart all that much. Sorry.

2. No time to walk? Ride your bike! I depend on mine. I've discovered that by leaving a couple minutes before having to be somewhere, I can make it there somewhat on time.

3. Instead of sitting on your butt listening to music, get up and dance! (Even if it is only in the privacy of your own room.)

4. Take a few minutes to stretch out before bedtime and when getting up. It is relaxing before sleeping and helps you get through the day a little easier by stretching out in the morning.

5. Don't get lazy and take the elevator to the library's fourth floor. Climb those stairs! Many times I make it there at the same moment as the elevator vegetables who were just standing on first floor waiting for the elevator to pick them up.

6. Don't be a couch potato during Sunday's football games, exercise! Stretching those muscles can get your blood pumping. It might make you feel better after a Saturday night.

7. Got a few spare minutes? Want to do something constructive? Rake a few leaves off your lawn. The exercise will do you good. At the same time, the lawn looks much better. (This is one I definitely should do!)

8. Studying? Reading your homework? Set the book on the floor next to you while stretching out.

9. Don't be so quick to pick up the phone. Jog over and visit your friends!

10. Finally, don't ignore this article! Just keep these tips in the back of your mind so the next time you find yourself standing among the elevator vegetables, waiting to zoom to the fourth floor, your subconscious will remind you to jog those stairs. Exercise!

Then get in on the ground floor in our Platoon Leaders Class program for college freshmen, sophomores and juniors. You could start planning on a career like the men in this ad have. And also have some great advantages like:

- Earning $100 a month during the school year
- As a freshman or sophomore, you could complete your basic training during two six-week summer sessions and earn more than $1200 during each session
- Juniors earn more than $2100 during one ten-week summer session
- Seniors and graduates can be commissioned through the Officer Candidate Class Program
- You can take free civilian flying lessons
- You're commissioned upon graduation

If you're looking to move up quickly, look into the Marine Corps' commissioning programs. You could start off making more than $18,000 a year.

Blue Devils drop to 2-3 with 20-0 defeat

The only bright spot of this game was when a Stout defender got a piece of this kick. Other than that it was all UW-Eau Claire. (Stoutonia photos by Dan Banach)

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devil football team lost this past Saturday to the UW-Eau Claire Blugolds by the score of 20-0. This dropped the Blue Devils' record to 2-3 overall.

The game began with the Blue Devil defense on the field, and, as expected of them, they shut down the Blugolds on their first series. When the Blue Devil offense appeared there was a new man in the starting quarterback position — Tim Peterson. Unfortunately his first play was not a great way to start a career. The ball was on Stout's own 29-yard line and the exchange between back and quarterback was miscued. The ball was fumbled and recovered by Doug McIntyre of Eau Claire. A personal foul penalty on Stout, which immediately followed this turnover, gave Eau Claire the ball at Stout's own 14-yard line. From there Eau Claire proceeded to move the ball to the one-yard line where Tim Kostroski scored the touchdown on a fourth-and-one call at the goal line. The point after attempt by Evan Sveum was good, giving Eau Claire the lead of 7-0.

It was late in the first quarter before either team began to really get a drive going. Eau Claire had been moving into Blue Devil territory and looked as if they were going to score at any time. But each time they were close the Blue Devil defense stopped them shy of a first down. When it came time for Stout's offense, not much was working in Stout's favor. This is primarily a credit to the fine defensive effort of Eau Claire.

As the laws of probability state, when one team is playing at the other's end of the field, chances are, sooner or later, they will score. Sooner came quicker then expected. In the early part of the second quarter, Eau Claire showed that their offense was indeed capable of moving the ball 32 yards. This drive was completed by Bob Gelhaus who ran three yards for the score. The point after was good giving Eau Claire the lead of 14-0.

> "With two fumbles around the one-yard line, I think it just became discouraging —Coach Lawrence"

It was late in the second quarter when Stout's offense started to move. This time Sean Boho was in the quarterback's seat. This drive began on Stout's own 21-yard line and was mainly a ball control drive highlighted by a 33-yard run by Sean Boho. This drive came to a standstill on Eau Claire's own 32-yard line. A 31-yard punt by Tom Riege put Eau Claire's offense in the hole at their own one-yard line.

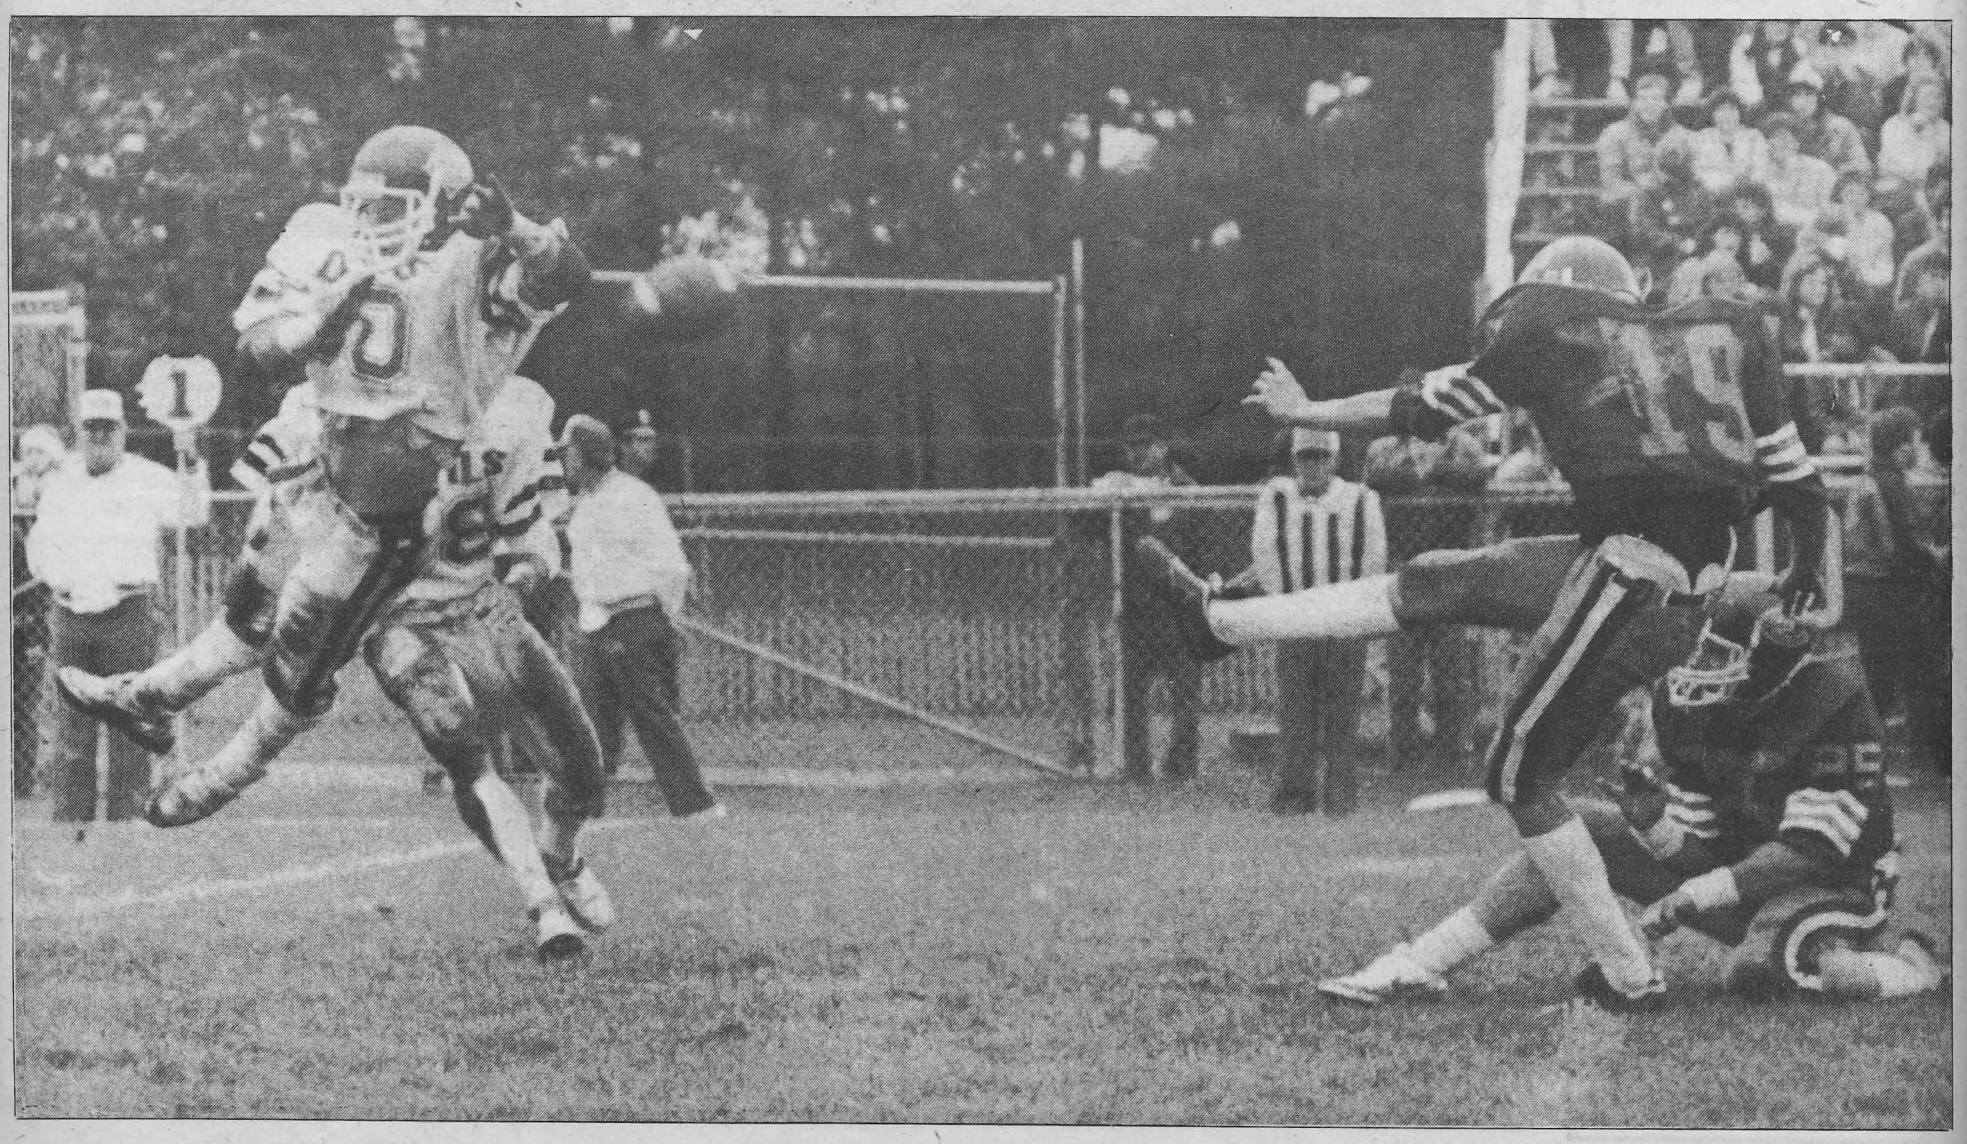
Eau Claire's Scott Deaton mishandled the ball on the first play and turned it over. Recovering the ball for Stout was Greg Zoll. This gave Stout a golden opportunity to get right back in the ballgame. The first play was a one-yard run by Brian Stingle. This was nullified by a penalty moving Stout back to the 7-yard line. The next two plays were runs by Chuck Carr, giving Stout the ball at the three-yard line. The next play was a key play that wound up being the heartbreaker for the Blue Devils. A fumble on the exchange turned the ball right back over to Eau Claire, ending any possible chance for a score. For the remainder of the half, both teams exchanged drives ending the scoring for the half and giving Eau Claire the halftime lead of 14-0.

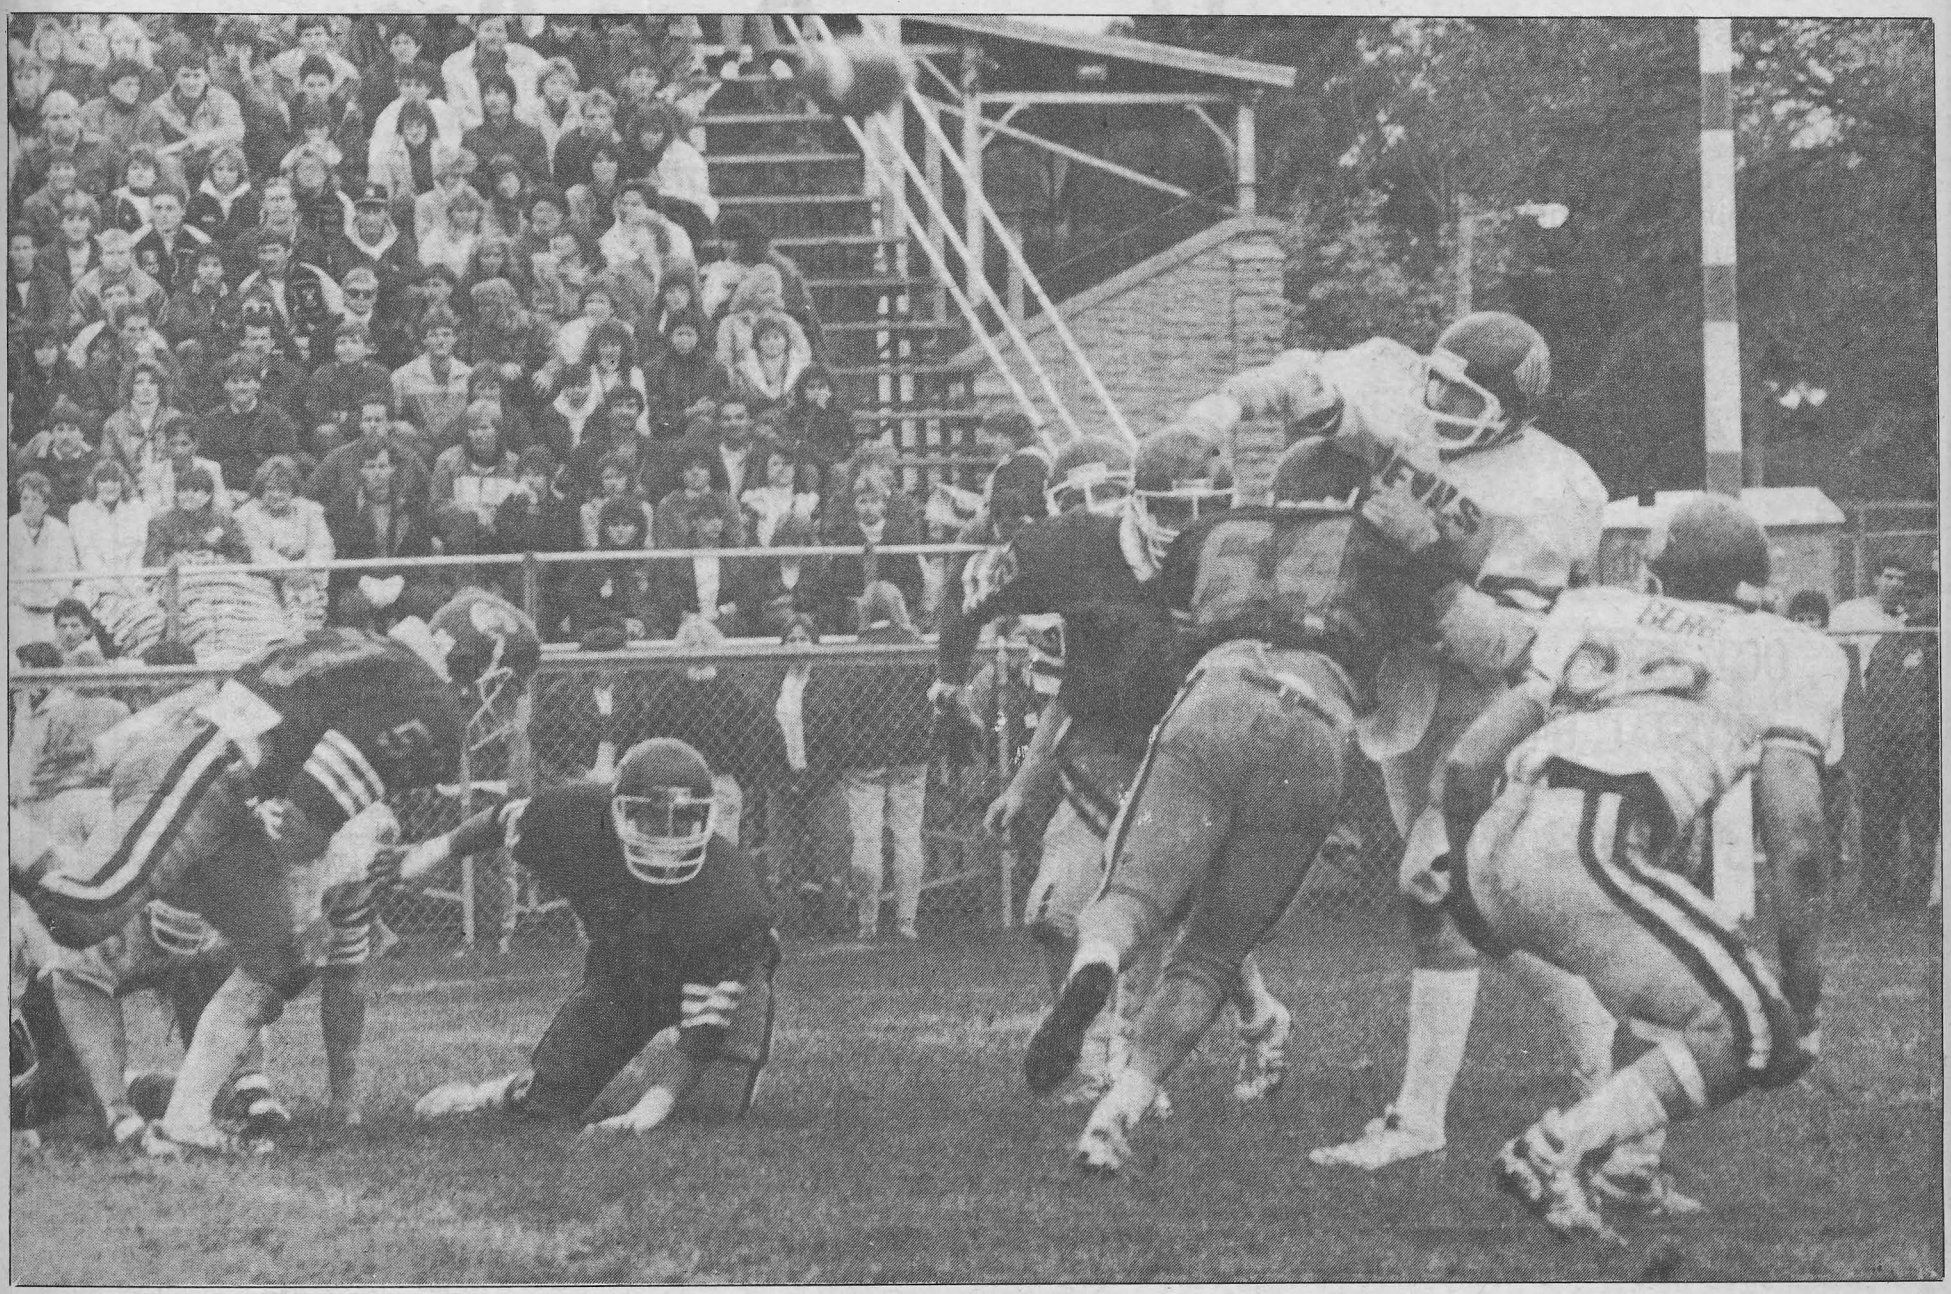
The second half began with the Stout offense trying to get something working. All day long they were looking for a combination that would work. This time they tried Bob Lindberg at the quarterback spot. Stout was stopped on its first two drives.

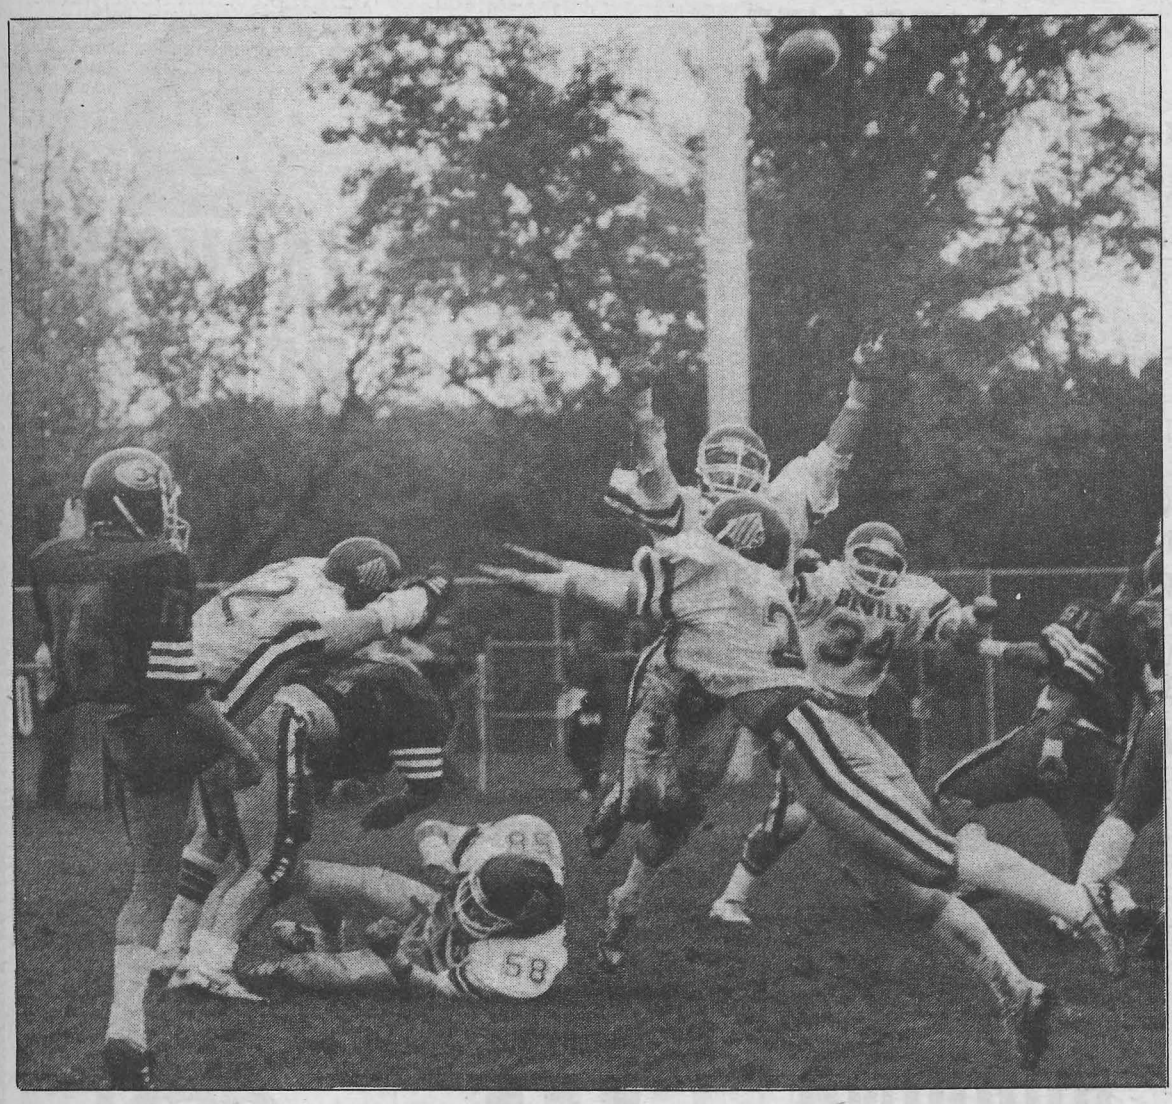
The second punt was punted down to Eau Claire's 25-yard line. Craig Rasmussen fielded the kick and then handed it off Mike Yakesh. From there it was a matter of running the distance to the goal line. This gave Eau Claire the lead of 20-0. This also ended all scoring for the game.

With the Blue Devils so close on so many occasions, one wonders why they couldn't go that extra yard. Head Coach Rich Lawrence stated, "With two fumbles around the one-yard line, I think it just became discouraging, and because we weren't emotionally up at the start of the ballgame, we couldn't carry it one more foot or one more yard."

The UW-Stout Blue Devils will be looking to avenge last week's loss this Saturday as they face the UW-Whitewater Warhawks here at home.







The UW-Stout Blue Devils football team came close to blocking this punt from UW-Eau Claire Blugolds. The Blue Devils were shut-out by the Blugolds 20-0. Stout helped Eau Claire with a couple of key penalties at the wrong time. (Stoutonia photo by Dan Banach) five singles, Sophomore Tara Stahel won the first set of her match 6-1 but lost the next two sets enroute to losing the match 2-6, 1-6.

Then at number six singles, Junior Liz Wessely, an Industrial Tech. major from Monona, Wis., dropped the first set of her match 4-6, came back to take the second 6-2, but then dropped the third set 2-6, and the match.

The University of Illinois-Chicago was the Lady Devils' second opponent of the day. And although the netters lost the match by a 6-3 margin, Coach Smith stated, "We should have beat Chicago, but we lost two close matches."

Posting wins in match play for the Lady Devils were Susie Bleitz, Jane Haglund and the number two doubles team of Mary Malloy and Jean Feyen.

Bleitz, a freshman, won easily at number two singles, 10-2. Haglund, another freshman, beat her Chicago opponent in a squeaker 10-9 after winning the tie-breaker. Senior Jean Feyen lost a tough match. With the wins at nine apiece, she then lost the tie-breaker 7-3.

Malloy and Feyen, both Lady Devil veterans, won their match 10-4 against their Chicago opponents.

The Lady Blue Devils' overall record now stands at 2-10 through twelve matches on the season.

The netters were to travel to UW-La Crosse last Tuesday before returning home to take on UW-Platteville on Friday in a 3 p.m. match. Then next week they host UW-Stevens Point on Tuesday and UW-River Falls on Thursday. Both matches are slated for 3 p.m. These three matches are the last home matches and will end the regular season for the Lady Blue Devils.

IN MEMORY OF BOB DRAKE: A special thanks to everyone who was there for us in presence or in thought. Your love and support is greatly appreciated. That means you too, Andy! A poem was written by one of our friends and we would like to share it with everyone: "BUT I AM STILL HERE" Although my body isn't here right now, for all of you to see, I'm standing up here, next to the Lord, watching over thee. You will all be sad for a while, but time heals all wounds, and again you can smile. You see, everyone has their time to go, the Lord needs us up there to help him, you know. I am still here if you need me today, this is the way it happens, God planned it that way. I am making clocks for the angels, so they can tell time, and tables and chairs, and even wind chimes, I am making the best that I've ever made and thanking the Lord, for now I am saved. So when you are sad, just remember this, it's not me that you're missing, it's my body you'll miss. Dan & Arlene Morgan & Alice Pulvermacher.

In remarks to supporters of his campaign, Governor Earl claimed that he had prevented tuition increases in the UW-System from being greater than they otherwise might have been. Earl expressed opposition to any further tuition hikes. (Stoutonia photo by Dan Banach)

Gov. Earl campaigns for local Democrats

by Noreen Spraner

Incumbent Governor Tony Earl made a brief campaign stop in Menomonie on Friday, Oct. 10, at the Leisure Services Center. In remarks to approximately 70 people in attendance, the governor said that his opponent in the race for governor was in favor of tuition increases for the UW-System. Earl is opposed to any further increases in tuition.

When asked about the recent tuition increases, Earl explained that the Board of Regents and the Wisconsin Legislature had proposed a much higher increase, but because of his own intervention, the increase was much lower than what it might have been.

The campaign event was organized, according to James Sperstad, "to motivate the infantry." Sperstad, one of the organizers of the event, said he hoped meeting the governor would motivate people to become enthusiastic about working for the upcoming election.

When the governor arrived, Donald Dickman gave a short introductory speech. Dickman introduced Mayor and Ms. Charles Stokke to the governor and the audience.

Governor Earl then gave a short speech reviewing his accomplishments as governor and clarifying what he said were misrepresentations presented in the campaign of his Republican opponent in the race for governor.

Tommy Thompson is the Republican candidate for governor, running against Earl, in the election to be held on November 4.

> "We don't have to worry about the more fortunate"
> —Governor Earl

In his remarks to those gathered at the Leisure Center on Friday, Earl said that four years ago, when he became governor, Wisconsin was losing jobs, and borrowing one million dollars a day to stay out of red ink. Unemployment in the state was as high as 13 percent.

Since his administration came to power, Earl said, Wisconsin's books were balanced and the debt he had inherited from the previous administration will soon be paid back in full.

Earl also claimed that his opponent in the race for governor lied when he said the state was losing jobs. According to Earl, Wisconsin has gained jobs during his administration, and the governor claimed that unemployment has been cut in half.

According to the Wall Street Journal, Earl reported, Wisconsin was the only Midwestern state that actually created manufacturing jobs within its borders.

Earl stated that the Department of Labor included Wisconsin as one of the eighteen states that are deemed to be enjoying an economic recovery.

While discussing his views on social welfare programs, Earl told the audience that he opposes Thompson's plan to cut all social programs by five percent. Saying that Thompson wanted to make the cuts in order to finance tax cuts, Earl said that the action would only benefit the people in the top 10-15 percent tax bracket.

"We don't have to worry about the more fortunate," Earl said. "They'll take care of themselves."

On the issue of education, Earl said that the state should do everything it could to insure a quality educational system. Earl said quality education is needed "to make sure that young men and women get the education they need to develop their talents."

After his speech, Earl stood in a receiving line, shaking hands and chatting with supporters.

One woman asked him how he felt about the recent polls that showed him trailing his rival Thompson.

Earl replied that, as far as he knew, three polls had been taken: one showed them in a dead heat, one with Earl ahead and the last showed Thompson ahead of Earl in popularity amongst potential voters. Earl said he was not sure why the poll which showed him trailing Thompson was the only one to be publicized.

Earl was asked how he felt his support of the 21 year old drinking age would effect his popularity with college students. " I don't think it is going to have that much effect," the governor replied, "because Thompson supported it, too."

Japan government buildings attacked

Six homemade missiles were launched from two parked cars at the parliament building of the government of Japan and the residence of the prime minister on Tuesday, Oct. 14.

No injuries or damage were reported, Tokyo police said. A metropolitan police official who declined to be identified said that he thought Japanese radicals may have been responsible for the attack.

Jonestown survivor on trial

Eight years after the followers of Jim Jones' died in a mass suicide-murder in Jonestown, Guyana, one of the survivors is standing trial for the murder of U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan during the bizarre incident.

Larry Layton, 40, is accused of helping to arrange the murders of Ryan and four others on a jungle airstrip on Nov. 18, 1978. After the death of Ryan, Jones and 912 of his followers drank cyanide-laced punch in a mass suicide ritual.

The trial, held in a San Francisco court, has recieved little media coverage.

Escaped wolf killed

A policeman shot and killed an escaped gray timber wolf about an hour after it escaped from its pen at the Wisconsin Rapids municipal zoo.

Park Superintendent Dave Hoks said the wolf had climbed an eight-foot, chain-link fence to escape. Hoks said the animal, which had been rented to be displayed at the park, obviously could have climbed out of the pen anytime it had wanted to.

Hoks said that in the future the zoo would not have wolves on display. "We'll probably have antelope in there instead," he said.

Menomonie tax levy decreased

Superintendent David Ross had offered a proposal to use some of the money to hire more staff and Board member John Miller attempted to bring a motion up which would have used some of the money for the new special education addition at River Heights Elementary School.

Instead of using money made available to the Menomonie School District by an increase in state aids, the school board voted 5-4 to take $95,000 off of the city's tax levy.

Larry Bjork, who moved to lower the tax levy, "I feel we have an obligation to return that money."

Packaging lab obtains equipment, computers

by Cosmas A. Whitten

The UW-Stout Packaging Lab, located on the first floor of the Applied Arts Building, recently purchased $147,000 worth of new packaging equipment. That amount was added to the $180,000 which was donated by various packaging companies.

Most of the money was spent on package testing equipment, such as the new MTS Compression Tester which tests packages up to a 30,000 pound capacity. Other equipment purchases are used to test shock and vibration, temperature and humidity, carbon dioxide permability and many other conditions that a package must be able to withstand.

The packaging lab also purchased two IBM computers with appropriate software to design and develop various package configurations. Basics such as work benches and storage cabinets were also purchased.

There are eight courses taught in packaging. Courses are taught by Dr. Marvin Kufahl, Dr. Arthur Muller and part-time instructor Ed Rzepecki, who retired from 3M's packaging department three years ago.

Packaging is a concentration applicable to many different majors available at Stout, especially Industrial Technology and Graphic Arts. Stout is currently the number two ranked school in the nation for packaging.

> "It's up to date.
> —Dan Johnson"

Approximately 400 students a week work in the packaging lab with an estimated $400,000 worth of equipment.

The packaging concentration program is 21 years old. Graduates are placed in almost every state in the country.

The packaging industry actively supports Stout's packaging program. The industry sponsors 12 to 14 scholarships a year for over $500. Packaging companies have also donated generous amounts of material and supplies to be used in the packaging lab. Because of industry generosity, it has been several years since even $1000 has been spent by Stout for materials and supplies, according to Kufahl.

Students such as Jon Solberg, are very enthusiastic about the packaging lab, "...I didn't need to be trained in, I already knew...I worked at a 3M lab...now with the new equipment we have everything, even more than 3M."

Other students, busy at work, had positive comments about the packaging lab, "It's really good...a lot of new equipment which is the same as what's out in the industry," commented Bob O'Reilly.

"I like it because all the equipment works and is kept up, it's up to date," said Dan Johnson.

Dee Bisbing said that she gets a lot out of the packaging lab, "There are a lot of things to learn, it's interesting."

Career Conference offers opportunities, assistance

by Dale Bohnert

In the aftermath of the eighth annual Professional Career Conference, organizers said they would like faculty to help them encourage students to attend by offering extra-credit for participating.

Organizers of the conference would also like to encourage students to bring their resumes with them to next years event, so they can show them to potential employers.

Representatives from nearly 110 companies and agencies met face-to-face with UW-Stout students at the Career Conference held October 8-9 in the Crystal Ballroom and the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center.

Company and agency representatives and recruiters were available in booths throughout the Career Conference area to inform students about their companies and answer any questions the students may have had.

Stout senior, Karen Domal, a Co-Marketing Coordinator for the conference, suggested that in the future, faculty should grant extra-credit to those students who do attend the event.

The recruiters available at the conference were also accepting resumes from students and arranging personal interviews.

Mary Ann Jolly, 3M Staffing Manager, said that she was pleased with the number of students attending the event but disappointed that few brought resumes to present to recruiters.

Conference coordinator, Kim Stanton, a Stout senior, said that the purpose of the conference was to allow students to meet company representatives and recruiters in order to "explore a variety of job opportunities ranging from summer jobs, internships, co-op, to full time employment."

The two-day event, themed "Forging the Future," was divided into two general fields: Business and Industry Day on Oct. 8, followed by Hospitality Day on Oct. 9.

58 companies presented information booths at the Career Conference during Business and Industry Day. Representatives from 3M, Wisconsin State Government, and George A. Hormel & Company were among those attending.

The following day, representatives from 51 companies met with students at the conference during hospitality Day.

Teresa Millis, Personnel Coordinator for Pizza Hut, said that she was "very impressed with the professionalism" involved in the organization of the conference.

"When they do it at Stout," said Millis, "they do it right."

Rainer Janetzki, Professional Staffing Representative for Walt Disney World Company, encourages students who attended the conference to keep in contact with the recruiters and representatives they spoke with at the event.

Stout alumnus, Steven Nechvatal, represented Paper Valley Hotel as its General Manager at Hospitality Day. Nechvatal, a 1976 Hotel and restaurant Management graduate from Stout, said that he thought the students at the event "had the right questions and were well prepared."

Stout students at the Career Conference said that they were pleased with the assistance the representatives at the event provided.

Pete Wurl, a Stout senior who attended Business and Industry Day, said that he particularly liked the "informality" of the conference.

Gary Sautkamp, on far left, and Matt Oberle talked to representatives from the Pillsbury Company who came to UW-Stout to participate in the annual Professional Career Conference. Each year business firms are invited to come to Stout to discuss job opportunities with any interested students on campus. Summer jobs and internships, as well as post-graduate jobs, may be discussed.

Stout joins recognition of world hunger

by Kristin Bailey

The Menomonie and UW-Stout community have joined in an international day to recognize the issue of hunger. World Food Day will be observed on October 16 to focus attention on all food and farm problems.

On Saturday, October 12, World Food Day was preacknowledged by three events held in Menomonie. A hunger walk/bike/run, film festival and a sharing meal made up the day's events. On Thursday, October 16, Stout will be tapping into a teleconference. It will be held in room 208 of the Home Economics building. The purpose of the teleconference is to broaden public knowledge and discussion of international food policy issues.

The October 12, walk/bike/run event was set up to raise money and to call attention to the issue of hunger. Some 140 participants walked, ran or biked the ten-mile course, which wound through Menomonie and along the Red Cedar River.

The participants collected pledges according to how many miles they completed. The money will be distributed to world hunger projects and to the Dunn County Food Pantry, an organization that distributes food to the needy in the county.

During the afternoon on October 12, a film festival was sponsored for those wishing to learn more about hunger. Organizers of the event said the fims were intended to show positive ways to eliminate hunger and the effect of hunger worldwide.

The films are still available throught the United Methodist Church.

The "sharing meal" at 5 p.m. on Saturday, offered a chance for the community to share in a "stone soup" meal. The "stone soup" meal was prepared with vegetables which participants brought to add to the stew.

The theme of the "stone soup" meal was "through sharing there is enough food for everyone," Julie McNaughton said, Menomonie area coordinator for Bread of the World.

Besides raising money to help eliminate world hunger, participants were encouraged to help affect governmental policies relating to hunger issues by writing to congressional representatives.

On Thursday, October 16, the international date of recognition for World Food Day, the UW-Stout graduate food sciences and Nutrition Association will sponsor a tap into a national teleconference on hunger issues.

the teleconference will feature a panel of four speakers a host moderator, John Scali, ABC News senior correspondent. Scali is a former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations.

The focus of the teleconference will be on developmental strategies that could best foster long-term sustainable agriculture, hunger alleviation and improved quality of life.

"Politics currently help the rich get richer and the poor get poorer," Melanie Johnson, president of the Graduate Food Service and Nutrition Association, said. She also said that aid that can be given to the hungry are the groups' main concerns.

Stout senior, said, "I feel very comfortable talking to these people" in reference to the recruiters and representatives at the event.

Ken Erickson, Assistant-Director of Career Planning and Placement Services, explained that the Career Conference is sponsored each year by the placement office and organized by a volunteer staff of Stout students.

Company Liasion Coordinator for the Career Conference, Cyndi Mann, a Stout junior, expressed her feelings of satisfaction and relief near the end of the event by saying,"It was a lot of work but a lot of fun."

Andy Schmidt, also a Stout senior, who has served as Co-Marketing Coordinator for the event for two years, said that he feels Stout's faculty should be more supportive of the Career Conference in the future.

"Granted, they do attend," said Schmidt, "but they need to talk it up."

SSA plans to educate students on campaign issues in key races

by Kelly Cohorst

Stout Student Association (SSA) Vice- President of Legislative Affairs (VPLA) Mark Nickels urged students to register to vote for the upcoming elections at Tuesday's SSA meeting.

Nickels VPLA said that 317 students have registered to vote and they are hoping to near their goal of 1000, by Saturday October 18 the last day of voter registration

The point was brought up by the Stoutonia reporter that registering students is not enough. The reporter maintained that SSA should provide more information on the issues and the different candidates to help young voters.

Nickels said that registration is only the first step. "My committee is working on a pamphlet," said Nickels, "that would provide information on the candidates in four key races."

The upcoming elections will determine the tuition hikes and the caps on enrollment for the University System, depending on which candidate is elected according to Nickels. Proposed tuition increases could come to more than $700 per student, he said.

A petition drive concerning an unfavored proposal from the Board of Regents of the UW-System for tuition increases and capping enrollment will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 21 and 22, reported Julie Weiss, vice-president of academic affairs.

The Annual Leadership Conference that was held in Green Lake last weekend was sponsored by United Council (UC). UC is the state-wide student government association.

Approximately 75 students attended the conference. According to Zimdars, those in attendance discussed increases in tuition, decreases in financial aids and other trends that may threaten the future of higher education.

Robb Zimdars, United Council Director of the SSA, said that the conference was "60 percent motivational and 40 percent educational."

Zimdars said that the film Choices was shown at the conference. The film, prepared by some Wisconsin business people, carried the message that University of Wisconsin students are getting a "bargain education" and that funds to the UW-System should be cut.

"The film was very motivational in that it shows us that there really are people out there who are working against us," said Zimdars.

Denise Hoeft, media advertising coordinator, attended the conference and said that she went to several meetings. She said that she had attended an excellent session on the subject of sexual harrassment.

Zimdars said that the UC Leadership Conference helped to motivate the student representatives who attended, while also pointing out the internal and external problems that affect UC, the representative body of UW-System students.

Minority Affairs rep resigns, frustrated

by Kelly Cohorst

The Minority Affairs Senator expressed frustration about his position representing minority students at UW-Stout, after recently submitting his resignation.

Aref Khatib, who was elected to the position as a write-in candidate during the Stout Student Association (SSA) elections last year, submitted a letter of resignation dated Oct. 14. Khatib's letter said that "I have found that I need more time in fulfilling my study habits."

Khatib later expressed frustration about his work with Robb Zimdars, SSA's United Council Director.

"I don't think he takes the position seriously," Khatib said. "I'm very curious about what he does in the hours he works for SSA."

Zimdars, who gets paid half-tuition for holding the United Council Director position, said, "It's my job to motivate and to guide the Minority and Womens Affairs Senators."

Conditions deteriorated between the Minority Affairs Senator, which is not a paid position, and the United Council Director, according to Zimdars, because of inconsideration on Khatib's part.

Referring to the response he got from other SSA representatives, Khatib said, "When you voice your opinion, it doesn't seem to leave the room."

Stating that the Minority and Women's Affairs Senators share a budget of $100 between them for the year's programming, Zimdars said that he was aware that Khatib had been planning a Cultural Awareness Week for spring semester.

Another difficulty Khatib said that he had in executing his position came when trying to work between the SSA and minority groups on campus.

Describing his work with SSA and Rainbow Organization, Khatib said, "Both sides are working on their own activities and they don't have time to listen or talk about other organizations."

"The Minority and Women's Affairs positions are very difficult," said Zimdars. "They don't have the same direction as other representatives. It's harder for them to contact their constituents."

Paul D. Nelson, president of SSA, recommended the appointment of Robb Zimdars to the position of United Council Director. Nelson said that he wished that Khatib would have spoken to him earlier about problems he was having.

Nelson also said, "Robb Zimdars is recognized as being one of the more conscientious UC Directors among UC member schools."

Nelson said that Zimdars has good rapport with other UC representatives, that he is aware of the issues and keeps his delegation informed. He also said that planning the trips to UC meetings is one of Zimdars major responsibilities and that he has always done it well.

The SSA will be trying to fill the vacant Minority Affairs Senator seat. Persons interested can contact Wes Stead, Administrative Assistant, in the SSA office on the ground floor of the Memorial Student Center.

Campaign trail across state part of Knowles family tradition

by Karen Smith

Claiming that he wants to carry on a family tradition of public service by running for Representative of the 29th Assembly District, Robert Knowles held an informal meeting to gain support for his campaign against incumbent Richard Shoemaker on Sunday, October 12. The gathering was held at Jake's Supper Club on Lake Tainter.

Republican Knowles is running for the position against incumbent Dick Shoemaker. Shoemaker has held the position of assemblyperson for four terms, or eight years.

Knowles is the nephew of a former governor of the state. He is also the son of late Senator Robert P. Knowles, Sr.

Senator Robert P. Knowles, the candidate's father, was appointed to the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents, a position which he held until his death. The candidate's uncle, Warren Knowles, currently holds a position on the board of regents.

The campaign support meeting for the junior Knowles was intended for friends and supporters. It failed to draw a large crowd.

"It wasn't as well received as I had hoped," Knowles said. "All that attended were friends, though."

One of Knowles' supporter in attendance was Senator Jim Harsdorf.

"I have known the Knowles family for many years and respect them for a history of strong support for higher education," Harsdorf said. In support of the candidacy of the younger Knowles, Harsdorf said, "He would represent the area very well."

In addressing UW-Stout's issues, Knowles was very brief. He said that he intends to view the opinions and results of a study committee which reviews current policies and practices of the UW-System.

"I want to work on all of the problems, yet, no one legislator can do it alone," Knowles said. "It is a long process."

The committee Knowles said he would confer with on university issues is the Future of University of Wisconsin Systems Committee. It is made up mainly of regents, with Stout's own Chancellor Swanson serving as Vice-President.

The Future Committee reviews input from faculty and other outside sources. The committee will submit a report of recommended changes in policies and practices, for consideration by the board of regents.

Knowles mentioned that he likes to avoid discussion of the issues to frustrate his opponent in debate.

"We can really give an audience an exciting show," Knowles said of this tactic.

A debate is scheduled between Knowles and Shoemaker on October 24. Shoemaker is a business administration alumni of Stout and "damn proud of it," he said in a telephone interview.

Shoemaker said that he has worked on a number of things to improve Stout. One such improvement Shoemaker was active in, was the approval of the new fieldhouse addition. After eight years of work, the project had been vetoed at one time, Shoemaker said that the fieldhouse project "was one of the sweetest things" he has done.

"I put a lot of work and thought into a campus that means a lot to me," Shoemaker said. "I want to take my eight years of experience and use it for this campus, besides the entire district. I would challenge my opponent to match my record in supporting Stout."

Shoemaker's opponent Robert Knowles will also be speaking at the Memorial Student Center on October 23. He will also be lecturing to a business marketing class on October 30.

CAUSA/Moonies linked

Members of an organization who have been approaching people on the UW-Eau Claire campus to sign petitions opposing godless communism have been warned to be careful not to harass students.

The Confederation of Associations of Unity for Societies of America (CAUSA) is one of many organizations which are merely covers for the activities of Reverend Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, according to Eau Claire Associate Dean of Students Bob Shaw.

Shaw said that reports of follow-up contacts made to students who signed the CAUSA petitions inspired the warning to CAUSA members.

Students reported being invited to private homes where the conversation, Shaw said, "drifts from the discussion of anti-communism to a discussion of the divine principle." Guests are then encouraged, according to Shaw, to attend CAUSA retreats away from the city.

Shaw claimed that CAUSA is a "Moonie organization who's fundamental intent is to bring people into the Unification Church."

Harumi Takashima, who identified herself as the area organizer for the CAUSA petition drive has been collecting signatures at UW-Stout campus this past week.

"I am a member of Unification Church," she said. "Another guy is with Catholic Church."

Claiming that petitioners in the CAUSA organization are not discussing the principles of the Unification Church with those they approach for signatures, Takashima said that their objective was just to fight the threat of communism.

Over seven million people internationally have signed the anti-communism petitions, according to Takashima, who said that CAUSA had paid her fare to America from her native Japan.

Long-range plan needed

Despite the fact that budget decisions at UW-Stout are made without a long-range plan, Vice Chancellor Wesley Face, a member of the University Budget Committee (UBC), has been chosen to co-chair a group which will design a model for long-range planning for post-secondary institutions across the nation.

Face will be working with other members of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities on the revisions of a planning model that he had been part of developing some time ago.

"I think long-range planning is going to be increasingly expected," said Face. "With the continuous growth of accountability, there will be the expectation to have a plan."

Past-chair of the UBC, Associate Professor of social science Richard Tyson, said that the committee has been responding to budget matters without a long-range plan.

"I think mostly we've been responding to things that have to be done and we find money for them," said Tyson.

Dr. Bruce Siebold, business department chair, is currently the chair of UBC. He said that the Chancellor has charged his committee to deliver to him recommendations on how to cut $400 thousand and 16 position from next year's budget.

"We are totally absorbed with that, at this time," said Siebold. Chancellor Swanson has asked that the proposal be submitted to him by November 15.

Sex approved

A student panel at the University of Colorado has ruled that sex in residence hall rooms is tolerable, providing it does not violate a roommate's right to privacy.

The decision was handed down by the Dormitory Representative Council, a student representative body in response to the wording of rules printed in the campus handbook.

The student representatives voted to recommend to the housing director of the university that wording in the handbook which bans sexual activity be replaced with: "Visitation does not, therefore, permit any activity, sexual or otherwise, which is contrary to a roommate's and fellow residents' right to privacy."

Student reps visit

Plans to counteract tuition increases and enrollment caps will be revealed by representatives of UW-System students on Wednesday, Oct. 22 at 1 p.m. in Ballroom C of the Memorial Student Center.

Bryce Tolefree, president of the state-wide student government association, United Council (UC), and the UC Academic Affairs Director Ed Emerson will be present to discuss ways to protect students from rising fees and decreasing access to education.

The two UC representatives will also be addressing the Stout Student Association (SSA) during open forum at the Tuesday, Oct. 21 meeting. The SSA meeting starts at 7 p.m. in Crystal Ballroom C.

Womens status low

The state of Wisconsin ranks below average in gender equality, according to a recent study of the status of women in the U.S.

Although fifth amongst states in the percentage of women in its work force, Wisconsin was 28th when median incomes were compared with the median incomes of women across the nation.

In numbers of female heads of families with incomes above the poverty level, Wisconsin ranked 23rd amongst all the states.

The study was released by David Sugarman, a psychology professor at Rhode Island College, Providence, and Murray Straas, of the Family Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire.

More student detox

Campus Security has seen an increase in the number of students they transport to the area detoxification center.

Bob Hoage, supervisor of the campus police, said that the experience is an unpleasant one for those who endure it.

"It's an embarassing situation and a very costly one," Hoage said.

Students who appear incapacitated due to excessive consumption of alcohol are transported to the Dunn County Health Care Center (DCHCC) for detoxification. They are confined there for observation. Students admitted to DCHCC for detoxification treatment might be recommended for an examination by a doctor or the evaluation of a psychiatrist.

All the costs incurred during confinement at the center are charged to the student. Marge Mattison, billing clerk for DCHCC, said that the base rate for a stay in detoxification is $130 per day.

Hoage said that he would like to encourage any students who feel that they might be developing an alcohol or drug problem to contact any of the help organization available on campus.

"Don't be embarassed to speak out and ask for help," Hoage encouraged, "because you can get help."

Enrollment up

More students than anticipated continued to attend UW-Stout this semester, accounting for most of the enrollment at the university which exceeded the fall enrollment planning goal.

Fall enrollment figures submitted to UW-System administration show that 7,673 students are attending Stout this semester. The enrollment goal was 7,500.

There were 130 more students who continued at Stout than was expected.

Values clarified

A workshop aimed at helping people develop an understanding of the values of people of color will be held at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 21 in Crystal Ballroom B of the Memorial Student Center.

Non-alcoholic Bash offers new direction

In the past, Homecoming and beer parties have been synonymous. This weekend's Bash on the Grass has been designed as a positive alternative for all students to take advantage of, rather than going uptown and getting drunk.

More than 150 students plus Student Activities administrators have had active roles in the planning and production of the Bash scheduled to take place immediately after the end of the Homecoming game Saturday, October 18.

The Bash ought to be approached as a first- time event. No doubt there will be problems and complaints about the Bash. A way to get the most out of the Stout Student Association (SSA) sponsored event would be to attend it with the plan to enjoy the festivities while noting things that could and should be improved in future Bashes. Although The Stoutonia cannot speak for the SSA, we are confident they would welcome your suggestions.

The Bash on the Grass was developed in recognition of the need for student activities at Homecoming that are non-alcoholic. The Association of College Union membership statewide has clearly expressed their interest and support of this 100 percent non-alcoholic festival honoring Homecoming.

The impact on college life by the increase in the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 years old will not be felt for about two years, about the time the grandfather clause will no longer apply.

Therefore, it is important that events such as Bash on the Grass be used to demonstrate the avenues to explore concerning ways to celebrate effectively without resorting to drug use.

This $4000 Bash including the three bands, a dozen student organizations serving a variety of food, and another dozen groups offering a range of activities to choose from should be thought of as only a beginning.

A decade from now there will probably be a bigger and better Bash. You will have the chance to remember that this was where it all began. We look forward to celebrating the end of one era and the beginning of another era at the Bash on the Grass.

Seeds of Change

Wake up America!

Gene Emahiser

There always seems to be someone around campus alerting everyone that the communists are taking another country or city. Have you ever wondered why the communists take more and more territory? I have. I decided to find out why the Soviet Union keeps growing and the free world keeps shrinking. (Almost half of the world's population has succumbed to communism since World War II.)

The following are some of my findings: Karl Marx wrote in the Communist Manifesto of 1847, "Let the ruling class tremble at a communistic revolution. The proletarians have nothing to lose but their chains. They have the world to win. Working men of all countries, unite!" A Marxist sees violence as a necessary evil to accomplish a higher good. "Force may be ugly and bloody, but it is an inescapable phase in the agonizing process of achieving justice and of creating a new social order."

Marx was consumed with hatred. That hatred was directed at the church that was apathetic to the social problems around it. He despised the inconsistency of the Christianity he knew as a child. He later directed his anger toward the wealthy ruling class — the "bourgeoisie." Marx saw law and morality as "bourgeoisie prejudices," hypocritical restraints put on society by the wealthy.

Now, more than one hundred years later, the communist revolution seems to be closing in on our borders. The Soviet Union began putting together a master plan to take the United States and with it, most of the remaining free world in the 1950's. There are thirty-five goals in that plan. Many seem mind boggling, when you consider that these were written down almost thirty years ago. This plan was reprinted in a book by Dr. Cleon Skousen, "The Naked Columnist," published in 1959. Skousen's had served as assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Here are just a few of them:

1. United States Acceptance of coexistance as the only alternative to atomic war.
2. Develop the illusion that total disarmament would be a demonstration of moral strength.
3. Gain control of all student newspapers.
4. Eliminate all laws governing obscenity by calling them "censorship" and a violation of free press.
5. Present homosexuality, degeneracy, and promiscuity as "normal, natural, and healthy."
6. Eliminate prayer or any phrase of religious expression in the schools on the grounds that it violates the principle of "separation of church and state."
7. Discredit the family as an institution.

Encourage promiscuity and easy divorce.

Of the thirty-five, less than ten goals have yet to be achieved. Why does the Soviet Union think that this type of plan will work? Stalin himself said, "America is like a healthy body and it's resistance is threefold: it's patriotism, it's morality, and it's spiritual. If we (communism) can undermine these three areas, America will collapse from within." If you consider that quote when looking at their goals, the Soviet's whole plan becomes obvious.

I am not so stupid as to say that the communists are directly responsible for the present state of moral decay that our country is in. What I am saying, however, is that Stalin knew what the strength of America was, as did Alexis De Toqueville. "When America ceases to be good, it will cease to be great." Whether or not they were the instigators of the present state of immorality, they have as much to gain by our moral fall as we have to lose.

The one goal I see as being key in the Soviet's master plan is goal number twenty-four. "Infiltrate the churches to replace Biblical religion with social religion. Discredit the Bible and emphasize the need for an intellectual maturity that does not need a "religious crutch."

We, as a country, need to wake up and take stand against moral decline. If we do not, we are only playing the fool for Gorbachev and the gang.

REGISTRATION SCHEDULE

Students who wish to register must follow the time schedule listed below. If you are unsure of how many credits you have earned, please call the PASS Office, x-1465.

Class schedule books will be available beginning October 23. They will be available in each of the residence halls and at the Information Desk of the Student Center.

All students will register by submitting completed program cards and their Permit to Register at the Registration and Records Office, Room 109 Bowman Hall. Read further for information on obtaining your Permit to Register.

UNDERGRADUATE ADVISEMENT PROCEDURES

A Permit to Register must be obtained before you will be allowed to register for your classes. Find your major in the list below for specific information regarding advisement and procedures for obtaining your Permit to Register. Permits will be distributed from the appropriate offices beginning on Monday, October 20. If you are unsure of what major you are listed under, call the PASS Office at 232-1465, or the Registration and Records Office at 232-2121.

NOTE: All NEW FRESHMEN (except students majoring in Marketing & Distributive Education; Vocational, Technical and Adult Education) will obtain their permit to register at the PASS Office, after they have met with their PASS Advisor.

What is 211? ? ? ? Express Lane for Advisement. The advisement system in the School of Home Economics was planned to assist students with the questions, concerns and needs regarding their degree programs. The program directors and HE 211 advisement staff are committed to providing the student with current and accurate advisement information using the most efficient delivery system. The advisors are there to assist you at a moments notice.

REGISTRATION INFORMATION FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

FIRST: Permits to Register for eligible students will be available from their graduate program directors starting October 20. See your graduate advisor (program director) to obtain your Permit to Register and class cards and receive assistance in completing your schedule. This advisement may take place any time after the class schedules are announced. (Class schedule books will be available on October 20 in your residence hall or at the Information Desk of the Student Center). Graduate students may register for a maximum of 16 credits per semester.

Students for whom the program directors do not have a Permit to Register should stop at the Graduate College Office between 9 a.m. - 11:30 a.m. beginning October 23.

International students whose program directors do not have their Permits to Register must call at the Graduate College Office between 9:00 - 11:30 a.m. to see the Admissions Examiner.

(Issuance of Permits and registration dates do not necessarily coincide).

Be sure to review your degree progress according to the Student Progress Sheet which is on the inside cover of your Graduate Bulletin. Don't hesitate to call at the Graduate College if you need additional information and instructions.

Some graduate students are now at the point at which they should be applying for admission to candidacy. If you have completed 6 hours of graduate work, call at the Graduate College Office to obtain the information and forms needed to apply for candidacy. This should take place before applying for a Permit to Register.

THEN: Take your PERMIT TO REGISTER and SIGNED PROGRAM CARD to the Registration and Records Office according to their schedule. (Your advisor will keep one of the program cards).

Pick up a copy of your schedule in lobby of Bowman Hall. Students who found conflicts or closed sections in their schedules may make changes on the above dates.

GRADUATE STUDENTS completing the requirements for graduation are required to submit a Graduate Application for Degree Card to the Graduate College Office within two weeks of the beginning of the term in which the student expects to graduate. Graduate students will be recorded as having graduated in the academic term in which all degree requirements are completed, including the filing of the signed and approved copy of the Creative Intellectual Inquiry Experience Report in the Graduate Office. The academic terms are defined as being over on the last day of Semester I in December; the last day of Semester II in May; and the last day of Summer Session in August. Graduate advisors who supervise reports will need adequate lead time for reading both prior to and after final typing of the report. Students should inquire of their advisor about appropriate lead time to permit adequate advisor review prior to the planned completion date. An evaluation of the student's record will not be started until this card is on file in the Graduate College. This card is in the research packet which can be picked up in the Graduate College Office.

ATTENTION SENIORS
A SPECIAL NOTE FROM THE GRADUATE OFFICE

A HEAD START ON YOUR GRADUATE WORK:

Graduating seniors who need from 1 to 15 hours to complete their bachelor's degree work and who apply for one of UW-Stout's graduate degree programs have an opportunity to get a head start on graduate work at Stout. It is possible to enter the Graduate College on a dual level basis. This means that those students otherwise eligible for graduate work may take courses at the graduate level to bring their total load to a maximum of 16 credit hours during the semester in which graduation will take place. Dual level students are eligible only as program students.

Tuition for the senior semester remains the same as for other senior undergraduates. Start early by calling at the Graduate College, phone 715/232-2211, for information and various forms. These must be filled out to permit processing of your application. Upon completion of processing (about 30 days), you may obtain your Graduate Permit to Register and advice from the appropriate Graduate Program Director to select courses that will lead toward your graduate program.

Legislation requires a non-refundable application fee of $20.00 of all applicants for admission to graduate study in UW-System universities.

Applications for admission will not be processed until the application fee and all forms have been received by the Graduate College. Check or money order should be made out to UW-Stout and remitted to the Graduate College, University of Wisconsin-Stout, Menomonie, WI.

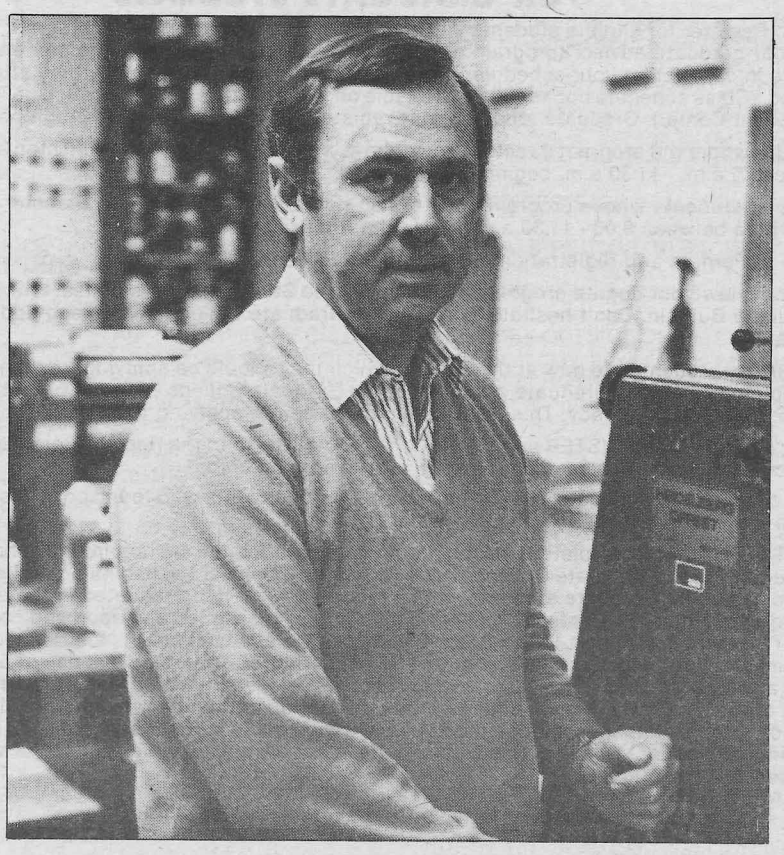
Subject: The Graphic Arts Management Concentration and their future facility

by Brian Kraimer

Dr. James F. Herr arrived at UW-Stout in 1964 after serving three years in the Navy as a comissioned officer. He received his Doctorate at the University of Missouri, Columbia after a sabbatical leave. Dr. Herr became a full Professor of Graphic Arts six years later. His wife, Dr. Judith Herr, is a member of the Human Development and Family Living Department here at Stout. His oldest son is a sophomore at Harvard and his younger son is an eigth grader at Menomonie Junior Highschool. Dr. Herr became the coordinator of the Graphic Arts Management Program in 1970.



Dr. James Herr

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS THE HISTORY OF THE GRAPHIC ARTS DEPARTMENT HERE AT STOUT?

HERR: Graphic Arts was first started here at UW-Stout by William Baker in Bowman Hall in the 1924. Mr. Wydotski then became the department head in 1949. Following that was Dr. Thomas in 1966. Currently, Dr. Anther is the department head.

The original facility was in Bowman Hall, which was not a sufficient building for what the Graphic Arts Department needed. The department was moved in 1982 to Fryklund Hall temporarily until a new facility could be constructed. Then it was decided that the old Student Center would be remodeled into the Graphic Arts Building.

The construction of the new building was started in July of 1985 and is expected to be completed by January of 1987 with classes starting in the new building the second semester of this year.

I am writing you concerning the last edition of The Stoutonia, wherein you had listed all king and queen nominations. In this listing you made a major mistake, putting Hovlid Hall's candidates Paul Fletcher and Donna Povroznik as the Antrim-Froggat king and queen candidates and excluded Hovlid Hall all together. We feel this was unfair to our king and queen candidates and Hovlid Hall. We believe that a public apology to Hovlid Hall and its candidates would be appropriate.

Thank you,

Farmers billed short

Trying to understand the farm crisis without considering the role of large grain corporations and agribusiness groups is (like) trying to make sense of the arms race without thinking about military contractors. Yet, though the debate over the farm issues rages throughout the media, the names of these corporate giants are never mentioned. Unfortunately when the farm bill is being debated in Congress we don't hear about the millions of dollars poured into lobbying efforts in order to keep farm prices low. Many people have been falsely led to believe that farmers are going bankrupt because of bad decisions they have made. Too few people understand that farmers don't set their prices, others do.

A farmer still gets the same nickel from a loaf of bread that he did in 1975. A farmer who sells 100 pounds of potatoes to a processor for $1 in 1986, sees that same 100 pounds of potatoes cost $240 in french fries at the local fast food store. Who benefits from our current agricultural policy of selling raw farm products at prices well below the price of production? Who benefits from exporting as much grain at cheaper and cheaper prices in order to take over foreign markets? Farmers don't!

Grain exports increased 143 percent during the last decade while the price paid to farmers (net farm income) dropped more than 45 percent. Those grain exports, five multinational grain companies, control 90 percent of our export sales. These corporations receive the same margin of profit on every bushel of grain sold regardless of the price given to farmers. For this reason, they try to market as many bushels as possible. And the only way that they can increase demand for the grain they export is to (you guessed it) lower their prices, which means that the prices paid to farmers has to be lower. It isn't difficult to understand how one of those grain companies, Cargill, increased its sales from $7 billion in the early 1970s to over $32 billion last year.

When was the last time any of us paid less for processed food, given the fact that the price given to farmers is less? LOW FOOD PRICES DO NOT MEAN CHEAP FOOD. In fact, from 1975 to 1984, consumer food prices rose 80 percent while farmers received only 35 percent more. However, prices paid by farmers for machinery, seed, fertilizer, taxes, etc., rose nearly three times as fast as profits they received. Since 1984, farm prices have continued to drop.

Who are these corporations? In the 1985 Farm Bill debate the following companies fought and paid to get lower food prices:

Hotel Restaurant Management,
Junior,

I think it will be a great year. We play Stevens Point and I am looking forward to that, also going to the parade, getting involved in the activities. It will be the first year for Bash on the Grass and it will be nice to see what happens there.

Lisa Thissen,
Business Administration,
Senior,

I think it is going to be a good Homecoming, and I just hope everyone will have a lot of fun and enjoy Bash on the Grass and use that so they do not get into trouble uptown or things like that.

Hamid Hehili,
Media Technology,
Graduate Student,

I am just looking for a good time. It will probably be a better then average weekend. I will probably vote for the Homecomimg candidates, and probably go to Bash on the Grass.

Bottom Line

The Necromancer

Rich Brueckner

"You know? I'd rather watch this on TV. Tones it down"–Laurie Anderson

The popularity of such videos as "Faces of Death" leads me to believe that many people have a need to have their senses jolted. Admittedly, portions of Bottom Line are there just for their shock value.

The printed word leaves a stronger impact on our senses than any film's dialogue. The mind is helpless. If the realm of the occult distresses you, read no further.

Journey now to the Dark and Forbidding Land of the Necromancer...

"This is a dangerous place." Why am I thinking this? There is nothing here that will harm me. I tell myself that the fear is irrational.

I'm nervous as hell from this thing. It can't be a nightmare; I blink and the after-image is still there.

I splash my face. The water's so cold that it gives me the chills. I turn up the hot water faucet. The pipes in the bathroom are rattling. I'm used to it, but for some reason I'm annoyed.

"You don't like it because it reminds you that this is real."

I don't know why I just thought that. I, I didn't think it. Something else put it in my head.

A hideous stench assaults my nostrils. I feel the hair on the back of my neck stand up as my mouth goes dry. A panic is rising in my soul. There is something evil in here.

It's right behind me! I spin wildly to face what I know to be the Lord of Darkness Himself...

Before me stands an unimposing Oriental man with the blackest eyes (bet you were scared, eh?)

"Would you like to fight communism?" he asks, offering me an innocent looking petition.

"Well, what precisely are your credentials to fight communism?" I demand. "I'll bet you're one of those frotting Moonies that have been hanging around campus."

He does not deny this. His face does look familiar though.

MY GOD! He's the Reverend Moon. This realization does not startle me half as much as the fact that he is standing in my bathroom.

"Why are you really here," I ask, hesitantly.

"Stout students have open minds," he responded. "I need your help; you are the antagonistic head of Nazi Propaganda that writes for The Stoutonia, aren't you?"

"No, I'm not a Nazi," I replied. "But some of my relatives in Austria were murdered by them in WWII. Does that make you feel any better?"

"You are the only one who can reach so many in this world full of mindlessness," he told me. "My current ploy of 'fighting communism' is costing me millions of Yen in overtime."

"No dice, jerk-off," I told him.

"I could make it worth your while: a car, computer, CD player, and I also have gorgeous brain-washed women to service you," he offered.

"Look pal," I spouted, pounding my index finger into his chest, "I have at least one of each of those items already."

The mind-frot had failed. Moon had not anticipated dealing with a nihilist such as myself. Evil has a hard time corrupting someone who won't acknowledge its presence.

Moon left town; some of his followers still remain. When they approach you with their "petition" to "fight communism," don't be fooled. They will use your own fear or hate of communism to deceive you.

"The spell has been broken...the Dark Lands are bright, the Wraith of the Necromancer soars away...in the night."–Neil Peart

Conference commended

Last week on October 8 and 9 nearly half of the students at UW-Stout participated in the eighth annual Professional Career Conference. A director of human resources for one of the largest companies in attendance summarized the conference this way. "Unquestionably the most well organized career I have attended. Truly an exceptional performance."

Over 20 students helped with arrangements and we thank them. Six students, however, deserve a public thank you for their dedication and tremendous number of hours they each gave. Karen Domel, Cyndi Mann, Randy Mullins, Andy Schmidt, Kim Stanton and Jennifer Volek each gave unselfishly of their time to help fellow students explore careers and locate jobs. Thank you!

The eighth annual Professional Career Conference was the largest ever with about 120 companies sharing employment information. Students who are interested in working as a manager next year should contact the Placement office.

Corrections

The Club Manager's Association photo was left out of the paper. We apologize for any misunderstandings which resulted.

STOUTONIA: How much money was allocated for the new facility and how much of this money will pay for new equipment?
HERR: The building itself is $3.1 million State funded. There was only $150,000 set aside for equipment which was split between the Photography Area, Communications and the Graphics Department.
Due to the lack of funding for capital equipment, I wrote a proposal to the Stout Foundation last February to allow myself free time to get donations of money, equipment and supplies from the Graphics Arts Industry. Right now, we are at the half million dollar mark in donations and are expected to make the one million dollar goal.
STOUTONIA: WHAT WILL THE NEW BUILDING MEAN TO THE GRAPHIC ARTS DEPARTMENT?
HERR: First of all, in a recent tour of the facility with a 3M representative, he commented that it was going to be a real tremendous facility. The new facility will be one of a kind, certainly in the midwest.
It is going to enhance an already proven program, and allow us to stay on the cutting edge of technology. With these advancements we can continue our excellent placement record.
STOUTONIA: WHAT IS THE PLACEMENT OF GRAPHIC ARTS PEOPLE HERE AT STOUT AND WHAT KIND OF EARNING POTENTIAL DO THEY HAVE?
HERR: For the last two years here at UW-Stout the placement of Graphic Arts people has been 100 percent. In the past 20 years the placement (rate) has never fallen below 94 percent. The average starting salary is $19,000 and will probably easily reach $20,000 for this year's graduates.
STOUTONIA: WHAT DOES THE FUTURE HOLD FOR GRAPHIC ARTS GRADUATES?
HERR: Since September 2, 1986 through October 10 I have had 18 companies calling asking for UW-Stout graduates. Yes, there is going to be a demand for Graphic Arts people in the area of electronics and computers.
The new facility dedication is scheduled for March 19, 1987. A presidential appointee, the Public Printer of the United States will be the key speaker at the dedication.

Cryptic Notes

Brief encounters

Tim Hopkins

"What I am going to tell you has something to do with how sometimes it's necessary to go a long distance out of the way in order to come back a short distance correctly." — Edward Albee.

As media events go, it was one of the greatest. I am not talking about the Boston Red Sox come from behind win in game five against the California Angels. I am referring to the Iceland Summit.

The summit's meaning was suspect as reporters began questioning what the summit ought to be called. Mini-summit was considered the best way to describe this 36 hour event that had been planned a week and a half in advance. If I recall correctly, President Reagan eliminated the confusion by saying that this was indeed a summit.

The problem with calling this meeting a summit is that the term refers to being at the top and the only place to go from there is down. The meeting might have succeeded if it had been called a step in the right direction.

Confusion predominated as reporters and government officials alike began sweating the small stuff. It was enjoyable watching the network correspondents hustling around looking for news where there was none to be found.

There was a surreal quality to watching David Brinkley ask Sam Donaldson to explain what it meant when Reagan refused to answer questions that were shouted at the president while he and Gorbachev moved to a new meeting site.

Perhaps the greatest lesson from the Iceland summit was that America has a new bargaining chip which the Russians take seriously, the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). The difference between the SDI in theory and the SDI in practice is argued about by physicists and politicians who disagree on the trillion dollar plus price tag for a defense system which may be theoretical at best.

SDI will take at least 10 years to develop and the Reagan administration has the chance to bluff the Russians with SDI for that time period. The doors have not been closed to negotiation by the failure to agree at last week's summit. Future negotiations ought to be more constructive since both sides have a clearer picture of what the other side desires.

The problem with last week's summit was that it was too highly focused on much in the same way that the news focuses on a 50 point drop in the Dow on a single day although those 50 points represent less than four percent of the Dow.

America and Russia must step back for a moment and review the facts. We need to recognize the difference in arms negotiations today compared to arms negotiations five years ago. We should consider ourselves lucky that Reagan and Gorbachev refused to hastily make an agreement before the glare of the media.

Progress was made in discussion about limiting deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles. The hurdle in this confrontation was presented when the Russians made their proposal as an all or nothing deal.

It would be a mistake to leave this summit with the image of failure. Gorbachev offered a hopeful view of the situation when he reportedly said both sides "should reflect on the entire situation and once again come back and try to step over" problems that remain.

"Let America think. We are waiting. We are not withdrawing our proposals," Gorbachev concluded. Hope remains since the message is clear that there is room to move.

Fine Line

Heaven or BeeGees

Jef Maynard

Recently, while not doing what I was supposed to be working on, I read something about Devils... "and there seems to be no exception to the rule that fear is always the first incentive to religious worship."

We fear the bad, not the good. Ancient cultures thought the worst things were underfoot, or overhead. They did not fear the lightning because it was From the Unknown, but because, for some unknown reason, the stuff came out of the sky and could burn your butt and your grass hut. Therefore, it was Evil, or certainly very nasty.

Devil-Worship has roots in fear and appeasement. This type of appeasement usually requires burning something, sometimes small children or record albums and so on. This type of appeasement also usually requires blood being spilled, which is why rugby remains so popular.

Look at snakes. It is not easy to find much to adore in a snake. The early Christians easily got snakes on the brain and so Snakes Are Evil. I think it could be just as easy to think that Cold Baths are evil.

Fear is the key. Belief is the welcome mat. You have to believe in something strongly enough to give it credit for Life and Death Powers. If you don't think that there is a Devil, he or she cannot get much of a grip on you. There are tribes in the Philippines that are more afraid of Dole Pineapple executives than they are of any Devils, probably with good reason.

It is much the same as with modern art or baseball. If you don't care about the intricacies of a perfect sacrifice bunt or the World Series, you aren't going to live in mortal fear that the California Angels might not defeat the Red Sox.

Notice the key words, "sacrifice," and "Angels." In the Fifth Game of the American League Playoffs, the Angels performed a sacrifice and they still lost the game. It could be the Devil and Gene Mauch story again.

Here, in sometimes backwards America, melting pot of left-overs, there arises the fear of the Devil. Last year, there was a comic, short-lived attempt to change the Stout mascot from a Blue Devil to some less demonic image, maybe a marmot or one of those alligators on the nice polo shirts.

It appears that the more religious you are, the more driven you are by the fear of evil, in particular, the Satanic stuff. Ask yourself this question: Are your religious tendencies based on a love of the Good Deity or more on a fear of the Bad Deity? It is a legitimate question.

From what I have been told of Heaven and Hell, (remember this is all second-hand information,) Heaven sounds like an impossible contradiction made of ecstasy and Boredom. Hell sounds interesting but stressful. (It will probably have plenty of music by The BeeGees and Green Bay Packer reruns.) Neither place sounds like much of a chance for personal growth. I think Heaven sounds preferable if I can get a table by the window.

As for the Devil, I have yet to see anybody that I could mistake for the Devil. I have heard that there are actually Satan Worshippers right here in America and they have done some bad things. I think that the various Good Deity worshippers have done some bad things too, though that is no excuse for either group.

I have a really difficult time getting very excited about the idea that there is a Devil and he (and Frank Zappa and so on), are trying to get me to do bad things. I have a rough idea of a difference between Bad and Good, and I can't help but feel like it is my choice. As for what is evil, it actually seems genuinely rare if you think about it.

People left on their own, without Gods or Devils might turn out to be just as lovable and stupid as they are under the assumed influence of either Good or Evil Forces. I wonder if it really is Heaven or Hell at work on us or if maybe, we are making excuses because our societies don't even seem to work as well as an ant farm and we cannot figure out what to do about it.

If you have the Answer, write to me. In 25 words or less, explain the meaning of Life. Just don't say that God told you what to write. Do your own work.

HAVE A GOOD, SAFE HOMECOMING STOUT!!!

Hartford entertains by sticking to country roots

by Eric Hampton

Country music is not country music anymore. At least not in the sense that there is a clearcut difference between country music and other styles of popular music. Not unlike the two major political parties, the differences between the two styles have decreased almost to the point of merging.

There are, however, those performers on both ends of the spectrum who refuse to conform to the status quo. In the pop rock category, groups like the Bangles and Husker Du strive for the return to the roots of pop music, while country artists such as Dwight Yoakim and John Hartford, this Friday's performer at Mabel Tainter Theater, attempt to preserve the essence of country music.

Hartford first appeared on the country music scene more than twelve years ago on Glenn Campbell's "Goodtime Hour." He was a regular on the show, often backing up Campbell's rendition of "Gentle On My Mind" on banjo. The song, written by Hartford, has had over four million airplays, making it among the most popular country songs of all time. It has also won two Grammy awards for Hartford, in addition to the one he received for his solo album "Mark Twang."

Hartford brings back to Tainter Theater, where he gave two sold out performances in 1984, his energetic style of live performance. The critics have called his style everything from "refreshing" to "unpredictable," and both would seem to be apt descriptions. Hartford performs alone, accompanying himself on banjo, guitar, fiddle, and, in what can at best be described as unusual, his own face. He also adds to the atmosphere by tap-dancing on an electronically-amplified plywood board. Audience participation is also an important part of the show, with clapping and singing not only encouraged, but a prerequisite. Christopher Powers said in a recent review that "Hartford displays a phenomenal rapport with his audience. He plays the jester and the fool so well that he easily catches up the audience in his merry madness."

> "Hartford displays a phenomenal rapport with his audience
> —Christopher Powers"

Hartford's performance is more than a slapstick routine, however. Matt Krane of The Valley News compared listening to Hartford to "listening to a first-class nursery rhyme told by your favorite uncle." Indeed, Hartford's intimate, personal songs of life and love on the Mississippi almost invariably capture the listener with their rich pastoral imagery.

Hartford returns to Menomonie in the wake of sixteen successful solo albums, television appearances on "The Today Show," "Good Morning America," and "The Tonight Show," among others, and a recent stint as an honest-to-goodness steamboat pilot. In addition, Hartford has published Word Movies, a collection of his petry and illustrations published by Doubleday, and recently served as technical advisor for "Life On the Mississippi," a PBS mini-series hosted by Kurt Vonnegut based on the book by Mark Twain.

"Time and the River Keep Rollin By" say the lyrics of a John Hartford song. It will certainly be the worth the time spent to relax and enjoy Hartford's 7 and 9 p.m. performances at Mabel Tainter Theater this Friday. Tickets are $8.00 in advance and $10.00 at the door, but Theater employees warn that seating is already limited. Perhaps the past and present of country music are about due for a merger of their own.

Madzo exhibition brings humor to Furlong Gallery

by Jef Maynard

"The Gods Responding to Fate" is the title of a painting by David Madzo. One of the gods, if they are gods, has a finger up his nose, and the other lets his middle finger do the talking. Madzo's show is one of humor and challenge.

The exhibition, which opened Tuesday in Furlong Gallery, pits mortal sarcasm against classical perpetuity, classical themes against a punk comic book approach. Sneer today, gone tomorrow.

"The Gods Responding to Fate" may say a good bit about Madzo. The gods, if they are gods, have blown-dry hair styles. They are standing in an ancient pastoral setting, flanked by a bird-man emblem from the surrealistic past of art history.

Emblems or themes from the past stamped on busy, burning backgrounds. Visions and highlights from the history of Roman Catholicism, acrylics ablaze on primarily large, hot canvases, panels or prepared paper.

First impressions say violence and torture, a Holy Mess. Then, a strange humor oozes up to the surface. Madzo is an AWOL existentialist with a wicked wit running amuck through an illustrated volume of Famous Bible Scenes.

"The Last Buffalo" is such a work. A half-figure on a blazing red background sticks out his tongue at three men. The figure has a rainment like a church higher authority, a bishop-like costume.

But the headdress has two short horns on either side. Are these devil's emblems? Or are they what I think they are, a comic reference to the headgear worn by the members of the Secret Order of the Water Buffalo from the cartoon series the The Flintstones.

With eyes raised, the bishop figure sticks out his tongue at the heavens perhaps.

The works in Madzo's show are lively and powerful in image, movement and color. Most have a life-size vertical construction that offers the viewer a chance to step into the scene, at least psychologically.

Some of the scenes have a gore to them initially. Four monks in a hot red liquid pool, drinking blood from a hand pierced four times. Rising from the pool, two classical female figures, one wrapped in a snake. It all sounds heavy and fearful.

Then, slowly revealing themselves from the background are subtle, strange little decal-like images, a donkey head, breasts, a canon, another middle finger at full mast, a mushroom cloud, a head with some dumbo nose gadget.

Dumb images in a somber scene, even a brutal, morbid scene, make a joke of it all. Somehow, Madzo works in some strangeness of this sort into most of his paintings.

There are strong colors, and shapes that in a structure of thick, dark outlines, looks like neo-cartoonism gone expressionist.

The works are mixtures of Greek and Roman themes, or old Christian images done in a super-heated Minneapolis-punk style, carefully composed and richly painted.

"The Begatting" is another seemingly sarcastic paint job. A male, bound in large wood screw clamps, suffers the situation between the possible parental units, both of whom cast an angry glare toward the heavens.

Beyond the twisted figures, behind the tortuous images, is a strong, concise painting formula.

Heavy use of opposing colors, hot and cold clashes in richly applied passages suggests convincingly that there is a painter as well as a thinker at work.

Expressionst David Madzo's hot colored, and somewhat disturbing paintings are on view now at the J. Furlong gallery, Ray Hall. All are welcome to come in and take a look. The gallery is open from 10-5, Monday through Friday. (Stoutonia photo by Wayne Parmley)

Women artists to be discussed in new quarter course

by Noreen Spraner

A new course will be offered this quarter entitled 10 Women Artists. It is being offered through the Women's Studies minor, and will be a one credit discussion course.

Mary Hovind, who works as the slide librarian for the art department, will be teaching the course and facilitating the discussion.

The class should be interesting to anyone who has an interest in art, women's studies or women's place in our culture.

When asked about what made her so interested in women in art, Hovind said "It happened way back in 1973. I was asked to represent Stout at a national conference on women in art. There were women visual artists, writers and critics from all areas of art, from all over the country. The goal was cultural change."

"In the previous 15-20 years, women's position in the arts was not anything to brag about, as far as being shown in museums, the percentage of female to male art students, and the percentage of female to male upper-level art teachers," Hovind continued. "The gist of the conference was how to deal with the problem and how to change cultural institutions so that they better represent women. Out of the conference grew a state organization, Wisconsin Women in Art, of which I was a founding member."

"That 10 year period between 1973 and 1983 was a really exciting era for women artists," said Hovind. "It seemed to be a 10 year period of intense consciousness raising nationally. Historians like Linda Nachlin, Ann Sutherland Harris, and Germain Greer began doing extensive research into the history of women artists."

Hovind continued "they found indeed there was a history of women artists. Women have been working through the centuries, but for the most part had been overlooked."

"Each artist has her own message. It is just that women have a different experience than men do and art is a way of communicating. Some women choose to use very personal and political imagery, as do male artists," said Hovind.

"During that 8 to 10 year period on our campus we had guests such as Judy Chicago, Mary Stevens and New York Art Critic Cindy Nemser, founder of the Feminist Art Journal," said Hovind. "Right and left they were coming. It was such a vital period."

"The real pushers and doers have burnt themselves out, but they laid the groundwork. Women have made great strides professionally," Hovind said. "It seems to have reached a kind of plateau.

Janet Polansky asked me to do this course; one of many one credit courses offered on women's issues. She is the coordinator for the Women's Studies minor."

"I have chosen these women from such a diverse background, whether they be mainstream artists, contemporary artists, feminist artists, or naive folk artists," said Hovind.

The course will offer these films for discussion:
"Anonymous Was a Woman"
"Quilts in Women's Lives"
"The Artist Was a Woman"
"Mary Cassatt-Impressionist From Philadelphia"
"Life and Death of Frieda Kahlo"
"Alice Neal-Collector of Souls"
"Georgia O'Keefe"
"Radiance"
"Minnie Evans' Paintings- The Angel That Stands by Me"
"Spirit Catcher-The Art of Betye Saar"
"Beyond a Dream"
"Helen Frankenthaler"
"Lee Krasner-The Long View"
"Louise Nevelson in Process"
"Bridget Riley"
"Grandma's Bottle Village-the art of Tressa Prisby"
"Hats, Bottles and Bones- A Portrait of Sari Dienes"
"From the Heart"

These films will be followed by discussion. There may also be some outside reading.

Here is an excellent opportunity to pick up that extra credit, and learn something about women artists, too.

Mary Hovind will draw on her extensive knowledge of women in art to teach a new 1 credit Women's Studies course entitled 10 Women Artists. Anyone with an interest in art or an interest in women's studies should enjoy the course. (Stoutonia photo by Wayne Parmley)

Detroit's Buzztones come to UW-Stout. Billed as the "New Motown Sound," the Buzztones will perform at the Homecoming Coronation Dance, Friday, October 17 at 8 p.m. in the Great Hall.

Greg West Returns

Studio Artist Greg West returns to UW-Stout for a presentation and discussion of his works. A graduate of Stout, West will be on campus Wednesday, October 22. The presentation will be held in West's "old home," Applied Arts, room 321 at 7 p.m.

Minneapolis Children's Theatre Company

UW-Stout's Office of Continuing Education and the Menomonie Public Library will be sponsoring a trip to the Minneapolis Children's Theatre Company for the production of Laura Ingall's "Little House on the Prairie."

The trip is scheduled for Sunday, November 9. A bus will leave from the Menomonie Public Library parking lot at 11 a.m. and return at 7 p.m. Cost for adults is $18.50 and $16.00 for persons under 17 years of age. Registration deadline is October 8.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the Office of Continuing Education at 232-1167.

Aushwitz Survivor Speaks

Helen Waterford, Jewish survivor of Aushwitz and Alfons Heck, a once high ranking leader of the Hitler Youth will be speaking at UW-Stout. The two will share their differing experiences in a controversial discussion.

Presented by the University Speaker Series, Waterford and Heck, can be heard on Tuesday, October 21 in the Student Union's Great Hall at 8 p.m.

Pawn Live

Smith and Mayer, billed as "an exciting, soothing, and magical" entertaining duo, will be performing at the Pawn Live. Performing a variety of musical styles, including country-folk and rhythm and blues, Smith and Mayer have a "special talent for making old songs seem new and new songs seem like old favorites."

Performances are Friday and Saturday, October 17 and 18 starting at 9:15 p.m. Admission is free.

UW-Stout Theatre Presents

Larry Shue's, "The Foreigner," will be performed by the University Theatre. Performances are scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 16-18 at 8 p.m. with a matinee performance on Sunday, October 19 at 1:30 p.m.

Other performances this year include "All the Way," and "Camelot." Ticket cost is $2 for adults and $1.50 for students. For more information call x-1468.

Campus Cuisine

Leaving on a Jet Plane

Denise Cain

There was no campus cuisine last week. The whole truth to the story is that I was at my brother's wedding in the New York City of the midwest: Bismark, North Dakota. Odd as it may seem, Bismark is an exciting, high spirited capital city, and the fact that my relatives were there for a good time did not hurt matters either.

The most exciting experience of my trip, other than the wedding itself, is that the airlines lost all of my luggage on Friday morning. It was only an hour-long flight, but still they managed to lose all of my clothes and beauty equipment that I, and the rest of world, finds so pertinent to my morning transformation process. I could tell they had a soft spot in their hearts for me because they had my luggage back by Thursday, only five days after the blessed event.

You are probably wondering how this is all going to correlate into this weeks entertaining, yet informative column. Well, through this whole ordeal, the only thing the airlines gave me are two bags of peanuts. Not that I, in all actuality, needed anything, but I tend to take all of my frustrations out on food, and there was more frustration there than the peanuts could counteract.

This weeks column is on foods to eat when you are mad and depressed. But, luckily, you can finish them when you are happy (like when the airlines sends you a check for all of the turmoil they have caused you).

This first bar recipe is fast to make and very tasty. To frost the bars, buy a can of generic chocolate-fudge frosting, or you can make your own. The second bar recipe makes a lot of dishes but is truly impressive when entertaining guests.

Chocolate-Peanut Bars

1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/3 cup peanut butter
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1 egg
1/4 cup milk
1 cup flour
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup quick-cooking rolled oats

Cream together shortening, granulated sugar, brown sugar, peanut butter, and vanilla. Add egg and milk; beat well. Stir together flour, soda and salt; add to creamed mixture. Beat just till well mixed. Stir in oats. Spread in greased 13 x 9-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Cool and frost.

Salted Nut Roll Bars

1 pkg. Pillsbury Plus yellow cake mix
1/3 cup margerine, softened
1 egg
3 cups miniature marshmallows
2/3 cup corn syrup
1/4 cup margerine
2 tsp. vanilla
1 pkg. (12 oz.) peanut butter chips
2 cups Rice Krispies
2 cups salted peanuts

At low speed mix the first three ingredients until crumbly. Press into a 9 x 13-inch pan and bake at 350 degrees for 12-18 minutes until light golden brown. Remove from

Spontaneous Combustion

CMP strikes again

James "Unk" Falkofske

Authors note: This week I have interviewed CMP Chairperson Brett Jagodzinski (a weird dude in my book). He has warned me that anyone reading this column backwards while ignoring all the occurrences of 'i' and 'z' will be subject to possible satanic messages. Be warned!

The UW-Stout is blessed with an organization that brings musical relief to poor starved souls on this campus. Through funds provided by the student activities fee, the Contemporary Music Productions (otherwise known as CMP) brings local, regional, and major acts to the Stout campus.

CMP's long existence has brought such big- name bands as Spiro Gyro, the Tubes, Nightranger, and Shooting Star to campus. Alongside these national superstars, CMP provides monthly concerts including such local talent as the Suburbs, DCVer, the Slant, Bad Boy, and Johnny Holm. The organization's main purpose is to bring live musical entertainment to Stout.

CMP boasts of drawing more people than any other organization on campus. Last year CMP drew 10,000 people to its events. This year CMP hopes to draw twice as many.

In November, CMP brings the Phones and the Twisting Egyptians to the Great Hall. December looks like the month for all the "headbangers" on campus. As for this month, the members of CMP are contributing their efforts to the Bash on the Grass and the Buzztones.

As Mr. Jagodzinski stated "Our basic goal is to get bands that everyone likes. But our main problem is when you vary to other styles, such as reggae or country, attendance is poor. So, basically we're stuck in a dance band mold. We're trying to break through."

Jagodzinski also stated that "All the bands we get are quality bands, and we preview hundreds of bands each year to find the ones we think will go over the best."

"When we bring hard rock or soft rock to campus, very few people show up, even though the music is popular on campus," said Jagodzinski. "If they haven't heard the name before, they usually don't show up. What most people don't realize, is that most of the bands are free with ID, so why not take a chance on having a great time?"

Jagondzinski said that one of the hopes of CMP this year is to bring bands with more of an edge. "Something that is visually exciting, danceable, and intense is what we need to get on campus," he said.

CMP's biggest audience are repeaters. Jagondzinski stated "The people who show up to one show, often come to most or all of them because they see what quality bands we get."

Finding the bands seems to take up most of the time of CMP. Once bands are located and contracted, the backwork begins. rooms must be reserved, security hired, hospitality (food and beverages) determined and publicity distributed.

On the day of the show, the "CMPers" dedicate that day of their life to bringing music to Stout. They must be ready to load in and load out equipment, set up stage equipment, prepare the rooms, and take care of any troubles that might begin to boil. This includes loosing bands, getting arrested and dealing with irate roadies and managers.

CMP is responsible for ALL aspects of the musical production. From loading equipment to after show entertainment, CMP is there every step of the way. The highlight of these "gigs" comes with the post-show party where CMP members and the band finally get to enjoy the fruits of their labors. This is the only relaxation that takes place on a concert day.

In closing, Jagondzinski said "CMP is work, but fun. Concert days are the highlight of the school year for me. I hope that everone enjoys the shows that we have this year, and I'm sure if they come, they will!" Jagondzinski asks that if you have any suggestions or comments, please contact him at the SSA office at extension 2432.

Regional bands to play at Bash on the Grass

by S.J. Lomneas

This year's homecoming activities will include a wide selection of entertainment. One of the main events will be the many bands being featured at the activities.

There will be three regional bands playing at "Bash on the Grass" Saturday at 3:30 p.m. running until 10 p.m. in the Student Center Mall. The bands were handpicked by the University Programming Board (UPB) and the Special Events Committee.

The first band Gerard , is noted as being Milwaukee's best "top 40" band for the past two years. They recently taped a video, which will be released later this week. The band has won many awards for their music, especially for the song "Let Her Run". Chris Gerard, a band member, won the Wisconsin Music Award for his work. Their first album is scheduled for release soon.

Another band to be featured is familiar with the UW-Stout campus. The Metros are from the Twin Cities area. Last winter they opened for the Romantics' concert on Stout's campus. They are an energetic band. They have just released a video on MTV. They also have an album out.

The third band to be featured at "Bash on the Grass" is Slant. The Slant is a local band with the lead vocal being Crista Sanicola, UPB chairman. The band has been together for one year. They play popular, danceable music, and rock and roll. They toured Wisconsin this past year.

Another event highlighting homecoming entertainment will be the Coronation Ceremony and the Coronation Dance. The Coronation Dance will feature the rock and soul sound of the Buzztones. The band is originally from Detroit and plays "top 40" and original music. They showcased at Stevens Point. The band has also traveled extensively throughout the midwest. The dance is scheduled for Friday, October 17 at 8 p.m. in a heavy saucepan stir together the corn syrup, 1/4 cup margerine, vanilla and peanut butter chips over medium heat. When the mixture seems to be well incorporated, remove from heat and add the Rice Krispies and peanuts. Spoon over the warm crust and refrigerate until firm.

To summarize, I would like to share with you some travel tips I have discovered from my own worldly experiences.

1) Pack a lunch to eat. All the airport had was weiners and peanuts.
2) Wear all of your clothes, shoes, and jewelry that you will need for the entire weekend. Apply enough make-up to last for three days, and carry every other possession in your purse or wallet.
3)Bring along an empty suitcase to the airport. Check it in; just to see if they can miraculously get it to the same destination that you are traveling. If it does indeed arrive at the same time that you do, it makes for excellent wrist weights walking around the airport.
4) Never fly after a long night of celebration. You know how a fly spins on the kitchen floor when it dies?

Smith and Mayer to entertain at Pawn Live

by Barbara Klimek

You have before you the opportunity to be fully entertained October 17th and 18th. The Pawn Live presents Smith and Mayer, one of the finest duos on the college circuit today.

"Smith and Mayer give an exciting and electrifying performance," said Kay Gilbertson, the advisor of the Pawn Live Commission. "Their instrumental and vocal blends are the finest I have ever heard."

Smith and Mayer's performances are unique blends of finely crafted music and simple good humor. Their well-blended sound ranges from heart- touching ballads of country-folk to soulful rhythm and blues.

The duo has a special talent for making old songs seem new and new songs sound like old favorites. "They've been asked time and time again to come back to perform here at Stout. Their report with the audience is great, offering their easy-going stage performance and their great relaxational music," said Gilbertson.

John Smith performed solo for eight years and traveled throughout the nation. Hans Mayer played as a fancy picker in a band which performed throughout the midwest. They combined their incredible vocal talents and instrumental variations.

Both have long musical backgrounds and have been performing together for about 4 years. Each have voices that demand attention from all. Their instrumental make-up consists of six and twelve string guitars along with a mandolin and harmonica. In addition to being polished musicians and well recognized as performers, they are accomplished songwriters. Their recent album, In the Blend has reportedly been selling well.

> "Smith and Mayer give an exciting and electrifying performance"

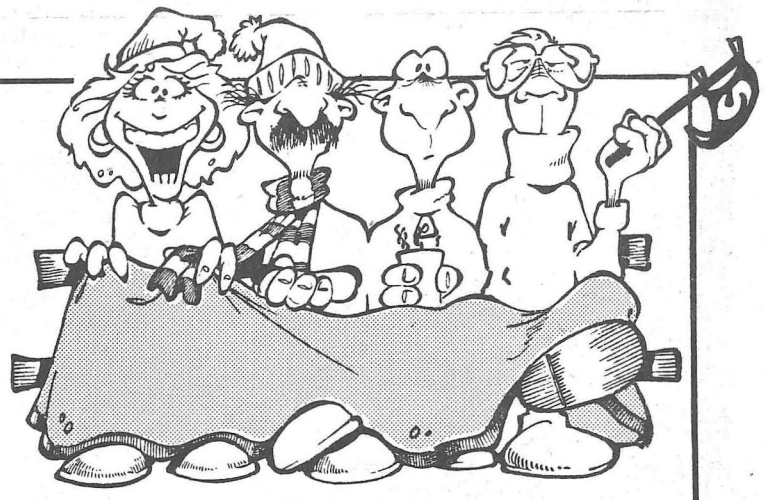
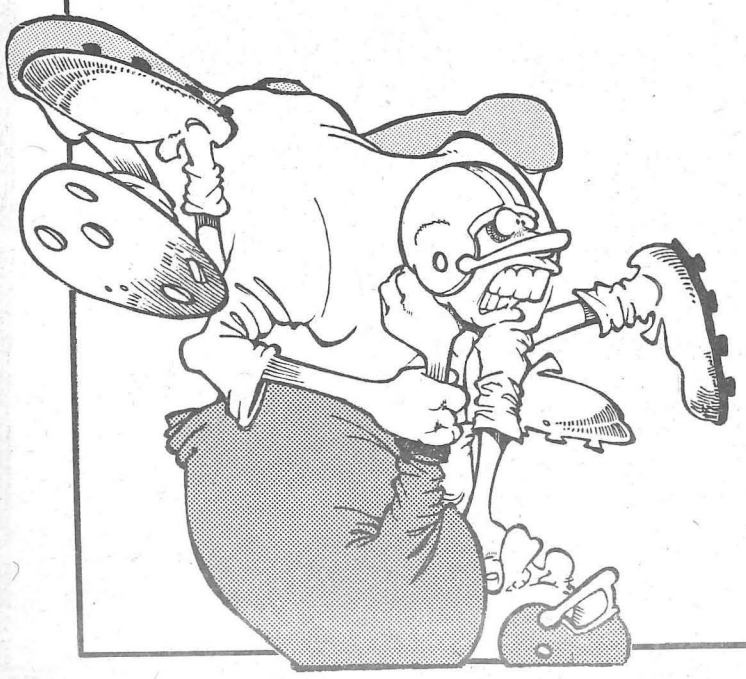
They have had strong reviews by many including The National Association for Campus Activities who have recognized Smith and Mayer at their national conference. They were presented with the Show Case Award.

An evening with Smith and Mayer can be many things to different people; exciting, soothing, magical, but most of all, entertaining.

Smith and Mayer make old songs seem new, and new songs seem like old favorites. They will present their well-balanced sound at the Pawn October 17 and 18. Performance begins at 9:15. (Photo courtesy of Pawn Live)

DON'T TAKE THE FUN OUT OF HOMECOMING





Homecoming is a time to have fun, to see friends and to celebrate. But a few people use homecoming to promote disruptive behavior. Don't be led by these people. Don't greet the morning after with an arrest record, a stiff fine or a possible jail sentence. Do your part in promoting Stout's homecoming as a safe, sane and fun time.

Gridders duel to 7-7 against Whitewater

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devil football team played this past Saturday here at home against the UW-Whitewater Warhawks. The final score was a 7-7 tie.

In the opening series the Warhawks began at their own 34-yard line and proceeded to march down field. Around midfield Lance Leipold, the Warhawk quarterback, tried to pass into the strong wind. His first attempt was incomplete. Then, after a first down completion to Fred Davis, the Warhawks went back to the run. The Blue Devil defense stopped two running attempts forcing the Warhawks to pass. Leipold once again attempted to pass. This time it was intercepted by Randal Wojta.

This gave the Blue Devil offense the ball at their own 24-yard line. Sean Boho was the quarterback this week. With the wind at his back, Boho tried to pass, only to miss on all three occasions. This gave the Warhawk's offense another chance. This time they took advantage of the opportunity. Starting at Stout's own 48-yard line, the Warhawks began with two runs by George Rainey, giving the Warhawks a first down at Stout's 34-yard line. A pass interference call moved the ball to the 19-yard line. From there it was a matter of two plays before the Warhawks broke in for a touchdown on a 19-yard run by George Rainey. This gave the Warhawks the lead of 7-0.

For the remainder of the quarter and the early part of the second half, both teams exchanged drives that were stopped by fine defensive efforts. Turnovers and penalties halted many drives by both teams.

Boho threw an interception on a first-and-ten play, giving Whitewater the ball at Stout's own 37-yard line. Whitewater fumbled the ball back after two penalties. This was recovered by Wilbert Kennedy, giving the Blue Devils the ball at their own 35-yard line. The possession lasted only two plays, however, as Boho miscued a pass into the hands of Whitewater's Jim Jaworski. With one minute, 37 seconds before the half, the Warhawks took over and failed to score before the end of the half.

In the second half both teams had many chances to redeem themselves. Sean Boho began by opening up with a drive that began on Stout's own 25-yard line and went all the way down to Whitewater's 15-yard line. This drive was highlighted by many fine runs by Brian Stingle, including a 45-yard run that gave the Blue Devils the ball at the 20-yard line. On a fourth-and-five play at the 15-yard line, Stout attempted a field goal by Jim Gorecki that was no good.

Both teams exchanged series and play was mainly held around the midfield area. It wasn't until late in the third quarter that the emotions of the offense were at a high. The turning point in the game was a blocked punt by Tom Bowe of the Blue Devils. As Bill Bunyan stated, "I think it was the whole key to getting everyone pumped up and excited."

From there it was Boho again taking charge, marching all the way down to the Warhawk's 11-yard line. The field goal attempt was missed by Gorecki. With only ten minutes left in the game, both teams tried to get drives going. It was at this time that Stout decided to go with Bob Lindberg at the quarterback position. Lindberg started a drive at the Warhawk's 14-yard line after a fine punt return. Lindberg moved the team to the five. He then faced a fourth-and-one attempt that was held short. Whitewater took over and momentarily breathed easy. After two plays Whitewater fumbled the ball. Recovering for Stout was Jeff Bautch at Whitewater's 9-yard line.

From the 9-yard line the Blue Devils attempted to run the ball. On third-and-goal Lindberg tried a pass. This time it was completed to Ron Wise for a touchdown. This tied up the score at 7-7. From there it was up to the Blue Devil defense to hold the Warhawks.

The Warhawks showed no intention of letting this game end in a tie. Starting a drive at Stout's own 40-yard line after a failed onside kick attempt, the Warhawks moved the ball down to Stout's 28-yard line. Dave Hickinbotham's 45-yard field goal attempt was no good.

Then it was the Blue Devils' turn to march down field. They began at their own 21-yard line and were stopped at the 35-yard line by an interception by the Warhawks. From there Whitewater moved all the way down to the Stout 7-yard line. Whitewater decided not to take any chances and placed their field goal team on the field, hoping for the win with only seconds left on the clock. The 25-yard attempt by Hickinbotham was no good again. The game closed with one final play by Stout, leaving the score tied at 7-7.

The UW-Stout Blue Devils will be playing this Saturday here for Stout's Homecoming game against UW-Stevens Point at 1:30. Be sure to attend this along with the many other Homecoming festivities.

Tightrope

Lack Attack Losers

Paul Wydeven

In the future issues of the Stoutonia there will no longer be the Bear, Viking, and Lacker report. This decision is based on the fact that reporting on Green Bay is a waste of space.

Now, boys and girls let us take a very close look at what ingredients are essential for the Lack Attack Losers:

(1) Quarterback- i.e. likes fainting: also likes to flinch and fumble on crucial drives.
(5) Offensive Linemen- A bunch of big gorillas, who play musical chairs with their positions.
(2) Runningbacks-use sparingly, these guys ought to be good for a whopping 40-yards; even with the amazing talents of Paul Ott Carruth a USFL reject.
(1) Tight end- Ed West, need I say more?
(2) Wide receiver- Guys with bitter sweet attitudes.
(1) Offensive coordinator- Without an offense, who needs a coordinator?
(3) Defensive linemen- also use sparingly, this gang produced a mind-boggling four sacks in six games.
(4) Linebackers- Probably the slowest in professional football.
(3) Defensive backfield- Nasty little fellas, good for a couple of unsportsmanlike conduct calls: keeps the game interesting.
(1) Punter- use plenty, especially with such a lack of offense.
(1) Kicker- Even loser teams have a least one good player.
(1) Head coach- The most important ingredient to the "Lack Attack Losers"; This Hell bent to leather dictator has brought the Lackers to a new era. Indeed, the Lack Attack Losers now own the honorable title as the worst team in the National Football League. Unfortunately, several of the seasoned veterans, including two former Pro Bowl players, were cut, because they did not fit into the Forrest Gregg mold.

Combine all the above ingredients on any given Sunday and you have the Lack Attack Losers. If you wish to improve the loser spirit combine the ingredients listening to the Lacker Rap, which goes as follows: We're the Green Bay Packers, We're the Green and Gold, We're not to good, but we're not to old...

All hope is not lost; here are some helpful hints to spice up the Lack Attack Losers:
(1) New Quarterback- namely Vinny Testaverde
(2) New Head coach- One with a funtional game plan and a new philosophy.
(3) Better Draft Choices- Presently this is not as bad before, but Robie Bosco as a third round pick?

The Lack Attack Losers need to let go of the past and build toward the future. Find a head coach, who knows how to make the best of the players talents and abilities to form a competitive football team. Instead of a head coach who forces players to mold into his game plan.

The Bear and Viking fans have lots more to cheer about as they both won this past Sunday. The Chicago Bears were given a run for there money, but still were victorious over the Houston Oilers. The Vikings almost lost in the last five seconds of the game, but the San Francisco 49ers missed a short field goal. In over-time the Vikings won the toss and drove down the field for their own field goal which was the game winner.

The picks were 6-8 for a total of 52-32, not to good, but it is what I deserve for picking the Lackers to win. This week should be better and it is as follows:

Chicago over Minnesota
Dallas over Philadelphia
L.A. Rams over Detroit
Cleveland over Green Bay
Cincinnati over Houston
Buffalo over Indianapolis
L.A. Raiders over Miami
New England over Pittsburgh
Seattle over New York Giants
Washington over St. Louis
Kansas City over San Diego
Atlanta over San Francisco
New Orleans over Tampa Bay
Denver over N.Y. Jets

Flutie goes to the Bears

The Chicago Bears traded to the Los Angeles Rams two undisclosed draft picks for the rights to Doug Flutie and an unknown draft pick from the Rams. The 1984 Heisman Trophy winner said about the trade, "This is ideal, I'll have time to learn, not just be thrown in."

Stero ds in Nebraska

The University of Nebraska have at least one, maybe more, of the football players have used steroids. Head football coach Tom Osborne confirmed this on Tuesday adding that he will take steps to wipe out use of the drug.

Lofton's brother found dead

Michael Emanuel Lofton, brother to James Lofton of the Green Bay Packers, was found shot to death in a Los Angeles park. Michael Lofton, 37, may have been a victim of a serial killer. Up to now 11 men have been murdered, many of these were shot and killed execution style.

Mosely released

Monday, the Washington Redskins released placekicker Mark Moseley. Moseley, with 1351 points,ranks sixth on the NFL list of points for placekickers behind George Blanda, Jan Stenerud, Jim Turner, Jim Bakken, and Fred Cox respectively.

'Fitness craze' ends as athletes examine pros and cons of running

by Jenna Sue Martin

The "Running Boom" generation is over and now we are entering into a new age. According to Runner's World, July 1986, "The New Age will look much like what the pre-Running Boom generation thinks of as 'the good old days."

Permanent runners have increased in number. Who are these runners? The average age of the runner is 38-plus. The running population is aging. You are more likely to find runners over 40 on the streets than those under 20.

The serious racer is getting more scarce. The majority, the study shows, run year round but few feel guilty about missing a day or two here and there in their weekly schedules.

It appears that there is more of a concern for how they might run better and have healthier lives than competing with others. These runners have a lifetime commitment to the sport.

It is true these runners are concerned with improving their health. Now, however, as we face the decline of the "fitness craze," the "anti-fitness fashion" surrounds us.

Experts are warning us against the dangers of excessive exercise. Recently there have been numerous reports telling us to cut back on the intensity of our workouts.

Running, in recent years, has received much publicity. Everyone seemed to be entering marathons and jogging down side streets and highways. Running shoe sales were at their peak.

It was drilled into millions of Americans that running equals a longer life span. Meanwhile, the issues of "anti-fitness" continue to grow. The era of "no pain, no gain" has vanished. Now we are faced with the following decision: "To run, or not to run, that is the question."

Running can cause painful injuries. The sounds of ripping flesh can be a sign of torn ligaments or tissue. Popping kneecaps can also develop, or an aching strain on your shins known as the dreaded shin splints.

Some minor injuries only take a week or so to diminish but others continue. Lack of proper treatment increases the chances of doing further damage to injuries. Some of the major ones last a lifetime.

According to San Diego sport podiatrist Joe Ellis, approximately 80 percent of all male runners and 75 percent of all female runners will develop an injury serious enough to keep them off the roads for an extended period of time.

Another issue is heart disease. Runners can and do get heart disease. Running under these conditions is dangerous. According to Runner's World, August 1986, "You are statistically more likely to die of a heart attack during an hour of running than at your desk or watching TV."

Both Jim Fixx and John Kelly, Jr., former president of the U.S. Olympic team died while running. If running is so good for you then why are people dropping dead?

Research indicates that running does improve heart health and can increase longevity. This doesn't mean that running itself can protect anyone from a heart attack but may postpone it.

Running also benefits your heart by providing aerobic exercise. This type of exercise is a conditioner. A well-trained heart doesn't have to work as hard to pump blood through the vessels.

Running also is emotionally beneficial. When you go for a run you can actually feel the blood circulation. Your body becomes warmer and warmer, the perspiration is cleansing.

After completing your run, you feel a sense of accomplishment. Running can also be challenging. The training involved encourages good self-discipline.

Running can be done alone or in a group. It can be competitive or for pure enjoyment. Running: the drawbacks, the benefits. To run, or not to run. Which will it be?

Do you side with the experts and view running as being hazardous, or do you support the permanent runners of the "New Age" in their belief of running as beneficial to your health? The decision is up to you.

UWEC Blugold Invitational provides major competition

by Nancy Janecek

The Blue Devil women's cross country runners tasted major competition at UW-Eau Claire's Blugold Invitational Saturday.

A chilly rain drenched the four women competing for UW-Stout. Sue Rabas was Stout's top finisher in 20 minutes, 56 seconds, followed by Lisa Heimmermann at 21:17, Deb Lucas at 21:34 and Jodi Hubbard at 21:36.

"All four of these young women could run under 20 minutes under ideal conditions mentally. It's disheartening not to have a complete team," Coach Lou Klitzke lamented.

UW-Milwaukee's Lynn Bouche was the individual winner, completing 5000 meters in 18:38. UW-Oshkosh was the team winner.

Milwaukee, Oshkosh, Whitewater, UW-Stevens Point and Eau Claire were full strength and UW-La Crosse rested only three of their top runners. It looked like a preview of the conference championship to be run in three weeks. It is quite likely four of these teams will qualify for the national championships in November.

"I thought the best run was made by Deb Lucas and was glad to see her voted runner of the week. She ran smart and paced herself well," Coach Klitzke said. Lucas broke her personal record by nearly 50 seconds on the soggy course.

Senior Paul Bons ran another excellent race and was named runner of the week for the Blue Devils on the men's five-mile course. At 25:55, he finished just six seconds off the winning pace of Dan Held from UW-Eau Claire. Eau Claire also claimed the team title.

"I was impressed with Paul's second-place rank after a very hard week of training without taking off for this weekend," noted Coach Klitzke. Several schools did not run their top racers.

Other Blue Devils contributing to the team score were Todd Fox, Bob Hackley, Tom McGavock, Ben Haney, Paul Housner and Kevin Pilarski.

"The men all showed improvement. I was glad to see Fox and McGavock, our freshman from Pewaukee, running well," Coach Klitzke said.

Saturday's cross country meet in La Crosse will be the last competition before championship level meets in November.

Soccer club suffers season's first setback with 1-0 shutout in Chancellor's Cup tourney

by Katie Keran

Last weekend the UW-Stout soccer team finished in second place at the annual Chancellor's Cup Tournament in Eau Claire. Stout started off the weekend strongly by defeating UW-Stevens Point 3-1. But unfortunately they fell to the host team Eau Claire 1-0 in the tournament's final game.

The game against Stevens Point was played in the freezing rain on Saturday. The team played very strongly. They controlled the game from the beginning. Dan "Boone" Nelson got the team off to a great start by scoring a quick goal past the Stevens Point goalkeeper. Also scoring two brilliant goals was midfielder Steve Abrahamson.

Credited with a strong game was the Stout defense, "The No-Goal Patrol." The team beat the Stevens Point players to the ball and was very consistent in controlling the majority of the match. The players were also helped out throughout the weekend by many fans who road-tripped to Eau Claire to watch the tournament.

The weather was a major factor in the tournament throughout the weekend. After playing in the freezing rain on Saturday, the team returned to face Eau Claire in extreme cold conditions. Eau Claire has long been a rival for the Stout team. The game was a very long and extremely aggressive one. "Stout played a very tough game," said Eau Claire's coach.

Throughout the match there were many conditions that altered the intensity of the match. Several yellow cards were given to Stout and Eau Claire players. The Eau Claire goalie had some controversial actions, such as using his hands outside the goal area.

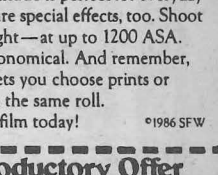
But Stout was unable to put the ball into the net. During the second half, Stout dominated the game but was shut down by the tournament's MVP — the Eau Claire goalie. "We took over the play during the second half," said Dan Nelson. "But we couldn't get the goal we needed."

The team is already looking forward to facing Eau Claire with the home field advantage. "We'll be ready for a rematch," said midfielder Kevin Sheehan. This weekend the team will be traveling to Stevens Point to take them on once again. Before this past weekend, the team had been undefeated. Now its record is 6-1. The team has so far scored twenty goals while keeping its opponents to only three goals.

Stout is still looking for its team mascot, Bob the Cat. A party was thrown in his honor on Friday, but Bob was not in attendance. Happily though, the team would like to congratulate player Steve Abrahamson and wish him well after witnessing his wedding on Friday night.

The members of the club are looking forward to continuing their winning record the rest of the season. They are determined to avenge the tough loss to Eau Claire.

35mm Color Prints and Slides from the same roll



Seattle FilmWorks has adapted Kodak's professional Motion Picture film for use in your 35mm camera. Now you can use the same film—with the same microfine grain and rich color saturation—Hollywood's top studios demand. Its wide exposure latitude is perfect for everyday shots. You can capture special effects, too. Shoot it in bright or low light—at up to 1200 ASA. What's more, it's economical. And remember, Seattle FilmWorks lets you choose prints or slides, or both, from the same roll.

Ruggers drop physical match to UW-La Crosse, 21-13

by Katie Keran

The Stout Centaurs Rugby Club was defeated Saturday by UW-La Crosse 21-13 in a rough match that at times was on the verge of being violently out of hand. Once again the match featured many hard tackles, but the La Crosse ruggers controlled the lose play enough to come out on top of the Centaurs.

The La Crosse strategy was simple — to run away from Stout and hope that they didn't get nailed by a Centaurs rugger. Because of this strategy, the Centaurs often overpursued the play and the La Crosse backs broke through the gaps just enough to come out on top.

Stout's 13 points came from a try, which was scored by Mike Hackworthy, for four points. Tim Anderson missed the conversion after try, but Tim did kick three penalty kicks, good for nine total points. Penalty kicks result from dangerous play from the opposition, and the choice of a set play or a kick for the goal posts is up to the team which incurred the penalty.

This is not to say that the play of the Centaurs was totally clean, because it was not. The frustration of losing begins to take its toll and the Stout ruggers took out a lot of their own frustrations on the La Crosse players. Many Stout players were involved in fisticuffs and Captain Pat McDonnell and a La Crosse player were ejected for fighting.

As a result of the very physical play, Troy McCuskey and John "Stones" Livingston had to leave the game due to injuries and were replaced by Brian LaFreniere and Al Closs, respectively.

Todd "Killer" Johnson had this to say about the match: "As far as winning a championship is concerned, that is basically over with. My own personal goal is to inflict bodily harm on as many people on the opposing teams for the rest of the season as I can, without trashing myself." All of the Centaurs feel that they should have won their last three matches, but they have had a bit of bad luck and a tough schedule.

In the B-side match, the Centaurs were also defeated by La Crosse 8-4. Stout's lone try was scored by scrumhalf Todd Harvey, for his first try ever in his career.

This Homecoming Saturday, the Centaurs will take on UW-Stevens Point at Galloway Park. "D-side" Johnny invites all fans to join him for a few cold ones and to cheer the Stout Centaurs on to victory at 1 p.m.

Stout spikers 'On the Rise' with three WSUC victories

by Slash La Freniere

The UW-Stout women's volleyball team is once again "On the Rise." They have won their last three conference matches against UW-River Falls, UW-Stevens Point and UW-Platteville. They also recorded victories by defeating Viterbo and St. Mary's.

Currently the Blue Devils are 17-14 overall and 5-9 in the WSUC. The conference has proved to be tougher than originally anticipated. Stout is currently in eighth place. In order to participate in the conference tournament, the squad has to place sixth in the conference. Stout was to take on UW-La Crosse on Tuesday. The game should prove to be a tough one as La Crosse has a 9-0 record.

A highlight of last week's play was the designation of Wendy Morrow as volleyball player of the week in the WSUC. Morrow, a senior, had 47 kills, 7 assists, 7 aces, 30 digs, 28 blocks and 26 assist blocks in five matches. Morrow, a key hitter for Stout, is originally from Crystal Lake, Ill. Coach Lynda Lee said, "Wendy has played extremely well for us, especially in the River Falls match."

Regarding the River Falls win, coach Lee also said "The win against River Falls was the best we've ever played. I knew we could take them." She also credited the whole team with great improvement in all areas. Lee is still hoping to increase their hitting power. "We've been playing much better," she said.

Contributing to the team this year have been co-captains Valerie DeVries and Mish Espe. "Valerie is a very smart hitter. She's constantly hitting the holes. Mish is really an excellent setter. I've gotten many compliments regarding her from other coaches," Lee said. Rounding out the squad is Senior Wendy Morrow, Sophomore Sheila McNamara and Freshmen Jo Braun and Carol Bufe. Lee also stated that the bench has and will continue to be a big help to the team.

"Individually they haven't reached their potential," Lee said. "As a team last week against River Falls we probably reached our potential. I would like to see us peak like that very soon." She then added, "Individually I am a firm believer that everybody can improve."

The team takes on St. Teresa on Friday at 7 p.m. Following the game the team will be participating in an Alumni Homecoming match scheduled for 8 p.m. Fans are encouraged to attend the games and cheer on Stout to victory against St. Teresa and the Alumni.

Also next week, the Blue Devils are on the road to compete against Grinnell and Luther Colleges in Decorah, Iowa. Then on Saturday, Oct. 25th, Stout will be hosting their own invitational. Competing in the tournament will be St. Mary's, UW-Eau Claire, Bethel and Stout.

The team needs to win only six more games to break the Stout season victory record of 22 wins in a season, set by last year's squad. Hopefully if the team continues to win conference matches, they will be competing in the WWIAC conference tournament in Platteville on Nov. 6 and 7.

It wasn't easy creating a pizza that doesn't measure up.

At Rocky Rococo, we finally got it through our thick heads that some people only like thin crust pizza. That's why we created new Classic Thin.

It's made with the same high quality toppings as Rocky's Pan Pizza, but underneath there's a world of difference. Because our new "Classic Thin" pie has a unique new crust that's delightfully crispy and definitely thin.

So for extremely good pizza at either extreme, there's only one place to go. Rocky Rococo.

Homecoming: bars, house parties, police

by Karen Smith

Menomonie Police Chief Beety reported that, from his position of having to control the celebration of UW-Stout's Homecoming, "the celebrates seemed more responsible, respecting others rights more."

Beety said that this year's event "was one of the most successful homecomings we've had."

Additional officers were employed for homecoming weekend, according to Beety, which is common for special events.

> "Homecoming can bring out a lot of crazies."
> —Lisa Brekken

"There were lots more people around than normal, so more officers were needed than usual," Beety added.

One-hundred and twenty tickets were issued over the weekend, which Beety said was fewer than last year.

John Enger, director of University Relations, said that what are often mistakenly called "arrests" made on homecoming are simply citations. A high percentage of these citations, according to Enger, are for disorderly conduct.

"That's been mostly people urinating in public," said Enger.

A large percentage of the citations written also involve people carrying their drinks out into the street. These are tickets for violation of the so-called "open container laws."

One of the managers of the Marion bar was positive about the outcome of the weekend festivities.

"This is the sixth year I've managed a bar during homecoming and I think it was better than the previous years," he said.

"Most of the cops were cooperative," the bar operator added, declining to be identified, "but we did get an over-capacity fine Friday night, which upset me."

According to Enger, strict enforcement of capacity limits in uptown bars are "not to prevent people from having fun; it's too control the situation, which you have to do."

One student, who wished to be unidentified, tried to stay away from the bars during homecoming.

"The bars were extremely hot and crowded, and the streets were infested with cops," he said. "Instead, I partied at houses were I knew there would be lots of girls, lots of beer and lots of fun."

Many house parties were easily spotted Saturday, with groups of students congregating outside on their porches, drinking beer and having barbeques.

Most of the house parties lasted the entire day, with some beginning as early as 10 a.m. These parties generally lasted through the day; breaking up toward evening, as students moved on to the bars.

One resident of a house which held a party Saturday mentioned that they did not want their party to go late into the night because of concerns over the possibility of the residents incurring "another" noise violation.

Most of the students living at houses which held parties said they did not see many problems with minors or the police.

Lisa Brekken, a sophomore here at Stout, enjoyed her homecoming."It was a lot of fun, but the bars were kind of crowded," Brekken said. "It seemed like there were a lot more cops out, but at least I knew it was safe to walk around. Homecoming can bring out a lot of crazies."

Many feel homecoming lacked organization

by Dale Bohnert

While organizers of UW-Stout's 1986 Homecoming expressed their feelings of success, many Stout students, including several Homecoming King and Queen candidates, said they felt disappointed by the lack of organization of homecoming events.

During Stout's Homecoming week, October 12-18, homecoming candidate couples, organizations, and fraternities/sororities, began to participate in homecoming-related events.

Through participation in events such as the "Royalty Ice Cream Social," "Recreation Fun Night" and "Royalty Skit Night," which were Stout versions of the game shows, Family Feud and the Newlywed Game, royalty candidates were pitched against each other for the top honors.

The candidates competed for points that would be tallied at the end of the week to decide which of them would be the next Stout Homecoming King and Queen.

Stout senior, Dan Duhin, Chairperson of Stout's Special Events Commission, which is charged with organizing most of the events for homecoming, said that the events "went pretty much as smooth as they could."

JTC royalty candidate, Tom Keekly, however, said that he and other candidates "weren't even told how to dress or what was happening."

Said Angela Klein, Wigen candidate for Queen, "We didn't really know what was expected of us."

Both Klein and Keekly suggested that next year more fliers be passed out and more phone-calls made.

Duhin explained that some organizational problems did occur due to "low membership on the Commission."

He cited that the Special Events Commission, which also organizes Stout's Winterfest and Spring Fair, currently consists of only six members.

Several candidates, however, complained that the rest of the events seemed unorganized and un-professional.

Julie Teg, who would later become Homecoming Queen, said that, "we had no idea what was in store for us" referring to other events.

For those who wished to vote for candidates, "Royalty Voting" was held on Thursday, Oct.16 through the use of academic computers across campus, in addition to three terminals in the Memorial Student Center and in the Commons.

Duhin estimated that approximately 10 percent of Stout students took part in the vote, and he thought that was pretty good.

The following evening at a Coronation Dance, held in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center, South Hall candidates Julie Teg and Rick Bueris were crowned as the 1986 UW-Stout Homecoming King and Queen

Said Queen Teg, "Everyone deserves to be king and queen because everyone was so friendly."

Candidates expressed their disappointment in the minimal turn-out of students at the dance.

Klein said that she felt the reason was because "no one knew if there was an admission fee."

"The whole problem was lack of advertisement," said Klein. She added, "That's the biggest key."

Contra aid tied to Hasenfus affair

In a speech broadcast on Saturday, Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega said that, by approving aid for contra rebels, President Reagan had, in effect, sentenced Eugene Hasenfus to prison.

Ortega insisted that the American would get a fair trial at the "People's Anti-Somocista Tribunal," despite Reagan's approval of the bill for $100 million in U.S. aid.

Nicaraguan officials charged Hasenfus with violating laws governing the maintenance of order and public security on Monday.

Hasenfus was captured on Oct. 6 after a cargo plane bringing supplies to anti-government rebels was shot down in Nicaraguan air space.

Troops parade out of Afghanistan

The first public appearance was made by the figurehead president of Afgahnistan at a ceremony marking the withdrawl of 8,000 Soviet troops from the country last week.

Babrak Karmal made his appearance Sunday, when Soviet anti-aircraft regiment of 550 paraded through the town of Kabul.

Soviet officials denied reports that troops were still involved in heavy fighting in Afghanistan.

Police kill fewer blacks

Much of the decline in the number of civilians killed by police officers in large cities comes from a substantial drop in the number of blacks killed, a report released on Sunday said.

The figures "may have been due almost entirely to fewer black people killed," the report said. Between 1971 and 1978, the total number of people killed by police dropped 39 percent.

A criminology professor of the University of Maryland, Lawrence Sherman, who released the report, said the study "reflects the increased political influence of blacks and the financial influence of civil litigations."

Tire fire burnt out

Firefighters allowed a fire in a Somerset junkyard to burn itself out, rather than trying to extinguish the fire with water.

The fire, which sent up an enormous plume of smoke and noxious fumes, started on Saturday in Sampair's Junkyard. The cause is still under investigation.

Pouring water on the blaze, according to firefighting officials, would have caused it to smolder, rather than burn out, possibly for months.

Counseling Services aid troubled students

by Cosmas A. Whitten

As the recent suicide of Jay Pauly demonstrated, some college students, facing pressures they believe they cannot handle, do take their own lives.

Menomonie Police Chief Dennis Beety said that, in addition to the Pauly incident, there have been "a couple" of attempted suicides by Stout students this semester.

According to Pinkney Hall, a counselor at the University Counseling Service, Stout averages approximately one suicide every other year.

Suicides by young people (age 15-24) have greatly increased during the last decade. There is a slightly higher percentage of suicide committed by college students.

Depression and hopelessness are the leading causes of suicide. Other causes of suicide are disease, a sudden crisis, frustration, alcohol and drugs, which can weaken a person's self-control.

"Most people who commit suicide give clues to their intentions," Hall said.

People should be alert to the so-called "danger signals," Hall said, which may predict suicide: previous attempts, threats to commit suicide, extreme depression or sadness, which is the number one signal, and the second most common "danger signal," sudden change in personality or behavior.

Students who can not see any way out... should talk to at least one other person.

Not as common but truly the most serious "danger signals" are signs of preparation for death, such as the writing of a will or giving away personal possessions.

A sudden lift in spirits is another "danger signal," according to Hall, because the person thinks he or she sees a way to finally escape their problems.

Hall said that students who can not see anyway out of feelings of depression or hopelessness, should talk to at least one other person.

At the University Counseling Center, help is available to all students, free of charge. All students are encouraged go to the center to discuss a problem or to just engage in a friendly conversation, according to Pinkney Hall.

The University Counseling Center is located in the basement of Bowman Hall. The hours are Monday through Friday, 8a.m.-4:30p.m.

The telephone number at the center is 232-2468.

After-hours, emergency help can be received by calling David McNaughton, director of the center, at his home, 235-9377, or any of the other counseling center staff members at their homes.

Dialing 911 at any time of the day or night will put a person in touch with help, also.

In addition to professional counseling, there are ways that friends can help a person who seems to be contemplating suicide.

Showing active emotional support, that you take the person's feelings seriously is important. Listen and ask concerned questions. Explain to the person that with help and support they can recover and enjoy good times again. Stay close to the person until help is available or the risk has passed, advised Hall.

Second, encourage positve action aimed at relieving unhappy or troublesome situations. Some examples of this are improving the home enviroment, and keeping busy and active.

Get a change of pace, Hall advised students who may feel troubled. Gain a new perspective on the situation, he added.

The University Counseling Center is open, free of charge, to all Stout students with problems large and small.

Counselors are available on a one-to-one basis and group sessions are also held, where students share concerns and problems.

Pauly takes own life after car accident

by Tracy Lea Landis

A Stout student, who had been involved in a car accident, shot himself while a police officer knocked on his door last week.

Jay C. Pauly

The Menomonie City Police officer had come to talk to Jay C. Pauly, 20, about an accident that he and his two roommates were involved in less than an hour before.

The car accident occured at about 2:30 a.m. on Sunday, Oct. 12, in the 2200 block of Dairyland Road. According to the Dunn County News, the car Pauly was driving "left the road and rolled over three times."

The three men were said to have been returning to their home at 2802 Dairyland Road from a bachelor party for a high school friend, according to a fellow graduate of Menomonie High School.

Stephen R. Wisenbergerer, 21; James C. Anderson, 20, and Pauly went to Myrtle Werth Hospital, where Wisenbergerer and Anderson were treated for bruises.

A spokesperson for Myrtle Werth said that Pauly was not admitted because he was not injured.

An officer, at the request of police at the scene of the accident, went to the men's home, trying to locate the driver of the vehicle, Pauly.

Shortly after 3 a.m., as the officer stood outside the door of the upper-duplex, knocking, he heard the report of a weapon fired inside.

Pauly was found inside the apartment, dead from a wound to the head. He was holding a 12 gauge shotgun.

According to the coroner's report, Pauly's blood alcohol level at the time of his death was .12, two hundredths of a percent over the legal limit for driving.

Dr. Steve Brown, deputy coroner of Dunn County, said that he "wouldn't say that (Pauly) was very drunk."

Brown's report ruled Pauly's death a suicide.

Pauly was a junior in applied math, enrolled at Stout. He had graduated from Menomonie High School in 1984 where he was very active in sports. Pauly had recently returned to Stout, after attending UW-La Crosse for one and a half years.

Head Football Coach Rich Lawrence said that trainers for the Stout football team had "worked with him a little in the spring," but that Pauly had quit because of a severe ankle injury.

Funeral services were held for Pauly at the First Congregational Church of Menomonie on Tuesday, Oct. 14.

Voc. Rehab. conference offers opportunity

by Carol Banks

"You are the future, doing exciting things," said Dr. Paul Hoffman, as he opened the Eleventh Annual Stout Vocational Rehabilitation Institute (SVRI) Conference. "We have at UW-Stout the finest collection of people; professionals, secretaries and students," he continued.

Hoffman, acting dean of the School of Education and Human Services gave his welcome to the audience of returning graduates, teachers and students in the field of vocational rehabilitation.

Every year, alumni return on homecoming weekend for the SVRI conference to participate in training and socialize with former teachers and students.

The conference, this year titled "Transition to Excellence," was held October 16 and 17, in the Crystal Ballroom of the Student Center.

On Friday, the conference opened with greetings from Chancellor Robert Swanson, followed by award presentations.

"Vocational rehabilitation would not be here today without support from the Chancellor and his staff," said Hoffman, as he introduced Chancellor Robert Swanson.

The early days of the vocational rehabilitation program at Stout were recalled as Swanson spoke to the large gathering.

Swanson looked back at those first days of curriculum development, noting that, "we had the old farmers' store" (in downtown Menomonie) where work evaluations were conducted.

Vocational rehabilitation programs were moved into the remodeled Pierce Library in 1984.

"This opened up the opportunity for vocational rehabilitation to get started over again in a new building," recalled Swanson.

The outstanding graduate award was presented to Colleen Esser. A graduate in vocational evaluation at Stout, Esser has been active in the field over the past seventeen years. She was recognized for her many contributions to the field as lecturer, trainer and active supporter of the National Rehabilitation Association.

This year's recipient of the Outstanding Employer of the Year award, Tim Rogge, serves on Stout Projects with Industry Advisory Council. On presentation of the award, it was noted that twenty-eight percent of Rogge's employees are disabled. Rogge is manager of production activities at A.J. Industries.

Michael Lesnick, graduate of the Stout Vocational Evaluation program, was the keynote speaker at the SVRI conference. He spoke on the topic of "Creative Strategies in Marketing Rehabilitation Tomorrow."

"Marketing says you're doing something different," Lesnick noted in reference to the marketing of services in rehabilitation.

"We need experts in communication," said Lesnick of making vocational rehabilitation more visible, noting that only a small percent of our messages are in words.

Most of our messages are communicated by the body, and Lesnick told his audience, "you don't know how much you're communicating if you don't read the body language." How your hands are used, said Lesnick, can communicate a lot when presenting a grant proposal or attempting to make a successful placement.

The speaker told the audience that if we want to sell vocational rehabilitation services, we need to be in control. The best way to do that, according to Lesnick, is to ask questions.

"Get to the action, ask the questions, be in control," urged Lesnick.

The conference continued on the theme of marketing in the afternoon with marketing videotapes and small group discussions. Individual presentations on marketing strategies in the field addressed the areas of independent living services, placement, supported work and vocational evaluation.

Jill Noreen, one of the presenters, spoke on the topic of marketing for the independent living services group. As Noreen noted, they have to go out and sell what the programs are.

"The two newest programs are independent living skills evaluation and pre-vocational exploration evaluation," Noreen added. These programs serve clients who are 18 to 40 years of age and developmentally disabled.

The conference ended with its annual get-together at the Menomin Lanes in the evening. The event, sponsored by the Vocational Rehabilitation Club, consisted of a brat fry, followed by dancing.

Adult development stages discussed, explored during panel symposium

by Tracy Lea Landis

A Stout student participating on a panel exploring adult development, told an audience that, after describing herself as restless when she was 31 years old, a friend had told her, "A lot of women your age go out for a loaf of bread and never come back."

Sandra Hansen shared her experience during a symposium conducted by Dr. Daniel Levinson, professor of psychiatry at Yale University.

Levinson was invited to Stout to conduct the one-day symposium titled "Seasons of Adult Life." The sessions were held on Friday, Oct. 17 in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center.

Levinson is the author of a best-selling book which describes stages of adult development in men. He and his wife, Judy Levinson, a staff researcher at Yale, will be co-authoring a companion volume. Their second book will explore the development of women, which is based on research involving extensive interviews with 45 women.

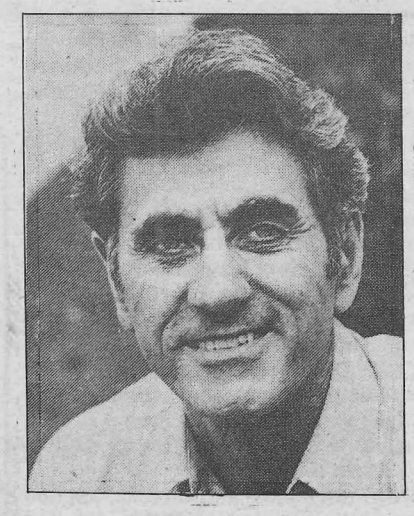
On the basis of what he characterizes as "soft research," Levinson claims that he can distinguish a pattern of adult development "eras." These periods of growth and development in the adult life last about 25 years and overlap, creating "transitional periods," according to Levinson.

The panel of five persons was selected by Levinson from a number of seminar participants who voluteered. They ranged in age from 37 to 56 and were asked to share with the audience the experience of their development through their adult lives.

The youngest and first to speak, Sandra Hansen, is a second year student in Stout's graduate program in marriage and family therapy. Describing the decisions she made for herself in her twentie's, Hansen said, "I didn't have an experience in thinking in terms of myself."

During a later session, while reviewing the reserch for his new book, Levinson pointed out that, of women he had interviewed, "many had a realizaiton that they went through their twentie's in what one woman called a fog; doing what others expected of them."

After having considered herself "neither masculine nor ambitious enough to puruse a PhD." in her twentie's, Alletta Hudgens, the senior panelist, said that she is now a psychologist in private practice in Maplewood, Minnesota.



Dr. Daniel Levinson

Describing herself through her early adulthood, Hudgens said, "I think my self-esteem, which was great when I was 19, very slowly eroded until I got divorced."

Levinson drew the audience's attention to the ambivalence expressed by the female panelists about the issue of ambition.

Later in the seminar, Levinson claimed that women become more comfortable with their ambitions during what he called "the age 30 transition."

After a break for the luncheon, Levinson reviewed his research on career women in the "middle adult era." He found 50-60 percent of them childless.

"That is a tremendously high rate of childlessness," said Levinson, "and all of them experienced it as just that."

Levinson claimed that tension between genders in the work place is created by the entrance of women into the professional and managerial occupations.

The presence of females in more traditionally female occupations does not create conflict, according to Levinson, "because it fits within the gender pattern of segregation and subordination."

Levinson told the audience that some pioneering work has been done in changing organizations to make them capable of promoting continued personal growth of adults.

However, Levinson's research with women in career lifestyles and those in the role of traditional homemaker in "middle adulthood" showed that, as Levinson said, "We have not yet learned how to create institutions that promote adult development."

Dr. John Williams, head of Stout's Human Development and Family Life department invited Levinson to Stout.

Levinson's work explores the developmental stages of middle-adult years which, according to Williams, is the least understood period of human growth. "He also invites people (by the design of the seminar) to participate in the experience of understanding aging."

Close to the end of his visit to Stout, Levinson cited a need to study what kept some individuals from doing what he referred to as "closing down in middle adulthood." He said, "I think everyone has an intuitive feeling of what I mean by that."

Stout works along with national company

by Rhonda Olson

Stout students and faculty are at work in a Wausau plant for the Case I.H. Company; together developing a more effective manufacturing process.

The Case I.H. Co. is the new name for the former J.I. Case Co., which is owned by Tenneco Inc., Houston. I.H. refers to International Harvester, whose farm equipment business Case acquired last year.

According to a report from the Associated Press, Wisconsin Governor Earl said, "Stout staff have considerable engineering expertise and the school has nationally recognized programs in industrial technology and applied technology."

Stout will provide $392,300 in technical assistance to the Case I.H. Wausau plant, said Earl. Stout will be able to shift money internally to devote about 20 professors, eight graduate students and 40 undergraduate students to the three year project, according to the governor.

Case has consolidated their heavy equipment manufacturing, which was performed at the primary plants in Iowa and Indiana, to the Wausau plant.

Micheal Schmaedeke, a junior with an Industrial Technology major, had been planning to attend Stout this fall. However, a last minute opportunity with the Case I.H. project drew him to Wausau. Schmaedeke is one of three cooperative education students involved in the project.

> "Stout staff have considerable engineering expertise
> —Governor Earl"

Cooperative education is a learning approach that integrates college studies with working experiences. Under the plan, students leave campus for actual employment situations.

"Anytime anyone has the chance for a Co-operational Education experience they should take it," said Schmaedeke.

Mark Karnick and Bill Bartnik also are learning new skills and gaining valuable experience in the co-op program.

Karnick said, "It's great to be involved in a project such as this. It's a once in a lifetime thing."

The students' responsibilities include working with Computer Aided Drafting and Design (CADD), Dynamic Nesting and Time Standards. Larry Schnieder, the project director of Stout/Case I.H., describes some of the processes which are taught in Stout's classrooms and are put into practice on the Wausau site.

"Nesting Analysis" is a particular software package which allows analysis of steel usage, the goal being to improve the efficiency of that use.

Another process taught at Stout and used at Case is Time and Motion Study. This is used to determine the amount of time needed to complete a task.

Three Stout graduates are employed as engineers at Case I.H., Wausau. Allen Kubisiak, a 1982 graduate, had been employed at Frito Lay, Texas before the Case I.H. project began. Paul Pueschner, and Tim Carlson, graduates in 1983 and 1986 respectively, are working on converting out-of-state plant parts into the correct time standards in Wausau. Kubisiak is working specifically with CAD and plant layout.

The manager of Plant Engineering at Case I.H. works with students who have a concentration in that area.

The Associate Dean of the School of Industry and Technology, Dr. John Entdorf, said the Wisconsin plant was chosen over the plants in the other states for two primary reasons. First, the Wausau plant is 10 years old, which is quite new by industrial standards.

The second reason the Wausau plant was chosen was what Entdorf called "the highly-skilled labor force with great work ethics."

M. James Bensen, dean of the school of science, industry, and tecnology, said that Stouts' major intent for involvement with Case is to fulfill the university's three main functions: instruction, research and service.

The research and service functions are available to the public, using the knowledge and expertise of the university staff. In accomplishing these objectives, instructors from the university are better able to provide revelant and up-to-date learning environments for students.

There will be opportunities for qualified students to get involved in the spring and summer semesters of 1987, said Schnieder. Registration information is available in the Office of Cooperative Education, Room 102, Administration Building.

Survivors of domestic abuse recognized

As a group of adults and children shivered in the cold during a traditional Cedar Smoke Ceremony, candles which represented victims and survivors of domestic violence glowed behind Mindomogie, an Indian woman who led the ceremony.

"Men, women and children gathered to remember those who have suffered, to celebrate with those who have survived and to acknowledge the work being done across the nation to end domestic violence," said Bonnie Lindgren, director of the region's domestic abuse prevention and aid program.

Many formerly battered women told of their experiences of survival of domestic abuse at the event, while supporters and friends, many of whom brought their children along, huddled under blankets in the Band Shell.

The event in Wilson Park was held in concert with celebrations of National Unity Day observed across the nation.

The ceremony was conducted as part of Menomonie's celebration of the National Day of Unity, which was sponsored by the West Central Domestic Abuse Project on Sunday, Oct. 12 in the Band Shell at Wilson Park.

Student attitude survey released

Half of a sample of over four thousand college students from across the nation say they believe sex before marriage is wrong, while 95 percent said sex outside marriage is wrong.

The survey of randomly selected students from America's colleges and universities also revealed that 48 percent of the students would not even date someone who smoked cigarettes.

Of students surveyed, 84 percent said they thought cocaine is harmful, 62 percent thought marijuana use is unwise, while only ten percent thought the same of alcohol.

The survey also showed that almost 70 percent of the sample thought abortion should remain legal.

Students in the survey expressed little confidence in journalists. Sixty percent of the repondents said that reporters could not be trusted.

The survey was released by the College Stores Research and Educational Foundation.

Senators face first funding decision of session—

The first of two budget proceedings of the year's SSA session began when the recommendations of the Finance Committee were brought to the floor.

The Finance Committee, chaired by Vice-President of Financial Affairs, Gary Harder, makes its recommendations based on hearings conducted with organizations making requests.

Forms are available for filling requests for next semester's funding allocations. Hearing will begin in mid-November.

by Kelly Cohorst

The president of the student government association of the UW-System spoke at this week's Stout Student Association (SSA) meeting. Also, reallocation recommendations were brought to the floor and the Landlord/Tenant Representative revealed a proposal at the meeting.

The head of United Council (UC), which represents students at all Wisconsin universities, reviewed the Future of the University of Wisconsin System committee, when he spoke at open forum.

UC President Bryce Tolefree said that the Regents want to improve the quality of the state's university system. The Regents formed Future Study committee in January, 1986.

Tolefree said that the UW-System needs roughly $88 million to maintain the system's quality.

> "Amnesty International has yet to prove they can administer the funds"
> —Mark Krueger

The Board of Regents has proposed several proposals to maintain funding for the university; capping enrollement and tuition increases are ideas that have been brought to the legislature.

Ali Vazirabadi, co-chairperson for Amnesty International presented a request to Senator's Caucus, which is held an hour before the SSA meeting. Vazirabadi requested a revision be made in the Finance Committee Recommendations for Reallocations.

Reallocations are made in October, one of two budget-setting proposals that must be approved by a simple majority of the Senators during the year's session.

On the basis of their hearings with organizations requesting funds, the Finance Committe, under Vice-President of Financial Affairs, Gary Harder, made recommendations of funding to the SSA.

Amnesty International requested $2727 and the recommendation from the Finance Committee called for an allocation of $1000.

"What a disaster the meeting was," Vazirabadi said, afterwards. "I feel that, because the meeting ran late, the Senators just wanted to adjourn the meeting." Vazirabadi also complained that some of the Senators were busy doing homework during the meeting, rather than attending to the discussion.

Vaziribadi said he was particularly dismayed by a member of the Finance Committe that attended the hearing where Amnesty International had requested funds. When Catherine Rezka asked Vazirabadi at the SSA meeting what the goals of the group were, Vazirabadi said "that means she didn't know what she was voting on" when she voted to include Amnesty International in the recommendations being presented to the Senators.

Rezka, an Off-Campus Senator, was unavailable for comment.

SSA Finance Committee member, Mark Krueger, said, "Being a first time applicant for funding from the SSA, the Amnesty International organization has yet to prove they can administer the funds to the best of interest to all Stout students."

John Lee, Landlord/Tenant Representative presented a proposal that he hopes will be adopted into city ordinances, which would change policy pertaining to security deposit refund procedure. Lee reported that he will be presenting his proposal at the November 3rd City Council Meeting.

Due to reports of security deposits not being refunded and "rising conflict between landlord and tenant," Lee prepared his proposal to help protect, security deposits while the funds are in the possession of the landlord. Lee will also propose to the City Council that interest be paid on money held as a security deposit.

The position of Landlord/Tenant Representative was created to help identify your off-campus housing needs and answer related questions. The Landlord/Tenant Representative can be contacted in the SSA office, located on the lower floor of the Memorial Student Center.

Agreeing on priorities Minority's first step

At last year's Stout Student Association presidential candidates' debate, minority affairs was brought up numerous times as a topic that seriously deserved the attention of the Stout community.

Aref Khatib's recent resignation as Minority Affairs Senator symbolized the chronic misunderstanding that plagues this post. Since its creation in the fall of 1984, Minority Affairs Senator resignations have become commonplace at Stout.

To date, the SSA has been unable to answer why these senators who offered potential progress on the major issues effecting minorities at Stout, chose to end their jobs in frustration.

The problems with the Minority Affairs Senator post resulted when it was created without a clear description of the job to be done. It is common to hear Minority Affairs Senators at Stout complain about having to take on the world alone.

More than 400 minority students pay approximately $1.5 million in fees and tuition annually. Past Minority Affairs Senators said there was no participation or cooperation from the various minority organizations on campus. According to Stout's United Council Director Robb Zimdars, Minority Affairs Senators have mistakenly tried to represent the wide spectrum of minorities on campus while failing to bring the group together to agree on goals and priorities for the year.

The SSA can improve the effectiveness of Minority Affairs Senators by setting up a thorough orientation process, helping them learn to use available resources most effectively.

From talking with SSA executive board members, the message is clear that the problem does not result from a lack of funds to work with. Vice President for Financial Affairs, Gary Harder says that the money is there to be allotted in each case where the SSA receives a "valid proposal."

The past and present confusion among SSA Executive Board members about the precise purpose for Minority Affairs has left Minority Affairs in a quandry. Executive Board members express a willingness to help Minority Affairs take effective action. Minority Affairs and SSA can start heading in the right direction by communicating and agreeing on a purpose. Their next step should be to recognize priorities and establish realistic goals.

Fine Line

Hogging time

Jef Maynard

Time. Simple looking word. Nebulous, valuable and inexplicable beyond all reason.

There is this farm implement salesman looking for prospects in Fairfax, Minnesota. He stops at a clean, antique looking farm that has a large number of pigs around the field.

The implement salesman, whose name is Larry, rubs his hands together and says to himself in the hopeful way of a implement salesman about to hit the jackpot, "This is the place, I just know it. Out in the fields, pigs, lean hungry pigs just waiting to be fed by our semi-automated Shift For Yourself pigfeeding station."

Larry knocks on the door and the farmer's wife answers. "Is your husband home?" asks Larry.

"Why yes he is. He's in the back feeding the pigs," she answers.

"Oh, this is the perfect time," says Larry, "How does he feed them?"

"By hand of course, like everybody around here," she says smiling a smile as big as a farm mortgage.

So Larry runs on around the back and there is the farmer, feeding his pigs. But he isn't exactly feeding them by hand. He is holding the pig in his arms, up to an apple tree and the pig is just munching up those apples. He finishes one pig, puts it down, and picks up another and holds it up to the tree.

"This is perfect," says Larry, "that must take forever. This sucker needs a pig feeder."

"Excuse me, do you feed all your pigs that way?" asks Larry.

"Why sure, all hundred and nine of the little porkers," answers the farmer.

"Doesn't that take a lot of time?" asks Larry.

"Oh, I don't know," answers the farmer, "what's time to a pig?"

In the search for material, (or pulp, or braunschweiger or whatever you care to call it) for this humble drivel of a column, I asked authorities about time.

I asked my friend, "What's time?"

He replies, "oh, about nine fifteen."

I asked another friend about the nature of time, and he started in on some stuff about sine-wave forms and the possibility of a large hole in the ozone layer. I think either he was kidding or he didn't hear the question. I asked again and he said he couldn't hang around to talk about it, he was late for physics. I think it is generally too late for physics.

Some research suggests that time is relative to body temperature. I think there is an undiscovered organ in the body that secrets time. When you have a higher temperature, your organ increases in size and everything happens too fast. I know that is true for men. When you die, things slow down pretty much. Even your mail delivery drops down.

In the quest for time, I looked to the library for answers. Like usual, there were no answers, just ideas. Literature is filled with stuff about time. There are books about time. They were good for a laugh: "This intervention from Time 2 leading to an action in Time 1, changing Time 1 future, seems to offer us a chance of ending the old quarrel between free will and determination." I wish I could believe that. Does the future change the past?

In a cheap way, this can be illustrated. "The bark." "The bark of the dog." "The bark of the dogwood tree." Each piece of new information changed the way you read the past. EXCEPT: you were always in the present. The new interpretations were current, in the present, right now. The is no past. There are, however, overdue library books, and dirty laundry which make us think there was a past.

Often, I feel serious shortages of time. I screw around all weekend, then Monday morning time returns, hurtling at me with all the weight and velocity it can generate. This is a common problem, known to time bandits as Weekend Degeneration.

The theory is this: When an improbable force meets an irreverent object it must be Monday, (i.e. Stoutonia Deadlines).

Poetry has a clue to the concept of time but it typically is as nebulous as Time itself: "While the public funds are poured out for festivals of brotherhood, up in the clouds, a bell of pink fire rings." That is about as good an explanation as you are likely to find.

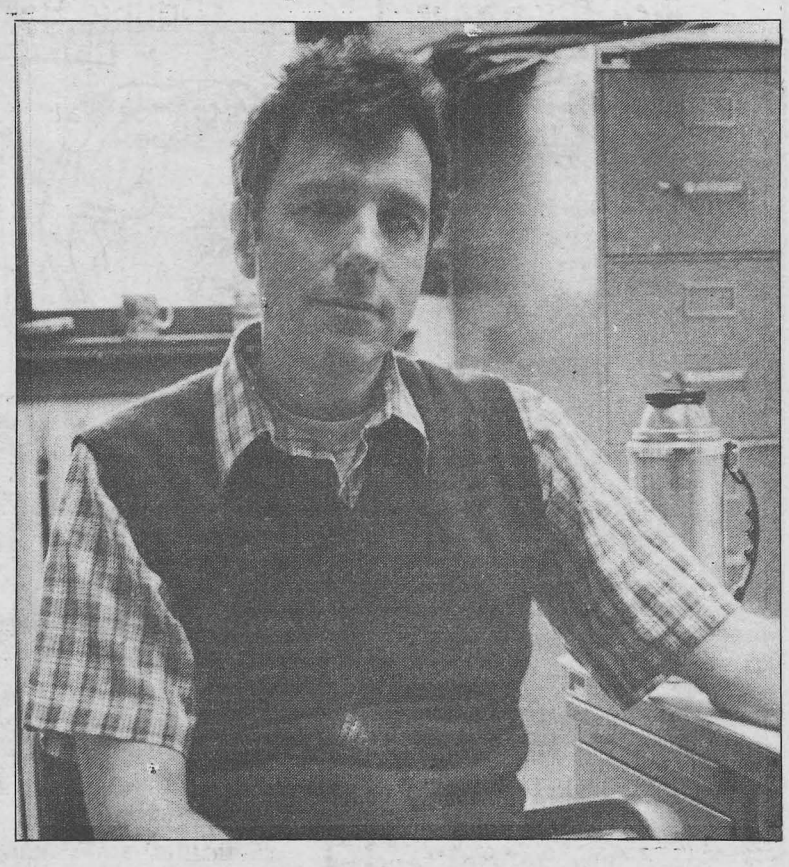
Subject: Changes that might improve the modern educational process

by Tim Hopkins



Jim Eggert

Jim Eggert began teaching at UW-Stout in 1968 after receiving his graduate degree in economics from Michigan State University. His undergraduate training was at Lawrence University in Appleton, WI

After his junior year at Lawrence, he spent two years in the Peace Corps in Kenya, East Africa where he worked assisting a project in land reform and agricultural development. He also became interested in low-cost housing as a direct result of his experience in the Peace Corps and later wrote the book on the subject Low Cost Earth Shelters in 1972.

In a prepublication review, author Ashley Montague describes Eggert's most recent book Milton Friedman, Thoreau and Grandfather Pine as "a book that celebrates the virtues of ordinariness, in prose and verse, with charm and charity, that would appeal to many readers." Eggert expects the book to be available on the shelves in two weeks.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS YOUR APPROACH TO TEACHING ECONOMICS?

When teaching economics I try to connect economic theory and practices to every day occurrences. For example, the other day we were discussing social costs and pollution in one of my classes. We talked about some of the problems caused by the roof repair going on outside the window, such as the fact that it is noisy and it smells due to the coal tar they are using in this particular process.

The ventilation is generally not very good in Harvey Hall. In fact, the other day another faculty member had to let class out early because the repair work was affecting her students.

We discussed how social costs might be calculated, referring to the coal tar method and, of course, the fact that it's taking place during the busy time of the school year. What with the noise and the smell involved, the diminished

"Fast for Life"

Today in Washington, D.C. there are four men who have not eaten for 49 days. Why are these four men starving themselves? What is their reason that is important enough to sacrifice their own lives?

These four Vietnam veterans are protesting the Reagan administration's aid to the contras in Nicaragua. Their "Fast For Life" is a non-violent protest against the U.S. supported contras who employ tactics of terror, torture and murder against the civilian population.

The contras are led by the top officials of the Somosan government which was overthrown in The contras are trying to overthrow the present Sandanistan government.

The "Fast For Life" is designed to draw attention to U.S. aid to the contras which the protesters believe will lead to a second Vietnam in Nicaragua. The Reagan administration views the Nicaraguan situation as the Communist stepping stone into all of Latin America and maybe, eventually the U.S. and North America.

Who's viewpoint is right? Is the U.S. taking the best action by supporting the contras who are using atrocious forms of injustice on the human rights of Nicaraguans? Or, does the answer come from four men who are reacting to (U.S. policy in) Nicaragua by putting their own lives in jeopardy instead of someone else's?

Which ever side you take, isn't it our duty to let our Senators and Congressmen in Washington, D.C. know how we students feel? Study the facts about Nicaragua, what's happening there and our involvement. Make a decision on who's side to take and then, take action.

Questioning questioning

Dear Mr. Maynard:

I give you credit for writing the article "Heaven or Bee Gees." Like many people you are a middle-of-the roader, questioning whether or not there really is a God or Devil and searching for an answer. Personally I feel you took the easy way out trying to create a reaction by putting down all sides of the argument and not taking a stand either way. In a sense by creating grey matter from black and white you were making an excuse for not having the answers.

Do you really think that without evil we could possible make judgements between right and wrong or decide what pleases us or hurts us. Yes you are right, in the end it is our choice between good and bad but it is not us who creates the choice.

You questioned too the basis of religious tendencies. I can truly say my beliefs stem from a knowledge of a personal God and a deep love for Him. In it I find happiness and peace of mind. My life revolves around this sense of love and self-worth, not in "fear of the Bad Deity." What if I am completely wrong? What if there are no Good or Evil Forces as you suggest and we both die? Who will have had the better, more satisfying life? You who are always questioning or I who had something to believe in? Say there is a Heaven and Hell. (By that I mean a life with God vs. a life in complete absence of happiness.) Where will we be when we die? I've put my faith in God and Heaven.

Sincerely,
M. Kovacevich

P.S. By the way the Devil made me do this, God just edited it!

CAMPUS SLANT/ What did you think of Bash on the Grass, should it be held next year?

by Brian Kraimer

Kristien Fennell, Business,
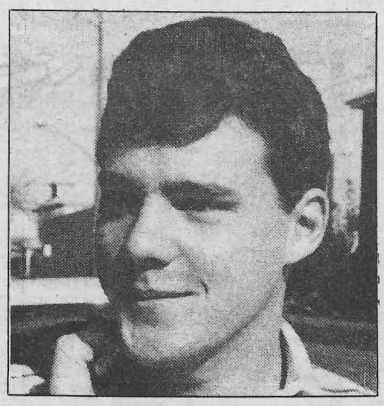
Freshman,

I had a good time, but did not spend much time at Bash on the Grass. It was fun listening to the bands and being able to dance. It was some place to go and something to do.



Jerry Johnson,
Industrial Technology,
Sophomore,

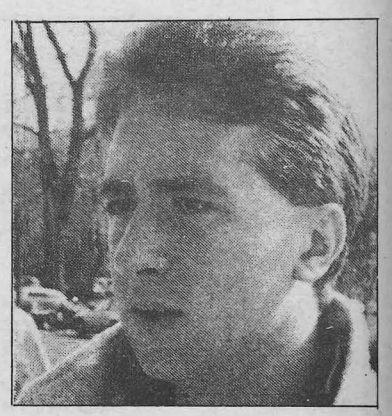
I liked it, it was nice for the younger people like the freshman. I would have liked to stay there but I had to go uptown and do some drinking. It was well organized and there seemed to be a lot of people there.

Kimberly Buchanan,
Fashion Merchandising,
Junior,

I did not go because I partied too hard during the morning and missed it. I would have gone. I think it was really good for the freshman who do not have anything to do. I walked by it and there was so many booths and things going on.

Sandy Rosandick,
Clothing Textile and Design,
Senior,

I thought it was well organized and went well. I think they should have it again for those people who can not go to the bars. I went to see the bands.



Steve Kosch,
Graphic Arts Mgr,
Freshman,

I thought it was pretty neat, something that everyone could do. I was expecting a whole lot more people then there were. I was sitting around watching the Metros and I was dancing too.

Bottom Line

Double-standard trash

Rich Brueckner

"...thinking that we're getting older and wiser, when we're just getting old."--David Gilmore

My sisters insist that I got away with murder when I was a teenager. This is true. Some people seem to feel that I continue to do so. I guess that there's some kind of universal double-standard for the oldest child that just happens to be a male.

There are a lot of double-standards in this world. That is why we have politicians.

Imagine a career of telling people what they want to hear. Take Chancellor Robert Swanson for example. I don't always agree with him but I do think that he is one hell-of-a nice guy who does a pretty good job.

When asked by an editor what he thought about a Bottom Line that ripped on Saturday classes, Bob said that he never has any problems with my writing.

The same question, posed by a distressed religious type, got quite a different response from Bob: "It's trash."

I'm not saying that it wasn't trash. It's ironic that some people read the Riot Act when it came out while numerous others told me that it was some of my best work.

You have to wonder when SSA President Paul Nelson comes into the office and voices a concern that Bottom Line pisses people off. Maybe he's nervous because he's the one who gave me this column in the first place.

Paul is another hell-of-a nice guy who does a pretty good job. He's already accomplished more than The Flesh Queen from Hell did in an entire year. Don't let Paul kid you; Bash on the Grass was his baby.

Now, Tony Earl is a guy who only thinks he does a pretty good job. He pisses me off.

Last year, Earl appointed a student Regent, John Schenian, who just happens to be dating Earl's daughter. Isn't that cozy?

John is famous for voting for tuition increases while he lobbies his sweetie's daddy for his own personal secretary.

Now these jokers are trying to jack tuition another $600. The bottom line seems to boil down to this: I don't know if John is getting boinked or not. We're getting screwed.

ability for students to learn from my or anyone's teaching in this building and the possibly carcinogenic effect upon the workers exposed to the coal tar fumes, the question of social cost needs to be asked.

Did anyone, for example, consider the effects this roof repair would have on the students and the teachers and the workers on the roof? It is surprising in this era of space age building materials that they are still roofing this way--a method my grandfather used in the 1920's

Now, would we proceed this way if the University had to pay students, faculty and workers on the basis of the inconvenience inflicted on them and the threat posed to their health by the coal tar used in this process?

STOUTONIA: DO YOU SEE ANY CHANGES THAT MIGHT HELP THE EDUCATIONAL PROCESS?

I am for trying a voucher system in the public and private schools which would allow students to attend the school which they had chosen with their parents help.

Parents would receive vouchers as the result of their payment of taxes. These vouchers would have equal value at all accredited schools. Students, with their parents, could then select the public or private school which provides the educational environment they are looking for.

The vouchers would contribute to paying part of private school tuition or they could cover most or all public school tuition. As a result, students and parents would have much more choice concerning what schools to attend and public schools would perhaps show more concern about the quality of education passed on to the students.

It has been suggested by economist Lester Thurow that the voucher system could also be used to help the unemployed. When workers are laid off they can use the vouchers to help pay for training/education needed to assist their re-entry into the work force.

STOUTONIA: ARE YOU CONCERNED BY THE NATIONAL DEBT AND IF SO WHY?

The debt does have some negative impacts which we might not ordinarily recognize. It is the job of the economist to note these effects and point out the various connections.

As a local illustration of this, last year I noticed some aspen trees had been felled across the road by beavers. Now, might situation be related to the larger economy? I think you could make a case that it could be. The reasoning might be this:

Beavers are no longer being trapped because their pelts don't bring a high enough price over seas to justify trapping them. There was no export market for them because the value of the dollar had been quite high.

The value of the dollar is directly related to the national debt. The U.S., partly because of the national debt, has contributed to generally higher real interest rates--that has attracted foreign investors who need dollars. Which in turn drove up the international price of the dollar. Thus, beaver overpopulation in Dunn County is related to the debt and international finance.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO YOU APPROACH LEARNING?

Since my liberal educational experience at Lawrence I have always remained aware of the need to keep up with what is going on in different fields. For me, and I hope for my own students, learning really begins to take place after they leave school. I also believe that, in an ideal educational situation, there would be no credits, no grades, no fees, no prerequisites.

I had a great experience two years ago when I offered a class on Henry David Thoreau's Walden. The class generally met that criteria, i.e. no fees, prequsites (other than interest in the topic) and no credits would be earned for taking this class. About 11 students signed up.

There was, it turned out, a tremendous amount of sharing of ideas in this class. In fact, it often went beyond the assigned class period.

In an essay titled, "The purpose of teaching," from Milton Friedman, Thoreau and Grandfather Pine, I concluded from observing the good teachers I have had that they all share several characteristics. First, they instill in their students a genuine excitement for learning. Also, very important was their ability to tie other areas of knowledge into their own discipline and then relate this material to the students' own experiences and current level of knowledge. This is another characteristic I believe is essential to good teaching.

Finally, these teachers had high regard for their students. Actually, it was more than that, a profound respect for their student's innate intelligence and potential for discovery. That's it. There's the key that we all strive for.

Stout's security questioned

Last Monday between 7 and 11 p.m., my car stereo was stolen from my locked car parked in front of the Applied Arts Building. I was informed by UW-Stout security that the same day a girl's speakers were stolen from her car and someone else's car was stolen.

My first reaction was anger at my fellow classmates. I felt a great deal of pain thinking that another "poor college student" like myself could possibly do such a thing. My reaction has shifted somewhat since then. How do I know it was a student? I don't. That's why I feel that Stout security should take partial responsibility for these incidents.

I think that Stout security could become more efficient about patrolling the parking lots at night. I can understand that issuing parking tickets every 15 minutes is a great commission for the University. Isn't safety in the parking lots more important than patrolling only every hour or so? I think this is a problem we should all be concerned about.

Seeds of Change

CAUSA and effect

Gene Emahiser

Being the alertest that I am, I tend to notice things around campus that most people miss or ignore. One such item that I have noticed lately is the group called CAUSA U.S.A. (the Confederation of Associations for the Unification of American Societies). The group has placed individuals here to gather a list of names and addresses. With these names and addresses, CAUSA plans to contact those people interested in combatting Communism.

Once contacted, the group will invite these recruits to anti-Communist lectures, seminars, and conferences. This all sounds normal and natural, doesn't it? Well, upon closer look, the group turns out to be a front for another larger, less innocent organization. This organization usually has representatives at better airports and shopping malls across the United States. That's right folks, we've got trouble right here in River City! The Unification Church is on our campus seeking to add more flower sales personnel to its staff.

You might say, "how can you say that?" Well, I've done some homework and the following is the result:

CAUSA's founder and director, Bo Hi Pak, is Rev. Sun Myung Moon's right hand man. Pak was one of the first five missionaries sent from Korea to the United States to work for Moon's church. Pak has been Moon's personal translater since 1964. This information came from Moon's own mouth (through Pak) during a nine hour interview in 1976. The transcript was published in a positive book about the church called "Sun Myung Moon and the Unification Church," written by Fred Sontag.

The following information was compiled by Cornerstone magazine and released in 1985 as a general warning.

1. Moon's church has a major interest in combatting Communism. Though CAUSA claims to offer an ideological "counterproposal" to atheistic Communism, its alternative, called Godism, is nothing more than thinly disguised Unification theology.

2. CAUSA U.S.A. is only one of eight front organizations for the Moonies that I could find. Each one of these front organizations sponsors educational conferences at frequent intervals inviting right wing participation.

3. CAUSA denies any affiliation with the Unification Church or Rev. Moon. This is not unusual because part of the Unification theology allows for "heavenly deception."

The Unification Church has a "holy" book called "The Divine Principle." The majority of Moonies use a condensed version called "Outline of the Principle, Level 4," After studying their theology, Eric Pement, assistant editor of a Chicago magazine called Cornerstone, released a thumbnail sketch of the Unification Church. The following is a taste of that article:

" The Unification "secret" (although common knowledge even among most worldly people) is that Rev. Moon is the Messiah, the Christ returned. What Jesus failed to do, Moon intends to accomplish. Moon paid for mankind's sins with his own blood during a stay in Korean prison camp, and he has "subjugated" all the angels, demons, and human spirits in the spirit world. Even Jesus, Moon says, has bowed down and "subjected himself" to him."

The "petition" that CAUSA has been asking everyone to sign is nothing more than a great way to accumulate a contact list, complete with name, address, and telephone number.

The moral of the story is: KNOW WHAT YOU ARE SIGNING BEFORE YOU SIGN

Witty characters spell success for school play

by S.J. Lomneas

Many of you missed out on a wonderfully witty play last week. It is a shame more of you did not see it, but the ones who did had a truly enjoyable evening! "The Foreigner" was shown on Homecoming weekend from October 16-19 in the Harvey Hall Auditorium.

The cast of characters were as varied as they were witty. The first one that comes to mind is "Charlie Baker" played in a fittingly quiet style by Craig Hartfield. The play opens as Charlie and Froggy LeSueur, played by Steve Crowley, come in to view at a rustic old lodge on a lake. Steve Crowley's portrayal of Froggy was remarkable in its trueness to Froggy's hard drinking, brusque, but warm character.

Charlie's wife is in the hospital 'dying.' Charlie needs to get away. Froggy convinces him to stay at the lodge for the weekend. Charlie, being rather shy, asks Froggy to have the people not talk to him during the time spent there. Froggy reluctantly agrees.

Froggy talks to Betty, played very engagingly by Sandy King, about arrangements for the weekend, and quickly tells Betty that Charlie does not speak or understand a word of English. Therefore Charlie becomes "The Foreigner." The story develops from there.

Since Charlie cannot (supposedly) speak a word of English, he is privy to a lot of conversations that he would not normally be allowed to hear. This condition of being a 'foreigner' works to everyone's advantage, especially Charlie's, as it draws him out of his shell, allowing him to be the gregarious person he had never dared to be in "real life."

...the cast of characters could not have been better selected

Charlie's 'foreigness' is captivating to his lodgemates. The ex-debutante, played with warmth by Janice Anderson, confides freely to Charlie about all of her troubles, making a friendship possible that might otherwise not have occurred. Her brother, Ellard, played with just the right amount of lanky awkwardness by Kent Larson, gained confidence and everyone's admiration as he taught Charlie how to speak English rather quickly. And Charlie saved everyone's neck by discovering that the ex-debutante Catherine's fiance, a preacher played by John Payne, was a cohort of the up-to-no-good good ol' boy Owen Musser.

The Musser character was played to the hilt by George Demou. He obviously enjoyed making Musser as evil, loud and obnoxious as possible, plotting Charlie's demise and the take over of the lodge from Betty for the purposes of the evil Klan.

All in all, the cast of characters could not have been better selected.

This last group of people are often the most unnoticed, but most important people. The Townspeople, the set designers, the props people, lighting and voice levels and background music personnel all pulled together to form a wonderfully delightful play!

Presentation shows creativity of designer Micheels' wearable art

by Barbara Klimek

Creative, original, unique, and talented are among the many words used to describe the inspiring work done by wearable arts designer Betty Micheels. Her designs are called "Betty's Art to Wear."

Northwest Fabrics presented "Betty's Art to Wear," Saturday afternoon at the Mabel Tainter Theater. It was organized by the Stout Alumni Association and UW-Stout Apparel, Textile, and Design Association (A.T.D.A.). Commentating was done by Micheels and modeling was done by apparel, textile, design, and fashion merchandising students, who are all involved in the A.T.D.A. organization.

The presentation was well received by many. Among the crowd was Century II Alumni, students, local business representatives, friends, and relatives. The show was a worthwhile treat, especially for inspired crafters and designers, or curious entrepreneurs. Micheels created the show to give people a glimpse of a different direction in the form of art - the art one can create and wear.

Micheels is an ambitious person and very active in her original art work. She takes fabric pieces, discarded clothing, table linens, draperies, upholstery, dresser scarves, and much more that are collected from anywhere throughout the country and even over seas. She uses these finds to create beautiful and original wearable art that can almost be described as priceless.

Her garments are not mass produced and she is not in the business for profit. Wearable art is a enjoyable hobby for Micheels. She loves to travel and hunt for anything that could be used for her creations; the more unique the better. She comes up with new ideas continuously. She gets them from observing the things that are around her, such as the colors from a chandelier.

"I'm just having fun creating. —Betty Micheels"

She puts her garments together by using her own pattern and sizing technique which is based on each individual's figure and proportion.

"I'm just having fun creating. It takes time and a lot of hard work, but I enjoy designing. My wearable art is not a profit oriented business, I create the most original garments and I like to show them to anyone who is interested," said Micheels.

She has done shows for alumni, students, republicans, gardeners, machine embroiderers, and quilters. Her husband is a former chancellor of Stout.

Micheels started her wearable art nine years ago and began showing locally in the past two years. She previously taught a wearable art summer school class at Stout in 1984.

In addition to art, active involvement in various organizations keeps Micheels busy. She is a member of a local quilters club that involves a yearly trip to the Quilters Harvest Show in Pewauke, Calif. She has also been actively involved with the restoration of the Mabel Tainter Theater for eight to ten years.

Future plans of Micheels are to continue pursuing her wearable art career by expanding her collection and traveling with her production throughout the country. Another goal may include teaching wearable classes.

The enthusiastic reaction she received from those who attended showed the strong impact she has as an inspiring designer.

Bands Bash

James "Unk" Falkofske

Saturday October 18th proved to be a day to remember in UW-Stout's musical history. The first Stout homecoming block party took place that day, "Bash On The Grass." This event took many hours of preparation and planning, but the work all paid off in the end. A major part of this production was musical entertainment by three bands: Gerard, the Slant, and the Metros.

Gerard took the stage first, and "wooed" the crowd with its synthesizer renditions of top forty and original material. One of the songs performed early on in the set was Madonna's "Papa Don't Preach," which had audience members chanting along.

The group played many slow versions of top forty hits, which may be due to the lack of a drummer on stage. Part of Gerard's uniqueness comes from the use of a drum machine, which may lack personality, but can at least keep a steady rhythm. During their set, Gerard also played several songs from their newly released album "Let Her Run."

Slant, the second band to play at the bash started out with "Working for a Living," a tune by Huey Lewis. This local band also stirred the crowd with heavier rock and roll such as "Hit Me With Your Best Shot," "Rebel Yell," and "Living After Midnight." The Slant also threw in a few originals, namely "Fly Eagle Fly" and "Red Light."

The Metros finally dazzled the few survivors of the cold, when they appeared amidst a dazzling light show. The highlight of their set was a medley of 50's songs including "Heard It Through the Grapevine," "Just My Imagination," and "After the Passion's Gone." This high energy band performed several of their own songs, many of which will appear on their new album project.

It is interesting to note that two of the bands, Gerard and the Metros, had performed on "Star Search" prior to playing at the bash. Currently, both groups have records that are receiving national airplay.

Although the bands always get to stand in the spotlight, several behind the scenes people need to be mentioned at this point. Eclipse Concert Systems of Minneapolis provided the bands' public announcement system for the day. The stage lighting was generously provided by the University Technical Crew. Security and hospitality for the day was given by several volunteers from around campus.

It is partly because of the volunteer help that everything ran smoothly for the bash. As Christa Sanicola remarked "At 8:00 a.m. we were already two hours behind schedule. Luckily, by 10:30 a.m. we were half an hour ahead of the time schedule."

Sanicola further remarked "There weren't any major problems. The bands showed up ahead of time making the load-in and load-out process easier. The only problem during the day was the cold wind that would blow across the stage. The keyboard player from the Metros had problems with his fingers becoming stiff because of the cold weather."

Sanicola said she was very happy with the days events. "The bands and the sound company complimented on how well the volunteer group handled the show, with no or little experience. Larry Stock, the manager and bass player for the Metros, even said that the show ran to a tee."

Overall, the "Bash on the Grass" was very impressive to see. Approximately three hundred people crammed under a small tent with thousands of watts of musical pleasure helping to make the day that much more enjoyable.

World's Worst

The World's Worst Film Festival, sponsored by The Pawn and Student Activities, will present four of the worst films in cinema history. Beginning at 8:30 p.m. in the Great Hall, October 31, movies shown will include "They Saved Hitler's Brain," "The Terror of Tiny Town," "Plan Nine from Outer Space" and "The Attack of the Mushroom People."

Cost is $2 at the door with a 50 cent rebate for each movie suffered through. At the end of the festival, everyone who remained for the four shows will receive a special surprise.

University Theatre Auditions

Auditions for the University Theatre's production of Ted Mosel's "All the Way Home," will be held October 27 and 28 at 6:30 p.m. in the Harvey Hall auditorium.

Foreign Film Series

"Gallipoli," set during World War, depicts the courage of the Australian troops during their assault on the Turkish held heights. Directed by Peter Weir and starring Mel Gibson, Mark Lee, Bill Kerr and Ron Graham, "Gallipoli" will be shown October 23 and 24 at 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m. in room 321 of Applied Arts. There is no charge for admission.

Halloween at the Union

The UW-Stout Recreation Center will present a Halloween party Friday, October 31. From 8 p.m. until midnight there will be free bowling, billiards and ping pong. Cost is $2.50 at the door with discounts being offered for wearing a costume.

Pawn Live

O'Brien and Wallin play the Pawn Live this Friday, October 24 and Saturday, October 25 at 9:15 p.m. Their musical performance includes original work and songs by Dan Fogelberg, The Beatles, Melissa Manchester, Rita Coolidge and others. There is no charge for admission.

Correction

In the October 16 issue of The Stoutonia's What's Happening Column, Ted Mosel's play was incorrectly cited. Rather than reading "All the Way," it should have read "All the Way Home."

Fall into new popcorn ideas

Denise Cain

It was a long weekend. A very, very long weekend. Now it is time to get things back on track. My brain is beginning to move, but very slowly. I will not even describe how I feel physically. It was a fun homecoming.

Does anyone else out there NOT feel like cooking this week? Join the club. All I ate this past weekend were foods I cannot personally describe or perhaps remember. I am still finding popcorn in the most unusual places around our house. Which brings me to this week's column subject: popcorn.

Now that the fall season is in full swing, what better time to sit in front of "the fire place" or Cinemax and eat all kinds of popcorn? Since most of us college students exist on the stuff anyways, we might as well have a few new ways to prepare it.

Popcorn is a fun food that anybody can make. White popcorn seeds provide a smaller, crunchier puff, while yellow kernels give a more golden, tender puff. Popcorn is very high in fiber as we all know, but it is also very hard to digest. So, if you are under a lot of stress, avoid consuming it.

To prepare the best possible popcorn, measure enough oil just to cover the bottom of the pan. Add three seeds. When they pop, add enough seeds to layer the pan. There should be enough oil in the pan to just about cover the height of the seeds. Shake the pan from side to side to distribute the mixture. When popping ceases for at least five seconds, the popcorn is done.

Laurie Hegtvedt introduced the first creation to me. The cheese part originated in the dorms, but Laurie has incorporated her own special combination of Lowry's salt into it. I asked Laurie why she recommended the Lowry's salt. She replied,"Lowry's seasoned salt is a unique blend of salt, herbs and spices. It adds flavor and excitement that ordinary salt cannot match."

Bar Popcorn

Poppycock

1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup corn syrup
1 tsp. vanilla
1/2 tsp. soda
5 qts. popped popcorn
3 ozs. almonds
2 to 5 ozs. of pecans

Combine in a heavy pan the butter, sugar, and syrup. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Boil without stirring for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in the vanilla and soda. Pour this mixture over popped corn and nuts. Quickly stir until well coated and pour into two 9 x 13-inch pans. Bake at 250 degrees until dry, about 1-1 & 1/2 hours. Stir every 20 minutes. Remove and store in an airtight container.

Oven Caramel Corn

2 cups brown sugar
1 cup margerine
1/2 cup corn syrup
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. soda
1 tsp. butter flavoring
6 qts. popped corn

Boil sugar, margerine, syrup and salt for five minutes. Remove and add soda and flavoring. Pour over the popcorn, and stir well. Bake at 200 degrees for 1 hour. Stir every 15 minutes while baking. Store in a covered container.

War injustices shown in 'Gallipoli'

by Jef Maynard

People who do not pay attention may die. The trend is, now, as it was during World War I, a fright, a shame and crime against humans. The movie Gallipoli will be showing tonight and Friday in 321 Applied Arts. The theme of the movie is as true today as it is in the portrayal.

The film revolves around the young and the restless in the outback of Australia. Two young men in particular play the key roles in the drama. Cattle ranchers who lead a rough and dull life are enticed into the idea of defending the British Empire.

The point is, and I do not see how it can be missed, these men who volunteer for the cavalry have little or no idea what the war is for, why it is being fought. They are like so many young and restless, just looking for adventure, travel and a chance to see the world that is not the bleak, dry outback.

The movie is about humanity. The two young men actually meet at an important regional footrace. They are both sprint runners. One is tough and heroic, the other, Mel Gibson, a city type seemingly lost in the world and somewhat helpless.

Gallipoli makes one strong point: Pay attention when the bullets fly. People who call the shots in the war game use bodies as pawns, as decoys, as sandbags to stop bullets. The young lovable cowboys from Australia end up as just that.

The move that makes Gallipoli a true and historical tragedy is this: at the front are Australian forces attacking a beachhead, outnumbered and out positioned by a massive Turkish force. The Turks are ready, armed and aimed.

The death of thousands of young restless Australian and English boys in a suicide cakewalk was a diversion so that the real attack forces could re-establish another position making the Turkish stand at Gallipoli a false front, trapping the Turkish forces out of position.

Thousands of people died needlessly as a trick. Happy Halloween.

A point has been made a number of times: War is a scam, usually needless, for a failed or failing foreign policy and failed or failing diplomacy, often to prop up a dismal economy or fatten an economy, often war contractors, munitions and arms manufacturers.

The Foreign Film Society is making an attempt to inform viewers younger than the Vietnam era students of years past, that war is not always honest, righteous, just or necessary. All films in the series examine war and the condition.

Gallipoli is a powerful film about innocent, lovable humanity lead into a Breath of Hell because they are young, innocent and restless.

The point of showing a film and a series about war is Lebanon, Lybia, Grenada, Falkland Islands, Nicaraqua, El Salvadore and so on. The college-age students of today are the cannon fodder, the decoys and sandbags of tomorrow's phony wars.

We are the young runners, the blind believers who fall for lies or half-truths, then fall for bullets.

The film reveals the way it is, saving you the trouble of dying for the truth or maybe a lie.

Abstract

The Answer

Julie Abel

"The more you learn - the less you know."

I am unsure as to who the owner of that wonderful quote is, but while I was sketching on Sunday evening, I heard it on television. I wish I knew who did say it because the quote really made incredible sense to me. It answered a question that I, myself, barely realized I was asking.

Think about times when you are innocently sitting around listening to somebody and they say something, perhaps only one word, and suddenly you realize- that's it!- the answer to my problem. An example of the process of accidentally solving a problem follows:

An artist thinks that she is finished with a painting, but she has a feeling deep down that something is not right about it. She thinks so hard and examines so closely (even if only subconsciously) about this problem that it blinds her to the simpleness of it.

When she attends an art exhibit, a bystander off-handedly comments on the boldness of light on a certain object. Suddenly she realizes that is it. The core shadows on her cylindrical objects need more white light.

The artist found her answer in someone else's comment. So in a sense the problem solving process was spontaneous. It is odd to think of spontaneity as a process; but right down to the core of it, it is.

Well, now that I have explained the process of how I came to learn the answer to my question, I should tell you my question.

My question was - Why do I feel so unknowledgeable? Why, after so many years of learning, does one feel like he does not know anything?

I have always been one to be very curious about art, always wanting to see the message the artist was or is trying to convey, or why did they do it? I want to see what the artist was seeing when she created her chef d'oeuvre. So I observed and still observe.

Then someone asks you to explain a piece to them- "Um, well, uh, you see... it's-..." Suddenly, Mind Blank!!! Everything you just experienced by feeling, seeing, or hearing disappears when it comes to translating it to that foreign language of English.

One never knows what to say, especially if he thinks before he speaks (which many do not). He can always find a contradiction to what he thought he believed.

For me this is a very frustratin' mess. Say for instance that we would want to console a friend about some unfortunate incident. We could say what they want to hear to make them feel better, but if we think first, we may say "Well, what they want to hear will not benefit them in the long run." But if we tell them to face reality, we may severely hurt them at the moment.

So, back and forth we argue with ourselves about what to say, and we end up carefully selecting our words and not saying a whole lot anyways, except "Well I don't know what to tell you," (shrug of shoulders).

If we did not know so much we would not have so many contradictions and different views of everything. We could just say what we want and have a simple kind of life.

To me it makes perfect sense. It gives me an explanation for my frustration of feeling so naive when I was trying so hard. I do not know about you guys, but I feel great now! But that does not mean that I am going to stop learning, it just inspires me to learn more.

After all if we stopped learning and stopped those never ending circles of thought, we would have the times of Big Brother. To the artist (and it should be to anyone) - that is disaster.

"The more you learn - the less you know." -unknown I dare you to contradict that!

Captain of the UW-Stout Centaurs, John Wangen scores a try against the UW-Stevens Point's Rugby Club. Wangen scored on a pick up from a scrum for Stout's first score.

by Slash La Freniere

Homecoming Saturday sure was a nice day, but it was especially nice for the Stout Rugby Club. The Centaurs beat UW-Stevens Point Rugby Club 11-10, in a match where the Centaurs had the momentum for most of the day and then nearly lost the game at the end.

The match started off slowly and neither team could really establish any definite advantage. The Centaurs moved the ball into the Stevens Point half of the pitch and were awarded a penalty from a high tackle by a Stevens Point rugger. Tim Anderson's penalty kick was through the goal posts by a hair, and Stout had the lead 3-0.

Play then went back and forth between Stout and Stevens Point after the penalty kick. The Centaurs were close to scoring many times, and they finally did get a try when John Wangen scored on a pickup of a ball from a scrum. Tim Andersons conversion was wide and the score stood at 7-0.

Stevens Point then rallied for a try and a conversion and at halftime the score was Centaurs seven, Stevens Point six. NOTE: A try is like a touchdown in football and is worth four points. The conversion after a try is worth two points.

In the second half the momentum remained in the Centaur's favor. At the 25 minute mark Tim Anderson broke loose on a 50 meter run that came off of a blocked kick. The run was long enough for a try and the run also electrified the large crowd on hand. Tim missed the conversion kick and Stout had an 11-6 lead.

Stevens Point came back hard and grabbed the momentum from the Centaurs. Play started to get rough and Stevens Point benefited from some penalties that were called on the Centaurs. Finally, Stevens Point broke through for a try that brought the score to 11-10 in Stout's favor.

The Centaur players were very upset after the try by Stevens Point. As the Point kicker lined up for the conversion a great hush came over the crowd and the players. The Point kicker sent a perfect kick toward the goal posts. It was surely a good kick. Then, at the last moment, the ball tailed off, hit the crossbar and bounced away. NO GOOD!

The Centaurs and the crowd went wild. Stout held on to win 11-10. Stout Captain P.J. McDonnell said,"I was happy to see a team that tries as hard as we do finally win an important game."

Jim "Stupid" McGuine needed only one word to express how he felt after winning, "Good!".

The Centaurs victory was truly a team victory Saturday. All of the Centaur ruggers gave a 100 percent effort to secure the victory. Curtis "Doughboy" Lyons said, "It felt good to finally play as a team and when we have it together, we can beat anybody."

In the B side game the Centaur "Killer B's" were defeated 14-4 by Stout Alumni. The Centaur's lone try was scored by Dave "Ferg" Fergot. Both matches saw a return of old time rugby, the motto for the week.

Next week the Centaurs will need to play old time rugby again, as they face the St. Paul Pigs city club at Galloway Park. This will prove to be a tough match for the Centaurs and as Ed Reesman said, "If we can beat St. Paul it will mean a lot to us and it will prove to us that we are a good team."

Stout Rugby club would like to thank all of the fans who showed up on Saturday.

10 sure ways to repair your body after an abusing Homecoming

by Jenna Sue Martin

The fun and excitement of Homecoming is over. We keep visualizing the events of the weekend past. Some memories are clear, some hazy, but we all remember it as being a good time.

With the wild times behind us, we now face the aftermath. Our bodies are feeling the results of massive calorie consumption, whether they are in food or liquid form.

Our abused stomachs gurgle, venting their anger. Our limbs continually crackle reminding us of their lack of exercise. What can we do? How does one recover?

The following are ten sure ways of totally ridding yourself of the damage after homecoming weekend in one week. Yes, one week. The week of repentance to your body can be achieved by following these steps:

1. STARVATION- After four days of this you can eat rice cakes and wheat thins for the other three, but do not eat too much.
2. DEATH RUN- Jog to Luther Hospital, run around a light post, and jog back. This only needs to be ran three out of seven days.
3. SHIN SPLINT SPRINTS- Sprint to Jakes and back for at least four of the days.
4. KILLER LADDERS- Find a suitable ten mile course and mark off each mile. Jog ten miles and back, nine miles and back, eight and back, etc... This should be done for three of the days.
5. KEEL OVER LAPS- Every morning at 5a.m., head down to the pool and swim laps continuously until it is time to get ready for class. Do not stop between laps!
6. STAGGERING STEP STUDY BREAK- While you are at the library, trying to gain back the use of brain cells or just catching up on all the homework you blew off, take a study break. I suggest running up and down the five flights of stairs as fast as possible for a half hour each break.
7. AEROBICS & CALISTHENICS BURN OUT- Today, Thursday, get over to the Student Center and sign up for every aerobics and calisthenics session you can. Practice up by doing three hours of them a day before classes begin.
8. WICKED WEIGHT TRAINING- Lift weights all seven days for at least two hours each session. Increase your weight for each exercise by a minimum of ten pounds each time.
9. BEASTLY BIKE-A-THON- Go out and get all possible pledges from students, faculty members and residents to support you in your bike-a-thon. Keep in mind, the more miles, the more dollars. You will need this money for hospital admittance at the end of the week.
10. HIBERNATION- Do not go out any night during the week! Wherever you go there will probably be food. Worse yet, for you drinkers, you may end up in a bar.

None of these steps sound appealing to me. What about you? If this is what it takes, forget it. There is no way I am doing any of these ten items! So what do I suggest?

1. DETERMINATION
2. WILLPOWER
3. FACE REALITY- It is going to take us a lot more than one week, but didn't we have fun?

Home Advantage

Paul Wydeven

For baseball fans all across the United States, the World Series proves who is the best in baseball.

In football the Superbowl is one game between the best teams from the American Football Conference and the National Football conference, but in baseball they play until one team wins four of seven games between American league champions and the National league champions.

In golf, the golf champions play at the Masters, playing several rounds of golf on the same course. The horse races are done like many sports, using a point system accumulating over an entire season, all on different tracks.

This leads to the point of involving the fans or more commonly known as the hometown advantage. The Superbowl is played at some stadium that is not the home for either team. The World Series is played at both team's ballparks. The first two games are at the home field of the team with the best record, the next three games at the other teams park and then it is back to the team with the best record.

The home for the New York Mets is Shea Stadium. The Mets share the stadium with the New York Yankees. The home for the Boston Red Sox is Fenway Park, one of the oldest ballparks in professional baseball, has a unique characteristic known as the Green Giant, a 37 foot wall in left field.

Fenway Park will be the home for games three, four and five of the 1986 World Series. In games one and two the Red Sox won in New York's Shea Stadium. It looked like the Sox could have swept the series.

Then in Tuesday's game three at Fenway Park, Bob Ojeda pitched the New York Mets to a 7-1 victory . Ojeda who was traded by the Red Sox to the Mets last November only allowed his former teammates five hits and one run in seven innnings.

In games one and two, Boston won with the pitching of Roger Clemens, Steve Crawford, Bruce Hurst and Calvin Schiraldi. Besides the pitchers in this series.

Press time for The Stoutonia is Wednesday at 5:00 p.m., before game four even starts, but I'm willing to predict who will win the series now. I would have to say the Red Sox will take it in game six.

The reason is fairly simple, the Red Sox have more experience at Shea Stadium, than the Mets have at Fenway. The only exception would be Bob Ojeda, who was a former Red Sox.

Other reasons that the Red Sox will win is the lack of hitting by the Mets during the playoff series. With the exception of Tuesday night the Mets have not been hitting. The Green Wall of Fenway is a tool which increases hitting percentages for all teams and unless the Mets use the Wall, the Red Sox will use this hometown advantage to win the 1986 World Series.

More football

American Football Teams, Inc. plans on a new spring football league. AFT plans to play next March by selling teams to the public via stock sales. The preliminary plans are for a 10-team, 20-game schedules from March to June. One of the teams maybe based in London, England.

More basketball

The National Basketball Association announed plans for expansion of up to three new teams by the 1990-1991 season. The specifics will not be set until April according to commissioner David Stern adding, "I'm extremely pleased the NBA has reached a point of strenght, where the next logical step is to expand."

More defense

The Green Bay Packers signed strong saftey David Greenwood and waived free safety Tom Flynn. The Packers also signed nosetackle Ben Thomas waived from New England and waived defensive end Kurt Ploeger. Flynn, a fifth round draft choice in 1984, That year he had nine interceptions and was named the Packer Rookie of the Year.

Thomas released

The Milwaukee Brewers released the designated hitter-first baseman Gorman Thomas. Thomas, 35, was picked up after the All-Star break when Seattle let him go earlier in the season.

Stout women's tennis team gives impressive show at championship

by Paul Emerson

With freshman Susie Blietz leading the way, the UW-Stout womens tennis team gave an impressive showing in the District 14 Womens Tennis Championships over the past weekend.

Led by Blietz, the Lady Blue Devils accumulated nine points in the two day meet, good for fourth place and their best finish ever in District 14 tournament action.

UW-La Crosse took the District 14 crown with 21 points, while runner-up UW-Milwaukee came in a distant second with 14 points. UW-Eau Claire narrowly edged Stout by just one point, in taking third place with 10 points. Then came Stout in fourth, followed by UW-Oshkosh who took fifth with seven points, and UW-Stevens Point in sixth place with six points. UW-Parkside came in last with zero points.

Blietz, who hails from Edina, Minn., advanced all the way to the semifinals before faultering in that her fifth match on the day (three in singles, two in doubles). According to Coach Bob Smith, her finish is the best ever by a Stout womens tennis player.

After receiving a first round bye, Blietz won her second round match in straight sets, beating Komula of La Crosse 6-4, 6-3.

Blietz then met her toughest match of the day in the quarterfinals. Taking on Wietz(UW-O), she out dueled her opponent in a long and tiring three set match. After winning the first set 6-2, she dropped a hard fought second set, 5-7. But then bounced back to take the third 6-2, and the match.

"Susie did an outstanding job," said Smith, "but after this match, she just ran out of gas." Entering the semifinals, and her fifth match of the day, an exhausted Blietz played tough in losing the first set 6-7. Her fuel tank then hit empty as she lost the second set 1-6, and the match.

Junior Mary Malloy also had a good day for the Lady Blue Devils, reaching the quarterfinals before being ousted. After a first round bye, Malloy then won her second round match against Onsrud(UW-O), in straight sets 6-3, 6-4.

Malloy then faced Lange(UW-M) in the quarterfinals, but she was not as fortunate in this one, losing it 6-1, 6-3.

Senior Jean Feyen, who also had a first round bye(lower division), won her second round match over Fox(UW-O), in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4. Feyen then faced Jacobson(UW-L), and lost that match 6-0, 6-0.

Also receiving first round byes were Freshman Jane Haglund (lower division), and Sophomore Tara Stahel. Both netters however, lost their second round matches. Sophomore Karen Blau, who did have a lower division first round match, lost to Peters(UW-O) in straight sets 6-4, 6-0.

The Lady Blue Devils had three doubles teams entered in tournament play. The dynamite duo of freshmen Susie Blietz and Jill Peters won their second round match (after a first round bye) beating Tropin/Kranich(UW-PK) 6-2, 6-4. But were then ousted by Johnson/Seichter(UW-L), 6-0, 6-4.

Stout's number two tandem of Malloy/Feyen dropped their first round match to Halvorson/Houser(UW-L) in straight sets 6-1, 6-4. And Blau/Stahel, Stout's third entry, also lost in the first round, but got into a three set battle before dropping the match 2-6, 7-5, 4-6, to Standford/Stengel(UW-SP).

The netters finished off the season in a bang. The Lady Blue Devils hosted UW-Platteville and won the match by an 8-1 margin. Winning in singles for the netters were Mary Malloy, Jean Feyen, Susie Blietz, Karen Blau, and Tracy Kellerman. While in doubles action, Malloy/Feyen, Stahel/Blau, and Wessely/Haglund all won.

Then on Oct.10 UW-River Falls came to town. The Lady Blue Devils easily decided this one, winning 9-0. All six singles spots were won in straight sets, as were two of the three doubles matches.

The next day(Oct. 11) the netters hosted UW-Stevens Point, but lost this one by a 6-3 margin. All three wins came in singles action. Number one singles player Mary Malloy won her match 6-2, 6-4, as did freshman Susie Blietz at number three singles 6-4, 6-2.

Sophomore Tara Stahel won her match, but needed a third set to do it. After struggling in losing the first set 2-6 and trailing 1-4 in the second, a determined Stahel decided enough was enough. She stormed back to take the next five straight games to win the set 6-4. She then left little doubt in the decisive third set, winning it and the match 6-0.

"All these girls are fighters," said Coach Smith, "and Tara exemplified this today."

The Lady Blue Devils finished their regular season with a 4-11 record, including a 4-4 conference mark, good for a fourth place finish.

The netters close out their season this weekend by traveling to La Crosse for the WWIAC championships.

Point attacked Gridders

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devil football team played Saturday against UW-Stevens Point Pointers. The Blue Devils lost by the score of 48-24 to the Pointers.

From the very begining of the game the Pointers jumped all over our Blue Devils. It began on the opening series with the Pointers defense stopping the Blue Devils. On a fourth down play the punt from kicker Jim Gorecki was blocked. This gave the Pointers the ball at Stout's 42-yard line. Two plays later Mike Christman ran 40-yards for a touchdown. The extra point by Drake was good giving the Pointers a 7-0 lead.

Stout's offense came rolling back on their next series. This series began on Stout's 22-yard line and was taken in for a touchdown on a 7-yard run by Ron Wise. This drive was highlighted by a 35-yard run which was also by Ron Wise. The point after was good, tieing the game at 7-7.

The Pointers next series began at their own 35-yard line and marched all the way down field for another score. This drive was highlighted by a pass completion of 13-yards and a run of 18-yards from Baumgarter, the Pointers quarterback. This drive was capped by a two yard touchdown run from Mike Christman giving the Pointers the lead of 14-7.

The Blue Devils were stopped on their next series giving the Pointers the ball at their own 39-yard line. The very first play of the Pointers drive was a Baumgartner pass to Kneuse for 49-yards. This gave the Pointers the ball at Stout's own 12-yard line. A tough goal line stants by the Blue Devil defense forced the Pointers to settle for a field goal. On fourth and ten from the twevle Drake kicked a field goal giving the Pointers the lead of 17-7.

Immediately following the field goal Ron Wise fumbled the kickoff at the 20-yard line. The pointers recovered the fumble and four plays later attempted another field goal. This one was blocked giving Stout the ball at their own 12-yard line. An exchange of turnovers gave the Blue Devils the ball at their own 38-yard line. Four plays later the Blue Devils went in for a score. This one on a Scott Fredrickson pass to Coshenet for a 67-yard touchdown. This made the score 17-14 in favor of the Pointers.

Both teams exchanged series before the next offensive drive occurred. This time it was the Blue Devils turn to march down field. They began at their own 48-yard line and marched down to the Pointers 22-yard line. From here it was a 37-yard field goal by Jim Gorecki. This tied the score at 17-17. The only other scoring in the first half happened two series later. This was a returned punt of 62-yards by Ted Blanco of the Pointers. This ended the scoring for the half at 24-17.

The second half opened with the Blue Devils first two series ending in fumbles. The first of which was not taken advantage of by the Pointers. The second one was adding a field goal to the Pointers score giving them a lead of 27-17. Then the Pointers began a drive that was highlighted with many fine pass completions. The Pointers began on Stout's own 43-yard line and marched all the way down for a score. This time it was a 8-yard Baugartner pass to Prince. This gave the Pointers a lead of 34-17.

The Pointers scoring attack did not stop there. Two series later they added another touchdown. This time the drive began at the Pointers own 11-yard line and went 89-yards on eight plays. This drive was highlighted by a 58-yard Baugartner pass to to Mike Christman and later a four yard run by Mike Christman for the score. This gave the Pointers the lead of 41-17.

The Pointers later added with their next series on a five play touchdown drive. This one was highlighted by a 59-yard run from Dantion. Two plays later Ken Stellmacher scored from one yard out. This gave the Pointers a lead of 48-17. Stout did manage to get one more ball controlled drive before the game ended. This drive began on Stout's own 29-yard line and went all the way for a touchdown. The drive was capped by a 14-yard run by Scott Fredrickson. This ended the scoring at 48-24.

This Saturday the UW-Stout Blue Devils will play UW-Platteville at Platteville.

Stout record broken at UW-La Crosse

by Nancy Janecek

Paul Bons made cross country history for UW-Stout Saturday at the La Crosse Invitational. Bons now holds the Blue Devil record for five miles in 24:38.

His time was good for a third place finish and brought the team up to eighth.

Winning the meet in 24:22 was Tom Ansberry of the Lay Witness for Christ team. Ansberry formerly ran for the University of Arizona.

St. Thomas College collected the best team score, their runner Jeff Hyman finished second.

Tuesday Bons was selected the Wisconsin State University Conference runner of the week. This should set him up for the next steps--conference champ and All-American. There is a one week break before the WSU conference meet in Eau Claire, Nov. 1.

Only Sue Rabas and Lisa Heimmermann drove to La Crosse to run the women's race. "It was hard to get motivated with just the two of us," Rabas said. However, they both ran well with Rabas finishing the 5000 meters in 20:34 and Heimmermann in 21:18, just one second off her personal record.

Saturday was a beautiful day with near perfect conditions. The LaCrosse course has lots of variety and hills. It was also a beautiful day for freshman Tom McGavock. He knocked nearly a minute from his best time and completed five miles in 26:29.5.

This was the first time Stout ran their top seven runners in a meet. The team effort was a good confidence builder and good preparation for the championship-level meets to come.

Bons did not set out to break any records. "I started out easy and just kept moving up," Bons said. "Then my competitive attitude pulled me to the front."

Bons ran most of the race alongside Jeff Wachter, a Stout alumni and former All-American in track. "Jeff helped me pace. I was surprised at my time, but knew I could do it," Bons said.

Coach Lou Klitzke was deservedly proud, "This is the best we have done this year. We plan to peak at conference and with luck can hold up until nationals Nov. 15 at UW-Parkside."

Man arrested, 2 questioned in theft ring

by Cosmas A. Whitten

At approximately 4:45 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 25, a man was arrested for two counts of entry into a locked vehicle and six counts of theft, according to the arresting officer, Ray Ludka.

"This is just the tip of the iceberg," said Ludka, who is an officer with campus security.

Two other suspects are being questioned and others are being sought, all are from the Menomonie area and are not Stout students.

"Vehicles parked on the southern part of the campus were being burglarized for a couple months," Ludka said.

"In the last three to four weeks it became almost an everyday event that cars were being broken into," he reported.

An estimated $3,000-5,000 worth of stolen goods, mostly tape decks and cassettes, were confiscated. At least $2,000 worth of damages were caused when the cars were broken into. The stolen goods were mostly sold to acquaintances of the thieves. "You can be arrested for knowingly receiving stolen property," warned Ludka.

Officer Ludka spotted a pick up truck driving slowly through the Blue Devil lot early Saturday morning.

"It seemed funny because there were stalls open all over. Due to the number of recent break-ins, I felt I had probable cause to stop the vehicle, since it appeared to be casing the area for cars to break into," reported Ludka.

According to Ludka, "The driver who didn't have a valid license was arrested. Through the arrest everything fell into place."

Campus Protective Services were being critizied because people believed the lots were not being protected properly. "Due to the increase in cars in lots, this campus has more people walking through lots 24 hours a day," said Ludka. He advised that, "it may be beneficial for vehicle owners to make sure their doors are locked and checked on regularly."

Robert Hoage, campus police supervisor, said that he is proud of Officer Ludka for his work on the case. "As a matter of fact, I'm proud of all my officers who put forth extra efforts in order to provide our campus with the best possible police-security coverage," Hoage said.

Hoage anticipates at least another month or more of extensive investigation by Menomonie and campus police officers before this incident is cleared.

Any students who may have had property stolen from their vehicles may call Campus Protective Services at 232-1632.

In addition, Hoage said, "I would like to take this opportunity to advise students to contact the Protective Services Department any time if they have been victims of crime."

Non alcohol party at Sigma Tau Gamma successful

Cooperative programming between two Stout organizations leads to good times in a non-alcoholic atmosphere.

by Cosmas A. Whitten

"We led the way with cocktail parties, now we lead with off-campus non-alcoholic parties," said Dewey Rothering, member of the Sigma Tau Gamma Fraternity (Sig Tau).

On Thursday, Oct. 23, Sig Tau, together with an organization called Students Understanding Drinking sensibly (SUDS), held a party in Sig Tau's frat house.

A charge of $1.50 at the door covered all the soft drinks, flavored slush, munchies and pizza a guest could consume. Music was provided by a disc jockey.

The Sig Tau/SUDS concept of a non-alcoholic party was well received by the community. Eighteen area businesses gave their support by helping to sponsor the party. Chicago Air donated two round-trip airline tickets good for travel from Eau Claire to Chicago, which were raffled off during the party.

Members of Sig Tau began looking for an organization to co-sponsor their non-alcoholic party in order to be eligible for Cooperative Programming funding through the Stout Student Association. Cooperative Programming funds are intended for two or more groups working together to program events.

> "If you choose to drink, drink responsibly —SUDS motto"

According to Dewey Rothering, SUDS was chosen because it is a student-oriented group, focusing on increasing students' awareness of the importance of drinking sensibly.

According to Teresa Mitchell, who has been president of SUDS for two of the three years she has been a member, the group began as a class project at Stout in 1980. Currently, Mitchell reports that there are 19 active members in the organization.

"If you choose to drink, drink responsibly; if you choose not to drink that is your choice and it should be respected" is SUDS' motto.

Mitchell said that SUDS is not an anti-drinking organization. "It is an organization that tries to promote responsibility," she said.

SUDS tries to educate students about alcohol use and abuse by the use of flyers, bringing speakers to the campus and by planning activities which involve an alcohol-free atmosphere, such as alternative recreation nights and non-alcoholic parties, such as the one held last Thursday.

One of the most popular events that is sponsored by SUDS is Alternative Recreation Night, which is held once a month in the Recreation Center in the Memorial Student Center.

At Alternative Recreation Nights, SUDS provides free food, beverages and movies. Reduced

Whaling moratorium in effect

A Japanese whaling ship embarked on the country's last commercial whaling venture Tuesday, as agreed by the Japanese government.

This brings Japan into an international agreement declaring a moratorium on whaling until 1990.

Norway has also said it will cease its commercial whaling operations after the 1987 season. The Soviet Union, then, would be the only country still conducting whaling expeditions.

Surrogate mother wants baby back

A New Jersey couple and the woman they hired to have a baby for them are locked into the first legal battle involving an offspring born to a surrogate mother.

Mary Beth Whitehead and William Stern are the biological parents of the infant girl involved.

Stern and his wife, Elizabeth, are bringing a suit in the Superior Court of New Jersey to force Whitehead to honor an agreement, made previous to the child's conception. This is the first attempt to prevent a surrogate mother from backing out of such a contract.

The Sterns spent $40,000 to arrange conception, delivery and return of the baby. Now they are paying legal fees in an effort to keep the baby that Whitehead has said she wants back.

Fugitive teaches criminal justice

An instructor of criminal justice at the University of Nebraska-Omaha has been arrested as a fugitive from justice, officials said Tuesday.

Paul Stewart, during the past eleven years since his escape from a New York prison, had acquired a specialized master's law degree at the University of Wisconsin.

Stewart had previous convictions of burglary, larceny, vagrancy and desertion from the army on his record, according to New York prison officials.

According to Stewart's superior at the university, he also was "a fine teacher, very good with students."

Activities fees misspent

Five students of Marquette University in Milwaukee are being investigated for alleged misspending of $900 of student activities fees.

A sixth student is also under investigation for alledgedly helping them obtain the money.

The five students are accused of spending the funds on an expensive dinner, complete with $113 worth of flowers and a rented limousine, for themselves and their dates at the Pfister Hotel and Tower during their homecoming weekend, according to Marquette University administrators.

Genocide survivor and ex-Hitler Youth speak

(Maltee Ramraj)
by Masha Roberts

The Great Hall in the Memorial Student Center was filled with students and faculty members, who came to hear a man who had been a high-ranking leader of the Hitler Youth and a woman who was a survivor of the Auschwitz Nazi concentration camp.

Mr. Alfons Heck, author of "A Child of Hitler," now being sold at the University Bookstore, spoke of his life and experiences as a follower of Hitler at the presentation on Tuesday, Oct. 21.

Heck voluntarily joined the Hitler Youth in 1938, at the age of 10.

In 1938, said Heck, Germany was a proud country. All stood behind Hitler, and 37 out of 40 German boys joined the Hitler Youth voluntarily. The words "Blood and Honor" were written on the daggers they received.

One of Hitler's deputies, who is now in prison, introduced Heck to the Youths, and as Hitler leaned forward and looked into their eyes, he said, "You, my youth, the young of Germany, have been selected to become leaders."

Heck said, "I knew then that I belonged to Hitler."

In 1942, Germany was at war with the United States and Heck related that he had had no doubt in his mind that Germany would conquer the U.S. During this time, all boys and girls of Germany had to join the Hitler Youth. Heck was selected for the elite "Flying Hitler Youth."

By 1944, at the age of 16, Heck was briefly Germany's youngest top-rated sailplane pilot and was accepted as an Officer Cadet for the Luftwaffe.

By this time, Heck said, all the Jews had disappeared from Germany. Heck said that he felt no compassion for the Jews then. Nevertheless, he went on to say that the Hitler Youth movement's concept of a final solution to the problem of the Jews was deportation, not genocide.

Heck's first signs of pity for non-Germans appeared when he saw two men and a woman shot to death. The woman, Heck said, who did not die right away and was shot again between the eyes.

> "The world must not forget
> —Helen Waterford"

Heck related this incident to a friend of his, who laughed and said that he had personally witnessed mass execution of non-Germans.

Heck said that he was very disturbed by his friend's story.

On March 1945, U.S. tanks rolled through his hometown and Heck was captured. Much later in the year, he was arrested by French occupation officials and sentenced to one month of hard labor and restriction to town limits because of his rank.

Heck immigrated to Canada in 1951 and entered the U.S. in 1963 with his Canadian wife. He became an American citizen in 1969.

In 1980, Heck joined Ms. Waterford, a German-born Jewish survivor of Auschwitz, to do lectures at colleges and universities across the nation.

Waterford met Heck after he placed an article about himself in the San Diego Union and mentioned that he was once a high-ranking leader of the Hitler Youth. She was immediately interested because, as she said, it was the first time anyone had declared openly something as delicate as this.

In the early 1920s, Waterford said, there were excessive inflation problems in Germany. The unemployment rate was greater than 30 percent and many people suffered.

Adolf Hitler came into power in January 1933, the same year Waterford married.

Between 1933 and 1938, all Jews were made to leave Germany. There were many problems with getting visas to the U.S. and only several thousand Jews were allowed to enter the country per year.

Waterford said that "those people who did not get their visas are now dead, and that should be on the conscience of Americans." Fortunately, Waterford's parents got their visas and came to the U.S.

In 1942, in order to save their own lives, the Waterford's had to give up their five-year-old daughter for safekeeping with a stranger who offered to help.

The couple was then taken in as prisoners. Men were separated from women, loaded onto cattle trains with no room to sit and no idea where they were going.

Waterford and her husband promised that they would meet again later, if possible. That was the last time she saw her husband. She could never discover what happened to him.

During the night, the train arrived at some unknown place and their suitcases were all thrown outside. The women were instructed by guards to walk a long ramp.

When they came to the end of the ramp, they saw Hitler. A woman and child were standing next to Waterford.

Hitler asked Waterford, "Is that your child?"

She replied simply, "No," and was sent to a line on one side of Hitler, while the woman and child were sent to another line.

Later Waterford realized that her line was the line to live and the opposite line was the line to death.

After the war ended, Waterford went in search of her child, whom she found.

Waterford remarked that, "Parents need children more than children need parents."

"The lilies of the valley were never more beautiful than in May of 1945," recalls Waterford. "I walked out the gate at the women's labor camp at Kratzau in Czechoslovakia - FREE ! I threw myself into the large field of dainty little flowers, embracing as many as I could, overwhelmed by their fragrance, which filled me with joy, hope, rebirth and new security."

Waterford said that she believes her presentations serve "to share what I had learned at such a terrific and painful cost; to combine my experience with a good factual, historical foundation and to create a growing interest in this period of history, especially among young people."

"The world must not forget," she stressed, "the world must not forget."

Hitlerism and the Holocaust was organized and funded by the University Speaker Series Commission, which consists of Stout students, faculty members and members of the Menomonie community.

Ideas shared on retaining Minority Affairs Senator

by Kristin Bailey

When asked what would improve the Stout Student Association's (SSA) ability to retain a Minority Affairs Senator, the leader of a multi-cultural organization on campus suggested that members of the SSA show more concern and see that the representative who holds the office is heard.

Joe Torres, president of UW-Stout's Rainbow organization, said that SSA should "treat the Minority Affairs Senator as a major concern and make sure minorities get representation."

"Sometimes a Senator has good ideas that are not heard," Torres said. "It is not easy," he added.

Torres made his remarks at a meeting between Rainbow members and SSA United Council Director Robb Zimdars. Zimdars met with the Rainbow organization on Monday, Oct. 20, to discuss replacement of Aref Khatib, who recently resigned from the Minority Affairs Senator seat.

Khatib had been the third Minority Affairs Senator to resign before the end of their term.

The following Tuesday, Oct. 28, Adesola Adisa, a Nigerian student was appointed to fill the position.

Zimdars, whose job includes overseeing the two affirmative action seats on Senate, Women's Affairs Senator and Minority Affairs Senator, believes that the high turnover rate of Minority Affairs Senators is due to an overburden of responsibilities.

In an attempt to define the scope of the Minority Affairs Senator's representation, Zimdars said that, "everyone, in at least one way is a minority, this may be by being prematurely bald, handicapped or of ethnic minority."

Such a wide area of representation, according to Zimdars, makes the position a difficult one. He said that it is difficult to keep in contact with all the minorities at Stout.

> "Very hard to do, yet it can be very fulfilling
> —Robb Zimdars"

Gehni Givings, a member of Rainbow, told those gathered that she thought, "the job involves too much responsibility. Having more than one Senator would help a lot," she suggested.

Zimdars told the Rainbow members that they must keep up on events overseas and local programs. Zimdars said that the Senator must make the happenings known to SSA and minorities.

Minorities, according to Zimdars, are defined by the United Council (UC) and the state-wide student government association, as blacks, Third World, ethnic minorities and international students.

Alejandra Elenes, the minority affairs director at the UC office in Madison, said that the job description of her position "is like a big umbrella," covering U.S. ethnic minorities, Third World foreign students and handicapped students.

The UC, she said, does not have a definition for the Minority Affairs position but she said that her committee was working on developing one.

Responding to a question raised by a Rainbow member, Zimdars said that UC "does not include homosexuals as minorities." There are "other groups open to homosexuals" at Stout, Zimdars added.

Stephanie Peters, administrative director of the United States Student Association, based in Washington D.C., said that the national student organization's definition of minority included "any group of people who have been systematically oppressed."

Peters said that "this would include Third World minorities, non-traditional students, disabled persons and gay/lesbians."

Zimdars outlined the issues that a Minority Affairs Senator should be available to work on at Stout for Rainbow members. "Prejudice and stereotypes are problems that the Senator must deal with and try to resolve."

Zimdars describes the job as "very hard to do," he added, "yet, it can be very fulfilling."

Assembly candidates discuss tuition increases

by Rhonda Olson

In the opening remarks of a forum presenting four candidates running for District Assembly seats to the UW-Stout community, a representative of the forum's sponsor said that it was an opportunity to let the candidates know about citizen's interests.

Dick Tyson, associate professor of social science at Stout and president of Stout's chapter of The Association of the University of Wisconsin Faculties (TAUWF), which sponsored the event, opened the forum.

Four candidates for district assembly took part, which was held in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center on Wednesday, Oct. 22.

Incumbent Dick Shoemaker is running against Robert Knowles for the 29th Assembly District. The 29th District includes the Western part of Dunn County and the city of Menomonie.

The two candidates running for the 67th Assembly District are Larry Bjork and Leo Hamilton. The 67th District includes the Eastern part of Dunn County.

The first to speak was incumbent Dick Shoemaker. He has been representing the 29th District for the past four terms.

Shoemaker said that he supports collective bargaining for university staff and a retirement program which allows for the opportunity of early retirement after 30 years of employment in the UW-System.

Shoemaker told the audience about programs which he has under-taken on behalf of his alma mater, UW-Stout.

The incumbent said that he has worked toward giving "the students the best education, the best opportunities at the most reasonable cost."

> "The best opportunities at the most reasonable cost"
> —Dick Shoemaker

Shoemaker worked for approval of the original Stout Fieldhouse and the recently approved addition to the building. Recently, Shoemaker claimed, he helped to implement the Stout/Case I.H. project, in which Stout faculty and students in industry are working with the manufacturing company located in Wausau.

Republican Robert Knowles spoke after Shoemaker. Knowles stated that he "didn't come to bury Dick Shoemaker tonight; nor did he come to praise him."

Knowles said that the UW-System was losing many students. He said that he was concerned because graduates were not being enticed with new business and industry.

The challenger for the 29 District seat said that he was taking a stand, something which he had not done earlier.

Knowles' political stand, which was unveiled for the first time at the forum, deals with his plan to wait for the Board of Regents reports. He will make his decisions about the UW-System at that time.

The Board of Regents report will be out in mid-November, following the elections on Nov. 4.

The candidates for the 67th Assembly District spoke after Shoemaker and Knowles. Leo Hamilton, Democratic Mayor of Chippewa Falls, began by asking Knowles the question, "Did all of the graduates in the Wisconsin system under all the Republican governors stay in this state?"

Knowles replied, "No, certainly not."

Hamilton followed up by saying that Knowles' point was not important to the forum, especially since many students in the system are originally from other states.

Mulder stresses priority spending

by Tim Hopkins

Lee Mulder, Democratic candidate for the Third District in the U.S. Congress, campaigned at UW-Stout saying that America needed to re-order its spending priorities for the country to return to its strength.

Mulder said his platform to help move Western Wisconsin toward these changes included his commitment to preserving the family farm, his dedication to improving rural and urban economy plus a progressive platform for Wisconsin schools, jobs and natural resources.

A life-long farmer from La Crosse County and former president of the Wisconsin Farmer's Union, the 61 year-old Mulder criticized his opponent, incumbent Republican Steve Gunderson, for promoting the "spend, spend, borrow, borrow approach to economics."

Mulder attacked America's 80 percent increase in defense spending since Ronald Reagan's landslide victory in 1980. In that same time, Mulder said, government spending on social programs has dropped 35 percent. He indicated that, given the chance, he would turn things around, saying "the spending gap is getting wider. That is something that must come to a halt."

Mulder predicted a difficult road ahead due to the nation's $2 trillion debt. "There is no easy answer, but certainly Reaganomics is not the answer."

He stressed the need for everyone to have the right to a college education. "We ought to plow our resources into education," Mulder said, "the essence of democracy is education." Mulder has a bachelor's degree from UW-La Crosse and his wife is a Stout graduate.

> "We ought to plow our resources into education
> —Lee Mulder

The Democratic challenger said Wisconsin residents need to keep in mind what made the state's educational system one of the best in the nation. He criticized the Reagan Administration's planned reduction of student loans from $1.2 billion to $300 million over the next three years. He asked rhetorically,"What are students going to do?"

According to Mulder, America must shift its emphasis on defense spending into areas he thinks would be more beneficial to the economy over the long term. "We have enough defense for a long time to come," Mulder said adding that, "The Defense Department can afford to put the brakes on defense spending."

Mulder called the Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly called "Star Wars," a "pipedream."

Mulder said America would benefit from a new economic policy in which the nation could share equally in the prosperity. "The bread basket has not been sharing in the economic recovery," he said.

Mulder criticized Gunderson for supporting the '85 Farm Bill which he said resulted in America importing more farm products than it exported for the first three months.

Farmers may be suffering the immediate hardship, but Mulder warned that our whole economy will suffer "ripple effects" from what he called the "incumbent's abandonment of the rural family farmer."

According to Mulder, the ripple effect works like ripples on a pond, starting at the center and then working their way out until they cover the whole surface of the pond.

Mulder said the current neglect of the family farmer will "lead to a point where rural people, students and non-rural people all suffer from the ripple effect."

Mulder said he recognized the proud tradition of progressivism and dissent that Wisconsin has contributed to American history. Mulder said he thought that tradition ought to be maintained.

Gunderson examines financial aid changes

by Jill Huppert

The five year renewal of the Higher Education Act, which includes increased student loan limits and more restrictive eligibility standards for financial aid, has been signed into law by President Reagan.

According to Third District Congressman Steve Gunderson, member of the House Subcommittee on Post-Secondary Education, the act will allow students to borrow up to $2625 during their first two years of school and $4000 annually during their last three years.

> "We've begun to recognize the changing picture of our college student
> —Steve Gunderson

This past year all undergraduates were limited to $2500.

The maximum amount for Pell Grants, under the new law, will rise from $2100 to $2300 next year.

UW-Stout Director of Financial Aids, Kurt Kindschi, said the most dramatic change in the act is the mandatory student independence age of 24. He estimated this will directly affect 15% of students who apply for aid. Parents will have to provide assistance for their children, if they are able, Kindschi said.

There are exceptions to the independence age. Students under 24 can declare independence if they are married or have legal dependents. Graduate students, orphans and students earning more than $4000 per year who were not dependents on their parents' tax returns in the past two years can also file as independent.

The new act also requires that students have a minimum GPA of 2.0 by their junior year to be eligible for aid.

The changes in the renewal of the act "will definitely not increase the number of students who will qualify," Kindschi said. However, the eligibility changes should not affect the truly needy student.

According to Kindschi, the emphasis in the Higher Education Act has changed from grant aid to loan indebtedness.

The act has allocated 30 percent of student aid for grants as opposed to 50 percent 10 years ago.

Congressman Gunderson said, "grants will be there to provide access to higher education; loans will provide choice."

Students will not be awarded a large grant for choosing an expensive school.

Kindschi said the probable long term effect of these changes is that students will be forced to pursue more of their general course work at lower cost institutions in their own communities. Stout will probably see more transfer students.

Title I of the act, which provides special assistance to the non-traditional student, was authored by Congressman Gunderson.

"We've begun to recognize the changing picture of our college student," Gunderson said.

It is estimated that by 1990, 47 percent of students in higher education will be over the age of 23. Many of these will be adults returning to education for training or retraining to meet the demands of a higher technology workplace.

Title I provides grants to institutions for aiding non-traditional students. Half time students will now be eligible for grants, with the minimum grant level at $100, Gunderson said.

Student financial aid programs account for 93 percent of the total $10.2 billion authorized by the Higher Education Act. The effective date for changes in loan programs is January 1, 1987. July 1, 1987 is the effective date for all other programs.

Farm bill key issue at congressional debate

by Jill Huppert

The two candidates for the Wisconsin's Third Congressional District seat in the U.S. Senate differ greatly in their views on agriculture and foreign affairs in a debate held Monday, Oct. 21, at the Mabel Tainter Theatre in Menomonie.

The incumbent, Republican Congressman Steve Gunderson, and the Democratic challenger, Lee Mulder, showed disagreement on the effectiveness of the 1985 Farm Bill, passed by the Senate during Gunderson's term.

> "You're for guns and I'm for butter"
> —Lee Mulder

Gunderson, in defense of the the farm bill, said that the bill is working much better than many of its critics will admit. The dairy cattle "buy-out," in which the government paid farmers to have their herds reduced, has resulted in a 55 cent increase in the price of milk in the last three months, Gunderson said, because 1.2 billion fewer cattle are in production.

Arguing that the farm bill cost over $30 billion during the first year it was in effect, Mulder said that the bill resulted in the second largest corn crop in history, increasing the surplus and driving the corn price down.

Mulder maintained that Wisconsin farmers need a bill that provides supply management and a stable price support system.

Mulder said, during the debate, that Gunderson's figures were "purely election rhetoric."

On the issue of national defense, Mulder said that Reagan was not well prepared for his meeting with Gorbachav in Iceland.

"I think Ronnie Reagan got caught with his pants down," Mulder said. Mulder said that "Star Wars," or the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) over which the summit broke down, is an offensive weapon, not a defensive weapon, as President Reagan has convinced the public.

"What we have here is not a defense build-up," Mulder said, "it's a defense spend-up."

Gunderson argued that the Soviets realized they asked for too much in Iceland and maintained that they will eventually negotiate on the issue of SDI. Gunderson said testing outside the laboratory is important for giving us necessary strategic research.

"Thank God we have a President who was willing to walk away from that particular challenge," Gunderson said.

Labor - Farm ticket alternative to two party system, pulling groups together

by Tracy Lea Landis

A former UW-Stout student is running for the office of Secretary of State on the Labor-Farm party ticket.

Richard Ackley said that the Labor-Farm party offers an alternative to the two-party system, which he said offers the electorate little choice in voting.

The two major parties are "similar in purpose and attitude," said Ackley, and cause people to do what he called "voting by default."

"At this point, I am of the opinion that there is such a low level of participation in the electoral process that people vote by not voting," said Ackley.

The Labor-Farm party attempts to represent the interests of farmers, peace activists, the unemployed, the elderly, tribal people, environmentalists, teachers and displaced homemakers, said Ackley.

"We are pulling together various groups who do not have as much power because they are single-issue groups," Ackley said, "people that the corporate groups have forgotten."

The Labor-Farm party, according to Ackley, is styled on the principle of coalition building, bringing together the issues that the two-party system ignores.

Ackley said, "My involvement in this is to promote involvement of the common citizen to participate in the political process, not professional politicians supported by money and media."

Ackley described the Labor-Farm party as "viable and growing," predicting that the coalition, "10 or 15 years down the road, will make in-roads into the electoral system."

At this point, Ackley said, "If we can get over 20 thousand votes, we will have made a positive in-road."

This is the party's first statewide campaign.

As a candidate for Secretary of State, Ackley said, "I have advocated the use of a short form for filing corporate documents and the opening of a full-service office in Northern Wisconsin."

"This would mean," said Ackley, "that a small businessperson could process their articles of incorporation and other legal documents the Secretary of State is responsible for with some level of personal service from an elected official."

"This would be in lieu of the large staff and the computerized systems that the centralized office offers," Ackley said, "and result in more timely service to the independent businessperson just starting out."

Ackley also said that, as Secretary of State, he would work toward complete disclosure of all lobbying operations.

"There needs to be a strong self-disclosure of the lobbying activities of multi-national corporations in this state," said Ackley.

Ackley's own campaign was supported by $600 in contributions. The Labor-Farm party receives no PAC money and no large contributions.

Describing himself, Ackley said, "My life is filled up with meetings but that's part of being a community activist."

He said that he has gained much from his training at Stout. Ackley has completed 42 credits in Guidance and Counseling at Stout, "but my community activism," he said, "got in the way of closure of my degree."

"I've gained much from my training which helps me to deal with diverse groups," Ackley added, "working towards conflict resolution in order for coalition to be built."

Opinions ranked

Sports and recreation were the most popular areas to air opinions about, according to students in radio programming at UW-Stout this semester.

In a report from Ace Matthews, general manager of WVSS, the campus radio station, issues chosen by students in his Radio Programming course were ranked according to popularity amongst student broadcasters.

One of the requirements of the three credit course is that the student create a tape expressing an opinion to be broadcast over the air on the "Campus and Community" interview program or the "Opinion Point" program.

Sports and recreation were chosen as a topic, 15 out of the total of 47 programs. Alcohol abuse came in second, with eight students choosing it as their topic. Opinions about local and state laws was the third most popular topic area.

Minority recruitment dismal

Despite the efforts of predominantly white colleges to recruit minority students, fewer blacks and Hispanics are going to college now than 10 years ago, according to a American Council on Education (ACE) report.

The report says that the future looks "dismal" for the recruitment of minority students.

Sarah Melendez of ACE, said her report shows that minority enrollment on traditionally white campuses began to increase in the mid-1960s, peaked in the mid-1970s and has been declining ever since.

Melendez said that she thinks the key to reversing the trend lies in reforming the educational approach in the primary and secondary school system.

Loan repayment a problem for women

A survey of former college students has shown that women holding low-income jobs have the most trouble paying off their college loans.

Almost 11 percent of the 628 borrowers surveyed were consuming 10 percent or more of their income in debt repayment. Two-thirds of those in this category were women, 75 percent were single and almost one in seven held a secretarial or clerical job, according to the survey.

The debts are a hardship for women in low-paying jobs, said Joseph D. Boyd, who conducted the study with Dennis J. Martin, for the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

Children to audition

Auditions for children needed for the University Theatre production of All The Way Home will be held Nov. 4 and 5 at 5:30 in the Harvey Hall Auditorium.

The performance is being prepared for Dec. 11, 12 and 13. Parents of children aged 6-12 are encouraged to have their children audition.

One boy is needed for a leading role, another is needed for a cameo role. Three or four more boys and two or three girls will be needed to play "neighborhood children."

SSA Senators face veto, vote to fund Amnesty and SUDS

by Kelly Cohorst

In the face of a possible presidential veto, the Stout Student Association (SSA) Senators moved to fund the Stout chapter of Amnesty International (AI) in the amount of $1000 on Tuesday night.

President Paul D. Nelson had warned the Senators at their caucaus an hour before the regular SSA meeting, that he would veto any reallocations budget that included funding for AI.

The reallocation budget came off the table at this week's meeting.

The budget recomendations had been submitted for Senate approval by the Financial Affairs Committee a week before. The recommendations, which included a budget of $1000 for AI, had been tabled on Oct. 21.

Before the meeting this Tuesday, Nelson had said, "At 6 p.m. tonight, people will either call me a courageous leader or an SOB."

During discussion at last week's meeting, AI member Ali Vazirabadi had argued that the organization should get more than the $1000 that was recommended at last week's meeting.

Discussion at Tuesday's Senator's Caucaus centered around Nelson's allegation that the AI constitution prevented them from accepting any money from SSA.

Nelson read from a highlighted copy of the AI constitution, "Amnesty International is independent of all governments."

Nelson told the Senators that his interpretation of what he read was that AI could not accept funding from SSA. He told the Senators that they would be helping AI break their own rules and that was why he would veto any AI funding.

Finance Committee member Catherine Reszka agreed with Nelson's interpretation. Reszka claims that Vazirabai's attempts to influence the Senate decision were made in an attempt to "discredit the Senate in order to accomplish his cause."

"I feel that Ali's tactics of persuading the Senate were very unethical," Reszka said.

Reszka said that she wanted to remind her fellow voting Senators at Caucaus, "This is our money."

"I want to ask you," continued Reszka, "how many students are going to benefit from giving Amnesty International money?"

AI member Wally Meisner, addressing the Senators at Caucaus, said, "I am looking for some of the segregated fees I pay to go to the activity we want to participate in."

The AI faculty advisor, Professor John See, responded to Nelson's contention after reading a passage from the AI constitution which said they could accept no monies if there were "strings attached."

"I don't know where this misinformation comes from but there's no problem with you people giving us money," said See.

Members of Students Understanding Drinking Sensibly (SUDS) were also at Senator's Caucaus to lobby for an increase in their allocation recommendation.

Members of the Finance Committee told the group that funds were cut from their request in order to encourage them to apply for Cooperative Programming and that funding was refused for speakers requested because they had not set dates for the events.

SUDS members replied that they were doing some programming with other groups. Members also said that they could not set dates until they could make contracts and that they could not make contracts until they knew they had funds.

SUDS advisor Ann Ramage said, "The university takes a strong posture on this. I have advised them not to make verbal contracts without the money to back them up."

SUDS member Sandra Kampen, a former SSA Senator, said, "I think with the increased membership we have this year, we could accomplish alot."

At the Senate meeting, reallocation recommendations came off the table, with the AI recommendation for $1000 and the reduced SUDS budget, under old business.

Reszka immediately moved to amend the recommendations to remove any budget for AI, with a motion that quoted AI's constitution as saying "outside donations shall be accepted only in so far as they are done in accordance with the policies that govern Amnesty International (USA)."

The motion went on the say that "segregated fees are not distributed as a donation."

Connie Schnelle got the floor as soon as Reszka's motion was made and offered a motion made by her and seconded by Ginger Eisenhauer to limit debate on the issue to 15 minutes. The motion failed.

UPB Senator Damon Smith was the first to speak against the amendment. He said that the constitutional issue had been cleared up and that AI could recieve funding through SSA.

The chair yielded the floor to the group's advisor for three minutes.

"Our by-laws," See told the Senators, "do not say that we can not accept money from your organization." He also read from the AI constitution to support his remarks.

"Any constitution, including that of the U.S.," Senator Tom Aumann of Hovlid Hall said, "is subject to interpretation."

"If they are students of this school," asked Off-Campus Senator Henry Oboh, "I do not see why we can not give them part of what they are paying."

The motion to amend the budget by removing AI's funds was taken by written ballot. The amendment failed for lack of decision, with 12 for and 12 against.

Senator Katherine McCarthy moved to amend the budget recommendation "by adding $950 to the SUDS budget."

The motion passed on a roll call vote with 14 for, 4 against and 6 abstaining.

UPB Senator Smith attempted to add to the AI budget with a motion proposing that it be increased by $1,272.

Smith's motion failed by 14 votes.

The motion to approve the amended reallocation recommendations was then passed by a vote of 14-10.

rates are made available to participants for bowling and pool.

The next alternative recreation night will be held Saturday, Nov. 15.

SUDS is affiliated with a national organization. Their parent organization is Booze Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students (BACCHUS). Stout was the first university in Wisconsin to become affiliated with BACCHUS.

"We could have been called BACCHUS, but we chose SUDS," said President Mitchell, who will be attending the BACCHUS National Conference in St. Louis, Missouri, this November.

According to Sig Tau Senior Rob McArdle, Sig Tau is a chapter of a national organization which started in 1920 at Missouri State Teacher's College.

On Nov. 20, 1948, a new chapter was begun at Stout. One of the founders of the university's Sig Tau Chapter was Chancellor Robert Swanson.

"There are currently 33 active members of Sig Tau with nine pledges, most of whom are sophomores," said Mike Gibbons, recording secretary for Sig Tau. Pledges are prospective recruits to the organization.

Gibbons, who was the chairman on the Sig Tau/SUDS party, is credited with coming up with the idea of a non-alcoholic party. He said that the idea was prompted primarily by the changes that must come about because of the change in the legal age for drinking.

"If we start now," said Gibbons, "down the road people will come (to more non-alcoholic events)."

Sig Tau members are helped with their projects by Little Sisters of Sig Tau, the auxiliary organization, according to Gibbons.

"They give us support, help with our fund-raiser, as well as doing their own," said Gibbons. "They join because they don't want to go sorority, but they do want to be involved in the Greek system."

There are currently 20 active Little Sisters and eight pledges.

"Next semester we are pledging all returning freshmen," said Little Sister President Jill Liebernow.

Responding to a question on aid to the counter-revolutionary forces in Nicaragua, Gunderson said he voted in favor of granting $100 million in support to the contras. He claimed that the amount of aid given would not allow an overthrow of the Sandinista government, but that it would simply allow a legitimate opposition to survive in the Central American country.

Mulder took an opposing view on this issue. He characterized the choices on the contra aid issue as being a choice between guns, or military solutions to the problems of Nicaragua, and butter, or the revitalization of their farm-based economy.

Mulder told Gunderson, "You're for guns and I'm for butter."

The Menomonie debate between the two candidates is part of a series of debates which are being held in all 16 counties of the Third Congressional District, of which Dunn County is a part.

structors. He said, "They do one hell of a job."

He went on to state that the level of funding must be maintained for the UW-System. If elected he said he would certainly support funding levels because he feels Wisconsin can not afford mediocrity.

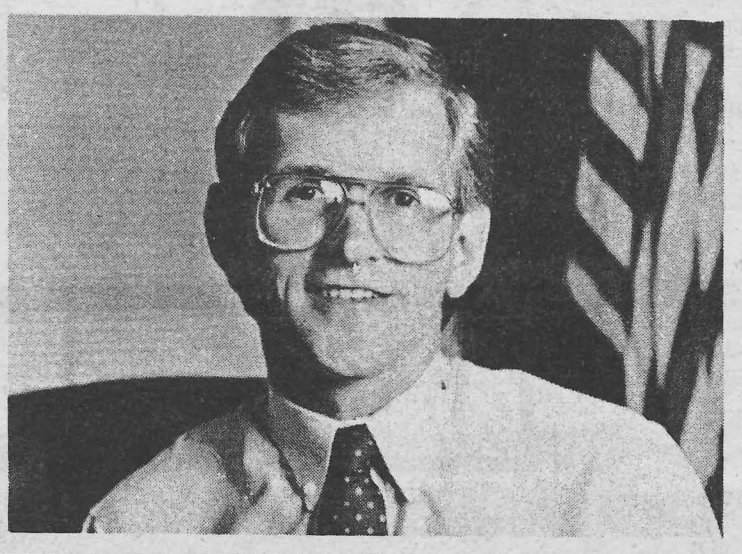
Also, Hamilton said that he didn't know a lot about collective bargaining, but if it were advantageous to the faculties and not too expensive for the state, he would support it.

The final speaker to address the issues was Larry Bjork, a dairy farmer from Spring Brook who is also the Eau Claire County agricultural agent.

Bjork stated that he is not a fan of collective bargaining, but that he can understand why the university faculty and support staff have called for collective bargaining when they see people in the same town acquiring increases in wages.

Bjork said he would ask students to pay a little more in tuition instead of having the state make up any increase in the instructor's wages.

One of Your Best Friends Lives Off Campus.



STEVE GUNDERSON

A LOCAL CONGRESSMAN

A NATIONAL VOICE

Remember to Vote Tuesday, November 4th

Congressman Steve Gunderson has been a real friend to the over 48,000 college students in the Third Congressional District.

When college students needed someone in Washington to stand up for them and make certain that funds were provided for Guaranteed Student Loans, Pell Grants, College Work Study and other assistance programs, Steve came through.

When college students had concerns and wanted someone in Washington to discuss those matters, Steve Gunderson was not only willing to listen, but took those concerns to Washington and got results.

When the Federal Government wanted to raise the legal drinking age to twenty-one, Steve fought for the rights of students and against raising the drinking age.

Steve Gunderson recognized the creative and sensible input that college students could give to government and set up the Collegiate Council, a group of students selected by each campus to meet with Steve to discuss issues.

When students have a friend like Steve Gunderson in Washington, they re-elect him.

Earl guards freedom of access to system

Incumbent Governor Anthony Earl (D) and his challenger, Tommy Thompson share a desire to cut Wisconsin's spending growth but that is where the similarity ends.

Thompson pledges to freeze State spending while criticizing Wisconsin's growth in spending the last four years. The numbers show that under Tony Earl, the quadrennial spending increase has been the lowest in 30 years.

Thompson said that if elected, he would require state agencies to submit budgets reflecting a five percent reduction in what they already spend. In the case of the UW-System, the Board of Regents, wanting to get more funding, will have to meet with Thompson to convince him of the System's need for additional funding.

Currently, the UW-System faces an annual shortfall of $88 million which indicates Thompson ought to be suggesting greater sources of funding for the System rather than forcing the System to work even harder to get what it is due.

Thompson favors more stringent admission requirements for all Wisconsin residents applying to member schools in the UW-System. He has also proposed that UW-System schools increase their tuition levels to the medium price range which would be a substantial increase.

Under Tony Earl, a tuition increase of $140 per student over the next for years is proposed at 4-year schools such as UW-Stout. It is difficult to say what the tuition increases will be under Tommy Thompson's leadership.

Governor Earl has made no attempt to impose tougher admission standards on the UW-System. As an alternative to enrollment caps at the four-year schools, the Board of Regents is recommending increased enrollment at the two-year schools plus facilitating the transfer of credits from the two-year schools to the four-year schools.

The Stoutonia endorses Governor Tony Earl in his re-election bid recognizing commitment to the freedom of access of the UW-System to State residents and his belief in the educational system as a valuable component attracting industries to Wisconsin.

Fine Line

Spit out the pits

Jef Maynard

Making general statements is like bobbing for watermelons. Most sweeping statements are too big to come out of anyone's mouth, while most watermelons are generally, (watch out, it's the trap), too big to fit in your mouth. Cutting either down to size is the opportunity to chew, taste and pass judgement on quality. And maybe, spit out the pits; oh, it's the pits.

I have not seen Dan Rather on the news but I hear from a variety of sources that at the end of his broadcast, he signs off with the word "Courage." I shudder to think that things are really that bad.

That the handsome, human linotype machine is trying to pump us up nightly, could be taken as a veiled, desperate scream for help from our corner of this dying blue-green dustball in the cosmos.

"The basis of optimism is sheer terror," Ocsar Wilde once said. I would rather, (excuse me), have Rather say, "Don't buy any bullshit." Maybe things wouldn't be so bad.

People are clay pots that the handles have fallen off of. They have shapes and functions but they may not work just exactly right. It may not be their fault. The fault may lie with the manufacturer. Notice the 100 percent factory recall.

America, or any nebulous institution, is a conversational watermelon. If I hear the expression, "America feels that ..." or "America thinks President Reagan is doing a great job..." and so on I feel cheated. There is no America in the sense used here.

I received a letter this summer: "Stout Welcomes You Back." Come off it. Hey, Stout, old buddy, can I borrow ten bucks. Stout, do you wanna go dancing? Too big to be real, I think. Everything breaks down to very particular details. Try and call "Stout" on the phone.

If I say, man, this is a weird country, (which I do occasionally,) I'm not talking about anything, but usually something in particular. It might be this: Disposable diapers. Democratic determination. Anti-intellectualism in action.

Antibiotics. Anti-semitism. Anti-gravity.

If "the business of America is business," then the prayer is no longer "Give us this day, our daily bread," but "move us this day, our entire inventory of bread products."

Are people afraid of using their brains? This question, (here I go questioning again, much to the chagrin of some of my "faithful" readers), is especially appropriate at a place of higher education, post-high school education, or whatever you call this condition.

Ignorance is bliss. Intellect is dangerous. It is supposed to be that way. Anything and everything is subject to criticism, critical review. Ideas, plans, institutions and whole civilizations are vulnerable. Stable beliefs are at some risk. Confusion is a healthy symptom of thought.

Sorry to be the one to tell you this, but the political system we operate on was founded by intellectuals. Those educated rebels took on every foreseeable issue, and met it head on with new ideas or new applications of usable old ideas.

It is not accurate to say that most American people are anti-intellectual. I don't know most of them. It seems a probable guess that there are, at any minute, more people watching million year old reruns of the Three Stooges than there are people listening to Laurie Anderson.

It worries me that there are so many intellectual peasants in America. The availability of information and ideas is so profoundly widespread, that there is no excuse. It is alright to be an economic peasant. Until we melt down the military golden calf, there is unlikely to be enough money around to do everything. Even then, of course, there will not be too much, just more for better uses.

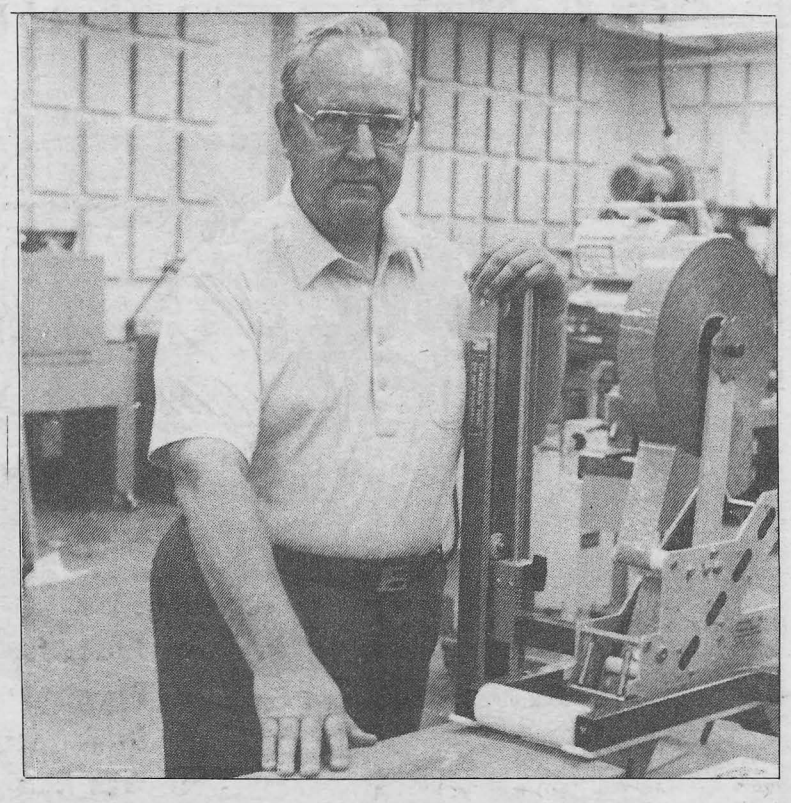
Spotlight/ Ed Rzepecki

Subject: A close look at Stout's Packaging and how it relates to the industry

by Paul Wydeven



Ed Rzepecki

Ed Rzepecki, a native of Chicago, Illinois, started instructing packaging classes at UW-Stout three and a half years ago after taking an early retirement from 3M, where he worked for 36 years.

Mr. Rzepecki graduated from the Univerl engineering. Mr. Rzepecki also served three years in the U.S. Army during World War II, before accepting the job at 3M.

STOUTONIA: WHAT BROUGHT YOU HERE TO STOUT?

Two months into my retirement from 3M, I was reading an employee newspaper. I spotted an article which mentioned that other retired 3M employees were helping with certain projects at Stout.

This article asked if any other retired 3M employees would be interested in this type of work. I immediately called the number in the article, which was the number of the Stout Packaging Department.

STOUTONIA: WHAT ARE YOUR GOALS AS A TEACHER HERE AT STOUT?

Having worked out in the actual business world for 36 years, I hope to pass along experience not taught in any text books. I think it is a waste if someone like myself retires and is not able to use their experience and somehow give it to the next generation of students about to enter the same industry.

I am fortunate to be able to pass along my experience, it is a shame more retired people cannot do the same. I believe this type of learning is supplemental to what students learn in text books. I hope to help in the transition from academics to working in the industry.

STOUTONIA: WHAT HAS BEEN YOUR LARGEST ACCOMPLISHMENT SINCE COMING TO STOUT?

I teach two classes in packaging, packaging fundamentals and packaging systems. In the packaging fundamentals class I made a class notebook, so students would not have to spend the entire class writing down notes. Now the students can listen to a lecture, look at samples, and answer questions without getting frustrated.

As for the packaging systems class, I have started a similar type of notebook, but will not be able to finish it until an outline is made for the new packaging distribution class. The new class will cover some of the same topics, and it makes no sense to cover these topics in both classes.

STOUTONIA: DO YOU FEEL THE EQUIPMENT HERE IN THE PACKAGING LAB IS CURRENT WITH INDUSTRY?

Yes, the recent purchases and donations of packaging testing equipment have made us equivalent to most packaging industries. We have some equipment that these industries do not have,

Properly corrected

In response to your article on the SSA reallocation recommendation, I feel I was quoted out of context. I asked that the purpose of Amnesty International be restated as I feel the Senate was not clear on this point.

Catherine Reszka

Ed. note: Ms. Reszka was not quoted by The Stoutonia but paraphrased by Ali Vazirabadi, an active participant in that night's SSA meeting who was quoted by The Stoutonia.

Where is Wydeven?

Where has Paul Wydeven been living? I believe he may have his tight rope around his neck. The Mets, contrary to Paul the "baseball fan's" belief, do not share Shea Stadium with the N.Y. Yankees.

Yankee Stadium had a face lift a few years back that was so hyped — it's amazing that Paul missed it. Also, how did the Red Sox acquire experience in a stadium that they hadn't played in until the World Series started? I'm surprised he didn't call them the "New England Red Sox."

Goodwill appreciated

A group of students at South Hall via contact by Donna Rhodaback helped to make our Volunteer Recognition a special event. Every year volunteers are recognized for the time and energy they donate to aging programs in our county. This year the tables at our party were decorated with jack-o-lanterns, all with individual personalities and expressions...thanks to Donna and her crew. This goodwill gesture to the community helps to make for good relations between Menomonie and Stout.

Thanks, Lorna Gauthier, Director Dunn County Office on Aging

Farewell to a friend

In every situation there are two ways to look at it, with cold, bare facts or with a sense of warmth and compassion. In the case of Jay C. Pauly, there is only one way to look at it; and that is warmth and compassion. The people who knew Jay, commonly referred to as "Goose," would know this to be true.

Therefore, the article about the incident that took place was totally inappropriate and inaccurate in most cases. We, his classmates and friends, would like to set the story straight and let others know Jay as we did. That night, there was no bachelor party, he did not take his life because of a car accident as the article suggests and

Born again politics

Seeds of Change

"If a 'born again' person is ever elected into public office, it would be a mammoth encroachment of freedom of religion in this country. We are a great country because of separation of church and state."

The above quote from a letter to a national magazine is representative of an attitude that many Americans hold. Many people in this country hold the view that church is church and government is government and the two should never mix.

I see many people who proudly proclaim that they are "open minded." Yet they fail to look at Born Again Christians as valid candidates for public office. Christians are people of integrity. They are men and women of morals and values. They are exactly the type of people that can be trusted with serving America.

"Christianity does not remove you from the world and its problems, it makes you fit to live in it, triumphantly and usefully."

Charles Templeton

Christians have convictions and compassion that not only compel but enable them to altruistically serve in public office.

God and country have been yoked together since this country began. You don't have to look far to find evidence that this country was formed "One Nation under God." Also our dollar bill proudly states "In God We Trust." Do these indicate that God and government were meant to be separate?

I have heard more jokes about dishonest politicians than farmers' daughters. Yet, Christians are still discouraged from running for public office and told to leave the "real" world to the politicians.

Do you like to see people in office that are nothing more than the brunt of jokes. I ask, wouldn't you rather see someone in office that has integrity, morals, and strong family values?

I am so glad that the people of Abraham Lincoln's time wanted a man of integrity for president of the United States. They saw a man of character, morals and honesty. Abraham Lincoln was a "born again" Christian.

An Illinois clergyman asked Lincoln at one time, "Do you love Jesus?" Lincoln solemnly replied:

"When I went to Gettysburg and saw the graves of thousands of our soldiers, I then and there consecrated myself to Christ. Yes, I do love Jesus." (from Abraham Lincoln the Christian, William J. Johnson, 1976)

One day during the war a minister said in Lincoln's presence that "he hoped the Lord was on our side, to which Lincoln replied.

"I am not at all concerned about that, for I know that the Lord is always on the side of the right; but it is my constant anxiety and prayer that I and this nation should be on the Lord's side."

If this generation discourages men like Lincoln from getting involved in politics, the country as a whole can only suffer.

Tim Hopkins

Watts line

Cryptic Notes

As election day draws near we face the end of many dreams as we are immersed in reality. I especially appreciate candidates who run for election despite the fact that all the people in the know say they haven't a chance.

George Watts, a good friend recently lost his attempt at being the Republican nominee for Wisconsin's gubernatorial campaign. "I cannct understand what gave him the idea he could win," acquaintances said laughing at Watt's candidacy. "The campaign had to be awfully expensive for his family," was another common reaction.

George Watts has a message to pass on and the signal remains strong despite his loss in the September primary. The Milwaukee Journal partially attributed Governor Tony Earl's shift to supporting the 21 year-old drinking age to my friend's commitment to the new drinking law.

If he had never entered the gubernatorial campaign three years ago, his impact would have been severely limited. I do not want to endorse his candidacy or say I disagreed with it. I merely want to compare him to a political version of R. P. Mc Murphy in One flew over the cuckoo's nest.

Just as McMurphy said after failing to rip out the control board in his mental ward, my friend can say after losing this year's race, "I tried God damn it, I tried." Too many people who have a lot to offer America never do try because they have to fight America's entrenched political traditions while failing to see the possible rewards from their efforts.

I still suffer derisive comments from my friends who remember the time and effort I put into John Anderson's 1980 presidential campaign. Given the chance, I would work for him again because he offered valid alternatives to deficit spending and all he needed was a more effective way to get his message across to the voters.

America needs political R.P. McMurphy's as large it can get them. Many successful business people never enter politics because they have no hope for receiving the financial rewards they receive in the business world.

Others are discouraged from entering the political fray because the public advises them not to enter a battle which cannot be won. The popular saying I hear buzzing around the halls these days is, "It does not matter who is right."

I enjoy listening to politicians outlining their platforms because each platform offers a point of departure for political dialogue from which we might all learn.

The fewer the platforms, the less dialogue we have and we end up voting for politicians who do not begin to offer practical solutions to our problems since they have not had to encounter a challenging variety of opponents. Next Tuesday, I will be off to vote for someone who may be a loser after the votes are counted but did his task to make the system a winner and industry has equipment we do not have.

The new equipment allows us to do testing for companies which do not have or can not afford the equipment. This in turn give us exposure to packaging businesses and a chance to show our capabilities as a leading packaging school.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN BUSINESSES AND THE STOUT PACKAGING DEPARTMENT?

The relationship is excellent. Many businesses want students to know how to use packaging equipment, so they will often donate the equipment or offer it to the university at a low discount price.

The packaging department has bought only a small amount of packaging materials in the past couple of years because businesses have donated most materials.

STOUTONIA: HOW GOOD IS YOUR RELATIONSHIP WITH INDUSTRY AS AN INSTRUCTOR HERE AND AS AN EMPLOYEE THERE IN INDUSTRY?

It is just as good as when I left three and a half years ago. We needed a copy and transparency machine, so I called one of my former colleagues and asked what he could do for us. He sent a machine better than the one I asked for.

STOUTONIA: WHAT DO YOU HOPE TO ACCOMPLISH WHILE YOU ARE HERE AT STOUT?

I really hope to pass along some of my experience in the industry and to make a smoother transition for students going from college to industry.

Another thing I would like to do is to make sure students are in the right field of study. I try to explain what happens in industry and give them a chance to decide before they graduate.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS THE JOB OUTLOOK FOR STUDENTS IN THE PACKAGING INDUSTRY?

The outlook is very good. I am convinced that industries see the need for control in packaging designs, leading to cost reductions. Packaging is a significant cost paid by the consumer, and changes in packaging concepts will lead to changes in overall profits.

furthermore, he was more than just a person active in sports.

For Jay was our friend, classmate and one of the most sensitive and caring persons' whom God put on this earth, and he will always be remembered for these qualities. We realize what happened and feel a great sense of sorrow, but for Jay we must go on. Go on remembering and helping others to remember all the times we shared with Jay. For in this case, we will never know all of the answers to all our questions, but we cannot dwell on the cold, bare facts as Tracy chose to do.

It's truly a shame that she never got the chance to know Jay as the rest of us did. For then maybe she too would feel the void, created by our loss of Jay, that must be filled with happy memories and moments that we shared with him and now must share with each other to keep his memory alive in the hearts and minds of all who truly cared and always will care. May God bless Jay and help us to understand.

Heaven knows some of you, dear readers, are going to have your veins pop because you think another leftist liberal columnist is disparaging the land of the free and the home of the brave. Don't let me stop you. However:

I enjoy living here in this country. And I would probably get violent if some dreaded enemy landed at Duluth and threatened our way of life.

Unfortunately, I have met the enemy, to paraphrase Pogo, and he is us. Thermonuclear warfare, deadly chemical pollution, tattered social fabric, unwise foreign policy, decrepit education and cultural intolerance are the enemies as far as I can see. These problems are actually people with these faults. I'm not prescribing death as a cure. Care is the cure.

I am not sure which class here at Condition Stout is supposed to teach us to think, i.e. question. Maybe it doesn't fall into any one class or curriculum. Maybe it should be daily practice, and discreetly slipped into every class.

Questioning is not directly equivalent to hating, being angry, humorless, disgruntled or even sex-starved. Some very well-balanced, happy people have highly questioning minds. They sleep well, enjoy their food, love children and puppies and so on. Some, surprisingly are even quite conservative on the ideological scale.

The most intellectual person I've met so far used to say, "Hell is having to do stupid things."

It is not mutually contradictory to be physically strong, moderately emotional, and culturally refined, intellectually fit and integrated. It sounds ideal.

Greenwood Players bring folk tales to life

by Barbara Klimek

Plays for children and the young at heart; The Greenwood Players an original children's theater group utilizes the audience's imagination to bring folk tales to life.

Organized in 1981, the Menomonie based Greenwood Players are a non-profit organization specializing in children's drama. They concentrate on bringing fun, imagination, adventure, and involvement through theater to the community.

The Players give productions based on folk material. Then they use the technique of improvisation with a scenario, where no scripts are used. They also direct classroom workshops that are set up to teach third and fourth grade children how to create and perform magical imprompt skits and stories. A chance to stretch the child's imagination through the "Not For Sitting Still Theater."

Mary Riordan, Academic Skills instructor here at Stout and a member of the Greenwood Players stated, "We respect children and enjoy working with them. We encourage participation from each child. It builds and strengthens the childs imagination. I feel theater and the workshops offer a lot to a child and an adult as well."

The Greenwood Players are low tech, they work strictly with one's imagination. The characters change of voice and body movements make the stories seem real. For staging use mime, music, and minimal props or scenery. The costumes may consist of one special object that can give the character an identity.

All full length productions are presented at the Mabel Tainter Theater. "Not For Sitting Still Theater" is the classroom production, held at libraries and schools in the community.

Marion Lang, the Player's artistic director, stated, "It is important to me to see people use the Mabel Tainter Theater, and its Outreach classroom for children and adults."

She continued, "Menomonie is a very supportive community for the creative arts. Theater offers a special gift of learning in a creative form, especially within the Mabel Tainter. It is more then just a historical site, its a place for everyone to develop their creative talents."

> "We respect children and enjoy working with them
> —Mary Riordan"

Lang is a resident of Menomonie, for the past 15 years. Lang has 13 years of directing experience with a Master of Arts in Theater, and a graduate of Indiana University. She taught courses in improvised drama to children and teachers, as well as directed musicals and serious plays, and administered arts organizations.

There are several Stout faculty members who are part of the Greenwood Players Company. Dan Riordan, Warren Lang, Pinckney Hall, Mary Riordan, Bill O'Neill, and Susan Hall. Others members of the community involved with the Players are Kevin Knaus a graduate of Stout and Kris Radle.

The group has performed for the Wisconsin Theater Association and the American Theater Association Convention in New York. Their work is funded by the National Endowment for the Arts, and First

Hunt's dedication and enthusiasm enhance graphic design program

by Jean-Marie Dauplaise

A familiar face to any art student, Sue Hunt is an omnipresent member of the art faculty here at Stout. Entering her ninth year of teaching here, Hunt has been instrumental in the expansion of the graphic design program at Stout.

Hunt received her bachelor of arts degree in design and her master's degree in jewelry and silversmithing from Indiana University at Bloomington.

Before the graphic design program began, Hunt taught art metals for two years. She then taught Introduction to Graphic Design and has been teaching Graphic Design and related courses such as Signage and Exhibition and Product and Package Design since that time.

When discussing her position as a faculty member here, her dedication and enthusiasm towards the program is evident. She is determined to see that the graphic design program is the best that it can be.

As the chairperson of the Educational Committee for University and College Design Association, Hunt is dealing nationally with other design oriented institutions to establish a national dialogue in professional standards for design education.

By establishing such a dialogue Hunt says, "We are trying to teach in what is the most successful way." She believes it is the role of schools to meet students' needs to their satisfaction and to the satisfaction of their future employers. Obviously, she is an ambitious lady with ambitious goals.

> "I judge my success on the success of my students
> —Sue Hunt"

Hunt's relentless dedication to excellence is apparent in her teaching. "One of the biggest complaints I hear is that people have to work too hard." Hunt believes excellence should be sought in everything her students do. By demanding a professional level of work from her students she hopes to prepare them for the high level of competitiveness in the graphic design field.

"Students need to realize that there are thousands of students getting degrees in graphic design all over the nation; that they are competing not with each other, but with those people," says Hunt.

Hunt cited that there is a good track record of Stout graduates finding work in the graphic design field. Those finding the best jobs were those who had worked the hardest. "Portfolio quality reflects directly on job quality."

A portfolio is a compilation of a design student's work presented in a professional format for prospective employers. A design student's portfolio is then a summation of their educational experience in the design field and directly reflects the quality of that learning experience.

By demanding high quality work from her students, Hunt hopes that they will be well prepared for the stiff competition which lies ahead. "Students I hear from appreciate it and see it as training," says Hunt, "It's important for students to know it's a competitive field; to seek perfection in what they do."

Hunt's dedication to the graphic design program and the pride which she takes in her teaching is best summarized in her own words, "I judge my success as a teacher on the success of my students."

West's artwork deals with reality, uses simple objects symbolically

by Karen M. Heagle

Simple objects with serious meanings is one way to briefly describe the subjects of artist Greg West's paintings and drawings. West presented slides and discussion of his work before a gathering of students and faculty at in the Applied Arts building last Wednesday evening.

West believes his works deal with reality rather than a two dimensional, flat surface. All of West's work is meticulously crafted to such life likeness, one wonders if they are viewing a photograph.

He confides that this work is not photo realistic. To West a photograph is just a moment stopped. His paintings have a greater suggestion of life, or as he refers to it, reality.

West spends a great deal of time developing the almost perfect surfaces of his paintings and drawings. Most of his compositions deal with small room corners and floors with recognizable objects like tables, chairs, and stools. West commented, "The viewer fills it up with what they see in the room. They are like an extension of your own personality."

His subject matter represents emotions, human interactions, and even political issues utilizing fruit and scavenged objects. In an attempt to get away from strictly relying on the human figure to represent a person West's icon for the female form is a pear and the male form is a shuttle cock.

> "These subjects are reflections of my inhibitions
> —Greg West"

The symbolism does not end with simply sexual identities, he also portrays human conditions. For example he represented fertility with the watermelon. One painting titled "The Fertility Rights of Summer," was somewhat of a homage to several of his friends who were pregnant that summer. The painting features a large watermelon setting on a table.

In another painting he uses bananas to symbolize Central America, and a can of Dole peaches to suggest the political controversies reportedly stirred up in that part of the world by the Dole company. Issues in Central America are close to West not only in that he is a resident of Arizona, but his wife is from Honduras.

In an effort to explain his use of symbolic objects West said, "These subjects are reflections of my inhibitions."

For every painting there was a story to be told. Stories about the search for an object. Once West was almost kicked out of a grocery store searching for the perfect pear to use for his next piece.

West graduated from Stout in 1980, and wanted to go to a graduate school that had an environment completely different from the midwest. He quite randomly chose Arizona State where he spent much time as a teaching assistant. Currently he is making a living as an artist in that area. He sells a good deal of his work, and he is now working with a gallery in hopes of moving beyond the state of Arizona.

West has found that there is an excellent market for selling work in Arizona. He attributes this to the lack of many other forms of the arts and cultural entertainment in that area.

Greg West, a graduate from Stout's Studio Art program, talked about his work and his life as an artist to interested students and faculty last Wednesday night.

Banu Gibson to appear at Mabel Tainter Theater

by S.J. Lomneas

Banu Gibson and her New Orleans Hot Jazz Orchestra promise a memorable performance featuring their "razzmatazz jazz" sound next Monday at Mabel Tainter Theater. The 8 p.m. show, Nov. 3 stars Banu Gibson, "a young but already legendary singer," according to the Los Angeles Times."

Musical reviewer David Cuthbert calls Banu Gibson "a bright, bouncy, buoyant entertainer." Gibson provides her audience with a wide range of music along the pop scale.

Whether growling out "Hard-Hearted Hannah," playfully kidding her audience with a nostalgic novelty tune a la Louis Armstrong, or socking across a big finish such as "Cabaret," she is an attractive singer who knows how to sell a song while having a ball performing.

The New Orleans Hot Jazz Orchestra consists of superb jazz performers all natives of New Orleans. Lead trumpeter Charles Fardella is known for his ability to hold a note beyond reasonable expectations without faltering in the least.

Steve Yocum's gruff trombone ground bass is performed both in muted and open style with Fardella's trumpeting, as they have learned to compliment each other's style.

Talented young pianist, David Boeddinghaus makes the most of his solo outings whether he is enchanting the audience with Fats Waller — like renditions or treating them to a taste of the Jelly Roll Morton style.

On her list of latest accomplishments, Gibson has hosted the PBS special "Dixieland Jazz from New Orleans," and is the vocalist for the popular PBS series "The Great Chefs of New Orleans." She was recently nominated for the Grammy award as best jazz vocalist for 1986.

> "...a bright, bouncy, bouyant, entertainer
> —David Cuthbert"

Some of her popular songs include "Let's Misbehave," "Is You is, or is You Ain't My Baby," "It Don't Mean a Thing if it Ain't Got That Swing."

If you can help it, do not miss this show at Mabel Tainter Theater. Word is, reserve your tickets early to avoid being left empty handed after the sellout. Tickets are $7.50 in advance. For information and/or tickets write or call the Mabel Tainter Memorial Theater, 205 Main St., P.O. Box 250, Menomonie, WI. 54751 or call 235-9726.

Spontaneous Combustion

Possessed

James "Unk" Falkofske

I'm a pretty mellow guy. It actually takes quite a bit of flack to really piss me off. Last week, though, someone hit on one of my soft points. I was asked my opinion on the "evils of rock and roll music."

My opinion? My opinion! That was the wrong way to end a perfectly respectable conversation. Rock and roll is no more dangerous than my mother (and I happen to love her, in case you're wondering).

I am sick and tired hearing that rock and roll turns people toward Satan, that rock corrupts youth, and that rock harbors violence. Grow up! Watch some T.V., read a book, go to a movie. Violence and sex are a part of life.

Television happens to be my favorite example. Why can actors and actresses be having passionate affairs on the "boob" tube without corrupting children, while a suggestive lyric here must be cut short of being banned in order to protect their innocence.

The whole idea of rating records pisses me off too. I am a songwriter, and if I release an album, who decides whether my lyrics are suggestive or not? If someone (other than myself) finds they are, that someone gets to place a great big seal on the album stating "This album contains sexually explicit material." Kid's love this kind of stuff, taboo and all. You've told them not to buy it, so they will.

The funny thing happens to be that kids in America do not listen to lyrics. In fact, according to a study by the Fullerton University in California, few youth can even state what their favorite songs are about. Considering how some popular songs are sung, I guess this is easy to understand.

I think the whole idea of evil in rock and roll music came with the invention of music videos. In the videos, even non-suggestive lyrics take on a new meaning. Likeable lyrics become lewd, and the wholesome becomes horrid.

But then, the videos usually have little or nothing to do with the songs in the first place (try some night to listen to the stereo with MTV silent: see what I mean). The already crumbling music industry faces even more hardship with possible record ratings.

Finally, the people who think that I have nothing better to do than sit by my turntable all day long, playing my records backwards. That has always been my big ambition in life! For everyone's information, my classes prevent me from doing this anymore.

When I tried playing records backwards, I couldn't hear any of the "secret messages" unless I was prompted. Often, I couldn't hear anything at all. Only the repeated prompting of both words and music gave me any clue to what I was supposed to be looking for. Mindwashing. The classic video presentation, "Rock and Roll, A Search For God" is a perfect example of such mindwashing.

Just for fun, I played some of my dad's old country records backwards. Roger Miller took on new meaning, as well as Johnny Cash and Loretta Lynn. I discovered that if you are so obsessed with hearing something, you will! Obsession such as this sounds like a personal problem to me.

Maybe I'm not a part of the new morality. I guess the whole object is to eliminate sex altogether. Just think, without sex there would be no people. Without people, there would be no conflicts. Without conflicts, all of our problems would be solved.

The Phones plan to make musical connection

CMP presents the Phones, shown above, and the Twistin' Egyptians at the Great Hall, Wednesday, November 5 at 8:30 p.m. They are sure to bring some relief to Stout's live music fans. Admission is free with a Stout student I.D.

by Eric Hampton

"They are the best band in the world right now, in my opinion." Well, maybe. I am not quite sure how serious Contemporary Music Productions chairman Brett Jagodzinski was when he described the Twin Cities' Phones, soon to perform here at UW-Stout. But for the long-suffering fans of original live music here at Stout, he may well have not been far from the truth. In the Phones, we at last have a band that is truly committed to what they are doing.

... a band that is truly committed to what they are doing

The Phones have been around since about 1980. At that time, they consisted only of a saxophone player, rhythm guitarist and lead vocalist Jeff Cerise, current lead guitarist/vocalist Jim Riley and drummer Brad Mattson. In fact, it was only in October, after the release of the band's current six song EP "Stick Man" that bassist/vocalist Bob Hurstein was added in an effort to not only fill out the group's sound, but to free Cerise and Riley to undertake more challenging musical duties, as well.

The Phones have played all across the United States, but concede that their stongest market remains in the midwest, particularly their native Twin Cities. The group also enjoys notoriety in Kansas City, Omaha and Iowa, according to their agent, Don Ness. The group's stage show has been noted for its intensity and high energy level, particularly primary vocalist Cerise, who Ness describes as "a fantastic front man."

All that is not to say that the band suffers in the transition from stage to vinyl. "Stick Man," with its more straightforward rock approach (as opposed to the arty experimentalism of "Changing Minds" and "Blind Impulse," the group's two LP's on Twin Tone Records) is the band's most accessable disk to date.

Self-produced, the LP is consistently entertaining, from the nifty hard pop of "Have Luv Will Travel" to the agonized soul-searching of "Take Your Time. "Stick Man," on the band's own Pendulum Records, has been in stores for about four months, following its record release party at First Avenue in Minneapolis (with Kansas City's hot Rainmakers as their opening act). It is a record with almost certain appeal for fans of alternative music.

The Phones will be playing in the Great Hall on November 5 at 8:30 p.m. and admission is free with a student I. D.

Campus Cuisine

No more tuna !

Denise Cain

I could not wait to go home this past weekend. I fasted all week knowing I would consume megacalories of farm food. The reason I had to go home was simple. My dad needed me to chisel plow. Basically, any moron can do this farming task. Perhaps this is why my dad ask me to come home instead of my brothers enrolled in college.

I had not been home since mid-August so I was more than willing to help out with the farm work; while catching up on my eating. I also thought it would be a good idea to spend some "quality family time" with my parents Bill and Peg. (It keeps the checks coming.)

I left the streets of Menomonie Thursday morning, hungry, heading for Murdock. I went straight to the field and began the monotonous job of plowing. The only thing that kept me going was the wonderful supper that would be waiting for me back in our kitchen.

I drove the tractor into the yard and ran to the kitchen. There waiting for me was a grilled cheese sandwich, made by Kraft and Wonderbread. A treat I rarely experience at college. It could only get better.

Friday I was up at the crack of dawn plowing once again. By noon I was starving. I saw my mom driving our faithful Ford pick-up down the gravel road. Yes it was dinner! "This is going to be fantastic" I told my growling stomach.

My mom handed me my plate. It was a tuna fish sandwich. My lip curled. Yet another masterpiece Peg had created. She said "I knew you liked tuna." I said to myself, "yes, and fortunately I get to eat it damn near every day."

I really cannot pick on my mom. She had to work all weekend and she did include dill pickles and crisp celery with my tuna sandwich. My problem is that I anticipated doing this week's column on the wonderful foods that my mom cooked for me. And as I look back on this weekend, I figure we all know, too well, how to prepare a can of tuna or a grilled cheese sandwich.

The first recipe is one that you just have to get a feel for how it should taste. You can add and delete some items, but always stay with the basics.

Tuna Hotdish

hotdish noodles
1 can cream of mushroom soup half & half, or milk cheese for flavor
1 can tuna

Boil the noodles and drain. Add the rest of the ingredients and stir. The small amount of half and half is used just to help distribute the mixture. Bake in a 350-degree oven for about 30 minutes. Do not bake more than 45 minutes or your hotdish will get mushy.

Tim Endres and Brian Statz from third Chinnock came to my rescue with yet another tuna recipe. Tim first came across this recipe at the Waunakee football banquet. Brian said that his grandma has been making it for years, and it is a family favorite at Thanksgiving. It can be served as a main course or as a dessert.

Tuna Chiffon Dessert

2 tsp. unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup sugar, divided few grains salt
4 Tbsp. cocoa
4 eggs, separated
1 & 1/2 cups milk
1 tsp. vanilla
whipped cream for topping

Mix gelatin, 1/4 cup sugar, salt and cocoa in top of double boiler. Beat egg yolks and milk together, add to gelatin. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until the gelatin is dispersed, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla. Chill to unbeaten egg white consistency in a cold water bath.

Beat egg whites until soft peak stage. Gradually add 1/4 cup sugar and continue beating to stiff peak stage. Fold chocolate gelatin mixture into egg whites. Place in individual molds or custard cups and chill until firm. Serve with whipped cream.

I made my mom feel really bad about her lack of enthusiasm in the kitchen. She apologized and assured me that we will not be having tuna patties instead of turkey at Thanksgiving. Good ol' mom, she always comes through with a funny.

Entries are open with a cost of $1 per person in advance and $2 per person the day of the race. Prizes awarded will include: $40 for first place, $20 for second place and $10 for third place. For more information call Rich at 235-1830 or Kevin at 232-3057.

Harvest Potluck and Blues

The Menomonie Food Co-op will be sponsoring "Harvest Potluck and an Afternoon of Blues" on Sunday, Nov. 2. The potluck dinner will begin at 1:30 p.m. (bring a dish to pass) with entertainment beginning at 3 p.m. Entertainment will include music by The Amazing Kujawa Brothers, Tracy Lea Landis of the Curbfeelers and special guest, Jonathan Graham.

"Harvest Potluck and an Afternoon of Blues" will be held at the Segner/Hogan residence, 2107 4th Street East. For more information call 235-9743.

Red Hot

Banu Gibson and the New Orleans Hot Jazz Orchestra will be performing at the Mabel Tainter Theater Monday, Nov. 3 at 8 p.m.

Studying with many famous jazz bands, such as the Dukes of Dixieland, Gibson has become well established. She has been nominated for two Grammy Awards for Best Jazz Vocals and been the headline band for many jazz festivals, such as the Sacramento Jazz Festival.

Tickets for the performance are $7.50 in advance and $9 at the door. For more information please contact the Mabel Tainter Theater at 235-9726.

Marionette Magic

"Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," a tale from the Arabian Night Stories, will be performed at the Mabel Tainter Theater on Nov. 7 at 7:30 p.m. Performed by the National Marionette Theater, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" portrays the Middle East's enchantment of genies, palaces and magic through the use of puppets.

Sponsored in part by the Wisconsin Arts Board with funds from the State of Wisconsin and the National Endowment for the Arts, "Aladdin" tickets are only $2.50 for children and $4.75 for adults. For more information contact the Mabel Tainter Theater at 235-9726.

Don't Forget

Don't Forget the "World's Worst Film Festival" to be held this Friday, Oct. 31, at 8:30 in the Great Hall. Movies shown will include: "They Saved Hitler's Brain," "The Terror of Tiny Town," "Plan Nine from Outer Space" and "The Attack of the Mushroom People."

Cost is $2 at the door with 50 cent refunds for each movie suffered through. Those who last through all four movies will receive a special surprise.

Bank and Trust, Menomonie.

The Greenwood Players were funded to offer 30 classroom workshops, and they hope to receive additional support for 50 plus workshops. The Joyce Foundation, Chicago based, wanted to offer cultural experiences to rural children. The grant gave support to bring creative dramatics to children and adults in West Central Wisconsin. The Wisconsin Arts Board is responsible for the support and development of the arts in Wisconsin.

"Impromptu, to a child is the spirit of make believe. Children can bring their fantasies to life with the use of imagination. Adults want to believe and fantasize as well," Lang said. "I believe that our form of theater and workshops can bring enriching experiences to the young and old."

The Players have set nine performance dates for their winter production. "Salt or The Amazing Adventures of Ivan the Ninny," based on the Russian folk tale, "Salt." Performances for school children and for the general public are Dec. 5 at 7 p.m. and Dec. 6 at 1 p.m. Call the Mabel Tainter Theater for more information and ticket reservations, 235-9726. For more detailed information concerning the Outreach Program, contact Marion Lang, 235-5686.

"I love doing theater especially imprompt, because it is unique, using very little props and costumes, not reading off a script. Each performance is different, the meaning is different. I learn something new each time I perform, and its amazing what one can learn from a child through imagination." stated Riordan.

Lang stated, "I really encourage anyone to come to our shows, with or without accompanying a child, if you enjoy seeing theater where mime and the imagination take over realism."

Netters set record with fourth-place finish

by Paul Emerson

The UW-Stout women's tennis team competed in the WWIAC Tennis Tournament Championships over the past weekend in La Crosse. The Lady Devils were once again led by Freshman Susie Blietz, and used a strong overall performance in collecting 24 points and a 4th place finish. The 24 points is the highest ever for the women, according to Coach Bob Smith.

Coach Smith was very pleased with the netters' performance. "I rank placing fourth in the WWIAC this year as one of the highlights in my coaching career." Smith also said, "We only had one seeded player in the tournament, yet we played seeds 13 times in the course of the tournament."

A team receives 7 points for first place finishes (singles or doubles), 5 points for second place and so on down to one point for 6th place.

When points are added up, team standings are determined and 9 points are given for first place, 8 points for second, etc. (There are 9 teams, so last place gets 1 point.)

This point system is also used in dual match record standings. The team with the best dual match record at the end of the regular season is awarded 9 points, second place gets 8 points and so on down to ninth place (1 point). The overall conference results are then determined by adding up the tournament and the dual match points won by a team, and an overall conference champion is determined.

UW-Eau Claire took the tournament team championship with 47 points. This, combined with their 2nd place dual match record, gives them the overall 1986 conference title. UW-Whitewater was the runner-up with 38 points, nipping UW-La Crosse who took third with 37 points. Stout took 4th place, followed by UW-Stevens Point in 5th with 22 points, UW-Platteville in 6th (11 points), UW-Oshkosh in 7th (9 points), UW-Green Bay in 8th (8 points), and UW-River Falls last (2 points).

In the overall conference standings, after champion Eau Claire (17 points), runner-up went to La Crosse, the dual meet champion, with 16 points. Third place went to Whitewater (3rd in duals), 15 points; Stout (5th in duals) tied with Stevens Point (4th in duals) with 11 points. Oshkosh (6th in duals) took 6th overall with 7 points, followed by Platteville, River Falls, and Green Bay, respectively.

> "This loss stunned the La Crosse coach —Coach Smith"

In individual play, each of the 9 flights (6 singles, 3 doubles) had 3 seeds each. Freshman Susie Blietz was Stout's lone seed. She was seeded number two in her number three singles flight.

Blietz led the Blue Devils in tournament play by advancing all the way to the championship final before finally being defeated. Her second place is the highest finish ever by a Stout women's player, according to Coach Smith.

Blietz, an Edina, Minn. native, won her first round match against a very tough opponent, beating Mary Miller of Whitewater in straight sets, 6-2, 7-6. Her next victim was Gylund of Platteville, whom she easily defeated, 6-1, 6-4 in the second round. Then in the championship final, she faultered in losing a tough match to Jacobson of La Crosse, 3-6, 4-6.

In the first flight, Junior Mary Malloy of Menasha, Wis., placed sixth (1 point). After winning a preliminary round match, Malloy then lost to Bartnicki of Whitewater, 3-6, 0-6. Bartnicki, seeded third, went on to win the first flight championship.

Sophomore Karen Blau, from Waukanee, Wis., took fourth place (3 points). Blau defeated her first-round opponent, 6-3, 6-3, but then lost her second-round match to eventual fourth flight champion and top-seeded Christy Gilbertson of Eau Claire, 0-6, 2-6. Then in the third place match, she lost to second-seeded Houser of La Crosse, 2-6, 0-6.

Coach Smith stated, "Karen didn't make the team last year, and she never played high school tennis. Her improvement this year has been remarkable."

In the second flight Senior Jean Feyen, a Menomonie, Wis. native, lost both of her matches and failed to place in her flight.

Tara Stahel, a sophomore from New Brighton, Minn., also gave an impressive showing by placing third (4 points) in the fifth flight. Stahel defeated third-seeded Sandiford of Stevens Point, 6-3, 6-2, for the third place trophy.

Freshman Jill Peters, from Brookfield, Wis., also took third place, playing in the sixth flight. Peters upset third-seeded Seichter of La Crosse, 7-5, 6-1, in the first round, and battled top-seeded Sullivan of Whitewater in the second, before dropping that match, 4-6, 3-6. She then bounced back to take the third place trophy, but needed three sets to do it, beating Christianson of Green Bay, 6-0, 1-6, 6-3.

In doubles action Stout's Freshmen duo of Susie Blietz and Jill Peters lost both of their matches and failed to place in the competitive first flight.

In the second flight, Mary Malloy and Jean Feyen combined to take third place (4 points). In the first round they defeated Whitewater's Miller and Sullivan, seeded third, in a three-set thriller, 7-5, 5-7, 6-4. They then lost to the top-seeded tandem of Halvorson and Houser of La Crosse in the second round, 3-6, 2-6, before beating Metzler and Entringer of Stevens Point, 6-3, 6-1, for third place.

Sophomores Tara Stahel and Karen Blau teamed up in the third flight to take fourth place (3 points). In their first-round match against second-seeded Komula and Jacobson of La Crosse, they pulled off an upset victory in three sets, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. "This loss stunned the La Crosse coach and eventually cost them the tournament and conference championships," noted Coach Smith.

An elated Coach Smith summed up his feelings on the tournament and the season by stating, "This was truly an outstanding performance for our women. They have worked hard all season." He then added, "The future looks bright for Stout in women's tennis."

Intramurals provide enjoyment, stress relief

by Jenna Sue Martin

Intramural sports are an important part of campus life. They give us an alternative to the ever-present option of spending all of your free time in the bars.

What would Stout life be without intramurals? Why are they important? For those of us who are not skilled enough or do not have the time to devote to a varsity sport, this is the answer.

What better way to release tension, meet people, enjoy our favorite sports, and stay in shape at the same time? The benefits are many.

Students involved in intramurals find them important for different reasons. "Those who do not have the skills to participate in varsity have the opportunity to play the sports they like."

Another feels they are important because, "I do not feel as pressured in intramurals and find it easier to do my best. I do not have the fear of being a permanent bench warmer hanging over my head."

One student joined intramurals, "so you do not have to drink beer all of the time." He added that he joins basketball every year so, "The Whiskey Rebels can embarrass the shit out of the meek competition."

Participating in a physical activity can release the tensions brought upon us by the demands of college life. Instead of wasting away your time by sitting in front of the television, why not spend your free nights exercising your stress away?

We have all felt like giving up at times. The pressures of campus life get to us and we have the desire to say, "Forget it, I give up!" Would it not feel good to just work all that extra energy off and do something good for ourselves for once?

Many of us take out our frustrations by filling our bodies with excess food, alcohol or taking it out on others. People involved in intramurals have the opportunity to get release from tensions out on the field or the courts.

After a workout one feels refreshed. We are so involved in the sport that for awhile all of our worries are pushed back in our mind. We feel a sense of achievement.

When joining an intramural activity we have the opportunity to make up our own team. We can set our own practices. This way it does not conflict as much with our schedule.

Competition is also involved in intramurals. Some of us become stressed by the academic competition surrounding us. Maybe we excel more in sports. The sense of accomplishment we get from our sport can actually help us feel better about ourselves academically. Maybe we are not so bad.

Intramural sports are necessary to maintain a balance between the physical and mental benefits in life. Releasing the tensions can actually improve our study habits.

As one student replies, "Intramurals are a way of getting involved, meeting people, releasing stress. It is just a nice break from the rigors of studying."

So for those of us looking for a way to get away from it all without going to the bars every night, if you are interested in meeting people and benefiting your body at the same time, think about it.

Some may be just looking for an alternative way to have fun. Intramurals may be the perfect solution. Try it, what have we got to lose? Think of what you can gain.

Mistakes sink gridders in 36-21 loss

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devils turned the ball over five times in the first half and never quite recovered in a 36-21 loss to UW-Platteville this past Saturday.

The opening drive of most football games sets the basic tone for the remainder of the game. This week the opening drive for the Blue Devils ended with a mistake and, as Head Coach Rich Lawrence said, "In the first half we had five turnovers and you don't win the game on turnovers and mistakes."

The game began on Stout's 25-yard line with the Blue Devil offense taking the field first. Four plays later a handoff was fumbled on the 39-yard line and recovered by Platteville. From there it was a matter of six plays before Platteville went in for the touchdown on a run of three yards by Ringleberg. The point after by Rundle was good, giving Platteville a 7-0 lead.

The next time Platteville had the ball, their drive began on their own 36-yard line after a Stout punt. On the very first play Jacobs dropped back and hit Scherkenbach on a 42-yard pass completion. This gave Platteville the ball at Stout's 22-yard line. Platteville scored six plays later on a quarterback sneak by Jacobs, giving them the lead of 14-0.

Stout's offense began their next drive at their own six-yard line. They tried to move the ball up field but another turnover ended the drive. This time it was an interception of quarterback Bob Lindberg — his first of four for the afternoon. This gave Platteville the ball at Stout's 17-yard line. Four plays later Jacobs rolled left and hit Scherkenbach for a ten-yard touchdown completion. The two-point conversion was no good, giving Platteville the lead of 20-0.

An exchange of series gave Platteville the ball at their own 35-yard line after another interception. From here Platteville marched all the way down to Stout's 14-yard line where they faced a fourth-and-four call. They went for it and the Blue Devil defense stopped them. Four plays later Stout was forced to punt, giving Platteville the ball at Stout's 45-yard line. The very first play of Platteville's drive was a 45-yard touchdown completion to Scherkenbach. The point after attempt was good, giving Platteville the lead of 27-0. An exchange of series and four turnovers helped end the remainder of the drives for the half.

This ended the half and gave Stout a chance to regroup and gain back some of that lost momentum. As Ron Wise stated, "It's a matter of coming out first quarter and playing right away because we keep getting behind in these games right away and it takes a lot of momentum out of us."

The second half opened with Stout's offense on the field trying to get something working. After an exchange of series, Platteville took over at their own 47-yard line. They marched with a ball control offense all the way to Stout's 25-yard line. The next play was a 25-yard touchdown pass to Flanagan. The point after attempt was blocked, giving Platteville the lead of 33-0. This ended the scoring for the third quarter.

A new quarter meant a new Stout or so as it appeared. With Tim Peterson at quarterback Stout showed some new life against both first- and second-stringers. Starting at Platteville's own 42-yard line, Peterson drove the team all the way in for the score. The drive-capper was a ten-yard touchdown pass to Mark Rothwell. The point after attempt was faked and run in. This made the score 33-8.

Platteville came marching right back with a drive that went all the way to Stout's nine-yard line. The Blue Devil defense finally stopped them there, forcing them to kick a field goal. The kick by Rundle was good, making the score 36-8. Stout didn't let up there and came right back and scored again. Starting at their own 25-yard line, Peterson did everything possible to give Stout a score. Runs of 10- and 15-yards and pass completions of

Boxing with flower pots

Paul Wydeven

Here we are folks, live at the Marion Bar. Now at ringside the Menomonie Boxing Association presents round one, about to begin somewhere soon.

Here at the Marion there is no shaking of hands or an opening bell. The fights usually start with an accidental bump and a spilling of a beer. Then some guy thinks that they are going to alter the world of boxing by knocking the crap out of another guy who can barely stand.

First there is an exchange of words, then the two start off by swinging at each other. They usually hit the wall behind their opponent or anybody near the match. Then the referees, commonly called bouncers, break up the fight by doing their best to manhandle the guys fighting and running them out the door.

In between rounds one and two, when the fighters are being forcefully removed from the premises, the other patrons of the bar will get involved. The bouncers seem to have control of the fighters, but one will break loose and try to get a couple of cheap shots in while the other guy is helplessly being held down.

When the guys are out of control, other patrons will try to help out by caging the disturbed persons or getting in the way of a wild punch. Here, if you enjoy boxing, you may even see some of the fighters' buddies join in for a tag-team match.

Round two begins once the two fighters are brought outside. The referees stand there telling them to quit or they will call the police. This is not always the case. Sometimes one of the guys fighting retaliates and hits the bouncer and then the heads fly.

Here, also, the tag team action occurs, because the fighter who is losing at the time shouts at the guy who is winning. This in turn pisses off the winner's buddy, and the buddy hits the loser too because he has to get his two cents in.

Even if the loser gets a decent chance to kick the crap out of the winner's buddy, the winner of the original fight will come to the aid of his buddy. Then the loser's buddies get the same idea and the fighting goes on until the Menomonie Police Department comes to actually stop the fight(s).

Not all fights happen at the Marion, however. Every bar I frequently patronize has these fights. Thus, the Menomonie Boxing Association. It is just when I was at the Marion, I was in the "front row."

Not all the boxing involves two people. Some guys afraid of getting hit themselves exercise their manlihood on inanimate objects such as street signs or the flower pots on Main Street.

As for myself, I would not be scared of anybody who could beat up a flower pot. This kind of guy is not what you call the man of steel. No, this type of guy would have a hard time fighting his way out of a wet paper bag.

The guys who like to punch it out in the bars are a bit scary, especially if you're not in the fight. This is because you could get hit by a wild punch or run over by an overexcited bouncer. This situation is going to cause some real legal problems for the bar owners when an innocent patron losses an eye and sues for big bucks.

So to wrap this up, let's disarm the Menomonie Boxing Association. If someone should accidentally bump into you and spill a little fermented beverage, don't hit him. Pull out out your .357 and blow his head off. This action will make your day and "prove" you are a real man.

Parade for Mets

The New York Mets were greeted by 1.2 million fans in a ticker tape parade 12 hours after they won the World Series in game seven over the Boston Red Sox. It was the biggest crowd to gather in New York since the Fourth of July.

Numbers retired

Bobby Jones and Fred Brown, both former NBA players, will have their numbers retired this year. The Philadelphia 76ers will retire number 24 worn by Jones, one of the best defensive players for the past eight seasons in the NBA. The Seattle Supersonics will retire number 32 worn by "Downtown" Freddie Brown, one of the most spectacular outside shooters in NBA history.

The Soviet Union Hockey team is making a tour of the United States. The Spartak team is scheduled to meet five American Hockey League teams in ten games.

Bowa named Padre Manager

The San Diego Padres hired Larry Bowa as the new manager of the ball club. Bowa will be the 11th manager of the 18 year-old team. Bowa passed up a $250,000 contract offered to him to play for the New York Mets this season.

Motivation allows Bons to bid for All-American cross country status

by Nancy Janecek

Did you see the Sports Illustrated issue about Appleton, Wis. Profiling a typical, sports-minded, middle-American town, the articles described the atmosphere that produces athletes of all ages and sports.

Not far from the now "famous" Appleton is the not-so-well-known town of Little Chute, the hometown of Stout's Paul Bons.

Bons is making a bid for All-American in cross country. Running for the Blue Devils, Bons recently set a school record for five miles with a time of 24:38 minutes.

His performance this season has been stellar, finishing in the top three in the last three races and consistently leading the Wisconsin State University Conference.

The commitment and enthusiasm Bons shows now is in contrast to the obligation he felt a year ago. "I didn't compete last fall. It felt like a job to me. But then I was bored. I seemed to be wasting time and not getting anything done. That time off proved how much I like to race. When I came back, I was fired up," Bons says.

It may be hard to understand how someone stays fired up to run 70 miles a week and train an average of two and a half to three hours a day.

Always interested in sports, Bons went out for football as a freshman at Little Chute High School, but switched to cross country his sophomore year. (Try calculating how many miles he has logged in seven years.)

Why? "If I didn't run, I don't see how I would stay sane," laughs Bons.

"It's my way to relax and let off steam. Rather than get on others, I'll run, come back later, and deal with the situation with a clear head," he adds.

His Paul Newman-blue eyes reflect the calm Bons talks about. "I'm more stable. There's not as many ups and downs in my life."

Stability also comes from the relationships Bons has with his teammates. "My best friends are fellow runners and they are people I can count on. They're not phony."

In a race, being part of a team has special meaning for Bons. Usually the first to finish, Bons sees the other team members as they come in and feels a responsibility to them. "I know I'm not running on my own. I might 'puppy-out' if it weren't for those guys counting on me to give my best."

Cross country Coach Lou Klitzke tries to instill a mental advantage to his team. All teams work out for physical toughness, but Stout's training includes cognitive toughness. There is constant reinforcement among the runners. "We encourage each other before a race. There's lots of talking and motivating," Bons says.

After that, individual strengths have to take over. Bons' chiseled six-foot-two inch form attests to his regular physical training. "Running in the morning wakes me up for my classes. After about a mile, everything is working, the blood is flowing." He will add layering and keep running all winter. "I listen to my body. There are times I take it easy. This way I stay healthy and injury-free."

Bons is healthy enough not to be overly-concerned with nutrition. "I make most of the meals at our house — just like mom's cooking," he teases.

Bons also enjoys using his father's woodworking shop. "I'm always busy with something." And if the pace isn't quick enough, Bons can take to his motorcycle.

A junior in industrial technology, Bons sees academic benefits to his cross country experiences. "Any sport is beneficial to improved communication. You're always meeting new people. You learn a lot seeing others and your own reactions to both defeat and winning.

"And I'm proud to represent Stout when we travel to meets. This is a good school that's very people-oriented and concerned about its students."

Goals and attitudes are vital to the long-distance runner. Bons explains, "If you say, 'I think I can do it,' there is still a question or doubt in your mind. Rather tell yourself, 'I can do it,' and, 'I will do it.'"

Immediate goals for Bons include finishing in the top three in Saturday's conference and district championship in Eau Claire and then to qualify for the nationals, run Nov. 15 in Kenosha. It is quite likely he will qualify for nationals as the first 15 places from Saturday go on. The ultimate is to be named All-American. "I just hope it's the right day and that I run to my potential," he modestly anticipates.

Bons plans to run as a hobby after graduating next December. "I will always run to have that time to think," he says. Of course he will train for his hometown road race every year. So when Sports Illustrated highlights Little Chute, look for a picture of Stout's own Paul Bons.

Spikers approach school record; hopeful of tourney berth

by Katie Keran

The womens volleyball squad is close to finishing their season and very near to setting a new record. The Blue Devils are currently one match away from breaking last year's record of most wins in a season. They are also close to gaining a place in the conference tournament.

In order for the team to participate in the conference tournament, they must win their match against UW-Oshkosh on Wednesday. Stout is trying to break into sixth place past UW-Stevens Point who currently holds that position. Only the top six teams in the conference compete in the tournament.

UW-La Crosse currently is number one in the conference with only one loss. They are followed by UW-River Falls, UW-Whitewater, UW-Eau Claire, UW-Superior, UW-Stevens Point and finally Stout. Stout will also have a chance to increase their conference record by competing in the "Trick or Treat Tourney" this weekend in River Falls. Stout will be competing against River Falls and Oshkosh.

On October 17, Stout defeated St. Teresa during the Homecoming match. The scores were 15-4, 15-6, 15-9. Coach Lynda Lee credited Freshmen Carol Bufe with good playing against St. Teresa. Bufe had a 46 percent kill percentage She killed seven of her thirteen spikes. Following the St. Teresa match, the team played their annual alumni game. "The participation was great. I hope it goes as well next year," Coach Lee said.

On October 22, Stout competed against Grinnell and Luther College. They defeated Grinnell 15-7, 15-8 but then went on to lose to Luther 9-15, 15-11, 10-15.

In the UW-Stout Invitational held last Saturday, Stout placed fourth out of six teams. Scores for the tourney were: St. Mary's — 15-5, 16-4; Northwestern — 9-15, 8-15; Eau Claire JV — 15-7, 15-7; Bethel — 15-11, 13-15, 6-15; and Eau Claire Varsity — 15-13, 6-15, 10-15.

Against Eau Claire Varsity the team served 88 percent, which is close to their goal of 90 percent. Freshman Shelley Kacsir had a good game with 25 percent kills, and Senior Wendy Morrow had 23 percent kills.

Coach Lee said, "We have some real dedication. The desire of most of the team is high. We still need to hit harder and play more consistently." She added, "We need to beat Oshkosh in order to make it to conference." Lee feels the offense has been one of their positives.

Lee credited Senior Wendy Morrow and Junior Mish Espe with consistent hard playing. "They play pretty much all the time." Currently the team is 20-19.

Stout will finish off their season by competing against Oshkosh and La Crosse in Oshkosh on Oct. 29th and then on to the "Trick or Treat Tourney" on Friday. If they pull ahead of Stevens Point in the conference standings, they will then go on to the WWIAC tourney in Platteville on Nov. 6 and 7.

Stout Centaurs fight and battle with St. Paul Pigs

Curtis prepares his will as the St. Paul Pigs close in on the ball in a match at Galloway Park last Saturday. The Centaurs lost the match 18-4.

by Slash La Freniere

This past Saturday the Stout Centaurs Rugby Club was defeated 18-4 by the St. Paul Pigs city club in a match where both teams learned a few things about each other. The Stout Centaurs learned that the old men from St. Paul can play some fine rugby. The St. Paul Pigs learned that the young men from Stout are a very intense rugby team and can beat you if you aren't careful.

The match started off with Stout going right after St. Paul from the opening kick. The play of the Centaurs was very intense and Stout surprised St. Paul. It seemed that however hard that St. Paul came at the Stout ruggers, the Centaurs came back at St. Paul even harder.

The bulk of the action in the first half was near midfield and featured many scrumdowns between the two teams. These scrumdowns were the result of penalties and dangerous play in the loose ball. A scrum is used to put the ball back into play and when there are a lot of them together, the players involved in them get very fatigued.

Stout kept the pressure on St. Paul and late in the first half, Mike Hackworthy rumbled in for a try from 15 meters out. Hackworthy's run was in heavy traffic and was reminiscent of the great Jim Brown. Said Hackworthy, "Scoring on the Pigs made my try all the more worthwhile because they are the cheapest, dirtiest team that we have played all year." Many Stout players did agree with Hackworthy, but in rugby the cheap stuff is a part of the game.

Hackworthy's try made the score four to zero in Stout's favor at the half. The mood of the Centaur players at halftime was one of accomplishment and determination. The accomplishment was in keeping St. Paul off guard and leading them at the half. The determination was to play tough rugby and win the match. This was not to be, however.

The St. Paul Pigs are a city club that plays together and practices together the whole year around. They have a great deal of experience and they are a very successful team. They play technically sound rugby and they do whatever is necessary to win. In the second half the Pigs came back at Stout with all of the fury and skill that their aging bodies could muster.

The strategy worked for St. Paul, and in the second half they won almost every ruck, lineout, scrum and maul. The Pigs also dominated the backline play, as they scored three tries and conversions to win the match 18-4. The score could have been much worse for Stout but the Centaurs played St. Paul well and St. Paul had to earn everything that they got on Saturday.

Stout Rugby Club President John Wangen said, "Playing St. Paul is always a real learning experience." Todd Harvey, who played his first A-side match on Saturday added, "I really learned a lot against St. Paul and when we play again I will do much better."

This coming Saturday the Centaurs face Northern Michigan University at 1 p.m. at Galloway Park. Last year the Centaurs defeated NMU in Michigan and the Stout ruggers are looking for a good game in the rematch this Saturday. John Wangen said, "We plan to go out and have fun playing them on Saturday."

The Stout Rugby Club and D-side Johnny would like to invite all those who are interested in seeing the Centaurs play to join them on Saturday to watch the long-awaited rematch against Northern Michigan.

28- and 20-yards to Wise set up the score by Kyle Gunderson from two yards out. The point after by Jim Gorecki was good, making the score 36-15.

The next series for Stout also went in for a score. This time it was a 5-yard touchdown completion from Tim Peterson to Mark Rothwell. This ended the scoring for the game with the final of 36-21.

This Saturday at 1 p.m. Stout will be playing nationally-ranked St. Ambrose in Davenport, Iowa. Coach Lawrence looks ahead to a new role this week of trying to be the spoiler. As Coach Lawrence stated, "We are a lot better ball club than we have been in the past. We do a lot of things better than in the past but our record doesn't show it. Our team members are embarrassed on that and I think our outlook on the season is to be the spoiler in the next three ball games." He later added, "But we aren't looking ahead at anyone. All we are looking at is St. Ambrose."

Students feel 'rushed' to prepare schedules

by Bonz Bohnert

To the surprise of many UW-Stout students, registration for 1986-87 second semester classes began October 23 in the Registration and Records Office, 109 Bowman Hall.

Some Stout upperclassmen complained that they felt "rushed" to prepare their schedules for the upcoming semester.

"People weren't ready for this time of year to happen," said UW-Stout registrar, Sharon Stewart.

Several students said that they felt they had little time to prepare schedules due to class schedule books coming out so close to registration time.

Katherine McCarthy, a Stout senior, had said that she had expected to graduate in May, 1987. Now, however, McCarthy said that due to complications in scheduling, she may be forced to return next summer to complete a required course not offered this coming spring.

"If [the class schedule] had come out sooner," said McCarthy, "I could have figured that out earlier."

Stewart, however, stated, "The books actually came out earlier this year."

Stewart went on to explain that although it seemed registration for spring classes took place earlier this year, "in actuality, it didn't."

Stewart said that registration seemed earlier this year due to a shortage of preparation time resulting from this year's classes beginning two weeks later than last year's.

Mike McKinney, also a Stout senior, recommends that in the future, "schedule books, with at least class time slots, ought to be sent out a semester in advance. I know that would be hard," added McKinney, "but that would really help upperclassmen — especially transfer students."

Stout students and staff also expressed concerns relating to the lack of availability of classes offered. Due to limited offerings, students may not always receive classes which they register for.

Joe Larkin, UW-Stout Assistant Dean of Students, stated that, "Registration is not a problem. That's a five-minute procedure. The problem," explained Larkin, "is when students can't get the classes they ask for due to limited availability."

Stewart explained that the current criterion used for order-of-registration is based on the number of academic credits students have accumulated. Those with more credits register for classes before those with fewer.

Consequently, Stewart explained, underclassmen may find it more difficult to obtain the courses that they select during class registration. "That we can't control," he Stewart.

Larkin stated that the current computerized registration is highly automized in comparison to the methods used in previous years.

"What we have today," said Larkin, "is a lot better than what we had before. Next year we hope it's even better."

Class schedule books, which were sent to all Stout residence halls and may also be picked up at the Service Desk in the Memorial Student Center, contain a list of steps to help students schedule and register effectively "from permit to payment."

Stewart advises students to pick up their schedules the same day they register in order to add/drop immediately.

McKinney advised that those who register "should not be afraid to add/drop or get on teacher waiting lists. It's your right," said McKinney, "to register for the classes you want."

Students registering for classes attempt to juggle their schedules and get required courses while administrators try to continually improve the registration process.

World market tapped by acquisition

A major U.S. synthetic fiber and chemical producer has agreed to be acquired by a giant West German chemical firm for $2.85 billion.

Celanese Corporation has worked with the West German Hoechst AG for 25 years. Celanese spokesperson Ronald Shelp said the merger would expand Celanese's business "in one big quantum leap that we couldn't do by ourselves."

Celanese's stock jumped $24 a share to $242.50 in New York Stock Exchange trading after the acquisition was announced.

Police killings highest in Dallas

Police are more likely to kill citizens in the city of Dallas, Texas than any other city in the U.S.

Survey data released by the Dallas Herald Times shows that, in 1985, fatal shootings by police occurred at a rate five times that of New York City.

Nine citizens were killed by police in Dallas last year, leaving the city with a fatality rate of .924 per 100,000 population. Los Angeles ranked second, with a rate of .743 per 100,000 population.

Costumed revelers exhaust police

An overworked, understaffed police department in Athens, Ohio made 88 arrests during the Halloween celebrations at Ohio University.

A costumed crowd of revelers took over Court Street at about 9 p.m. Saturday night and blocked traffic until 3 a.m. Sunday morning, when security officers forced the remaining celebrants off the street.

Blues legend dies at 88

Sippie Wallace, legendary blues writer and singer, died Saturday in a Detroit hospital on her 88th birthday.

Ms. Wallace, who is reported to have said that her nickname came from the fact that the placement of her teeth caused her "to sip everything," had been coaxed back to the stage by blues singer Bonnie Raitt in the 1970's.

An album, titled "Sippie," was produced in 1983 and nominated for a Grammy Award in the blues category. The album included some of Ms. Wallace's most important work, such as "Women Be Wise," "Mighty Tight Woman" and "Suitcase Blues."

Controversy about security deposit issue

In the face of opposition from organized landlords, John Lee, SSA Landlord/Tenant Representative argued in favor of a proposal he brought before the Menomonie City Council.

by Masha Roberts

A member of UW-Stout student government who represents students in matters of off-campus housing was met with opposition when presenting a proposal to the Menomonie City Council last week.

On Monday, Nov. 3, John Lee, the landlord/tenant representative of the Stout Student Association (SSA), presented a proposal to change city ordinances effecting landlords holding the security deposits of tenants.

There were several members of the Menomonie Apartment Association (MAA) who opposed Lee's proposal.

Douglas Larson, a member of MAA, spoke against the proposal. He said that an issue as important as this needs to be looked into in depth and recommended to the council that the proposal should be researched thoroughly before a final decision is made.

Council member Richard Emmert told Lee during the meeting, "You have opened a hornet's nest."

During Lee's presentation to members of the City Council, he emphasized that approximately 6000 tenants of Menomonie are students and elderly faculty members of UW-Stout. This number, Lee pointed out, comprises 48 percent of the population of Menomonie.

"There is over $500 thousand dollars of students' and community members' money, tied up in the investments of their landlords," said Lee.

Since there is no particular way of keeping track of this money, said Lee, all too often, the money does not find its way back to tenants.

A Stout student who spoke at the meeting said that she lived in an apartment for only one semester, did no damage to the rental but had problems in obtaining her security deposit at the end of her stay.

The proposal Lee presented hinged on three points:

- It would limit the amount charged for security deposits to one month's rent.
- It would require a landlord to hold the deposit in a segregated account.
- It would require that interest be paid to the tenant at a simple fixed rate of 5 percent annually.

One member of the MAA who opposed the proposal declared that the administrative costs for landlords to carry it out would probably exceed any amount of interest gained. The MAA member encouraged the council to vote against the SSA representative's proposal.

Elaine Fitzgerald, instructor of business law at Stout, told people at the meeting that she has received numerous complaints from students regarding problems with obtaining their security deposits.

You have opened a hornet's nest
—Councilman Emmert

Fitzgerald said that some agreement should be made to satisfy both landlords and tenants. She continued by saying that honest landlords should be in some way protected but dishonest ones should be forced to repay the security deposits to tenants.

Thomas Phillip, another member of the MAA, stated that he felt that Lee's proposal was unclear, that it included only fixed term residents and that the law change would be redundant in relation to existing state law.

Lee said that state law says that security deposits from tenants must not exceed one month's rent.

Phillip's response was that "only fewer than 3 percent of the landlords ask for more than one month's rent."

The members of the Menomonie City Council referred the proposal to the Community/University Relations Committee, a university standing committee.

The recommendations of the committee on Lee's proposal will be reviewed by the City Council on December 1.

Landlord/Tenant Rep. answers questions

by Masha Roberts

There are at least 4000 students who live off campus who can go to the Landlord/Tenant Representative in the Stout Student Association (SSA) office with questions and problems pertaining to landlord and tenant relations.

Students can turn to John Lee, who was appointed to the position by SSA President Paul D. Nelson.

The Landlord/Tenant Representative position was created to help off-campus students identify their needs and answer questions.

The SSA office, where Representative Lee can be found by students desiring information, is located on the ground floor in the Memorial Student Center, under the neon sign. The office number is 232-1450.

He acts as coordinator and liason between tenants and landlords

One of the aspects of Lee's job as Landlord/Tenant Representative is to help off-campus students who are having housing and financial difficulties with their landlord.

He acts as coordinator and liaison between tenants and landlords. Lee said that he seeks out information pertinent to specific cases, documents sources and outlines courses of action for client reports. He can be an information source for distressed landlords or tenants.

On his role in legal referral, Lee said, "I am not a lawyer." Also, he said he does not judge or decide complaints but merely assists in solving the complaint.

Lee also said that his job includes keeping abreast of current legislative measures pertaining to rental relationships and staying aware of county and local regulations involved with renting.

Conflict surrounds minority rep

by Jill Huppert

The newly-appointed Minority Affairs Senator has what is being called, by SSA President Paul D. Nelson, a "course conflict" with the SSA meeting time of 7 p.m. because he has class during that hour this semester.

Adesola Adisa, a Nigerian student, was appointed to be the new Minority Affairs Senator at the Stout Student Association (SSA) meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 28.

The seat had been left vacant by the resignation of Aref Khatib, who was elected to the position during the SSA elections last spring.

Adisa, a graduate student majoring in Industrial Education, came to Stout from Nigeria two years ago. He is vice president of the Nigerian Student Association and a member of the International Relations Club.

"I would like to see minorities integrated into all activities on campus," Adisa said. He plans to hold a meeting and have an open discussion with all minorities enrolled at Stout to discover their concerns and problems.

The SSA has allocated a budget amount of $100 for programming to be shared by the two affirmative action seats on SSA — Minority Affairs and Women's Affairs Senators.

Adisa said the amount is too small. He said he will probably use the $50, his half of the budget, "just to buy coffee and drinks for the minority students during my first meeting with them."

Although our needs may be somewhat similar, there is a definite difference in our concerns
—Joe Torres

Adisa is the third Minority Affairs Senator to hold the position. All three preceding him had been foreign students.

Joe Torres, president of Rainbow, a multi-cultural awareness group for Stout students, said that the SSA and campus as a whole does not understand the difference between American minorities and foreign minorities.

"Although our needs may be somewhat similar," said Torres, "there is a definite difference in our concerns."

Torres said it is difficult for a member of one minority group to understand the concerns of all minorities. He feels the SSA should have more than one Minority Affairs Senator so more groups could be represented.

Hmong club becomes recognized group

by Kristin Bailey

One of the newest groups recognized by the Stout Student Association (SSA) is the Hmong Club. President Lao Ziong said, "The club is a network between the Hmong and Americans at UW-Stout."

The Hmong came to the U.S. from the country of Laos, according to Ray Rivera, an advisor with the Ethnic Services Center at UW-Stout. Rivera described the Hmong as an independent people that, until forced to flee their homeland, lived in the rural mountain regions of their Laotian homeland.

These mountain Laotians, Rivera said, "speak their own language, even though Laotian is the language of their land. The Hmong language was first written down only 40 years ago."

The Hmong Club is an open club with 32 members, some who are Hmong students enrolled at Stout and others who are not. Activities planned by the group, according to Ziong, will include guest speakers to speak on cultural differences between Americans and Laotians, special occasion dinners and the like.

Members of the Hmong Club, a newly-recognized student organization, take advantage of the privileges accorded a recognized group by using meeting rooms in the Memorial Student Center. Students in the Hmong Club are getting ready to begin work on their group objectives.

Being represented by SSA allows the Hmong Club to utilize facilities such as meeting rooms in the Memorial Student Center like other SSA-recognized organizations on campus. The group is also eligible to receive funds from the SSA, which distributes money collected as segregated activities fees.

Segregated fees are paid by all students along with tuition.

In accordance with new rules adopted by the SSA last year, all students pay $10.84 per credit in segregated fees, up to $130.08 total per semester for 12 or more credits.

> "A network between the Hmong and Americans —Lao Ziong"

Until this year, only full-time students paid segregated activities fees.

To receive SSA representation, a student organization must submit a proposed constitution to the Constitution Committee of the SSA for approval.

The Constitution Committee, under the executive secretary of the SSA, inspects all constitutions before they go to a vote on the SSA floor.

A student group's constitution must include the purpose of the group, how it is to be funded, how officials will be elected and what their function will be. The constitution must also include a description of the means to amendment it and a functional set of the bylaws.

The committee looks at each constitution submitted to make certain determinations — "To make sure it is not discriminatory to any member on campus," and, "That the group accepts any members and none is rejected for any reason," Executive Secretary and Constitution Committee Chairperson Dawn Diercks said.

After any revisions have been made, 45 copies are made for SSA Senators.

The constitution is then brought to the floor of SSA by a senator's motion to approve it. Approval is automatically tabled for two weeks to facilitate further research by the student representatives.

After the required two weeks, if the group's constitution is passed, they become an SSA-recognized organization, with attendant privileges.

Such information as how to get in touch with the group's advisor, the group's purpose and function and how to become involved are kept in a public file in the SSA office, according to Diercks.

IRC Annual International Dinner to promote 'One World for Peace'

by Nitin Nadkarni

In keeping with its objectives of encouraging friendly relations among the university community, the International Relations Club is sponsoring its Annual International Dinner on Saturday, Nov. 22 in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center.

The theme for this year's dinner is "One World for Peace."

The International Relations Club (IRC) is a student organization, recognized by the Stout Student Association. The majority of its members are foreign students of UW-Stout.

The program begins at 5 p.m. with a social hour. Various arts and crafts exhibits from around the world will be on display.

The highlight of the evening will be the buffet dinner. The buffet is a smorgasbord of various dishes selected from around the world.

The dinner will be followed by cultural events which include folk dances and a variety of other entertainments. A fashion show displaying the various costumes and dress of the different regions of the world will be included.

Tickets for the dinner are available at the International Programs Office, room 201 of Harvey Hall or the Service Desk in the Memorial Student Center. They cost $9 for adults and $5 for children 12 and under.

Disabled people learn skills at Indianhead Enterprises

by Eric J. Erickson

"If you give a man a fish, he can eat for a day. If you teach a man to fish, he can eat for a lifetime."

This concept has been practiced at Indianhead Enterprises since it was founded in 1971. The concept has been quite successful ever since.

But what exactly is Indianhead Enterprises? A sheltered workshop for the developmentally disabled? Yes. A transitional site that teaches pre-work skills? Yes. A fully-automated, self-contained factory? Yes. Indianhead Enterprises fits in all of these categories, plus many more.

For the developmentally disabled in our society, the trend in recent years has been deinstitutionalization — getting people out of institutions they really need not be in.

But once released from institutions, what happens to this population in our society? Indianhead Enterprises has been a key in the Menomonie area in helping to train disabled individuals to become productive members of the community.

Indianhead is a non-profit, work-oriented rehabilitation facility. It employs 85 disabled adults living in Dunn County. The employees' disabilities may include mental retardation, epilepsy, cerebral palsy, mental illness, physical impairments, alcohol and drug related problems or a combination.

Once these individuals are referred to Indianhead by the Department of Human Services from Dunn or neighboring counties, they are evaluated in several areas of personal, social and vocational skills. This evaluation, which includes skills such as speech and physical and occupational development, is done to place these individuals in one of four work groups.

These work groups (A, B, C and D) are categorized by skills and abilities. For example, skill group A may be lower functioning individuals who take a great deal of time to complete basic tasks. At Indianhead, these individuals begin working in the sort and salvage area, where they disassemble parts and save certain scrap pieces.

Group D, which may be the highest functioning group, would be given the most complex tasks. For example, one product Indianhead Enterprises does produce is custom-fit vinyl storm windows. Group D members would be responsible for assembling these high-quality windows from raw to finished product.

Some of the various companies in the Menomonie area that use services or purchase products from Indianhead are 3M Company, Kell Container, UW-Stout, Badger Iron Works, Quality Printing, American Window Company, Menomin Energy and several others.

Another job individuals employed by Indianhead are responsible for is relabeling cans. A big client for Indianhead in the area of relabeling is Land O' Lakes. Indianhead uses an assembly-line type of approach to relabeling cans.

In essence, Indianhead has helped these individuals become very productive members of the Menomonie community. This is best represented by the payroll statistics of the company.

Employees' earnings in 1983 totaled $15,000. In 1986, a banner year, $70,000 in wages was distributed. Jeff Heinzen, director for Indianhead, anticipates a regular increase in growth of 20 percent for the next few years.

Indianhead stresses job training in the areas of attitude, skill and knowledge about work. So far, this work-ethic training has paid off.

Heinzen stresses that Indianhead is a transitional work site. The goal is to get all of its workers in positions with productive, full-time employment. Indianhead loses 8-10 percent of its workers each year to Menomonie companies.

Heinzen stated, "If we have to yell or raise hell at work, we do. But, if they do well we praise and reward them also. We're teaching them about work in a realistic environment. They have a job to complete and standards to follow just like any other job. We don't want them to have to return back to us after we've placed them in a stable job site."

Although profits are probably the greatest goal for most companies, Indianhead differs in this area. The goal of the Indianhead staff is to close the factory. They would like to find employment in stable sites for all of its workers after teaching them skills at Indianhead.

Heinzen concluded, "If we [Indianhead staff] can walk out of the business and turn the key for one last time, our job will have been completed."

Employees of Indianhead Enterprises work to re-label cans for one of its several contractors. Indianhead employs 85 workers with various disabilities, who are each responsible for one of many intricate daily tasks.

SSA budget passed, AI fails by one vote

by Kelly Cohorst

Funding for Amnesty International (AI) through the Stout Student Association (SSA) failed by one vote at Tuesday night's meeting.

Finance Committee recommendations which were passed at last week's meeting had been vetoed by the president of SSA because they contained funding for AI.

Funding for student organizations besides AI were approved by the Senators before a motion to grant $1000 to AI came to the floor.

With a bare quorum of Senators present, a motion to grant funding to AI was defeated in a nine to eight vote.

Eight Senators, including the newly-appointed Minority Affairs Senator, were absent.

SSA President Paul D. Nelson said after the AI funding failed, "I believe that Amnesty International didn't receive funding because a significant number of Senators finally understood the reason that I vetoed the original reallocations recommendation budget."

Chairman of AI Ali Vazirabadi said "the president of SSA has contradicted himself."

At last week's Caucus meeting Nelson told the Senators that his interpretation of the AI constitution was that AI could not accept funding from SSA. He told the Senators that they would be helping AI break their own rules and that was why he would veto any AI funding.

After AI learned that the SSA would not fund them because their constitution stated that "AI is independent of all governments." the AI advisor asked the AI International (USA) to send official documentation to clarify the misunderstanding.

President Nelson backed up his position on Tuesday by referring to comments he made which were recorded in the minutes of the Oct. 28 SSA meeting.

The minutes said that Nelson stated:

"I have vetoed the motion (which granted funding for AI) because I sincerely believe that directly funding Amnesty International would set an improper precedent, thereby causing the University Student Senate to cross a line which they should not cross.

"Amnesty International is a non-partisan, single-issue organization, national or international in scope," according to Nelson's remarks, "the same as literally hundreds of other organizations around the world.

"If Amnesty International is directly funded with other students' monies, then other groups like the National Rifle Association (NRA) should also expect to be funded if student chapters were formed on this campus.

"Setting this precedent," warned Nelson, "would open up a Pandora's box which we should not make ourselves a victim of."

Many questions came up before the SSA meeting at the Senator's Caucus an hour before.

"AI is a good cause, once you set precedence," said Off-Campus Senator Dan Meyers.

Henry Oboh, an Off-Campus Senator said, addressing his fellow Senators, "You keep asking the same questions, you say the same thing at the same time and you don't listen."

"Don't you listen to them (refering to AI members) or read their letters?" Oboh asked.

John See, faculty advisor of AI, was speaking as people began leaving the room.

"You're just tieing your hands behind your back," he said as people walked out, "if you don't help fund an international organization."

Taffy Jackson, HKMC Hall Representative, lost her Senate seat due to the fact she failed to fulfill Senate requirements.

The SSA constitution requires its members "to be in good academic standing at UW-Stout," which means the Senators must maintain a certain grade point average.

Several complaints have been filed concerning traffic citation appeals, David Asp, the Off-Campus Senator currently sitting on the Parking Appeals Board, announced at the meeting.

Asp and Julie Weiss, vice-president of academic affairs, will be discussing the issues with the Protective Services Appeals Director Jerry Buckley.

Sacred Hindu ceremony, Divali, celebrated with festival of lights

Goddess Lakshmi

The Hindu religious text, the Bhaga vadgita, says, "Whatever form any devotee with faith wishes to worship, I make that faith of his steady."

by Masha Ramsey

Divali, the festival of lights, was celebrated all over the world on Saturday.

Divali is a highly religious and sacred occasion which is denoted by the ceremonial lighting of lights among the members of Hindu society.

For the Hindu people, Divali is a time of sharing, loving and being happy, according to Shobha Rienzie, a Trinidadian student at Stout.

Divali means "a row of lights" and is symbolized by the Goddess Lakshmi. Mother Lakshmi, as she is called, is the giver of prosperity, wealth and happiness. She stands on a red lotus flower which represents glory, beauty and good health.

In every Hindu home, the women are looked upon as Lakshmis. Great devotion, respect and love are bestowed on them.

Since the religious ceremony places so much emphasis on women, the prayers of Divali are supposed to be performed by the mother or another female member of the family.

On Divali night, which is said to be the darkest night of the year, thousands of deyas are lighted in Hindu homes. A deya is a small oil lantern about half the size of a small teacup, without the handle.

Deyas are made out of clay and go through several processes before they can be used. Oil and cotton wicks are placed inside and when lighted, the deyas are distributed around the house.

The soft, twinkling light of the deya illuminates all darkness and is like "the destroyer of ignorance," said Rienzie.

At evening, the first deya is lighted and a special prayer performed for the breaking of fast.

AIDS policy stated

The UW-Stout Advisory Committee on AIDS approved a policy statement on what the committee called "a major challenge to our society" at a meeting last Friday.

The policy, established by a committee of administrators, staff, faculty and students, will provide guidelines for the handling of AIDS education and management of the disease on campus.

Referring to studies and guidelines issued by the Center for Disease Control and the Public Health Service, the statement declared to the university community that "available evidence strongly indicates that AIDS is transmitted by exposure to blood, semen and/or vaginal secretions from an infected person during sexual contact, by injection of contaminated blood or by use of contaminated needles."

Should administrative decisions be made regarding anyone with an AIDS-related condition, the statement read, "they will be made on a case-by-case basis by appropriate administrative officers in consultation with medical experts."

The policy statement adopted by the committee also said that "at the present time, the most effective means to prevent the spread of AIDS is health education." The committee members discussed and planned ways to implement such education.

Stress can be managed

A seminar on the management of stress and the development of coping skills will be conducted by Shirley Murphy from the UW-Stout Counseling Center on Thursday, Nov. 13, at 6 p.m.

The seminar will be held in Crystal Ballroom A in the Memorial Student Center and is sponsored by the Organization of Adult Students Involved In Stout (OASIS).

Admission is free and all university community members are encouraged to attend.

Books bought back

The University Bookstore has announced the development of a "Used Book Buyback" program to be offered at the end of the Fall 1986 semester. Certain titles may be bought for reuse on the Stout campus, while most will be bought by a text wholesale firm for resale at other schools.

"We've been considering whether a buyback would be of use on this campus, and we've finally found a workable program," said Bill Porter, bookstore manager.

Certain texts may be bought for reuse at the bookstore. These would be bought at half the original price.

"This will be a small list," Porter said, "because so many of our text titles are workbooks or duplicated material and not suitable for reuse."

Unmarked workbooks may be considered for purchase at the higher price. This portion of the buyback program is not yet finalized.

A representative of the text wholesaler will be in the store on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 18 and 19, and will quote wholesale prices for used and new copies of various books. The representative will pay cash for eligible books.

Text wholesale prices are determined by wholesalers based on their estimates of continuing demand compared to quantity available. Prices range from "no value" to approximately 25 percent of the new price.

Women at work

Students who are looking for a class to add are encouraged to consider the course "Women and Work," a two credit course taught by Dayle Mandelson.

The primary objective for students taking the course is to acquire an understanding of the complexity of the issues surrounding the participation of women in the work force.

Students explore the earnings gap between men and women, history and trends associated with the presence of women in the work force and legislation and policies which affect the balance between the genders in the work place.

The class is offered during eighth period (at 3 p.m.) on Mondays and Wednesdays, second semester. The course number is 300-511.

Future elections need focus on issues

Now the character assassination is over we have a winner in the Bob Kasten versus Ed Garvey bout for Wisconsin's U.S. Senate seat. Due to the intense mud slinging between these two, Wisconsin voters missed the forest for the trees.

Garvey accused Kasten of refusing to make his tax returns public, late filing of his 1977 income tax returns, dealing with a Wiscoin realtor who was sent to prison, and being arrested on drunk driving charges.

Kasten returned these volleys with the accusation that $750,000 was missing from the NFL Player's Association under Garvey's leadership. Next, each candidate gathered enough football players on each side of the issue to field opposing teams.

The major issues affecting Wisconsin voters were shunted aside in this campaign. The tragedy of the situation was that the voters' needs were overlooked while the focus was on issues that ought not to have had any impact on the campaign.

Along with the candidates, the media was partially responsible for helping make "dirty politics" the campaign's focus. Such things as the accusations by Ralph Nader that Senator Kasten had been seen "drinking on the job" made good copy.

With the candidates help, the media established the criteria by which the candidates would be judged. It was too bad that neither candidate chose to lead the way in the elimination of the battle by innuendo format of this campaign.

In this age of voter apathy where a 50 percent turnout is thought a moral victory, these two politicians were headed in the wrong direction if they truly wanted to get voters involved in the election process.

Candidates for whatever post are supposed to be examples to voters young and old of political opponents taking part in a valuable dialogue from which voters might choose the better of the two.

Kasten and Garvey merely provided an excellent example of the negative affects that result from any campaign featuring name calling. Our hope for future Wisconsin political campaigns is that the candidates will stick to the facts so the voters can have the chance to select the best leader.

The voters have the final responsibility to establish clear criteria which the candidates need to meet.

Hidden Dimension

Justice was vetoed

Ali Vazirabadi

It is embarrassing to the reputation of UW-Stout to see the president of Stout Student Association (SSA) veto the approved funding of a human rights organization such as Amnesty International. President Paul D. Nelson said at the SSA caucus meeting Oct. 28, that due to the bylaws and constitution of Amnesty International (AI), the organization can not be funded by the SSA government.

It is nice to see that Mr. Nelson is so concerned about the AI bylaws. However, the Constitution of the UW-Stout chapter of AI does not state or imply that AI can not receive funds from an organization such as SSA. As the Annual AI Campus Group Report stated, over one third of the U.S. campus chapters received the majority of their funding from the universities they were affiliated with.

Another reason to support SSA funding of AI is that the majority of the AI Stout chapter is students and each student paid $45 per year in segregated fees. Therefore, an organization with almost 100 members covering such a broad scope of the university is entitled to part of their monies.

It is unfair for Nelson to say that if AI is directly funded, then other groups such as the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and the American Rifle Association should also expect funding if student chapters formed on this campus.

The National Rifle Association is a political association, which is directly involved in political activities. For example during the last year's election they spent $1.2 million to support 226 political candidates, 77 of them won. AI is not a political organization and does not support any special interest group and political figure. Therefore, this unjustifiable comparison of organizations will confuse the students and the Senators.

The other obvious objection to Nelson's statement is that every organization should be judged according to the bylaws of the constitution of the SSA, and should be treated by its own characteristics and not by generalization.

The Rules and Regulations for segregated fees states: (1) The organization must be recognized and approved by the USS of the SSA. (2) The organization must be chaired by a student. (3) The organization must have a faculty advisor. (4) The majority of members of the organization must be students. (5) The treasurer must be a student. (6) The organization must have the scope of the whole university.

All the above rules and regulations are applicable to the AI. Also the AI is proud to have the scope of the whole university.

Peder Hamm, Assistant Professor of Political Science, in a letter to the SSA Senators stated: "support for AI would be, in my opinion, non-partisan in nature, and would provide opportunity for a greater number of students to become involved in a truly beneficial experience. It would also provide participating students the chance to work together with international students attending Stout, many of whom are aware of and supportive of AI's values and operations."

There are organizations on this campus which are difficult to qualify for SSA funding under the regulations and bylaws for segregated fee funded organizations — the Frisbee Club for example.

It is clear that AI is qualified for support of their student government. Professor Snyder of Political Science said, "I think UW-Stout badly needs to support more such organizations on campus. One of the main thrusts in UW-Stout's mission statement is to better prepare students to work and live in a world that is becoming more culturally and economically interdependent.

Groups like Amnesty International, through their concern for human rights in the U.S. and other countries, enrich the cultural environment at UW-Stout and contribute to our learning about other cultures as well as our own."

I hope that justice and fairness apply to this important issue.

Spotlight / Brian Rogers

Subject: Progress toward full opportunity outlined by nationally recognized staff person

by Tracy Lea Landis

UW-Stout's Center for Independent Living Director Brian Rogers was inducted into the National Hall of Fame for Persons with Disabilities at a ceremony held in Columbus, Ohio last month.

Induction into the Hall of Fame is made "to honor outstanding disabled Americans for their personal achievements and contributions to humanity."

STOUTONIA: I UNDERSTAND THAT YOU WERE EDUCATED AT STOUT?

In 1976, I earned my bachelor of science degree in vocational rehabilitation with an industrial management minor and then spent four and a half years in the field. I returned to Stout in the fall of 1981 and entered the master's program in guidance and counseling and obtained my master's degree in December of 1982.

I came on as director of the center in January of 1986. I've had an opportunity to work with some excellent personnel in serving the independent living needs of disabled individuals through the center.

STOUTONIA: SO THE CENTER FOR INDEPENDENT LIVING PROVIDES SERVICES FOR THE DISABLED?

The Center for Independent Living serves nine counties and is doing marketing and expansion into four additional counties.

We have, for instance, a personal care attendant program, which matches a personal care attendant with a disabled individual and helps them with their activities of daily living.

We also go into homes and do accessibility redesigns to enhance a person's ability to perform the activities of daily living in their own individual environment.

I feel the key to ensuring the disabled community full opportunity to grow and be a part of the American dream is to help them to live as independently as possible, within their own chosen communities and also to seek and secure gainful employment.

> "One must adopt a dynamic positive attitude"

STOUTONIA: COULD YOU TELL OUR READERS SOME ABOUT YOUR OWN DISABILITY?

I was born with cerebral palsy in a small rural community and did not receive proper medical attention.

I spent the first 15 years of my life just trying to stay alive. I spent alot of time being sutured up, probed, x-rayed and living in plaster of paris.

The first major impact of the great burden that my disability would be throughout my life hit me when I turned 15 and went for my driver's license. The examining officer told me then that anyone with cerebral palsy could not drive.

But I knew I could drive a car and ten years later, got my license.

Society reminds you that you're disabled, but now the receptiveness is changing.

STOUTONIA: YOU BELIEVE YOU SEE PROGRESS IN THE ACCEPTANCE OF THE DISABLED?

Very significant progress. I think the key to accepting the disabled community as full participants in society is one of attitudinal awareness.

I think the changes I've seen just within the last few years, with regard to acceptance of us, particularly of myself, have been outstanding.

When I first started flying on airplanes, attending meetings throughout the country, people were not receptive to disabled passengers. I had an instance where the stewardess came up, sat down by me and asked what was going to happen next.

That does not happen any more.

STOUTONIA: BUT CERTAINLY YOUR DISABILITY STILL EFFECTS YOUR LIFE?

Disability is a tragic event. It inhibits and encumbers all your activities.

You say to yourself, "It's a monkey on my back but I'm going to fight it and I'm going to win. I'm going to attain a good career, a lifestyle I want."

Letters

Brueckner is appaling

I was a student there (at Stout) for two years and still feel it as part of my home. The paper is growing and shows signs of improvement from last year, but personally, as a former Stout student, I am angered and embarrassed to see you printing such articles like those which usually appear in "Bottom Line." I am appalled by the low-class writing you allow Rich Brueckner to submit for publication. I am surprised you still let him write for you, none of it is professional in the least.

I suggest you require more quality from Mr. Brueckner or do without him. I believe there is some good writing in The Stoutonia and appreciate receiving it even though I am not a student there.

Sincerely,
Autie A. Ziehlke

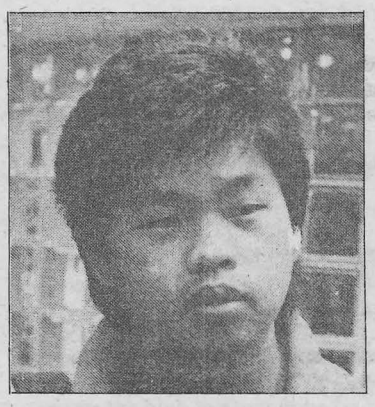
What do you think of the current registration system here at Stout?

Becky Struss,
Home Economics in Business,
Senior,

I like it this year better than the way it used to be a few years ago. It is a lot faster and easier, you can just walk in there and schedule yourself and leave. I really have not had any trouble getting classes either but you have to learn to work with the system.

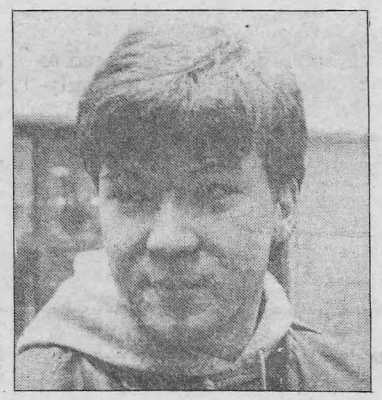
Sunhi Ryan,
Fashion Merchandising,
Junior,

I think it is good. It is fair because the seniors with more credits get to schedule first because they have been here longer and they need the credits to graduate.



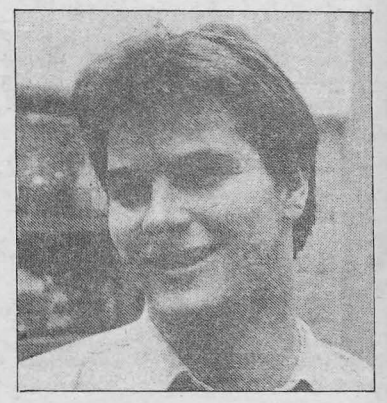
Yang Vang,
Industrial Technology,
Sophomore,

The system for scheduling for classes is easy for me, but the new students, or freshman, probably have more trouble with it. The freshman might have trouble getting classes or understanding the scheduling process in general.



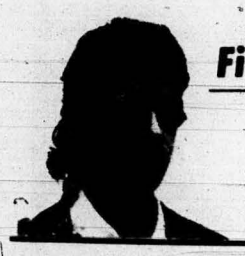
Mike Vaughan,
Hotel Restaurant Mgr.,
Senior,

I like the current system for scheduling a lot better than the old system. The new system is easier, quicker and you do not have to wait in any lines. I have not had any problems getting any of my classes either.



Randy Atkinson,
Business,
Senior,

I like the new system for scheduling a lot better then the old system. The new system is a lot more efficient, it gets things done a lot quicker. I do not have trouble getting classes, but some people might, depending on the number of credits they have.



Fine Line

Blue book blues

Jef Maynard

If you read this at all, and you are certainly under no obligation to do so, it will be days after another election process has reared its ugly head, or reared its ugly rear as you may see it. Because of this, I can't influence the election. (As if such a thing were remotely possible.)

What I would like to do is take a basically harmless symbol of something and ridicule it, in much the same way you might thump a Brook Shields doll on the table if Brook Shields the person were somehow getting on your nerves.

I hope I'm not, in any way, undermining the democratic process if I say that I am feeling alienated from the recent election, if not most elections. Like many people, I hope the right person is elected but no matter what I do, I have no way of knowing who the right choice might be.

I do have some idea who could be a "wrong choice." (Examples: prehistoric presidential running mates George Wallace and Gen. Curtis "Let's Use Atomic Weapons on Vietnam" LeMay. More currently, LaRouche type candidates, and so on.) Far too often for me, the choices all seem wrong. Then you have to guess who is the least wrong.

On the desk in front of me is a copy of the Wisconsin Blue Book. It is not unlike the car dealer's Blue Book, which has descriptions and prices of most recent makes of cars. The Wisconsin Blue Book doesn't have the prices of the various public office holders. You have to find that out for yourself.

A small paste-on sticker inside the cover says the book was distributed by the office of James E. Harsdorf, State Senator from the Tenth Senate District. Did you know the State Soil is Antigo Silt Loam? Or that we have a State Rock, and as a bonus, a State Mineral? Granite, and galena, respectively, (and don't they really deserve more respect?)

On the title page, it says the book is distributed by the Department of Administration, Document Sales. Harsdorf slipped in a little political soft sell; that's ok. It could be worse; it will get worse.

The book has a lot more humor in it than you might guess. The first section, Biographies, starts out with a cartoon character of beloved Bucky Badger. I was sort of hoping for Bullwinkle the Moose, but he was already taken by Vermont before Wisconsin was a state.

There are nice pictures of senators, justices etc, and pithy little descriptions of their professional histories. There's a nice snapshot of Senator Proxmire and his wavy hairline. First it was there, then it receded, now it's back, just like waves.

When I was a little kid, I waved to Senator Proxmire during a Fourth of July parade. He didn't wave back, but the woman he was with, (and it wasn't his wife), threw some Tootsie Rolls at me. I think she was trying to be nice.

As it turns out, Bucky Badger is in the beginning of every chapter. At the beginning of the Rules and Ruling Chapter, he is dressed in a football referee's costume. Later, Bucky appears as a carpenter, building the "Framework of Government," a judge, a clerk, a voter, and a host of other civic roles. A cartoon character seems to be in the spirit of the thing I think.

To keep our interest, photos of government in action spice the pages. One is of Gov. Earl meeting the Gov. of Heilongjiang Province, China. The caption says it is one of Wisconsin's three sister states, whatever that means. The Chinese generally eat very little cheese I was told once. Imagine...and we can still be friends.

The photo of the "Wisconsin Supreme Court in session" has a funny look about it. It doesn't say "At work," it says, "in session." The seven justices are just sitting up perfectly, grinning. They look stuffed.

Another photo has somebody in a "Spiderman" costume talking to some legislators. Later, he addressed their joint assembly concerned about child abuse. Later in the same session Superman spoke on krypton mining in Chetek, and the Incredible Hulk lectured on chemical dependency. It was fun. You should have been there.

One large chapter is statistics. A personal income graph shows Wisconsin remarkably close to the national average consistently. Mississippi is unremarkably last, forever and always.

The historical events list is full of proud facts. In 1661, the first missionary came to Wisconsin, Father Rene Menard. Later he moved to Eau Claire and started a family-owned hardware store, still in business today.

Many of the later dates have something bad happening, usually to Indians. For example, 1822, the combined New York tribes of Oneida, Stockbridge, Munsee, and the Brothertown arrived in Wisconsin. They were given some land here because, between the time they left New York and the time they arrived here, the federal government had sold their promised reservation in Kansas to some New York businessmen.

When the tribes arrived here, they got less than a third of the second promised land.

Another stat says that Wisconsin lost 12,216 of the 96,000 soldiers sent to the Civil War. More information: In 1890, Stephen Babcock invents a quick, easy accurate test for milk butterfat content. Guns and butterfat.

In WWI, Wisconsin lost 3,932 of 120,000 soldiers, and in the next really big war, WWII, 7,980 killed from 375,000. Things seem to be getting better. In the Korean Conflict, only 800 of 132,000.

Two of the historical markers in Milwaukee county are for the invention of the typewriter, and the birthplace of former Israeli Prime Minister, Golda Meir.

There is some political proselytizing in the book. "Should You Join a Political Party?" It says voting is choosing one candidate who favors a certain course of action over another who has a different course.

The last TV ads I've seen make it seem like the choice is for the candidate with the least disgusting things said about his or herself. It must be that way because no one has a whisper of a clue what course these people are going to take if they are elected.

It also says "Do not let politics become a spectator sport." Isn't it true that more people in Wisconsin watch the Superbowl than will vote this week? Does anyone wager money on candidate's victories?

This is a swell place. Wisconsin has three barber's associations. There are four bowling associations, an association of Car Washes, a Wisconsin Society of Colonial Dames of the XVIIth Century, (head offices in nearby Boyceville), an association of Ex-smokers, one for Gift Cheese, one for Wisconsin Muck farmers, (I didn't know that generated muck interest), and associations for Pollettes, Porkettes and Poets.

So I sure hope you got out and voted for somebody.

The complexities of attaining these goals as a disabled person are tremendous. It breaks a lot of disabled people, mentally and emotionally.

They just get tired of getting burnt or chastised and they drop out. They sometimes become chemical abusers.

In the face of this, one must adopt a dynamic positive attitude, adjust one's lifestyle to meet the pressures and resistances of people and systems.

STOUTONIA: ARE THERE ANY STATEMENTS ABOUT THE DISABLED THAT YOU WOULD LIKE TO CONCLUDE WITH?

We're getting national attention as being productive individuals. We're considered consumers by major corporations, where they're looking for our dollar. We're being acknowledged in the employment field as competent, reliable workers.

It's continually becoming more important for people to look at themselves positively; to look at ability, not disability.

It's not my quest, nor is it that of my minority, to seek any more support than others or to get an extra piece of the pie.

I think all the disabled community wants is a chance to obtain a stable, functional lifestyle.

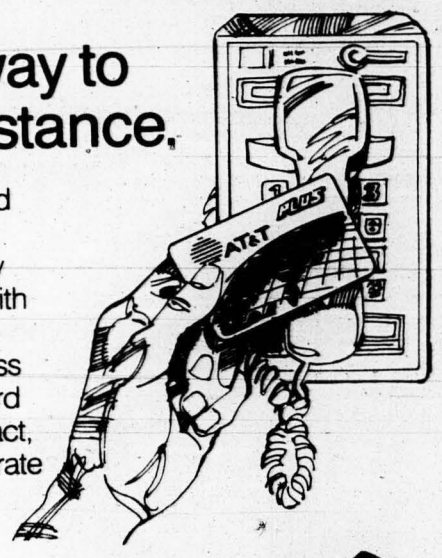
Announcing Four Pluses For Students

A special program to introduce the new AT&T Plus Card to the University of Wisconsin System

1. The easy way to call long distance.



The new AT&T Plus Card lets you call long distance anywhere, anytime, from any phone. No more fumbling with coins, no more collect calls.

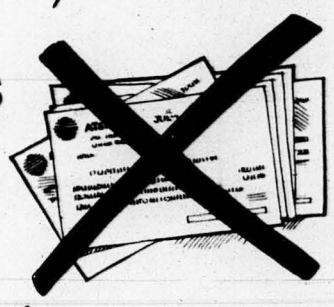
Calls cost up to 50% less than AT&T coin, collect or third party state-to-state calls. In fact, for most calls, it's our lowest rate next to direct dialing.

2. The easy way to own an AT&T PC.

With your Plus Card, you can purchase an AT&T high-speed, high capacity personal computer and needed printers, modems and software. The Plus Card lets you pay through convenient monthly payments.

AT&T PC's were designed with expansion in mind and are uniquely qualified for university work, with growth potential to meet the demands of school and a future career.

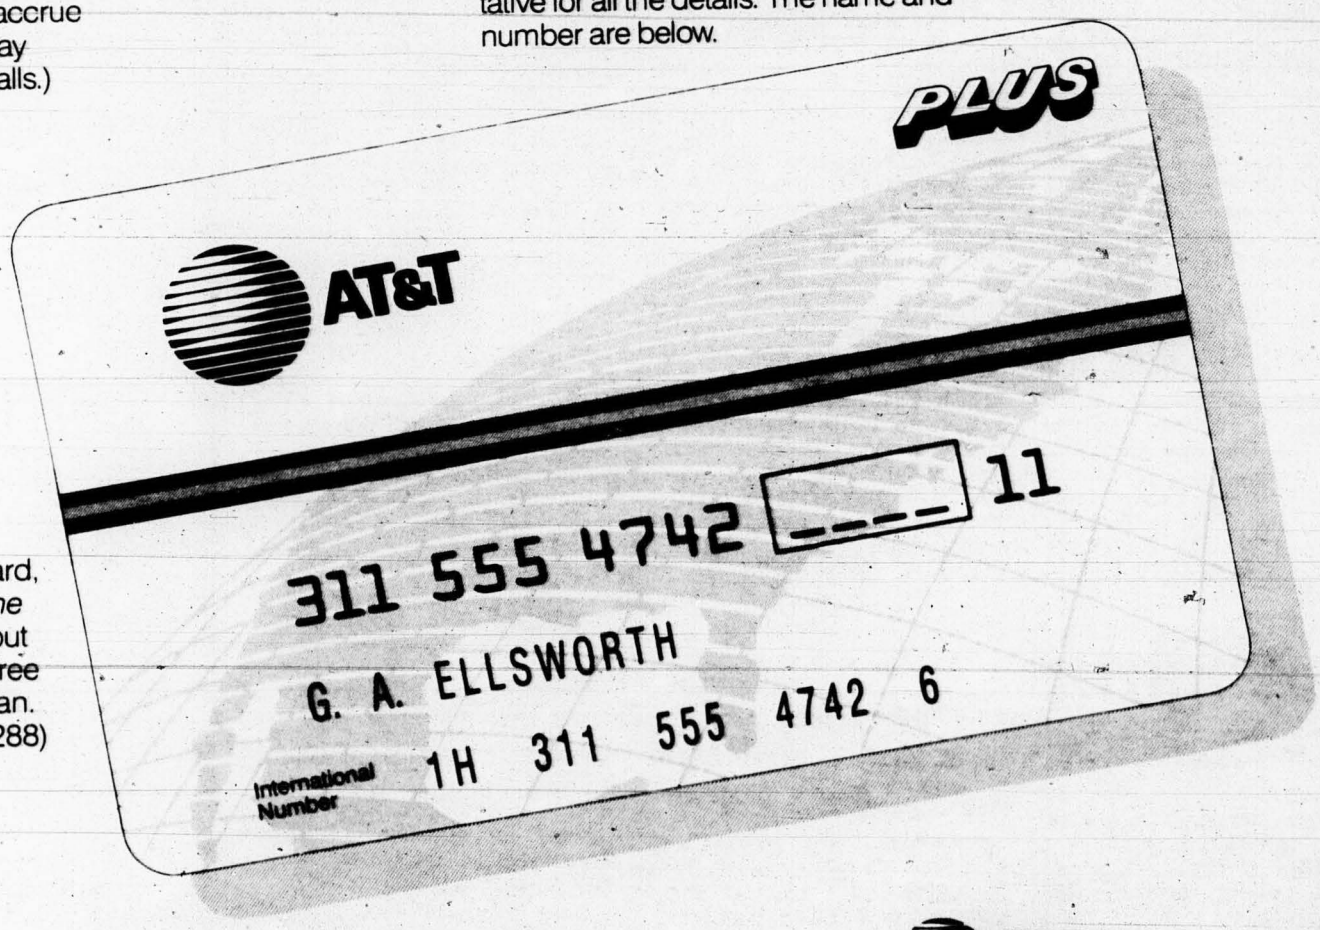
3. No payments for 6 months.



If you purchase your PC between now and March 1, 1987 using the AT&T Plus Card you will not have to make any payments before June 30, 1987. (Finance charges accrue from purchase date. Payment delay cannot be applied to telephone calls.)

4. A chance to win a free AT&T PC.

No purchase is necessary. And it's easy to enter your name. Just visit the AT&T display table in your student union tomorrow, or call your campus representative for all the details. The name and number are below.



For all the facts about the Plus Card, dial either number below. Only the campus rep can also tell you about the special UWS program—the free PC and the deferred payment plan.

Disgusting Reading

"The brim of my hat hides the eye of a beast."–Sting

Halloween was great. A beautiful princess kissed me on the lips. That was nice until the Children of the Corn performed some bizarre ritual all over me. Now I can't pronounce my "ing's."

We all have things in our past that we would rather not remember. There is an age-old fantasy of being able to relive the past knowing what we know today.

Imagine someone writing an "unauthorized biography" of you. It would include analogies of every screw-up you ever made as well as a complete history of your sex-life.

The screw-ups are easy to catalog; we remember them despite ourselves. This is because many of our screw-ups tend to comprise our sex-lives.

For some people, a complete sex-life history would be a nightmare to compile. Such a person might be sitting next to you at this very moment and neither of you might be aware of it.

Such a complete disclosure of someone's privacy would definitely affect the way you react to that person. This can be illustrated by asking any dorm resident which of his/her fellow residents sleeps with whom.

Celebrities sometimes see their dirty laundry published for the world to see. There is a lot of money in such biographies, especially if the subject is a horny slimeball.

In His Way: the Unauthorized Biography of Frank Sinatra, writer Kitty Kelley describes Frank Sinatra's sordid lifestyle. The guy has to be the King Maggot of all time.

This new book tells of a prostitute who complained that Sinatra had asked her to stay for breakfast, and then used a knife and fork to eat an order of ham and eggs off her chest.

People say that rock singers are depraved. At least David Lee Roth restricts himself to a glazed doughnut — to go.

If Sinatra decided to launch his own chain of restaurants, he'd have his pick of great jingles to sing like: "Have breakfast with the King."

It might be tough to find enough women to work under such conditions, but I'm sure there would be Maggots lined up around the block when Sinatra recruited "dishwashers."

Sure, it sounds gross, but keep an open mind. Just be sure to leave a hefty tip if you happen to like your eggs runny.

Cryptic Notes

Food for thought

Tim Hopkins

I never played by the rules. There was a high school game that always happened at lunch time. Time and again the girl sitting next to me talked about her need to diet. "I really need to lose some weight," was her opening line. I remember these comments because it was noticeable to me that none of these girls ever had to lose any weight.

My friends invariably fell into the trap by instinctively responding, "you look just right to me," allowing the girl to bathe in the glorious perception that she was worthy of their adulation.

I was a devious little rat-frotter as the girls would say. In anticipation of these daily antics concerning the need for dietary restraint, I knew what to say. Timing is everything. Rather than immediately chiming in the "you look just right to me" platitude, I would give pause to indicate a moment of thought on my part, followed by the comment, "you're right, you really do need to lose weight."

My response caused psychological distress in these girls who had asked their question presuming that the only response they could receive would assure them that they indeed did not need to lose any weight. They quickly learned that I was not the one with whom they should play their patronizing little games.

These wizened princesses learned never to sit at a lunch table where I was the only member of the opposite sex. Competition amongst the boys seemed to be what these girls appreciated most. Then they could make their statement, "I really need to lose weight," and enjoy the battle between the boys to be first to say, "you look just right to me." I could only say, "that's what happens when you forget to wear your glasses."

These games are fun for everyone because being first to say, "you look just right to me," is no ticket to heaven. You let her know how desperate you are to earn her affection. If you are a real pro, you casually toss off the "just right to me" response so that it appears you could have cared less if she heard you. Thus, you let her know that it's a far way to go for her to earn your admiration.

There was a queen in the midst of these princesses who appeared as a godess. She knew it too and that led to her undoing. She made the mistake of sitting at the table with the "caustic bastard," yours truly. I was out of her league and happy about that fact.

One day she sat at the table with me and a series of my friends who had agreed if this opportunity arose we would not let it pass by. We new what to do. Patrice, a godlike name, must have mistaken our desire to use her for own humorous ends as a keen interest to let her know exactly what a godess she was.

She made the common lead, "I really think I ought to lose some weight." After the obligatory moment of pseudo contemplation, we responded in glee "yes, and how do you propose to achieve such an enormous task?" Patrice did not stay for dessert.

Orchestra gave short, but rich concert

Delayed by 45 minutes The Concordia College Orchestra performed a truly soothing and enriching concert, Tuesday evening at Harvey Hall. The Orchestra came to Menomonie after an extensive tour of Europe.

by Denise Cain

Tuesday evening at 8:00 the Concordia College Orchestra Concert began with a spark as the Menomonie Fire Department rushed to Harvey Hall. Only moments before the performers were to begin, the alarms sounded sending the audience and musicians into the brisk night air of Menomonie.

Forty-five minutes later the 65 piece Concordia College Orchestra from Moorhead, Minnesota, conducted by J. Robert Hanson appeared at UW-Stout. The concert was co-sponsored by The Mabel Tainter Theater and UW-Stout.

Concordia College is a four-year liberal arts institution of The American Lutheran Church. Concordia is probably best known to everyone for their superior music department. The talented Concordia College Orchestra must share the limelight with four other performing instrumental groups as well as four renowned choirs.

Dr. J. Robert Hanson founded the Concordia College Orchestra in 1968. The Orchestra grew from a small ensemble to a full-fledged symphony. Just last May, the orchestra completed its first European tour. They played to audiences in York, Conventry, London, Paris, Lucerne, as well as other cities in Austria and West Germany.

Menomonie was the third of eleven stops of their fall concert tour. The group performances include school lyceums and public concerts at various locations in Minnesota and Wisconsin, including UW-La Crosse.

On their tours the members of the orchestra stay at homes of the community in which they are performing. These host families accomodate them with an evening meal, breakfast, and a comfortable place to sleep. This gives the college students a chance to be around a family unit and learn more about the communities they are visiting.

Menomonie was fortunate to host the Concordia Orchestra. It is not often that we are able to exhibit such a culturally stimulating production. For those of us who were not exposed to this type of music growing up, it gives us a chance to appreciate it in its best form.

The concert program performed at Menomonie included Giuseppe Verdi's "La Forza del Destino", "Concerto for Violin in D minor, Opus 47" by Jan Sibelius, in which Beth Felice, a violin instructor at Concordia soloed; and "Symphony No. 2 in C major, Opus 61", composed by Robert Schumann.

The music was soothing and enriching but most of all it was entertaining. Television cannot do justice to what a live performance brings to your senses. Even if you are not familiar with Concordia College or orchestral music it is well worth the time to experience. At Harvey Hall, the applause lingers as the smoke clears.

New class offers Stout students new direction in industrial design

by Jean-Marie Dauplaise

Product Innovation for Wisconsin Manufacturers is offered to UW-Stout students next semester looking to head in new directions in industrial design.

Put together by industrial design instructor Ed Stevens, the class gives advanced students an opportunity to get practical experience while expanding both their resume and portfolio.

Stevens is currently selecting the firms students will be working with in the class. Special consideration will be given small to medium sized businesses located within 100 miles of Menomonie if they are not currently working with a professional design office and are receptive to a mutually participative venture. A Faculty Research Initiation Grant awarded to Stevens will cover travel and material costs for the course.

The class will involve students in specific product development projects ranging from changes in current products or product lines to the creation of new products. The students will be assisting manufacturers by redesigning products to accommodate shifts in consumer needs and demands, variations in lifestyles, technological advancements and rising consumer wants and expectations.

The class is partially based on work already done by Stout's Design Research Center involving students working on special problems affecting the elderly and disabled segments of the population. Based on the program's past success, Stevens will incorporate the idea of such product improvements to practical situations for the mutual benefit of industry, consumers and students.

The class will involve students from a wide range of program areas. A select 20 students will be chosen based on their scholastic background and work experiences as well as a personal interview. Stevens say "The class will consist of a core of Industrial and Graphic Design students with a technical advisory team to offer business and technical expertise." Enrollment will consist of nine Industrial Design students, three Graphic Design students, three Product Development students, as well as three students from the Manufacturing area and two from Business or Marketing. Such a diverse interplay of background should provide ample room for students to contribute and participate effectively.

> "It promises to be an interesting program
> —Ed Stevens"

Through contact with Stevens and Johnson Wax of Racine, Wisconsin has already requested help from Stout in determining changes in delivery systems of products which would help the elderly with the purchase and use of items currently designed for a younger market. Industrial and Graphic Design classes are currently working on this project.

Through funding and critique reviews by Dave Edwards, Design manager at S.C. Johnson, the concepts will be developed in two-dimensional and model form to simulate actual products in three specific areas. The areas being addressed are; personal care, home care, and pesticides. This project is a major assignment for these design students this semester and will offer alternatives in product use for the rapidly growing elderly segment of the consumer population.

Stevens hopes to help Stout's reputation in the Design field as well as enhancing the educational value to students while offering them a chance to positively contribute to and answer consumer needs.

This three credit course, number 304-590, is scheduled Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 to 11 a.m. Interested students should contact Stevens at AA230, or call 232-2206 or 232-1141. "It promises to be an interesting program," said Stevens.

Banu Gibson, jazz performer, entertained a crowd gathered at the Mabel Tainter Theatre Monday night, with such favorites by Louie Armstrong, and songs like "Hard-Hearted Hannah." She was supported by the New Orleans Hot Jazz Orchestra. The show proved to be exciting.

Performer Banu Gibson enjoyed by audience

by S.J. Lomneas

I kept expecting more... not that she was not good or anything, but it just did not have that little something "extra". I have seen zillions of performers! I have even been on the road a time or two.... She was good, darn good. She had the audience eating out of the palm of her hand, and yet, I left with feeling that I had been had... that something was left out somewhere, somehow.

She was Banu Gibson jazz performer and the New Orleans Hot Jazz Orchestra. She performed Monday night at The Mabel Tainter Theatre.

So much of it was pure hype. Tell the audience what you want them to expect, and then deliver it. It is kind of like a well rehearsed speech. Still, in all, it was a very solid performance. She covered it all from Louie Armstrong (my favorite) to Hard-Hearted Hannah to Betty Boop. There was a lot of variety in the show. The middle aged people seem to enjoy her rendition of Betty Boop, perhaps it is because it is out of their era. "Muddy Waters" was one of my favorite songs that she did. It was a kind of soulful, bluesy song that fit my mood at the time.

Her band, the New Orleans Hot Jazz Orchestra were great. They are all very talented performers. The pianist, David Boeddinghaus was extremely talented. He played strictly by ear, which many of the good ones do, and he just let those fingers fly! Marvelous.

Dave Sager was the trombonist. He is very professional. You could tell he had a strong background in music, just by the way he played. Beautifully. Charlie Fardella was good. He could hold a note for an uncanny length of time, but Gibson topped any unfaltering note he might have made. They were incredibly good as a team.

Tom Saunders was my favorite. He played the tuba and the string bass. He sang a song about a gal who walked out on him, and how she would live to regret it. It was really funny! No matter what came up, Tom handled it with ease. Super mellow. Super good. And, huge! Banu thought we should compare them the next time they came through.

Steve Yocum played a strong cornet. He held notes without faltering. He played a few good solo pieces, and overall, did a real professional job. Richard Taylor was the favorite of many. In the middle of his solo his drumstick slipped out of his hand, missed two quick notes and he was back playing, better than ever!

Gibson was everything she was promised to be. She was a bright, bouncy entertainer. She had a lot of fun performing; and did everything from the Charleston to the Shimmey. She growled, and she pranced. The thing that amazed me the most was her size. On stage in her four inch heels she looked at least 5' 5". When I met with her, she was less than five feet tall, and real small boned. Very petite. Very alive.

The audience loved Gibson and her New Orleans Hot Jazz Orchestra. Most attending were townspeople and middle aged. But, as always there were a group of students.

All those to whom I talked thought they were great. Comments like "really neat people; they know what they are doing..." and "marvelous choice of songs..."

James "Unk" Falkofske

Sometimes people limit themselves. Their job, their school, their beer, even their records; always the same and never challenging. Open minds are hard to find.

It appears that America is moving away from the great melting pot theory; we no longer recognize that everyone has something to share. And so it is with music. Artists have commercialized themselves to the point where every group starts to sound very much like every other group. It's scary to think what pop music has become.

This week I have compiled a list of records that every well-rounded listener should possess. These records have one thing in common, they stand out as the best in their field.

"Morning Dance," Spiro Gyro

The group Spiro Gyro has a world wide reputation for their jazz. Their style combines traditional jazz with energetic percussion. The album contains the best of high-spirited jazz fusion. A cut of particular interest, Jubilee, combines diverse solos into one bright piece.

"What Do You Want From Life," The Tubes

A group that appeared here on campus several years ago, the Tubes combine a vivid and perverse stage show along with tantalizing lyrics. Best known in the 70's for "White Punks On Dope," this group from San Francisco started off the punk revolution. Two cuts that stand out on the album are "What Do You Want From Life," and "I Saw Her Standing There." The original album jacket is a must for anyone's collection.

"Eagles' Greatest Hits," The Eagles

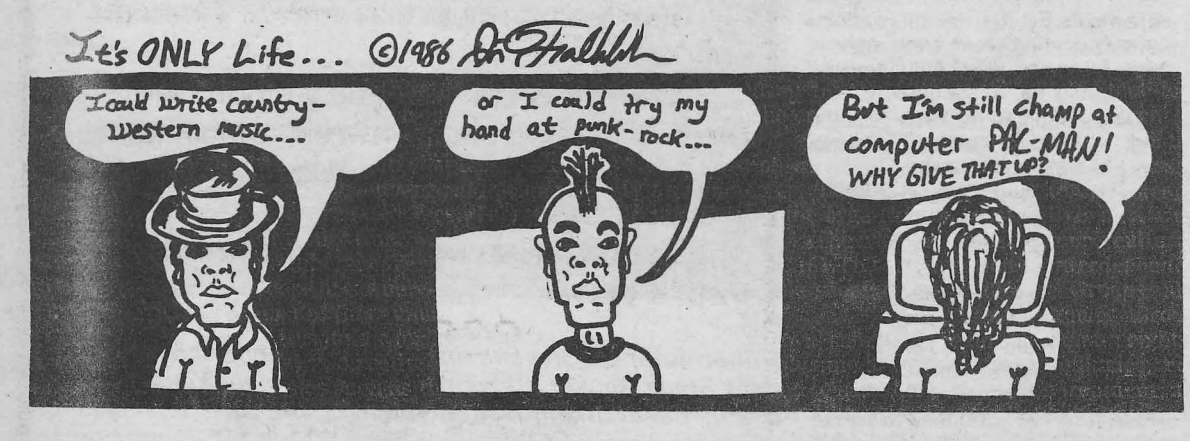
For ballads, there is no better. Although the group members parted to start solo careers, the words of Don Henley and Joe Walsh still live on in the folk-ballads of "Lyin' Eyes," "Desperado," and "Take It Easy." The album takes the Eagles' standards and combines them on one great album.

"The Black Album (Smell the Glove)," Spinal Tap

Although this album resulted from a psuedo rockuementary, the songs on this album could either be labeled as the best or the worst of modern heavy metal. If you can find the album, play it loud for a long time. Then see the movie.

"Golden Hits," Roger Miller

Country music with a sense of humor best describes the lyrics of Roger Miller. With songs like "My Uncle Used To Love Me, But She Died," and "Chug-A-Lug," Miller makes country fun.



GOING THE DISTANCE WITH US COULD BRING YOU $25,200 CLOSER TO SCHOOL.

If you're right out of high school and headed for additional schooling, one route you might consider is the Army. It's a route that will bring you up to $25,200 for educational assistance, as well as valuable skill training, if you qualify.

It's available through the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. As a soldier, you contribute $100 a month from your first full 12 months' paychecks (for a total of $1,200). The government and the Army contribute the rest (up to $9,600 from the government and up to $14,400 from the Army).

The skill training you receive will challenge you. It'll give you new knowledge, experience and pride. It's tough, but it's worth it.

If you can go the distance, we'll put you closer. With the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. Call your local Army Recruiter for more information.

Fashion designs 'turn a few heads'

by Noreen Spraner

"Turn a Few Heads" is this year's title for the fashion promotions class' annual benefit for Easter Seals. The show will feature fashion designs from about a dozen Stout students, and clothing and accesories from Menomonie, Eau Claire, and Twin Cities merchants. The show can be seen at the Memorial Student Center Great Hall at 12 noon, Thursday, Nov. 13. Tickets, which can be purchased at the service center desk, are $1.00.

In Eau Claire the show will be at 6:30, Nov. 15, at the Civic Center Inn. Cocktails will precede the show between 5:30 and 6:30. The tickets are $10.00 each, and can be reserved by calling the Civic Center Inn at (715) 835-6121. All proceeds go to Easter Seals.

"The main portion of our merchandise will be from Eau Claire and Menomonie," said Adrienne Yost, one of the show's directors.

> "It is incredible
> —Adrienne Yost"

Merchandise that can not be found in this area, is from Twin Cities retailers.

"One set will be Stout designers. The designers and models will be modeling the designer's clothing," said Yost.

The designers from Stout who will be showing their own creations are: Sandy Grace, Gabriele Bergenthal, Kaleene Kenning, Kim Mickelberg, Chantel Grotbeck, Ann Tilque, Roxanne Hayenga, Pamela Schultz, Chris De Coster, Barb Schwartz, Karen Teig, and Jilline Holliday.

"It is put on by the fashion promotions class. There are two classes and they combine their work to make the show. It is the fashion promotions class main class project. The two classes have to combine their ideas. We never meet during class time. It is incredible," said Yost, "that we can get this done."

In addition to director Yost, the other main participants are Colleen Byrne (show director), and producers Wendy Swiggum and Deana Pricket. Mary Welch is the fashion promotions class instructor.

Master puppeteer David Syrotiak brings renowned skills to Tainter

by Eric Hampton

"Puppetry is a synthesis of the arts: sculpture, design, music, mime, dance and theatre. And the puppet itself...it is the crystallization of the imagination and magic of the puppeteer." Sounds good, huh? I have got to admit that I am about as puppet-illiterate as the next guy. Miss Piggy is about the extent of my knowledge, but David Syrotiak, producer, master puppeteer and director of the National Marionette Theatre, seems to have the credentials to make his statement believable.

Syrotiak has over twenty-five years experience in puppetry, and is recognized as one of the finest puppeteers in the world today. This Friday, Nov. 7, Syrotiak and his National Marionette Theatre company bring their renowned skills to Menomonie for a 7:30 p.m. performance of "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" at Mabel Tainter Theater.

The National Marionette Theatre company has been in existence for over thirty-five years and has travelled all over the world with their semi-annual international tours. Last season, the company performed in Switzerland, France, Italy and Jerusalem, in addition to their regular United States shows (close to two hundred a year). Plans are being formed for the troupe to visit Yugoslavia, France and England next year.

Under the leadership of Syrotiak, the company has gained a reputation for excellence not only in visual performance, but also for the ingenuity and skill of their manipulation technique. This notoriety has resulted in a number of awards for the company, most notably a citation of excellence in adult puppetry from the Union International de la Marionette. The National Marionette Theatre is the first American marionette company to receive the award.

"Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," a classic story from the Arabian Nights stories, promises to be a fascinating and entertaining performance for people of all ages. Tickets for the presentation are $2.50 for children and $4.75 for adults. For more information, call the Mabel Tainter Theater at 235-9726. There just may be more to puppetry than Miss Piggy, after all.

Campus Cuisine

Hi mom, send money

Denise Cain

Being Campus Cuisine is not as glamorous as most of you would imagine. You probably think I spend all of my free time creating fascinating dishes so I can have something to publish every Thursday afternoon. This is simply not true. Most of the time I sit down on Sunday afternoon and start scratching away on an old class syllabus sheet. On Monday morning I try to read what I thought I was writing and edit it on the computer system.

The whole process only takes about four hours, but the mental strain is measureless. The small salary I get from the Stoutonia hardly compensates for the vast knowledge I contribute, let alone the immense pressure it causes me. But like everyone tells me, it will look good on the resume; as if I will ever graduate.

It is only common cents that I would use the salary that the Stoutonia pays me to buy groceries to make more Campus Cuisine food. However, here at the Stoutonia they somehow skipped over that last bit of sense. In simpler terms, they have failed to pay me since I began this job last April.

As with most college students, I do not really NEED the money. I can probably do without food, heat, and clothing; I am in college. But I can hardly cook and present recipes to you that I have not made. I guess I could have written a column on how to survive on peanut butter sandwiches, but most of us know how to any way. So I dedicate this column to whomever out there has money, (bon appetite).

The first recipe was given to me from Chuck Klann. Chuck is a high jumper and hurdler for the Blue Devil track squad and he feels that his recipe is the secret to his athletic abilities. (It is more than apparent to the coaches at the fieldhouse that I have never eaten this.)

sirloin steak, 1/2" thick, or as thin as possible 1 can of mushrooms onions
1/4 lb. butter
Lawry's seasoning salt

Melt the butter in a skillet and add steak. Cook over moderate heat. In a saucepan melt a small amount of butter, add mushrooms and onions. Saute until the butter has dissipated. When the steak is almost done cooking, sprinkle it with seasoning salt. Top the steak with the mushrooms and onions and sprinkle once again with seasoning salt. Simmer all ingredients for 3-5 minutes.

At the beginning of the school season, I could even afford to buy the ingredients for this dessert. It is so easy to make that even someone rich could handle it. It is important to keep all of the ingredients, the bowl, and the beaters very, very cold. To finish the pie, top it with real whipped cream and Hershey chocolate bar shavings. To make the shavings just chill the candy bar and use your carrot peeler to scrape the chocolate.

French Silk Pie

1/2 cup butter
3/4 cup sugar
1 sq.unsweetend chocolate
2 eggs

Cream together the butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add chocolate. Beat in eggs one at a time, beating five minutes after each egg. Pour into pie shell. Chill 1-2 hours and top with whipped cream and chocolate.

Crunchy Pie Crust

1 & 1/2 cups graham cracker crumbs, (about 20 squares)
3 tbsp. sugar
1/3 cup melted margerine

Heat oven to 350-degrees. Mix crumbs, sugar and margerine. Press mixture firmly against bottom and side of pie plate. Bake for 10 minutes.

You can substitute the graham cracker crumbs with vanilla or chocolate wafers, or gingersnaps. When you make the recipe this way, decrease the margerine to 1/4 cup and delete the sugar completely.

As a final note, I would like to declare my guilt for all of the fruit strewn haphazardly throughout the Spot Bar Halloween night. Never again will I wear fresh fruit on my head without bringing along whipping cream and marshmallows to make a salad.

Runners earn right to compete at Nationals

by Nancy Janecek

The Blue Devil cross country team earned the right to go on to the national level meet with Saturday's performance in Eau Claire.

Finishing fifth at the 26th Wisconsin State University Conference Cross Country Championships, the team qualified to run in the National Athletic Intercollegiate Association National Championships November 15th in Kenosha, Wis.

A clear, cool day with a slight wind provided quick conditions at the Hillcrest Country Club last weekend. Arnie Schrader, UW-Stevens Point, took first in 24:29. Both Schrader and Jim Batchelor, UW-La Crosse, with a time of 24:50, broke the course record.

Again leading Stout, Paul Bons came in at 25:46 for seventh place. The top five for Stout were Bons, Todd Fox, Tom McGavock, Darron Vanman and Bob Hackley.

Coach Klitzke said, "This is the best place we had hoped for. We still have not peaked. Thanks to Michelle Ennis, a track quarter-miler, we had a complete team to score ahead of Superior, Platteville and Green Bay."

UW-La Crosse's Sheri Winter won the race in 18:04.

Stout's Sue Rabas ran more than 30 seconds faster than she has this season and now has a new personal record of 19:56.

> "The chemistry is positive, the spirit, electric"
> —Coach Klitzke

It was a dramatic finish for Winter and Lynn Bouche, UW-Milwaukee. Bouche had led the entire race, but Winter closed gradually in the last three-quarter mile. More than thirty seconds ahead of the rest of the field, the two hurled themselves across the finish. Winter was declared the winner because her right shoulder and arm were slightly ahead as they both fell.

Stout has qualified a men's team for either NAIA or Division III NCAA National Championships in five of the last six years. This year's team looks strong and ready. According to Coach Klitzke, this is the strongest conference in the nation, so the Blue Devils know their competition.

Most improved and Stout's hope for the future is freshman Tom McGavock. McGavock moved up to third place on the team from sixth or seventh at the beginning of the season.

Coach Klitzke and the team now have one day to concentrate on — the national championships November 15.

Coach Klitzke said, "At that time we hope we can have seven runners at or near their best. It will take careful training to avoid getting stale or injured. It's exciting to work with this group. The chemistry is positive, the spirit, electric."

Only one Stout runner, Dave Wolff, has ever earned All-American status, in 1983. Both Bons and Fox could achieve that goal if they finish in the top 25.

Stout's Luke Lucas ran in a conference meet held in Eau Claire last Saturday. Lucas finished with a time of 21:45, her personal best. The Blue Devil cross country team will compete in nationals.

Centaurs come from behind to defeat NMU Moose

Stout Centaurs Captain P.J. McDonnell advances the ball through heavy traffic. The Centaurs came back from a 0-9 deficate, to beat Northern Michigan University 14-9.

by Slash La Freniere

It may have been cold outside last Saturday, but inside the hearts of the Stout ruggers it was really warm. The Stout Centaurs Rugby Club defeated Northern Michigan University 14-9 in a come from behind victory. The NMU Moose had the lead for the most part of the game, but the Stout Centaurs never gave up hope and came back for an impressive win.

> "...but we came through in the clinch"
> —Mark Miller

NMU established themselves early on in the match and they set up a great deal of the loose ball via the maul. Because of these mauls, the NMU backs were able run many plays from them. The advantage gained from a maul is one of many clean passes to the back line and a result of a clean pass is a clean run. NMU scored a try early on and the conversion for a 6-0 lead.

The Stout Centaurs were very frustrated by NMU's control of the ball and Stout's frustrations were evident in the amount penalties called on them. NMU benefited from these penalties and the NMU Moose were able to score on a penalty kick. This kick brought the score to NMU 9, Stout 0.

The Centaurs then began to pull together as a team. Late in the first half, the ball was getting out to the back line the way that it is supposed to. John "Stones" Livingston broke free on a long run where he eluded many would-be tacklers and scored a try that brought the morale of the Centaurs up to a lofty level. The score at the half stood at NMU 9, Stout 4.

In the second half play became very physical. Stout kept NMU bottled up in their own end with aggressive play. The Centaurs went to their strength, the scrum, to win the ball and then they would advance the ball with the back line. Finally, John Wangen scored a try off of a pick-up from a scrum. The conversion attempt was wide and the score stood at NMU 9, Stout 8.

Stout kept the pressure on and NMU tried to advance the ball by booting it back at the Centaurs. If it weren't for the sure hands and strong foot of Stout fullback Billy "Goat", the game result might have been different. NMU seemed to get crushed by the force of the Centaurs and scrumhalf Jim McGuine took advantage of the situation to score a try from in close. John Livingston's conversion was good and Stout had the lead and the victory 14-9.

Rugby Club President John Wangen said, "NMU was a lot tougher than I thought they would be, but we came through in the clinch." Mark Miller added, "They were a really physical team and it came down to who could hit the hardest for the longest. We just wore them down."

Physical play has become a trademark of the Stout Centaurs, but Saturday's game saw an added dimension to the Centaurs game. The Back line. Said Mike Weege,

Go to a Green Bay game

Paul Wydeven

Now, more than ever, is the ultimate time to go to a Green Bay Packer game. No, I have not lost my mind. One just has to think about this logically.

The first and most important reason, is to go to a tail gate party. At the tail gate party you want to get totally wasted so you don't remember any of the game. You also sit around talking to other fans that share your opinion, that the Packers really suck. The differences come when you argue how bad they suck.

The tail gate party also helps during this time of year, when you have to listen to how bad they played before to build up your tolerance for their expected poor performance and to build up your tolerance for the cold weather.

The last reason to go tail gate party is to plan strategy on how to insult the Packers during the game. The ultimate strategy is to have your whole section wear brown paper bags that say "Bring back Bart", and sing the Packer shuffle in unison.

Now when you go to buy your tickets, if you didn't have friend of yours offer them to you, go to a Green Bay bar and shout "I'll buy you a beer for two Packer tickets." If this does not work try "I'll buy you two beers for two Packer tickets," but be careful with this technique or you will end up with two dozen tickets.

Another way to buy the tickets is go to a scalper, these people are having big discount sales, especially if you want a group rate.

The fun part of actually going to the game is that you actually get to shout your insults at the Packers themselves. The best part of the game is the fact that you don't have to watch replays.

Another good reason for going to a game is to watch Gregg flinch his nose in person. It's so cute and it's about the only talent the Packers have to show.

If the above reasons are not go enough to convince you to go to a game, In any given game there is always the chance that the Packers could actually play football. Then again, miracles do occur and the Packers might possibly win and you could say "I saw the Packers win!" or better yet "I witnessed a miracle!"

Walking for fitness an alternative for those with a lack of motivation

by Jenna Sue Martin

Do you find exercise programs to be routine, boring? Is it difficult for you to motivate yourself into going for a jog? Do you have problems finding time to join a fitness class?

The latest craze to hit America involves an exercise that is one of the most effective, enjoyable, and cheapest physical and emotional therapies available.

Who could have guessed that Americans would attempt to jog their way to health before taking on one of the oldest and most beneficial methods of maintaining fitness around, walking.

Is walking as beneficial to you as jogging? The experts say, "Yes." Walking briskly at four to five miles per hour between 30 to 45 minutes is equivalent to 20 to 30 minutes of medium paced jogging.

Walking also reduces the strain on your heart and lungs as compared to running. Jogging is helpful but many programs continually tell people to run faster, run farther.

An added strain is being put on the heart as your heart beat is pushed up too high for too long. Runners can over exert themselves causing more damage than good.

Some of the same results can be obtained from walking as in other forms of fitness. Walking exercises the heart, decreases blood pressure, and burns off excess calories.

Weight is lost more evenly from the fat reserves all over your body, not just in areas around your legs and other major muscle groups.

The best thing about walking is that all you have to do is put one foot in front of the other and go. You do not need to be a star athlete to accomplish this feat.

The connection between mind and body is evident. Taking a walk can relieve the stress and tension built up, helping you towards feeling good about yourself both mentally and physically.

Anxiety, depression, and impatience all may eventually end up turning themselves into backaches, headaches, fatigue, high blood pressure and ulcers.

The only equipment needed for this fitness program is comfortable clothing, a good pair of shoes, and a watch to keep track of your heart rate.

What type of shoes should you wear? They should have a heel of about 1 1/2 inches, sole flexibility in the front part of the shoe, and plenty of cushioning for a comfortable fit.

How far should you walk? At first, begin with 20 minutes every other day. This equals about one and a half miles at 3 mph. After a few weeks, increase to 45 minutes, going at least two and a half miles.

Once you feel comfortable walking an hour without tiring, try more difficult courses. Walk for unbroken periods of time to maintain a steady heart rate.

To find your heart rate target zone, take your age and subtract it from 220. From this, take 70 of that number. This is your minimum target zone. Take 85 of your value to get the maximum. Your heart rate should remain between these two numbers.

Before walking, it is a good idea to stretch out. This helps prevent the aches and strains which appear after you begin any exercise program. Some of the same stretches joggers use before a workout can be used in walking.

Walking has been with us since childhood but Americans are just now realizing how beneficial this tool can really be. It is an exercise which is both relaxing and a physical workout at the same time.

"Where all other athletes must be in attention to the way they move, the walker can find his inner world (and outer world, too) no more than a short stroll from home.

He steps out his front door, views the universe and knows that it is good. The walker has found the peace that the runner still seeks." Dr. George Sheehan

Walking is a way of life. What better way to maintain your health? Be a part of the new fitness generation, walk your way to a healthier body, it really works.

Calvin Natt, forward for the Denver Nuggets, plans to play basketball. Natt suffered a severe Achilles tendon tear in season opener game against San Antonio. The following day, surgurons had to reattach the tendon to the bone.

Clinkscale cuts Colts

Indianapolis Colt, Dexter Clinkscale says his team suffers from a bad attitude. Clinkscale, a former Dallas Cowboy, signed as a strong saftey with the Colts last week. Adding that the other players are not losers, but "some of the guys have gotten used to it. And that's pathetic."

Flutie activated

The Chicago Bears activated quarterback Doug Flutie, but Coach Mike Ditka would not say who would start Sunday against Tampa Bay. Ditka did say that of the Bears four quarterbacks Jim McMahon would not start because of his shoulder injury.

Blue Devil spikers lose bid for conference tournament berth with loss to UW-Oshkosh

by Katie Keran

The UW-Stout women's volleyball season is now over. The lady Blue Devils finished the season by tying the record of the most wins in a season. The team won 49 percent of their matches which is an increase over last years 42 percent match wins. Unfortunately though, the team was unable to participate in the conference tournament because they finished seventh in the conference. Only the top six teams get to compete in the conference tourney.

Going into last weeks schedule, the Blue Devils had a chance to make it to conference if they had defeated Oshkosh on October 29th. But the squad fell to Oshkosh 13-15, 13-15. Coach Lynda Lee said, "We didn't play with the desire necessary to beat Oshkosh." She added, "I was extremely disappointed, as I had set my personal goals on getting the team to the conference tournament this year."

Playing well in different areas in the loss to Oshkosh were Carol Bufe, Mish Espe, Val Devries and Wendy Morrow. Bufe and Espe both served 100 percent. Leading the team with kills were Devries with 7, Bufe with 6 and Morrow with 6. But the total team kill percentage was only 7 percent. Coach Lee said regarding the loss, "It was a tough match to lose, it was especially hard because the Oshkosh team was celebrating their parents night which made it difficult playing in front of their crowd."

The team also lost to UW-La Crosse on October 29th. Wendy Morrow had 77 percent kills in that match. But the team was only serving 77 percent, well below their usual 85-90 percent. The scores of that match were 9-15, 1-15.

On Halloween weekend, the Blue Devils placed 5th place in the Trick or Treat Tourney in River Falls. The team started out slowly, losing both matches on Friday night to Hamline and Luther. But on Saturday, they revenged their loss to Oshkosh by defeating them 15-6, 12-15, and 15-11. They also beat St. Catherines 15-13, 15-13. This gave them the consolation championship.

Coach Lee had set her hopes on finishing in the top four and although she was pleased with their playing on Saturday she said, "That's all it is — consolation." The two seniors on the team Valerie Devries and Wendy Morrow were understandably disappointed also.

Lee said, "The win over Oshkosh was a highlight of the tourney... and it assured us a seventh place finish in the conference compared to eighth or ninth had we lost that match." Lee was pleased with the team tying last years win record saying, "I'm proud of our accomplishments...and coming two matches away from having a winning season is certainly a first for women's volleyball at Stout." Coach Lee's goals for next year are to finish 5th in the WWIAC and to play at the conference tournament.

Next year the team should be looking solid. They lost two key starters in Valerie Devries and Wendy Morrow, but they have a good nucleus in the other starters and the youth of their bench. Senior Wendy Morrow and Junior Mish Espe are up for All-Conference honors. In addition, Morrow also made the all-tournament team at the Trick or Treat tournament. The season ended for the Blue Devils with a cumulative record of 22-23 and a conference record of 6-13.

The Blue Devils fall to St. Ambrose

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devils lost this past Saturday to St. Ambrose, 21-14.

The opening drive was started at the 34-yard line by St. Ambrose. This drive was taken in for a score after only six plays which gave St. Ambrose a 6-0 lead. This drive was capped with a 14-yard touchdown run from Rick Solis. The point after attempt was no good. A Blue Devil fumble at the 43-yard line gave St. Ambrose another quick score. This was a one-yard run by Kelly Smith. The point after was run in by Tim Jackson from 2 yards out. This gave St. Ambrose a 14-0 lead with the game still in the first quarter.

Down 14-0 early in the game and having their first possession fumbled away, the Blue Devils were singing the same tune they had in past weeks. But then something different happened. Stout quarterback Tim Peterson led a 5-play drive for a touchdown, capped by a 2-yard Brian Striggle run. The point after attempt by Jim Gorecki was good, making the score 14-7.

> "We have nothing to lose
> —Ron Wise"

Then the Stout defense took over. Of the next five drives, St. Ambrose was forced to punt four times and failed to move the ball on the fifth.

St. Ambrose was just as successful in shutting down the Blue Devil offense.

The final drive started at the 42-yard line. This time the Blue Devil defense was unable to stop the marching St. Ambrose offense. With four seconds left in the half St. Ambrose scored a 3-yard pass completion to Tod Weeks from Rick Solis, capping an excellent one minute drive. The point after from Melink was good, giving them the halftime lead of 21-7.

The second half was characterized with both teams playing a fine defensive game. The only let up was late in the third quarter. After leading a drive from the 45-yard line, Peterson scored with a 2-yard dash into the end zone. The point after was good by Jim Gorecki making the score 21-14. This ended the scoring for the game.

Even with the loss, Stout still performed much better than in past couple of weeks. Some fine performances were by Tim Peterson, the freshmen quarterback, in his second start went 21 for 36, with a two-yard touchdown run, and by Ron Wise,a Senior Wide receiver, who had seven catches for 70-yards. It was the Blue Devil defense that was responsible for shuting out St. Ambrose in the second half.

Saturday, Stout plays UW-River Falls here at home for Stout's final home game of the season. Ron Wise, a Senior, predicted, "We're in the spoiler roll and they (meaning River Falls) better be ready for us." He later added, "We have nothing to lose." River Falls is the only undefeated team in conference play along with being ranked seventh in the nation. They do on the other hand have one loss and that being to St. Ambrose in which they lost by one point.

Stout Head Coach Rich Lawrence's outlook on next week is, "I think our people realize that they can play with them. But, we can't keep making the same mistakes that we keep making."

"It was fun to win and our backfield has improved a lot."

The Centaur "Killer B's" were not so lucky on Saturday. They were defeated 24-4 by NMU. Stout's lone try was scored by Brian Hess.

This coming Saturday is the final match for the Stout Rugby Club. The Centaurs face long time foe UW-Milwaukee at Galloway Park at 1 p.m. Milwaukee has never defeated Stout in four years of play.

John Wangen said, "It always is a lot of fun to play Milwaukee." It should be fun to watch because Milwaukee has won 5 games in a row. The Stout Centaurs invite all fans to join them and "D" side Johnny for fan appreciation day on Saturday.

Students displeased over tuition increases

by Karen Smith

Student leaders from UW-Stout told a hearing before the Board of Regents that proposed tuition increases, enrollment caps, and standardized tests, would pose a hardship for students in the UW-System.

The student leaders appeared at a public hearing on the report of the Board of Regents study group on the future of the UW-System, which was held last Wednesday in Madison.

According to the Leader-Telegram, in its report, the 20-member study group states that the UW-System "is currently underfunded by $116 million per year" and says annual state funding of the system lags $600 per student behind the national average for public universities.

The committee made proposals to raise an additional $88 million a year in order to bring the underfunded system up to the national average in spending per student.

> "A college education is becoming out of reach for many —Jim Falkofske"

It is proposed that $88 million can be generated from three different sources: state tax dollars, tuition increases and reduced student enrollments.

Jim Falkoske, one of the three Stout Student Association (SSA) students who attended the hearing, spoke against tuition increases.

Falkofske explained to the Regents how any substantial increases would affect students, especially those who are from middle-class families and are unable to receive any financial aid or grants.

"A tuition increase of $100 or more per semester next year will force me to drop out of school," Falkoske said.

"A college education is becoming out of reach for many otherwise intelligent students because of its cost," added Falkofske.

"Knowledge is power," Falkofske continued. "Those who have knowledge become powerful. Soon, only the rich will have power."

Stout student representatives are also on the inadvisability of what is called "enrollment management," by the use of enrollment caps.

SSA Senator Tom Aumann, who spoke at the hearing on this problem, said that enrollment caps would mean that some students applying at the larger campuses would be denied access, although the intent of the caps is an effort to shift enrollments to the smaller campuses in the system.

In Aumann's speech to the Board at the hearing, he mentioned that this would also deny access to higher education for tens of thousands in the next decade.

"It is my opinion that if enrollment caps are implemented, they will reduce the quality of education by forcing thousands of potentially high achieving students out of the UW-System," Aumann said.

"Access to higher education for all students and the right to attend the university of their choice is and must stay with the UW-System," said Aumann, "or this system will result in not only limit education, but lower education."

Vice President of Academic Affairs for SSA, Julie Weiss spoke against standardized tests at the public hearing. Weiss mentioned many problems with these tests, such as discrimination against minorities, the individuals state of mind on the day the test was taken, students outside activities which are not taken into consideration on the test and a student's creativity.

"We are talking about people here, not computers," Weiss said.

Weiss also expressed concerns about where the money will come from that the UW needs to keep up with the national average.

"If we don't get money from the state, there will be tuition increases and enrollment cuts in some form — it's a reality," Weiss said.

Weiss noted that any effects of the proposal would not be immediate. A proposal, once it has been made, must pass through legislation.

"We probably won't know until summer what will be done, and we might not see the change until the '88 school year," Weiss said.

Weiss also mentioned a petition that is being signed by students here at Stout which asks for an end to tuition increases and urges our elected representatives to enact a statutory tuition cap at 30 percent of the cost of our instruction.

The petition has been signed by 500 students, said Weiss, and it is planned to be sent to different legislators, and possibly the Governor.

Increased student loans dangerous to borrowers

by Bonz Bohnert

Recent increases in student loan maximums may be "dangerous" to those who borrow, according to some UW-System representatives.

Students will now be able to borrow $2,500 annually during their first two years of school and $4,000 during their last three under recent provisions in the five year renewal of the Higher Education Act.

Currently, undergraduate students are limited to annual loans of $2,500.

President of United Council Bryce Tolefree said he fears higher loan limits could cause "an underclass of indebted students" who borrow more than they will be able to repay.

United Council is the state-wide student government association which comprises student representatives from campuses across the state.

Third District Congressman Steve Gunderson, firm supporter of the loan maximum increases, said that many students "will benefit from the increases in loan levels and expanded opportunities provided by this Act."

Kurtis Kindschi, UW-Stout Director of Financial Aids, said that increased student loan maximums will "allow the capability for future over-indebtedness to hit students harder than it does now."

"We all think of the next day rather than the future," said Kindschi, expressing his concern that students might not realize the amounts they will eventually be required to repay.

According to Tolefree, increases in loan maximums were a part of a Congressional plan to transcend from an equality in student grants and loans to a heavier emphasis on loans.

Stout's Financial Aid Office, 210 Bowman Hall, offers a student loan repayment evaluation service to all students free of charge.

Kindschi explained that by calculating student's outstanding loans with their expected earnings and interest rates, the office is able to approximate the student's future payment rates and amounts.

"It (the computing process) takes less than a minute," said Kindschi, encouraging that all Stout students with loans utilize the service.

Hostile protest seen as evidence of liberty

University students of San Salvador took part in the largest protest against America to occur in that country in years, hurling rocks and calling President Napoleon Duarte names.

Duarte was visiting the campus to evaluate damage caused by last month's earthquake.

Students burned an effigy of Uncle Sam and called Duarte a murderer.

Duarte said that the protests "show that there is a climate of liberty in the country."

Birth control in schools debated

In a shared news conference, the U.S. Education Secretary argued against birth control dispensed in school clinics, while former-First Lady Rosalyn Carter supported the idea.

Education Secretary William Bennett called contraceptive services for high school system "a moral and pedagogical disaster."

Carter said, in response, "I think as long as one-third of girls are having babies, we're going to have to do something."

UW proposes spending increase

The UW-System will be voting on a budget proposal on Friday, Nov. 14, which calls for tuition increases, pay raises and an increase in tax revenue for the university system.

The Regents requested an increase in their budget to increase the number of undergraduate classes and cut their size, increase the number of professors at the teaching level and increase services provided by laboratories, libraries and computer centers, among other things.

Audit claims UW lacks effective planning

Administrators of the UW-System have been blasted for lack of leadership and planning. The accusation was made by the Legislative Audit Bureau in a 45-page report released on Monday, 10.

UW administration, according to the report prepared by auditors for the state legislature, has not provided "effective leadership and control in managing the university," which they said has hampered the Board of Regents.

The report cited lack of management of enrollment, specifically, as well as ineffective management of campus spending and academic programs.

Fieldhouse addition project approved

by Carol Banks

UW-Stout will soon be getting the fieldhouse addition it has been needing for a long time.

The present physical education facilities were constructed over twenty years ago and can only accommodate 2800 students. Now, with a population of well over 6000 students, the existing building is inadequate for classroom and training needs.

Assistant Athletic Department Director Rita Slinden said that, since the current building only accommodated 2500 students, "it wasn't too difficult to justify asking for this space."

> "We're certainly looking forward to the realities of it
> —Rita Slinden"

The Stout Physical Educational Addition and Remodeling project is slated for groundbreaking sometime next spring. The total cost of the project has been estimated at $5,000,000.

Due to current administrative policy, most building projects can pass through the state legislature only as additions to current buildings on university campuses.

Much of the existing fieldhouse will remain, although there will be a substantial amount of remodeling done to the existing building.

Certain considerations have to be included in any state building project. Those considerations include proper facilities for both men and women, handicapped access and energy conservation.

Access for individuals that are disabled will be greatly improved by the new fieldhouse addition.

"The new addition will allow a ground level entrance into the building, something we don't have now," observed Slinden.

Slinden recalled that just a few years ago an elevator had been installed in the current building.

She remembers that, "we used to carry our students up the steps," referring to how disabled students had to be transported to classes on upper level floors.

The addition will include new classrooms, staff office space, as well as new recreational facilities. There will be four racquetball courts and a new weight training room which will be above the new women's locker room.

"The biggest addition," notes Slinden, "will be the multi-purpose room."

The multi-purpose room in the new addition will be about the size of a football field on the inside and will accommodate facilities for a variety of sports.

There will be a six-lane, 200-meter running track with a net that can be dropped so that other sports can be conducted at the same time. There will be four basketball courts--two regulation college courts and two that will be high school size. When not in use for other events there will be six volleyball or tennis courts.

The multi-purpose room will also be set up for indoor meets, baseball practice and golf classes. Nets will be placed against the wall where balls could be hit into it.

Slinden noted that the construction will have to be done in carefully planned stages so that current programming and classes can continue.

The remodeling and addition project was finally approved in Madison in September.

The new construction project has been a necessity for the campus for well over ten years, according to State Representative Dick Shoemaker.

The Menomonie Democrat said that he worked hard on this project, particularly in the last biennium, the two-year legislative period in which laws are created and passed in the state.

As Shoemaker noted, "I think I spoke to at least 200 individuals and wrote about 500 letters, we left no stone unturned."

It took some negotiating to get the Stout project to the floor of the Wisconsin Senate. The project had been put on top, then dropped a number of times before it finally came to the top of the UW-System list of priorities.

It's a long, steady process for a bill to go up the ladder, as Shoemaker called it. The fieldhouse project started with the Building Committee, an unusual place for a university project to originate, but as chairman of the State Affairs Committee, Shoemaker was in a position to see it through.

Before the project even reached the Senate floor, it had to be debated and passed through several other committees. The bill was finally passed by the Senate.

Last spring, the Stout community waited for Governor Earl to arrive on campus to sign the bill for the long-awaited project only to find that he had been fogged in at the airport.

The bill was eventually signed by the Governor and construction preparations have already begun.

"It seemed like just a dream," said Slinden. "We're certainly looking forward to the realities of it."

Installation of new utility lines will connect the north UW-Stout campus with the central heating plant. The resulting shift from natural gas to coal is expected to reduce utility costs. The construction will be done in two phases, the second of which will start in the spring.

Construction project to improve north campus

by Catherine Schneider

What currently appears as mountains of soil and mazes of tunnels encircling north campus, is Stout's latest construction known as the "Steamline Project."

"It is the most economical option available," said mechanical designer Pat Rolph.

The overall goals of the project are to reduce the cost of heating the north campus halls, reduce utility charges, and lower maintenance costs.

Rolph said that the project has two distinct phases.

The first segment consists of running a high pressure steamline for heat and hot water from the central heating plant to the north campus halls. Presently these halls are heated by five 25 year-old boilers which utilize natural gas.

The new steamline will enable the entire campus to be heated by coal. This should lower the costs of heating since the university will be able to purchase coal in a larger quantity and the price should be more stable than that of natural gas.

The second part of the project involves installing a primary electrical system which will connect the south and north campus utilities. The linkage will include electricity, telephone network and computer line services.

The project, which was approved by the UW-System in November, 1985, entered into the first construction phase this fall.

The construction, currently located between Hovlid and Tainter Halls, will eventually move past The Tap, down between the First Federal Bank and the Bank of Menomonie, past Lee's Drug Store, and across Broadway to Harvey Hall.

At this point, the steamline will branch off toward the Administration Building. The major line will continue between Harvey Hall and Fryklund Hall and down to the Central Heating Plant.

According to Jon Fuller, the Director of Facilities Management, the project should be complete by July, 1987 and operational by fall semester.

Planning difficulties prevented the construction from beginning this summer.

"By beginning late, the project will only disrupt the campus for 1 1/2 semesters," Fuller said.

Pointing out the advantages of the late start, Fuller said, "Had it begun on time, the construction would have covered two whole semesters."

Minority Affairs Senator qualifications controversial

by Marsha Roberts

The Minority Affairs Senator from two years ago disagrees strongly with the belief that an international student cannot represent minorities effectively on the Stout Student Association (SSA).

"I'm speaking from my point of view and from the perspective of some other foreign students," explained Derek Perez, who held the Minority Affairs Senator position for most of the 1984-85 school year, until he resigned.

Perez said, "I am not saying that we're all capable, but I feel that some of us are."

Perez is currently one of the organizers of Dance Dimension, a program that provides a nightclub-like atmosphere in the Great Hall for Stout students.

As past Minority Affairs Senator, Perez remarked, "It was a new role for me, especially since there were no specifics laid down, no guidelines to follow."

Perez said that he felt alone representing minorities on the Senate, it was difficult to get started.

Perez responded to a statement made by Joe Torres, president of the Rainbow Organization at Stout, who said in an interview for the Nov. 6 issue of The Stoutonia, that there is a difference between American minorities and foreign minorities.

Torres said, "Although our needs may be somewhat similar, there is a definite difference in our concerns."

In response to Torres' statement, Perez said that there is a direct relationship between concerns and needs. If the American minorities concerns are not being met, Perez encouraged them to get up and work for them.

"If Torres feels that there is a difference between our concerns and needs, he should project these concerns and needs," said Perez.

Perez also suggested that Torres should encourage his fellow Americans to get involved and voice these concerns and needs.

"Show us the effort and work with us to build and help ourselves," Perez challenged.

"If Torres feels that our concerns are different, then he should divorce himself totally from the Rainbow, because the club is supposed to be a 'multi-cultural awareness' group," said Perez.

When asked what advice he has for future senators, Perez replied, "I feel that there should be more students on the Senate." He deliberately stayed away from the use of the word "minority."

"I don't believe in being referred to as a 'minority'," emphasized Perez. Perez said that no one should be considered a "minority" because the word suggests degradation and inferiority.

Perez explained that if everyone would think together, and get concerns straight, it would definitely lead to a better change.

"Having one person on Senate who is considered a 'minority'," we have less of a chance to get things running smoothly," Perez speculated.

Newly-appointed Minority Affairs Senator Adesola Adisa also expressed disagreement with Torres' statement about the difference between concerns and needs of American and foreign minorities.

Adisa said, "A lot of international students also possess the potential to carry out such a position."

Adisa accounts for his absence from last Tuesday's SSA meeting, by explaining that he had every intention of attending. Unfortunately, he happened to be several minutes too late and decided against going.

Instead, Adisa said that he conferred with the President of the Nigerian Student Association, the President of the IRC and a member of the Chinese Organization, to get some ideas of what to begin working on in his new position representing minorities.

Pat Barnes, the advisor for Rainbow will be resigning in spring of next year. Torres said that Sharon Miller, career specialist, and Linda Torres, department administrator, both with the Ethnic Services Center, are possible applicants for the position.

Solutions sought for parking problems and calendar changes

by Kelly Cohorst

The 1988-89 school year calendar proposal was passed by the Stout Student Association (SSA) at Tuesday evening's meeting.

"It is very difficult to make change," said Mike Mundy, who sits on the Educational Activities Committee (EAC) as he addressed the Senate.

"The calendar may seem like a tight schedule," said Mundy, "but it was written with everything taken into consideration."

The after-Labor Day start of the academic school has forced the EAC, a representative body charged with working out details on the school year calendar, to schedule Saturday classes during the school year three semesters away.

One Saturday class would be held during the first week of school, with another at the end of the first semester on Dec. 23, said Mundy.

Julie Weiss VPAA and David Asp, North Hall Senator, gave their report on a meeting concerning students' parking problems which occured on Friday, Nov. 7.

Their meeting was with the supervisor of Campus Security Robert Hoage and Assistant Chancellor Dr. Wesley Sommers. One of the parking problems discussed concerns residents of north campus and the elimination of at least 21 the parking places.

"It could be up to 30 by now," Hoage said. "The construction on north campus will be a problem until the construction is finshed, sometime next spring, or until they fill it in this winter."

Students are having to park illegally and, as a result, they are receiving tickets, said Asp, who is the SSA representative to the Parking Appeals Board.

Hoage said that the students should have read the fine print in the back of the handout they received while being issued their parking permits.

"It states," said Hoage, "that students should notify protective services regarding the problem."

Instead students have been parking illegally and, Hoage said, they have to deal with the consequences.

Asp advised students who are having problems with parking, to call Campus Security at 232-1632 during business hours and, through the Menomonie Police Department number 232-1283 after-hours and weekends.

This, Asp said, could eliminate the bulk of tickets issued.

Asp told the Senators that citations are being issued to students and that their requests for appeal never come before the Parking Appeals Board, on which he sits as a representative of students.

Before the citations are brought to the appeals board, evidently, Hoage has been screening them.

According to Hoage, a new section was added to the updated "Parking and Traffic Regulations" handbook during its yearly revisions. The change appears under "Parking Citation Appeal Procedure" and explains how the Appeals Board process works.

The new screening process disqualifies for appeal citations that are not debatable or refers the citation to be heard before the Appeals Board, which is made up of five people:

•One representative of the Administrative Services Divison, appointed by the Chancellor.•One representative of the Student Service Division, appointed by the Dean of Students.•One Faculty Member appointed from the faculty by the Faculty Senate.•One member of the SSA, currently Dave Asp, appointed by SSA.•One member of the student body, appointed by SSA. •Director of Protective Services or his representative, who will act as a non-voting member.

Tutoring program seeking volunteers

by Cosmas A. Whitten

Students with experience in volunteer tutoring experience have had the edge on getting jobs, according to the coordinator of UW-Stout's academic tutoring program.

Gayle Bock, coordinator of the tutor program of the Academic Skills Center which is located in the Library Learning Center, said that her staff assists students who volunteer to tutor others in a variety of academic areas.

"It's not so much the student we help," said Bock, "but the academic tutor."

The Stout Volunteer Tutor program is currently in search of students who are willing to spend some of their spare time helping other students.

In the past, student requests for tutoring were not filled until near the end of the semester. This year, however, requests were filled by September.

"This semester we had the largest percentage of new tutors," said Bock, "because we lost so many last year due to graduation."

Bock said that the 200 volunteer tutors are difficult to enlist initially.

"However, most students who tutor once are eager to tutor again," Bock added.

Susan Haakenson, a junior in hotel and restaurant management, said she tutors because, "helping fellow students academically is not only a challenge but is something that makes me happy, as well."

Haakenson, who is fluent in Spanish, has been tutoring international students for one year.

"Many students enjoy tutoring because it reinforces some basic knowledge," Bock said.

Some math tutors, Bock added, have said that tutoring gives them constant review of basic formulas that they must use in upper level calculus courses.

Senior Brian Iverson, majoring in industrial technology with a concentration in electronics, said, "I meet new friends and improve my communication skills with other people plus receive a valuable review of the material."

Iverson, who will be tutoring as a graduate student next semester said that volunteer tutoring looks very good on a resume.

Iverson added, "It is a nice feeling to help others on a subject that I know."

Assistant Placement Director Ken Erickson confirmed the advantage of volunteering to tutor. Erickson said that a student who has been a volunteer in any of the Madison elections won by spoof party

by Tracy Lea Landis

Members of the Bob Kasten School of Driving party won a majority of the seats on the student government Senate at UW-Madison, in the same election in which the university declined its membership with the student lobbying group for the UW-System.

The Wisconsin Student Association (WSA), UW-Madison's student government, held its annual fall semester election for Senators last month.

The election included a referendum, which failed to continue WSA's membership in United Council (UC), the statewide student government association.

37 out of the 45 WSA Senate seats were won by members of the Bob Kasten School of Driving party.

The current Co-President of WSA, Matthew Alexander, who was elected during the officer elections held during last spring's election, is not a School of Driving member.

Tim Stanton, editor-in-chief of the Badger Herald, a UW-Madison student newspaper, said that the relationship between the executive and the Senate is a cordial one.

"They are basically cooperating," said Stanton.

WSA Treasurer Michael Inners said, however, that the party differences are "slowing things down," as the School of Driving party Senators table many of Alexander's recommendations in order to thoroughly review his decisions.

Steve Marmel, columnist for the Badger Herald and stand-up comic, is the head of the powerful spoof party. Marmel claims that the Bob Kasten School of Driving party aims to bring back fun as the main purpose of student life.

Although the party ran on a spoof platform, which parodied the seriousness of student government and included plans to fill offices with Jell-O, Inners said, "They're taking the power they have very seriously."

With 15 percent of the student body voting, last month's election had the largest voter turnout in years.

"A lot of these Bob Kasten seats on the Senate were won by 10 to one margins," said Stanton.

The margin on the vote to withdraw membership from UC passed by a much narrower margin. A referendum to continue funding and participating in UC was defeated by a margin of 162 votes.

The Badger Herald reported on its front page: "In the same election that saw the Jell-O mongers swept into power in the WSA Senate, students voted to discontinue funding for the United Council, a student lobbying group that basically sponged off the Madison campus."

An editorial said that "the Herald's beef with UC" is that "it is a political organization that wrongfully lives off the unwilling 'contributions' of students."

The half-dollar "tax exacted from students," the editorial said, amounted to $40,000 a year collected from the students of UW-Madison, the largest campus in the system.

UC President Bryce Tolefree said, of Madison's withdrawal, "This will make it tough financially, but I think this will pull the other schools together."

The office manager at WSA, Jan Jacobs, cited UC's lack of attention to Madison's interests in its lobbying efforts as justification for the withdrawal.

Heather Ritchie, who recently resigned as WSA co-president, said that UC had been seen by many as "anti-Madison."

"Madison can represent itself," Ritchie said.

A referendum to rejoin UC will likely be on the ballot for WSA's spring elections. The campus will have a delegation attending the last meeting of this semester, which will be held in Milwaukee on

Construction

The project will stop for winter and should resume as soon as the ground thaws.

"If everything goes as planned," said Fuller, "all of the work on north campus should be filled in by December."

Cost estimates for the project range from 1.2 to 1.38 million. At a modest estimate of $100,000 savings per year, the payback period is only slightly over ten years. More optimistic estimates have predicted that the payback period could be as short as 3.5 years.

The cost for the project, according to Fuller, "is funded entirely by student fees." Fuller added that an extremely low interest loan for approximately $450,000 was provided by the government, due to the energy saving nature of the project.

Students, especially those living on north campus, have had to put up with some inconveniences. Loss of parking spaces, interrupted utility service and noise are a few examples.

"It is painful right now," said mechanical designer Rolph, "but the benefits should reflect in the cost of living in the future."

He also noted that utilities would not be interrupted again until springtime.

The community has also had to put up with the construction. Rolph described the project as "highly disruptive to the community" and praised the community for their "high cooperation with the university system."

Move to the middle

The shift in the political attitudes of college students in the past decade has been toward the middle of the road, rather than from left to right, according to a report on data collected over the past 20 years.

The percentages of self-avowed middle-of-the-roaders rose from 45 to 57 percent since 1970 among the six million college freshmen surveyed.

During the same period, the percentage of freshmen claiming to be political conservatives rose from 18 to 21 percent, while those who claim liberal leanings fell from 37 to 22 percent.

The changing values of college freshmen were reflected in the response to questions about personal goals. Forty-four percent of the freshmen surveyed said that "being well-off" was top priority 20 years ago. Last year, 71 percent put it at the top of their list.

In 1967, 80 percent of freshmen surveyed said that "developing a meaningful philosophy of life" was a top value. Last year, only 43 percent said that pursuit of a meaningful life was of primary importance.

The report was conducted by the Higher Education Research Institute at the University of California in Los Angeles and was released on Thursday, Nov. 6.

Soviet tour open

A Soviet Seminar will be offered second semester by the department of social science.

This seminar provides a historical, economic, political and sociological introduction to Soviet society. The seminar includes a tour of Belgrade (the capital of Yugoslavia), Moscow, Vogograd and Leningrad between March 9-23.

The tour, which costs $1,690, including travel expenses, is open to the public. For more information, contact Bruce Pamperin at 232-1100 or 232-2287.

Plea entered

A 26-year-old Crosby, Texas man, charged in the death of a UW-Stout student, stood mute at his arraignment on Thursday, Oct. 30. A not guilty plea was entered for him by Dunn County Circuit Court Judge James Wendland.

Michael D. Neubauer is charged with the first-degree murder of Sani Tela, 28, a Nigerian exchange student. Neubauer allegedly struck him with his car, in the alley behind The Den bar in Menomonie on June 19, 1982.

On Dec. 1, 12 jurors and two alternates will be selected for the trial.

Contraceptives distributed

The student residence hall government of the University of Iowa has set a precedent for organizations of its kind by conducting a contraceptive give-away project.

The project is being reorganized, however, so that resident hall assistants, who are university employees, are not involved in distribution of the condoms to hall residents.

University officials insisted that family planning experts be engaged to conduct educational programs, through which distribution of the prophylactics could continue.

President Larry Pearlman of the university's Associated Residence Halls, said that the program would be financed by revenue generated from the room rental fees paid by students.

"I just want to stress," said Jeno Berta, a floor president on the University of Iowa campus, "that we are in no way promoting any type of sexual activity. We're just trying to promote responsibility."

Teaching applications

The Foreign and Domestic Teachers Organization needs teacher applicants in all fields from kindergarten through college level to fill over 600 teaching vacancies at home and abroad.

Information about the organization and positions available may be obtained by writing to the National Teacher's Placement Agency, Universal Teachers, Box 5231, Portland, Oregon 97208.

Colleges called troubled

A prestigious foundation delivered a harsh indictment of the nation's colleges, saying that though America's higher education system is "the envy of the world," the undergraduate college "is a troubled institution."

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching released its 242-page report, titled "College: The Undergraduate Experience in America," on Saturday, Nov. 1.

"Driven by careerism and overshadowed by graduated and professional education," the report said in its conclusion, "many of the nation's colleges and universities are more successful in credentialing than in providing a quality education for their students."

The author of the report, Carnegie President Ernest Boyer, suggest that colleges make major changes to improve the situation described.

Boyer said that it would be advisable to "demistify the selection process" and stop requiring high school seniors to take multiple choice entrance tests unless the scores are used in admission decisions.

The report advises students to "look beyond brochures and well-kept lawns" to find out how many faculty members, rather than staff, are assigned to freshmen courses.

The report also suggests scaling back athletic programs and requiring students to broaden their required studies to include such things as history and ethical questions about their chosen field.

Call for more grads

A national commission has called for a massive effort to double the number of American adults who hold a college degree by the turn of the century.

The commission, headed by former Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell, also chastised members of the Reagan administration for "unthinkingly abetting an act of national suicide" by cutting aid to college students.

The report also urged states to keep tuitions as low as possible to help recruit more minority student and to stop the growth of "an American underclass."

A warning was also issued in the report against the "rising tide of mediocrity" in the colleges.

"America has far too many people whose abilities are never awakened," declared the report, which was prepared for the American Association of State Colleges.

Tutoring

number of activities on campus has a resume that reflects good things about their character.

"It shows that those students who volunteer to tutor have an empathy for their fellow students," Erickson said.

Erickson also commented that recruiters can see that the subject a student tutors is their strong academic area.

A person that is willing to give of themselves is also perceived as having characteristics that people at higher corporate levels possess, said Erickson.

Donna Pitcher, a junior in vocational rehabilitation, currently tutors such classes as Psychology and Family Relations.

Pitcher said she volunteers to tutor because she "gets satisfaction out of seeing other students do better in classes they otherwise wouldn't do as well in."

Tutoring is done mostly on a one-to-one basis. Student tutors put in an average of three hours a week. They have the sole responsibility for deciding which subject they wish to tutor.

There is, however, a greater demand for math tutors than those in other areas.

Senior Harold Polster, who is majoring in plant engineering, has been tutoring for three semesters because, he said, "it keeps me up on the math. A lot of stuff is easy to get because of the constant review I receive from tutoring."

It is never to late for a student to become a tutor, according to the center coordinator. For more information, contact Gayle Bock at the Tutoring Center at 232-3086.

OPINIONS

SSA should re-evaluate

The purpose of the Stout Student Association (SSA) ought to be re-examined in the light of their decision to deny Amnesty International any funding from segregated fees.

We as student body members make up the SSA and yet the SSA made their decision not to fund AI as though the SSA exists exclusive of the UW-Stout student body.

SSA President Paul D. Nelson vetoed the budget proposal which would have given AI $1000 for the remainder of the academic year after reasoning that such funding would have opened a "Pandora's box" of funding requests from single issue groups such as the National Rifle Association.

AI is a single issue group when viewed from the narrowest of perspectives. The fight for human rights is the AI issue and their work has worldwide ramifications.

The one requirement for anyone to gain benefits from AI at Stout is their participation as a group member. The complaint is often heard that students here feel too isolated from the world.

Through participation in AI, Stout students can analyze the international scene in such a way that they can recognize human rights violations of student protesters in Chile, for example.

Understanding the current crisis in Chile and working to rectify the situation, offers any student a learning opportunity which could hardly be picked up in the class room. By participation in AI, group members learn about human rights violations taking place around the world and they learn to relate the impact these violations have on their own lives.

In a society plagued by apathy, AI asks Stout students to make a commitment in terms of time and money toward the global advancement of human rights.

The Stoutonia as a group supports the worldwide advancement of human rights and asks the SSA to review its decision against funding AI.

The SSA, if it chooses to fund AI, will be making a relatively small investment which can pay handsome dividends to members of the Stout community. It should not be too startling to point out that the whole Stout community consists of humans enjoying the rights that are inherent with our observation of the Bill of Rights.

Rather than worrying about setting dangerous precedents in the funding of single issue groups, the SSA ought to be concerned about the way it misrepresented the Stout community by making a decision which went against the community's support of human rights.

Seeds of Change

Fire and brimstone

Gene Emahiser

Since the first week of school I have been screaming and hollering at the top of my lungs during noon hour. I stand up on a pillar in front of the library and yell "Welcome to the church of the open air." To some, my words are angering, to others they are strengthening. "Why do you do it?" some ask. I just smile and say "Because Jesus told me to."

Public preaching is not anything new. The Bible is full of examples of men who preached in public places. From the prophet Isaiah, who was told to "Shout it aloud, do not hold back. Raise your voice like a trumpet. Declare to my people their rebellion." (Isaiah 58:1)

Peter preached on the Day of Pentecost to thousands of Jewish leaders. The message he preached was so powerful that 3,000 of those died. Jews fell on their faces and cried out to God to be saved. The book of Acts is an account of the "acts" of the first church in Jerusalem. The book of Acts contains story after story of Peter standing up in the marketplace, the town meetings, or any place that there was a crowd. Each time the gospel was preached, thousands would turn from their wicked ways and live for God.

Even as recent as the turn of the century, men of Godly conviction stood up and preached in public places. John Wesley, the founder of the Methodist church, was an ardent open air preacher. The founder of the Salvation Army, William Booth was also an open air preacher. Actually, he went a step further. General Booth and his followers were known for going into the bars and clubs to preach. The patrons would heckle and jeer at the preachers. Some of them even threw coins at the preachers as a mockery. How ironic that the Salvation Army, once an aggressive group of preachers, is now known as a bunch of bell ringing beggars. Among radicals, William Booth is still known for some of his uncompromising pamphlets. My favorite is "Aggressive Christianity."

More recently, George Smock, commonly known as Brother Jed, has been preaching on the university campuses since 1972. He has spoken to crowds of over 2,000 students. As outdoor preachers go, he is one of the more popular fire breathers. Jed has been imprisoned, beaten, spat upon, thrown into a lake, etc. All this and he still keeps coming back for more. What makes him want to do it?

I am reading his book Who Will Rise Up? Throughout the book he tells of his compassion for his fellow man. He preaches a hard line to show people the error of their ways. Brother Jed is a normal person who happened to meet a very supernatural God. The result is a burning desire to see other people set free from a life of wickedness. Brother Jed has ben preaching for over 15 years now, and he is just as zealous now as he has ever been.

Returning to the scene of my Stout preachings. I have only been preaching for two months, but I have the same burning desire that Brother Jed has. I am told I am a fanatic. I say "A fanatic is just someone who is more committed to their cause than you are to yours."

Jesus was a fanatic. The religious leaders of the day knew he was trouble, so they had him killed. The men he discipled were also fanatics. These men were all martyred for their faith. They must have said something to tick somebody off. John was the only one of the first twelve to die of old age. John somehow lived through being boiled in oil.

The true gospel has always met with opposition and anger. Nothing really changes.

Subject: Rental Resources functions as more than a textbook service

by Karen Heagle

All students are familiar with Rental Resources Service. Whether it means carrying stacks of books in extreme climates or waiting in line, the rental system is saving students a lot of money.

Brenda Swannack is coordinator of Rental Resources, and she is a firm believer in the benefits of renting resources, not limited to text books. Swannack received her first degree at UW- Oshkosh in library science and social science with her major being Geography. Upon graduating she took on a job as a library media specialist in the Washburn Public Schools.

In the summer of 1976 she attended the annual Stout Media Technology Conference. This is where she first became interested in the media technology program at Stout.

Its the best of all worlds for students
—Brenda Swannack

STOUTONIA: HOW DID YOU GET YOUR JOB AS COORDINATOR OF RENTAL RESOURCES?

SWANNACK: I enrolled in several courses affiliated with the Media Technology Conference. I had a primary interest in learning some photography background because I received a grant in the Washburn Public Schools to develop a photography studio. The next year I took a partial leave from Washburn and came to Stout to take some more media technology courses.

During that year, I became really interested in instructional development and continued library work, and found interest just in being involved with university life. There was a vacancy at this time to develop a rental resource system.

Prior to 76, Rental Resources was the Textbook Rental System and it had some real restrictions. Each course could only have one textbook; it had to be hardcover and used for "x" amount of semesters. There was some concern on our campus that this system was too restrictive to promote educational growth. The textbook service went from being under student services to learning resources. They changed the whole purpose from a textbook rental to a rental resource.

They were looking for a person to sort of take the ball and go with it. I became interested in the possibility of starting something new. There were bookstores, but there was no such thing as a rental resource anywhere. I finished my master's in media technology and took on this job fulltime.

STOUTONIA: WHY DOESN'T RENTAL RESOURCES HAVE AN AUTOMATED SYSTEM LIKE THE LIBRARY DOES? SWANNACK: We are a division of the library, and presently the library has an excellent system. We are waiting for a program called Dataphase, and they haven't come up with an efficient back up system that we can use. We have it budgeted — we have for about three years now. We are setting aside money every year in hopes we can get an efficient back up system.

We need an extremely efficient back up system because the last three days of the semester there are about 60,000 resources that are returned. If the system would be down we would run into extreme problems. There's no place to store 60,000 resources until the system comes back. At the beginning of the semester it wouldn't be as crucial but at the end students are returning things so they can leave campus. We couldn't close the doors and say the computers are down you can't go home for Christmas.

We need a system that can check in and out as efficiently as the manual system. We're looking forward to the time that we can be automated.

STOUTONIA: WHAT CHANGES WOULD A SYSTEM LIKE THIS BRING ABOUT?

SWANNACK: In the library they were able to increase the checking in and checking out of resources almost 90 percent. Ten minutes of activity could now take 1 minute. A benefit of the system would be that we could really check in materials at a rapid rate and eliminate lines. We would also have a better handle on material checked out. We would know who had what.

STOUTONIA: WHAT ARE THE MAIN DRAWBACKS OF THE CURRENT SYSTEM?

SWANNACK: The speed. We have, I feel, an efficient system but it would go a lot faster if it were automated.

STOUTONIA:WHAT ARE SOME POLICIES AT RENTAL RESOURCES THAT STUDENTS MIGHT NOT BE AWARE OF?

SWANNACK:One of the policies is that we encourage students and staff to check out resources for their own personal benefit after the first ten class days. We would like this service to be continually used on a day to day basis, whether they are interested in a photography book or just for the fun of it. This service is helpful for references too; a student in Calculus II may want to look at a previous math book. The book can be used for an entire semester. This service is listed in the student handbook and in our brochure — yet many people miss it.

We do have sales, we announce them in several areas, in the Stoutonia, over WVSS, Stout Community News, and we post them outside Rental Resources. We have these discount sales every quarter running two or three weeks. Those items discounted are currently in use in the classroom.

We have what we call withdrawn sales on those resources that are withdrawn from circulation. First, we contact other jobbers selling to

Misunderstandings

Please ask your reporters to be certain of their facts. News articles should be gospel truth! In last week's article titled "SSA budget passed, AI fails by one vote;" the quote by Dan Meyers is out of context and leaves the impression that I supported AI.

I did say that AI was a good cause, but that once you set a precedent of funding a club with a good cause then any other club with a good cause would have the right to expect funding from the segregated fees. I said I was against funding AI because it was for off campus activities and would only benefit club members. I do not support the use of segregated fees to fund AI.

The report reads, "John See, the faculty advisor of AI, was speaking as people began leaving the room." This is a false representation of what occurred. The Senate Caucus did give AI and their representatives plenty of time to present their arguments earlier in the meeting. We did not cut them short nor were we discourteous to them. It is true we all left the room three or four minutes before 7 p.m. as that is the time when we are due at the official Senate meeting.

When the AI funding request first came before the Senators, Ali Vazirabadi made exaggerated statements about their membership and all the good that would accrue to Stout if the Senate should override the financial committee's suggestion of $1000 and give them the $2,727 they had requested.

At the Senate Caucus and later at the Senate meeting he repeatedly told us we were not understanding him. I now understand that they want some of the segregated fee pie rather than ask their own members to pay dues to support their cause. I wonder if they do not want to bother with the effort of conducting their own fund raising activities to develop funds. To quote Ali, "I hope that justice and fairness apply to this important issue.

Reasoning questioned

I recently joined the student chapter of Amnesty International and I am a little tired of listening to some SSA representatives, including the SSA president, trying to think of reasons not to grant us some of our activity fees for funding.

First, the finance committee recommended that we get funded, then they decided that our bylaws stated that we couldn't be funded by a government organization. We explained to them that the SSA was not the kind of government organization that was meant in the bylaws. Someone said that if AI was funded, that they'd have to fund the KKK. It's not the SSA's job to worry about other groups asking for funding some time in the future.

If a group of students forms an organization that fits the rules and regulations established by SSA, then they're entitled to part of their activity fee.

The SSA advisor told some SSA Representatives that if they (had a problem funding the AI group) to be honest about their reasoning.

When I see some of the groups of a few people that get thousands of dollars and how many of us they really affect, it makes me sick to hear some of the members of the SSA ask our group of over 50 members how we're going to affect anyone. And tell us that we can't use any of our activity fee for our activity.

Development eliminated

Mayor Stokke is making a concerted effort to eliminate or drastically limit the one department at City Hall--the Community Development Department whose sole purpose is to improve the living and working environment in Menomonie. This department ultimately sustains itself through expansion of the tax base by generating higher taxes on improved and additional property its programs stimulate.

Since the inception of the Community Development Program in

Hidden Dimension

Iranian connection

Ali Vazirabadi

It is now obvious that there were secret arms deals between the U.S. and Iran. The irony of this deal is that the U.S. declared neutrality in the war between Iran and Iraq. But obviously the arms deal proved the opposite.

Robert McFarlane, former Security Advisor, had a five day meeting in Tehran with the top officials of the Ayatolah Khomeini regime, although no American Official admits it.

McFarlane and the other four Americans had Irish passports upon arrival at Mehrabad Airport in Tehran. As a result of this meeting, George Shultz will resign to protest the arm sale to Iran.

Senators and other members of the Reagan staff were surprised with this deal. It seems the person who master minded the plan is the present National Security Advisor Pointdexter.

Pointdexter is the same man who planned to misinform the media in order to disstabilize the Qaddafy regime in Libya.

It is clear that this was not the first arms deal between the U.S. and Iran. Next week, in New York, begins the trial of two Americans who smuggled arms to Iran. One of the confessions of plaintiffs is that they had direct approval from the Vice — President of United States to ship the arms to Iran.

One question is who will not benefit from the outcome of these deals. The obvious answer is that the Iranian and Iraqi people are the ones who will be the losers of these deals.

This war has brought more than 800,000 deaths and casualties to both sides. It is also clear that these arms will not bring quick victory to Iran, but only prolong the war.

One of the obvious needs of the U.S. from Iran is to help release the other hostages in Lebanon. However, the terrorists in Lebanon long ago declared that they are asking for the release of the other terrorist prisoners in Kuwait. Therefore, it is hard to find out how the U.S. can satisfy the demands of the terrorist by selling arms to Iran.

The geographical position of Iran on the Persian Gulf, and the fact that their neighbor is the Soviet Union, are the other reasons for selling arms to Iran.

Starting a new relation with Iran at this point, is one of the worst foreign policy decisions of the Reagan Administration. This military assistance will help Iran continue its long bloody war with Iraq, which is more than 6 years old now.

The outcome of this arms sale might have long and short term effects on the Persian Gulf War. The short term effect would would be more attacks on Iraq and more casualties to both sides. It will also make the war last longer, which is not to the benefit of any country. Also, it might bring a victory to Iran, which will increase the chance for more Islamic fundamentalists in the region.

1979, the city has received $3.3 million in federal block grant funds, $10 million in additional private development and the department established $1.5 million in revolving fund programs. Three hundred and ten jobs have been created. Within the last year, the department secured three new industries, initiated the redevelopment of the Memorial Hospital Building and secured financing for Housing Authority to undertake the project.

As a direct result of its activities, the Community Development Department has expanded the tax base substantially more than the budgetary obligation required to support the department. It provided funds administrative funds through grant programs to self support the department for the first six years of existence.

The mayor, by arbitrarily eliminating the Community Development Department may save $66,000 in this year's budget, but what will it cost the city in lost revenue, not to mention the rehabilitation of housing programs and stimulation of economic development in Menomonie and the demise of future planning for city development?

Mayor Stokke and City Council, does it make sense to arbitrarily strike down jobs and department to make up for rampant spending and improper budgeting? How about applying this budget problem fairly to all departments and use department supervisors to cut the necessary per cent from their budgets. City departments and employees are much more likely to work together and be productive employees when they are involved in decision making.

The mayor and City Council are strongly urged to reconsider continued support of the Community Development program which is vital to Menomonie's economy and future progress.

AI cut, tabled and vetoed

As a student who pays $45 in segregated fees and a member of Amnesty International (AI), I would like to bring to the attention of the rest of the student body what has happened and is happening between AI and some voting members of the SSA.

The past three weeks, the budget for AI has been cut, tabled and vetoed. SSA President Paul Nelson has given AI a couple different reasons for not funding us. First, it was because our bylaws didn't permit us to be funded by a government body. That was noble on his part to take our bylaws into consideration, but a letter from national headquarters of AI stated that we could receive funds from a student government. More than one third of AI chapters on campuses receive their funding from their student government.

The following week, Nelson' reason was he was worried about other national organizations, like the NRA, coming and forming student chapters here at Stout and asking to be funded by the SSA. Nelson said, "setting this precedent would open a Pandora's box which we should not make ourselves a victim of."

We brought it to Nelson's attention and to some of the voting members who are against AI that they would not be setting a precedent by finding AI but could turn them down.

Now, as of last, the reason given to AI is, how many students are going to benefit if AI was to receive money? Well, let me ask something. If you're not a football or basketball player and do not go to the games, how are you going to benefit from them? That's the same with all the other clubs and organizations; you have to participate in order to benefit.

So, I invite Paul Nelson and the rest of the SSA to come to our next meeting, Monday, November 17 in Crystal Ballroom C at 7 p.m. so that they may benefit from AI by seeing what goes on outside of the Senate, Menomonie and the United States, such as in Chile. (They may) see how our letters and telegrams do make a difference between life and death, food or starvation and torture or no torture of prisoners of conscience whom Stout students do care about.

If you're reading this and are concerned about how your $45 in segregated fees is being spent, please come or talk to your Tuesday Senator and find out why some of them won't fund AI. Chances are they'll come up with a different reason again.

GOING THE DISTANCE WITH US COULD BRING YOU $25,200 CLOSER TO SCHOOL.

If you're right out of high school and headed for additional schooling, one route you might consider is the Army. It's a route that will bring you up to $25,200 for educational assistance, as well as valuable skill training, if you qualify.

It's available through the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. As a soldier, you contribute $100 a month from your first full 12 months' paychecks (for a total of $1,200). The government and the Army contribute the rest (up to $9,600 from the government and up to $14,400 from the Army).

The skill training you receive will challenge you. It'll give you new knowledge, experience and pride. It's tough, but it's worth it.

If you can go the distance, we'll put you closer. With the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. Call your local Army Recruiter for more information.

Bottom Line

LIFER Death

Rich Brueckner

"And the moment of clarity faded like charity does."--Roger Waters

I used to know the most useless human being you could ever meet. He was a laborer who, if not wasting his time stuffing his tobacco pipe, was nowhere to be found.

His boss didn't like the fact that the guy showed up late for work every morning and usually took two-hour lunch breaks. His boss also didn't like the fact that the guy literally could not be fired because he belonged to the union.

This fellow is what you'd call a LIFER: Lazy Ignorant Fool Expecting Retirement.

LIFERs infest many industries. The University of Wisconsin is no exception. Some people even blame LIFERs for the infantile food and drink policies at LLC.

You may not agree that the LLC sanitation engineers should be able to discard a few pop cans without inflicting overtime. This seems to be the LIFER's position.

This year they put annoying little yellow slips on every frotting table: "Housekeeping costs increase your college costs." Well, so do annoying little yellow slips.

Sure, you can drink the caffeine you need to stay awake in the canteen. All you have to do is put up with obnoxious typewriter noise and cigarette smoke.

Keep in mind that these jokers expect you to be able to study in there. When I want to listen to noise and breathe carcinogenic fumes, I go to a bar. The other two nights a week I have to do some homework.

They go so far as to half-ass threaten you for ignoring the rules. They may do this to you and they may do that. Why don't they just say, "We will find you and we will kill you."

The LIFER's little yellow slip tells us that we are not intelligent enough to throw pop cans into a waste basket. I've no doubt that this is the case for their children.

I am not the only one who thinks that this policy is BS; I see a lot of slips that are either crumpled or have something like "Kiss my ass." written on them.

The LIFERs waste more time screwing with these damn slips than they ever did tossing pop cans.

There are simple solutions to this situation. First, put a smoke-eater in the canteen or give smokers a separate room. Second, take those frotting typewriters out of the canteen and put them in the LIFER's office.

These solutions will never be implemented unless we bitch. It is always easier to just make up rules rather than truly address a problem. These people are too highly paid to be this arrogant, lazy, and uncaring. Hell, I do it for only ten dollars a week.

Fine Line

A nerf is a nerf

Jef Maynard

Somewhere in my vague past, I read about a man in fun loving West Germany, who was jailed for shooting stale muffins at jet planes that flew over his house. He tossed his tough little biscuits from a homemade catapult he built in his shop.

His complaint was that as the planes flew over his house to the nearby airport, they made quite a noise.

Day old muffins have to be the nerf ball of the ammunition world, and a homemade catapult loaded with a baker's dozen is not likely to knock down a Lufthansa airliner, even its best shot.

The whole point is that the amateur artillerist thought of, designed, constructed and employed a very creative solution to a stressful situation that he actually had no control over. Can something be crazy and practical at the same time?

Imagine the trial judge reviewing the case:

"So, Herr Goodard, you are charged with firing three dozen blue berry muffins at Flight 909, and one after 909. How do you plead?"

"I plead on my knees, your highness, but not here."

"Herr Goodard, did your missiles actually strike the aircraft?"

"Once, I thought I hit a 747 with a Hostess Fruit Pie, but I'm not sure. Since when is a pie in the sky a high crime?"

"A nerf is a nerf, case dismissed."

Recently, another case not unlike the muffin barrage came out in the press. A well known Canadian naturalist and author, Farley Mowat was denied entry into the United States by the Immigration and Naturalization Service; different sort of naturalists I suppose.

Mowat's name was among the one million or so on the State Department's international blacklist, the Automated Visa Lookout System. Mowat was on this list of "excludable foreign citizens" since 1968.

At that time, he was quoted in a newspaper article declaring that he was ready to shoot down American B-52's, (the bombers, not the band,) with his .22 caliber rifle as they flew over his home in Newfoundland.

Mowat has written 12 acclaimed books on a variety of naturalist issues, whaling, illegal seal hunting and so on. He is not a communist and not really a threat to our national safety. He also wrote a book about this latest adventure called My Discovery of America. The Stout library lists all the books but the last one.

When the INS offered to give him a waiver to complete a US publicity tour for his previous book, Mowat replied, "Stuff it." Later he said he would accept if President Reagan wrote him an apology and flew him into the US on the President's plane, Air Force One. NIce try; no reply.

It would take some shot to bag a B-52 with a squirrel gun.

The difference between the Mowat incident and the other is that Mowat was subsequently denied entry into America, the land of the free and the home of the Brave. Why? Because of a putrid leftover in the icebox of US legislation known as the 1952 McCarran-Walter Act.

This law was described by author Arthur Miller as "one of the pieces of garbage left behind by the sinking of the great skow of McCarthyism." Referring of course to the hideous legacy of former Wisconsin Senator and raving people-hater Joseph McCarthy.

This law is the basis for current immigration policies. Among the debris are 33 reasons you cannot enter the United States combining prostitutes, paupers, homosexuals and the insane with ideological undesirable. Gosh, the 1950's must have been some kind of fun.

This act is why you will seldom see spokesmen, artists, authors, filmmakers, poets, etc., with opinions contrary to the Reagan administration, or any administration entering the US to speak on their side of an issue.

Even Nobel Laureates have difficulty obtaining a visa, here are some names: Gabriel Garica Marquez, Pablo Neruda, Czeslaw Milosz, Carlos Fuentes, Graham Greene, Luis Bunuel.

America is a comic place. An attorney for the Center For Constitutional Rights defending a visa applicant said this: "We were not notified as to what he did, where he did it, or how he did it; but if we could prove that he didn't do what they wouldn't tell us he did, he could get his permit." Another .22 caliber catch-22. Bulls-eye.

book stores around the United States. We sell them to these jobbers if they are of some value to them. We are a member of the National Association of College Bookstores so we have access to this information. What isn't currently needed at any other bookstore across the U.S. is put on sale for a dollar. These sales go on constantly. We sell about 80,000 dollars worth of resources a year.

STOUTONIA: HOW IS A RENTAL SYSTEM BETTER THAN A PURCHASE SYSTEM? SWANNACK: One thing is that we have twenty thousand resources that are custom designed resources — resources that are not commercially available. As coordinator of Rental Resource Service, I work with the instructor so it is a real specialty kind of thing. If it were a purchase system those things would not be available to students. Financially, the program is a better deal for the student. The average hardcover book cost is $28.27. Multiply how many resources you check out by $28-$30 and you are soon in the range of $100. The average amount of resources rented by a student is 7.36. The rental fee for a full time student is $30.40, basically the cost of one book. For the cost of one book they can checkout all materials for courses and anything else after ten class days, and have access to a large amount of items otherwise not available.It is the best of all worlds for students.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT YOUR LOCATION IN RAY HALL? SWANNACK: The location is excellent. We are right in the flow of the campus. There are classes in Bowman Hall, Harvey Hall, and now in the Communication Center. We plan to expand when the duplicating center moves into the communication center. We really need the space at this point.

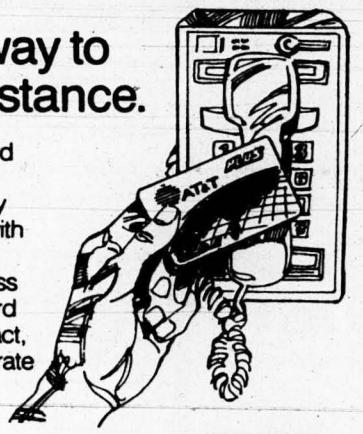
Announcing Four Pluses For Students

A special program
to introduce the new AT&T Plus Card
to the University of Wisconsin System

1. The easy way to call long distance.



The new AT&T Plus Card lets you call long distance anywhere, anytime, from any phone. No more fumbling with coins, no more collect calls.

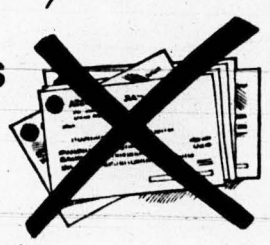
Calls cost up to 50% less than AT&T coin, collect or third party state-to-state calls. In fact, for most calls, it's our lowest rate next to direct dialing.

2. The easy way to own an AT&T PC.

With your Plus Card, you can purchase an AT&T high-speed, high capacity personal computer and needed printers, modems and software. The Plus Card lets you pay through convenient monthly payments.

AT&T PC's were designed with expansion in mind and are uniquely qualified for university work, with growth potential to meet the demands of school and a future career.

3. No payments for 6 months.



If you purchase your PC between now and March 1, 1987 using the AT&T Plus Card you will not have to make any payments before June 30, 1987. (Finance charges accrue from purchase date. Payment delay cannot be applied to telephone calls.)

4. A chance to win a free AT&T PC.

No purchase is necessary. And it's easy to enter your name. Just visit the AT&T display table in your student union tomorrow, or call your campus representative for all the details. The name and number are below.

For all the facts about the Plus Card, dial either number below. Only the campus rep can also tell you about the special UWS program—the free PC and the deferred payment plan.

Art Faculty show reveals inner territory

by Jef Maynard

In much the same way that scientists publish research findings, artists display their findings. preferably, to my mind at least, art should say: "This is what I have found," and not, "This is the debris of my looking."

Art stands as the refined discovery of a land, an inner territory made visible, concrete, and in a sense, universal. In this finding, a statement is made with all of its connections, implied meanings, memories and new meanings.

In the words of Peter Gabriel, the artist says, "It can be my testimony."

There is nothing I can think of that is more revealing of those cherished individual characteristics like works of art. Artists absorb, synthesize and produce; silent statements.

Currently exhibited in J. Furlong Gallery is the Art Department's Faculty Show. Far beyond a mere display of technical virtuosity, this show is the latest published research findings into the state of the human condition.

Since there is no generalizable human condition, the best that can be found are the marks, the self-wrought testimonials of refined, sensitive humans.

There are the intimate, dark personal spaces of Paul Delong and Jerry Bowker. Delong's "Lost Light One," is, like the creator, subtle and sensitive.

This is a nearly black image, visually black from any distance past six feet. Like only the most refined and subtle statements, the work must be seen near enough to smell the carbon paper the work is printed on.

Bowker's piece, "Shelter Series: River Door" reveals, again, dark intimate personal spaces felt like a cold sigh from the earth through an open door; a sigh no one was meant to hear.

Personal experience makes the most richly felt and sincere works of art. Douglas Cumming's pastel and prisma pencil drawing series, "French Lessons," gathers bits of his recent stay in France.

The intricacies of the works, the super-accurate details of Cumming's realist approach are evidence of a highly refined and coordinated looker.

Content rendered into purified form yet all the while an interpretive imitation of life, right down to the drawn "smudge" of a thumbprint.

Intricacy of detail creating a form is the specialty of Todd Boppel's "White Cross." It instantly attracts the eye of viewers as they enter the gallery. Without overbearing sentiment, this painting orchestrates countless intimate details when read for its line and color poetics.

Among the two dozen pieces stand two of joyful, comic irreverence. From his "Talking Family" series, Dion Manriquez displays "Male Youth," and its counterpart, "Female Youth."

In typical Manriquez manner, a quizzical collection of curious curios and grains of our technical civilization are thoughtfully arranges to make a blaring statement. Loud jangled youth, blaring composites of countless crazy particulars that miraculously act as people units.

Imbedded in the Manriquez work are bits of hardware, belts, salad utensils and all manner of chips off the industrial block.

Near the door to the gallery is, what I consider, one of the sexiest pieces of modern art I've seen. This piece radiates a sensuous disposition, not merely disguising itself as another distinguished endeavor in the field of intricate, intimate detail.

Sculpted by Nancy Blum, this piece reflects an idea of insertion. It has what a friend described at the opening as "that look about it."

One painting in the show does not seem immediately identifiable with the artist based on a simple assessment of demeanor. Bill Dehoff, graphic design instructor, is known as a soft spoken and reflective person.

The work he has on display is somewhat more bold and seemingly outwardly vibrant. The theory that the work is a direct reflection of the artist does not appear to be absolutely accurate.

Students, faculty, and friends attended the opening of the art department's faculty show. The show features the current work of Stout's art faculty, proving they are, as always, very much involved with their art. The show is at the J. Furlong Gallery, Ray Hall. Walk-ins are welcome.

The Melrose Motion Company will teach you everything you ever wanted to know about dancing and more. Presented by the University Dance Club and the Performing Arts Commission they will be performing and conducting workshops in various forms of dance, from jazz and ballet to beginning social dance this Friday and Saturday, November 14 and 15.

Melrose Motion Co. to offer dance convention

by S.J. Lomneas

Almost everything you wanted to know about dancing, from the art itself to the fashions of dancing, will be presented this weekend. The University Dance Club, along with the Performing Arts Commission, will be sponsoring UW-Stout's first "Dance Convention" this Friday and Saturday. The stars of the convention are Madison's newest modern dance company, The Melrose Motion Company. They will be instructing classes in jazz, modern dance, ballet, improvisational dance and composition.

> "We feel that this is an event that anyone can enjoy
> —Kerm Towler"

The Melrose Motion Company is composed of seven professional dancers. The company's work ranges from the powerfully dramatic to the energetic, the ritualistic to the humorous. It appeals to audiences from a variety of backgrounds, young and old alike.

Claudia Melrose, former lead dancer with the Nikolais Dance Theater, will be appearing here. Claudia is well-known for her duet ensemble work with professional dancer Clyde Morgan.

"We heard the Performing Arts Commission planned on bringing in a dance company this semester, and we saw this as a good opportunity to co-sponsor the event with them," says Kaleene Kenning, president of the University Dance Club. Both organizations are very excited about the Melrose Motion Company's forthcoming appearance at Stout.

Kerm Towler, the Performing Arts Commission chairperson said, "We feel that this is an event that anyone can enjoy. We will not only be offering four instructional courses by Melrose Motion Company, but also social dance lessons for beginners, a stage makeup seminar, a style show for dancewear and much more. Each event is individually priced, but anyone who is interested can pay a $10 registration fee which will cover all the events."

The evening will be topped off by a theater and dance performance by the Melrose Motion Company. The performance will be held Saturday at 8:00 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center. This performance is free and open to the public. Registration for the other events is Friday from 2-3 p.m. and Saturday from 8-9 a.m. in the Cedarwood Room of the Memorial Student Center.

'Foxfire' presents touching revival of Appalachian life

by Noreen Spraner

"Foxfire," a touching story about the changes modern life brings to an Appalachian family, is the Menomonie Theatre Guild's first offering this season. Performances are at 8 p.m., Nov. 15, 20, 21 and 22 and also at 2 p.m. Nov. 16 and 23. Tickets are $6. For more ticket information write MTG, Box 325, Menomonie, Wis. 54751, or call 235-0001 two hours before each performance.

The play "Foxfire" was adapted from the Foxfire books by Hume Cronyn and Susan Cooper. Hume Cronyn and his wife Jessica Tandy brought the play to the stage. The Foxfire books are a result of the efforts of a Georgia high school teacher, Elliot Wiggenton. He devised a class project, sending his students into the mountains to interview the old people about their rapidly-dying way of life. They recorded their interviews, putting them into magazine form. Later, the magazines were compiled into the Foxfire books. The play's characters are a fictional compilation of the people and their stories.

"The young people of Appalachia took an interest in the way of life of their grandparents," said Karin Falkofske, the play's director. "It is not a true story, but is based on the people of Appalachia, whose way of life has vanished. There is a lot of humor in it, but also a lot of moving parts. My actors often end up crying."

After previewing "Foxfire" at a dress rehearsal, "moving" is definitely an appropriate adjective. The play opens with Annie having her usual discourse with her husband, Hector. Annie is portrayed by Betty Vriesacker, a longtime MTG veteran (she has been in over 24 plays). Hector, played by burly Larry Baird, is apparently, a conservative fellow bent on preserving the old ways of life.

Conflict arises when Annie is approached by a land speculator, played with appropriate oilyness by Dave Pederson. He wants her to sell her land to his development company. Also, her son, Dillard, an on-the-road country music star, appears on the scene. Dillard is portrayed by John McGree, who, like all the other members of the cast, does a very fine job. He wants to take Annie off the mountain to live with him and his family so that he can better look after her.

The warmth and humor arises as Annie and Dillard go through the process of examining their values. The play uses a series of flashbacks of Annie and Dillard's life with Hector, and also Annie's imaginary conversations with him, to show this inner process. Hector, comes to symbolize resistance to change.

Betty Vriesacker is very convincing as Annie. She said of her role,

Annie (Betty Vriesacker), Hector (Larry Laird), and Dillard (John McGree) seated, talk about old times in the Menomonie Theatre Guild's production of 'Foxfire'. The play is based on the Foxfire books about life in Appalachia. Performances are at 8 p.m. November 15, 20, 21, and 22, and at 2 p.m. November 16 and 23. Tickets are $6. Community plans benefits to fund Menomonie child's liver transplant

by Jef Maynard

Jill Weber, daughter of Fred and Jory Weber of Menomonie, needs a liver transplant to survive. She has had more surgeries on her liver than she has had birthdays.

Today, and everyday, Jill's mother carries a page beeper, awaiting a call from the University of Minnesota hospital telling her that a donor has been located. Jill Weber is three years old.

Numerous benefits have been planned by university and community groups to help the family with the tremendous expenses involved with this, one would hope, last surgery.

Among others to be detailed later in this article is a Jill Weber Benefit Dance sponsored by the Stout Student Association. The dance will be next Thursday in the Crystal Ballrooms of the Memorial Student Center.

Doors will open at 9:30 p.m. with prime dance music provided by the volunteer DJ's from WVSS. Live rock & roll will be provided by DCVER from 11 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., then WVSS disco returns until 3 a.m. Donation at the door is $1, though larger donations will be welcome. Food and refreshments will be available.

Jill Weber is a courageous and brave young fighter. At six weeks of age, Jill was admitted to Children's Hospital in St. Paul because of a high bilirubin count. The first surgery was to create addition ducts from the liver to the small intestine.

A year later, she was transferred to the U of M hospital for liver stimulant treatments which failed. During March, 1985, Jill went under the surgeon's knife for a biliostomy, attaching a bag for collecting bile which Jill had to ingest daily.

Jill has Aligilles Syndrome, insufficient bile to remove liver toxins. Jill had surgery again in September, 1985 for a bowel obstruction, then a second bowel obstruction operation in March of this year. Doctors felt her liver could not last one year.

In June her doctors determined her liver was not functioning at all. In July, Jill once again underwent surgery, this time to close a tube leading from the heart to her lungs, which could lead to infection after a liver transplant.

In late August, young Jill Weber was placed on the transplant list. A patient is not placed on the list until they have one year or less to live. The hospital told Jory Weber a transplant donor would be available within three months. That time must come soon.

Mrs. Weber explained that the cost of surgery is nearly covered by insurance but the secondary costs of family expenses to stay with the young child during the six- to eight-week hospital stay are not covered.

In addition, Jill will need $100 -$250 worth of immuno-suppressant medication weekly for the rest of her life. Imagine yourself needing $10,000 worth of medicine a year for the rest of your life. You could not afford to live, not without financial help.

Mrs. Weber said of her daughter, "When she grows up, she will not be able to afford herself." She added, "The girl is a real fighter. Even her doctors cannot believe it after all she's been through."

Asked if Jill understood all the medical attention and the possible transplant, Mrs. Weber explained, "She has figured it out this way: She knows that her older sister, Jenny, can eat ice cream. Jill knows that if she has a transplant, she will be able to eat ice cream too." There is remarkable beauty in the child's reasoning.

In addition to the SSA-sponsored dance on Thursday, Georgie's Hair Stylists are sponsoring a Cut-a-thon later in November.

The Sig Tau Little Sisters are sponsoring a Penny Pitch and Pizza party in December. Also, on Dec. 1, St. Joseph's Parish will be sponsoring a style show entitled "Teddy Bear with the Jelly Bean Heart," named after Jill's nickname, Jelly Bean.

Part of the proceeds from the annual Dirt Cheap Auction sponsored by the Hotel and Restaurant organizations will also be donated to the fund.

Those more fortunate among The Stoutonia readers, Stout students, staff and faculty are encouraged to attend the SSA Benefit Dance, or any of the other fund-raising events. Further donations are accepted through the Jill Weber Benefit Fund at First Bank and Trust in Menomonie.

The 'Twistin' Egyptians a lively band from Oshkosh got the crowd really twistin' at the Crystal Ballroom last Wednesday night. Warming up for the Phones, they could have easily headlined the show.

Twistin' Egyptians capture crowd

by Eric Hampton

Forget the Bangles' "Walk Like an Egyptian;" forget Steve Martin and his "King Tut." UW-Stout has seen the faces of true Egyptians and they are twistin.' The Twistin' Egyptians opened for the Phones at the Great Hall Nov. 5, and, despite the greater hype given the Phones, the Egyptians proved that they are on their way to the big leagues in the near future.

The four-man band from Oshkosh blazed through a frenetic hour-and-a-half set that had the medium-sized crowd of students present twisting, singing and grooving; in short, doing just about anything but standing still. There was an intimacy and honesty about the performance that tended to capture the listener's attention. "Their music makes me want to get up and move. It's a very tight sound," one listener said.

It is a tribute to the band's cohesiveness that no single musician stood out from the others. Chief lead vocalist/rhythm guitarist Stephen Trier was reserved but intense on stage, singing in a thin, slightly nasal tone that managed to be simultaneously reminiscent of the Waterboys' Mike Scott and unique in itself. Trier, the band's organizer and songwriter, remained largely aloof throughout the course of the evening, seldom breaking concentration to interact with the crowd.

If Trier was impassive, however, bassist/vocalist Dave DuMonte more than compensated for it, doing everything short of leaving the stage to dance with the audience. He thrashed and cavorted during the entire show, thankfully managing to not cross the fine line between entertainment and banality. DuMonte's bass work was driving and relentless, if somewhat less inspired than on "Perils Of Young Models," the band's nine-song tape (self-produced).

Lefty drummer Brad Hoffman was situated at the rear of the stage and gave perhaps the most impressive individual performance in a band of equals. His drumming was powerful and insistent and wouldn't have been overbearing had the drums not been woefully overmixed.

Lead guitarist/vocalist Kurt Calder's jangly rockabilly riffs and excellent backing vocals were occasionally lost beneath the thunderous drum sound. Fortunately, however, the mixing problems detracted only marginally from an outstanding set. "It's Been So Long" and "Like A Setting Sun," original numbers from "Perils Of Young Models," were especially enjoyable. With DuMonte and Calder's backing vocals clearly audible, the band seemed to achieve its greatest degree of unity during these songs. Calder was also impressive in his stints as lead vocalist on some of the more high-powered cover songs.

With just two years together their belts, the Twistin' Egyptians seem to have nowhere to go but up. More backing vocals and solid studio production are all the group needs to make the jump to a record label and get thousands more people twistin' along with them.

Arts television network entertains Menomonie

by J.M. Dauplaise

Many UW-Stout students believe that Menomonie is a cultural void, but vestiges of culture do exist for the more discerning members of the student population.

Christian Dior and Calvin Klein underwear can both be found in Menomonie. These upscale underthings are, however, only available for the ladies. Men, take heart. Hanes and Fruit of the Loom can be found in abundance with many exciting fashion colors to choose from.

Instead of pondering a phrase with Vanna White, the mysteries of the universe can be explored with Carl Sagan.

Not only does Menomonie offer its inhabitants designer underwear, but rich gastronomical indulgences as well. Shoppers can select from a variety of fine Haagen Dazs flavors. For the truly cultured, generous outpourings of Kahlua or Bailey's Irish Cream Liqueur can be poured over the Haagen Dazs.

If even designer underwear and gourmet ice cream don't satiate cultural longings, a recent addition to Menomonie's entertainment repertoire might. The Arts and Entertainment Network has been in existence since February of 1984 and was introduced last October in Menomonie.

This fine arts-oriented television channel features ballet, jazz, drama, documentaries and movie classics. The Arts and Entertainment Network transmits black-tie offerings into Menomonie's living rooms.

Instead of pondering a phrase with Vanna White, the mysteries of the universe can be explored with Carl Sagan. For the artistically inclined, a documentary focusing on Michelangelo's "Pieta" can expand one's knowledge of Italian Renaissance art. Musical offerings range from Brahms to the Boston Pops, a significant step above Stacy Q for those who have been overly subjected to Top-40 tripe.

It's comforting to know that quality alternatives are available for those uninterested in He-Man reruns. The Arts and Entertainment Network has brought cultivated viewing to Menomonie. I hope I've done something to dispel the rumor that Menomonie is a cultural void.

Spontaneous Combustion

Jazzing it up

James "Unk" Falkofske

Last Tuesday my kid sister, Sara, had her birthday. This Saturday I am supposed to disc jockey at a party for her and about fifty of her friends. A yawning Yippee Skippee! Happy birthday sis.

I am now trying to decide what type of music to play. I thought I would be easy on myself and play the standard "teenybopper" music, but after some encouragement from readers, I may not.

Finally, fan mail! After last week's column, I found out that many jazz fans want to hear more about jazz. Well, why not? We can dare to be different and cater to the unusual (my sister's friends will be surprised).

To do my background research, I talked with Jim Keuer. Jim's jazz collection extends halfway across his living room floor. He loaned me some tapes that he was particularly fond of. Here is this week's jazz review.

The first tape I listened to was David Sanborn's "Heart to Heart" (1978). David Sanborn combines alto saxophone, funky rhythm guitar and light percussion to deliver mellow, light jazz compositions.

The first song on the tape was "Solo," a piece of flowing sax, electric bass and acoustic guitar. The best way to describe the feel of this music would be to say it reminded me of the love scene score of many, many movies.

The theme from "Love Is Not Enough" soothed my nerves as I typed away through my chemistry lab. It consisted of main rhythms being repeated throughout the song with a free-flowing jazz sax improvisation.

Along the same theme of gentle jazz, "Lotus Blossom" combined guitar and sax to provide many beautifully-diminished chords. Piano and vibraphone are soon added as the transition point to the piece, which flows back into the guitar and sax found in the beginning.

A second jazz tape I reviewed this week was Rare Silk's "American Eyes" (1985). This group sings jazz — that's right folks. Added to synthesizer (along with traditional brass) background, this group combines voices into chords (sometimes sounding like animated musical instruments).

The piece I was most impressed with was with the lyrics and terrific harmony of "American Eyes." Over a heavy stage-musical/rock score, the song discusses seeing things through American eyes. It questions who is right, who makes decisions and why. Backyard bomb shelters, TV and hoping it will be okay is the feel of the song.

The final group to hit my tape deck this weekend was Flim and the B.B.'s with "Big Notes." The wide dynamics and range of this group is what impressed me the most. The sound could be compared to the shaking sound of a large pipe organ in a empty synagogue.

I thoroughly enjoyed the entire tape, however, at 200 watts a channel, "New American" literally sent shivers up and down my spine. I can finally appreciate my expensive stereo with music like this. The main attraction of "New American" was the driving combinations of synthesizer sounds. On top of this, sax was added so emotionally that I am compelled to say, "They don't play harps in heaven. They play the saxophone."

Well, I have to hand it to Jim Keuer as a man who knows how to choose his music and I thank him for sharing his collection with me.

The things we do for love

Denise Cain

What is it about women that makes us so dependent on men? We go out of our way trying to impress them and half of the time we just end up making fools of ourselves.

Spending 24 hours a day preparing ourselves to meet him, we go through obscene amounts of money on makeup, hair mousse and gels, Guess jeans and bottles of Obsession perfume. Just in case, like a black cat, he crosses our path.

Does anyone out there really do an hour of aerobics just for the shear high of it? Of course not. Staying in somewhat decent shape is only a temporary condition. As soon as the ring goes on, so does the weight.

Are you a hopeless female like myself? Do you find yourself meandering through the Tech Wing of Jarvis Hall, observing interesting bulletin boards, just to catch a glimpse of him leaving a class?

Have you ever gone to the library, walked every floor, covered every corner, only to find him in the fifth floor computer lab? Desperate to have him notice you, you sit down and attempt to write a computer program even though you have never had a computer class.

My sister-in-law got to know my brother (her future husband) by calling his apartment after a few drinks and asking for someone else. That way she could hear what his voice sounded like on the phone, just in case he ever happened to call. (It obviously sounded more feasible after a night at the college bars.) What the heck, it worked. They just got married.

Have you ever, by some stroke of fate, been in the presence of that guy and you had to use the bathroom? You can not leave even though it might cause a bladder infection. Why not? Because he might discover that you are human, and not that one-in-a-million girl after all.

You know you are really in love with a guy when some unrecognized force draws you to the kitchen. Girls who have, at the most, made toast, are baking cookies for the first time. And it is ALWAYS cookies, never bars or bread; and they ALWAYS have chocolate chips in them. We have got to get more creative. Published for you is a secret love cookie recipe. I feel confident it will work.

Love Cookies

3/4 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1/2 tsp. vanilla
2 cups flour
3/4 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/4 cup milk

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg and vanilla; beat well. Stir together flour, next 3 ingredients, and 1/2 tsp. salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with milk; mix well. Form into two 10-inch rolls. Wrap in waxed paper or clear plastic wrap. Chill well. Cut into 1/8-inch slices; place on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 325 degrees for 10 minutes. Immediately remove to cooling rack.

What I do is take two sheets of waxed paper and roll the chilled dough out between the sheets. Then I use cookie cutters to make them into heart shapes. Frost them with the following frosting.

Mint Frosting

1 & 1/2 cups sifted powdered sugar
3 tbsp. softened butter or margarine
1 tbsp. milk
1-2 drops oil of peppermint food coloring, if desired

Combine ingredients and blend until smooth and creamy.

The more advanced women, the juniors and seniors, go to extra efforts and invite the guy over for dinner. But what is the only dinner they make? Spaghetti — how generic! If you are out to impress a guy, cook something with a little more splash. How about making some Barbecued Chicken. My roommate and I made it for a couple of guys this summer. Even after a bottle of wine, it still turned out great. The only way you can ruin chicken is if it is not cooked long enough.

Zesty Barbecue Sauce

1/2 cup catsup
1/4 cup vinegar
2 tbsp. chopped onion
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 tsp. packed brown sugar
1/4 tsp. dry mustard
1 clove garlic, crushed

Mix all ingredients together and spoon over broiling chicken. The chicken should be 5-7 inches from the source of heat. Broil chicken 30 minutes and turn, applying more barbecue sauce and cook for 20-30 minutes longer or until the larger pieces of chicken are done.

Stout Community Talent

The UW-Stout Community Talent Night provides talented Stout students, faculty and staff with a chance to "show us their stuff" on a live stage. The Pawn Live stage will be hosting a variety of student talent from singing to comedy.

The talent show will be held this Friday with a performance by the University Dance Club. On Saturday Tracy Lea Landis of the Curbfeelers, with The Amazing Kujawa Brothers, will present "Doin' The Blues." The second show will feature Daphne Elaine Brown. Performances begin at 9:15 p.m. There is no charge for admission.

Guthrie Theater

A bus trip to the performance of "A Christmas Carol" at the Guthrie Theater is being sponsored Dec. 20 by UW-Stout and the Menomonie Public Library.

Cost is $27 for adults and $16 for students. Registration deadline is Nov. 21. For more information contact the Office of Continuing Education and Summer Session at x-1167.

Chanhassen Dinner Theater

The University Theater will be sponsoring a trip to the Chanhassen Dinner Theater to see the production of "My Fair Lady" and "I Do, I Do" on Nov.22.

Trip tickets are $21.50 for your choice of shows. Ticket cost includes transportation, dinner and the show. A bus will be leaving from the Harvey Hall circle at 10 a.m. and returning at 6:30 p.m. For reservations or more information please contact Natalie Bothwell at x-1420 or at 632-2314.

Foxfire

"Every time I do it, I feel more and more like Annie. It is not hard for me to be onstage. I just think realism and it's easy." About her character Annie, Vriesacher said, "It's hard for her to love him (Hector) so much because he hurt her so much."

The cast of "Foxfire" all seemed to be doing a remarkable job. The performances were all polished, and there are three more rehearsals to go before the play opens.

"I have an interesting cast," Falkofske said, "Half of them have been in plays before. The other half have never been in anything."

Mary Purvis, in her first major role, did a very warm and natural portrayal of Holly, an old neighbor and friend of Dillard and Annie's.

Burton Barnard plays the doctor who delivers Dillard and attempts to give Hector a lesson in modern medicine.

One of the surprises, and major highlights of the play was music, country that is, played by Dillard and his band. It was all pretty good, and not the "cry in your beer" variety either. The band members are Chuck Summers (banjo), Fred Oaks (bass) and Rob Kuchta (fiddle). McGree, a musician by trade, who has fallen into acting here, treats the audience to several songs with or without the band.

Judging from the rehearsal, which seemed to be good enough to be opening night, "Foxfire" is a must-see for Menomonie theatergoers and non-theatergoers alike. It is a play sure to warm the cockles of anybody's heart.

Swimmers look ahead to winning season

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout swim team performed better than expected with the girls finishing second behind UW-Green Bay. Also in this triangular meet was UW-River Falls who placed third in the women's division. The men's team won this past Saturday against UW-River Falls in their meet with a score of 75-36. The women's scores were 64-98-38 respectively.

The women's team opened up the season with a win over conference opponent, River Falls, but lost to a good Green Bay team. Highlighting the attack for Stout was Wendy Heineke who placed first in the 100 backstroke and the 100 fly with the times of 1:04.78 and 1:00.84 respectively. Both times are good enough to qualify her for the national meet. Also giving a fine performance for Stout was Jacki Gilbert who placed second in the 200 free and second in the 500 free with times of 2:06.05 and 5:42.31 both of which are good enough to qualify her for the national meet.

Other fine performances came from Lara Perkins, who placed first in the 100 breast and second place in the 200 Individual Medley with times of 1:16.92 and 2:27.10 respectively. Also helping the cause was Terri Petersen with a first place finish in the IM diving event.

Head Coach John Miller, in his forth year as head coach of the four year program, is pleased with the overall results of the teams performance. He Commented on this by saying, "We had some good performance, but we still have a ways to go to be at the point that I want to be at the end (of the season.)"

The men's team for Stout had an easy win over River Falls this past Saturday. In Many of the events Stout took both first and second place showing no real weak point in any event. This on the other hand is misleading because River Falls is one of the weaker teams in the conference. The first real test for the men's team will be in two weeks against St Thomas.

Highting for the men's team was Mark Kukuzke who finished first in the 500 and 1000 free with times of 5:13.27 and 10:51.59. Also with a fine performance was Stu Boese who placed first in the 200 free and anchored both relays; both of which took first place. Making up the relay teams were Steve Kostrova, Steve Eiter, Mike Carlson, and Stu Boese who raced in the 200 medley relay. The other first place relay team raced in the the 200 free relay. Members of that team were Erik Pederson, Paul Menges, Kurt Siebert, and Stu Boese.

The next opponents for Stout will be at St. Thomas on Saturday Nov.22 at 1:00. As far as an outlook for next week or for the year we'll just have to wait and see. Coach Miller said, "It's just to early to tell."

Stout's Steve Kostrova competed in the 200 medley relay race. Both the 200 medley relay and 200 free relay teams won their races against UW-River Falls.

The women of the Stout swim team placed second behind UW-Green Bay, but over UW-River Falls in a triangular meet last Saturday.

Centaurs dominate Panthers, 18-0; finish season with 4-4 record

by Slash La Freniere

Winning can really be sweet. Winning your last game of the season is even sweeter. Shutting out your opponent is the sugar on top of the sweetness. Last Saturday the Stout Centaurs Rugby Club closed their season with an 18-0 victory over the UW-Milwaukee Panthers.

In four years of competition against Milwaukee, the Stout Centaurs have never allowed Milwaukee to score a try on them. Every time that these two teams have played each other, Stout has won by a shut-out. However, this statistic was in jeopardy for a moment last Saturday. The initial thrust after the opening kick for Milwaukee was all the way down to Stout's try line. The Centaurs then forgot about the cold conditions and they repelled the Milwaukee ruggers.

Stout continued to advance the ball down the pitch. Mark Miller scored a try from a line-out. (A line-out is a throw in of the ball from out of bounds.) Mark Miller was the front man in Stout's line-out and to score a try from that position is a very difficult thing to do. The conversion attempt was blown wide by the wind and the score was Stout 4, UW-M. 0.

The Panthers came back at the Stout ruggers hard, but not hard enough. John Wangen scored a classic diving Rugby try off of a pick up of the ball from a scrum. John Wangen's run was 35 meters and he capped the run with a dive into the try zone to touch the ball down just inside the try line. The conversion was missed and the score was Stout 8, UW-M. 0.

The Centaurs were then awarded a penalty try. Milwaukee committed a foul in their own try zone that prevented the Centaurs from scoring an inevitable try. Stout was then automatically awarded the four points for a try. The conversion was missed and the score stood at Stout 12, UW-M 0.

The brightest moment was yet to come for the Centaurs. Milwaukee was beginning to crumble underneath the force of the Centaurs and John "Stones" Livingston dealt the finishing blow. "Stones" Livingston dashed in for a try from 20 meters out and along his way he simply ran over everyone who tried to tackle him. Tim Anderson's conversion was good and the Centaurs had the victory 18-0.

"Stones" Livingston, who played his final Stout rugby game on Saturday, had this to say about his performance, "It felt fabulous to score a try in the final rugby game of my career."

The final record for the Stout Rugby Club was 4 victories, and 4 defeats. The record was not quite as successful as the Centaurs had hoped for. Rugby Club President John Wangen said, "I was disappointed with our record and I felt that we should have done better. But, that's the way the ball bounces." Todd "Killer" Johnson added, "We played well all season long and with a few more breaks, we might have gone a long way."

The next match for the Stout Rugby Club will be in February at the UW-Stevens Point Arctic Rugby Festival. Billy Reis said, "I am really looking forward to playing in the snow." Meanwhile, the many loyal fans of the Rugby Club will have to find something else to do on Saturdays for a while.

The Centaurs would like to send out a special thank you to "D" side Johnny and Tiny for their loyal support all season long.

Stout Speedway

Paul Wydeven

In the everyday hustle of getting from here to there, people often try to get there the fastest possible way they can. UW-Stout is no exception here in Menomonie, thus the Stout Speedway was born.

Not everybody who drives on campus is a member of the Stout Speedway. This article is to inform those who are members of the proper rules and procedures of the Speedway and to thank those who are not members.

It starts with those people who have to drive to campus and now, when the temperature drops, the drivers increase. Most drivers leave home allowing enough time for the drive and 10 minutes to get from the car to classes.

Ten minutes seems like plenty of time, but those on the Stout Speedway forget they have to find a parking spot, which can take up to 20 minutes. To find parking a spot, they race around the campus until an open spot is found.

A person should take note that when trying to find a parking spot at the Stout Speedway, there is total disregard for speed limits, traffic signs and fellow students. The rookies are the type to get caught speeding, or even hitting a fellow student.

Annual members include those guys with the really nice sports cars. They can go from the bottom of the hill, by the library and hit the top of the hill, by Harvey Hall in 5.0 seconds. It is just too bad they don't go slow enough so the rest of us could see who is driving and what kind of car they were attempting to takeoff with.

Car owners are not the only members to the speedway. When the weather permits the motorcycle owners go head to head for the feature race. Some of these motorcycles can go from 0 to 60 mph in roughly 2.2 seconds, give or take a tenth of a second.

The drivers are decent as far as their staying off the sidewalks is concerned, but the people on bicycles and skateboards are the worst drivers on the Speedway. In one fine visit to the Speedway, I was hit by one skateboard and two bicycles. I was never hit by a car or a motorcycle, although there have been many missed opportunities.

The skateboard incident happened on the hill by the library, some guy not looking were he was going tried to run me over. He didn't run me over, but my ankle was sore for a few days.

The first of the biking incidences was when I walked out of the drug store and some lady ran her bike right into me. It didn't hurt, but it was an older lady and she really felt bad. I didn't think at the time it would be proper to tell her to stay the hell off the side walk.

The second incident happened by the Home Economics Building. I was walking down the hill when I suddenly felt a bicycle tire in the back of my knee and this sent me flying to the ground. The person stopped to see if I was okay, but peddled off when I began to share my thoughts on his biking skills and people who ride their bikes on sidewalks.

So, next time you are driving on campus, try not to be a Speedway member and if you feel the urge to be a member, take the opportunity to run over the people on skateboards and bicycles.

Students show athletic skills dominating in Intramural Sports

by Paul Emerson

The UW-Stout Intramural sports leagues ended play last week with; the Flag Football teams continuing their season ending tournament, the Co-Rec Volleyball teams completed their third of a five week schedule, and the Men's Basketball leagues ended their second week of action.

In Flag Football tournament action last week, six games were played in the two divisions. In div. II the 10th St. Tigers edged the Hooligans, 13-12, while Nite Care black flagged the Swarm, 31-6, and the Beach House beat the Waheenies, 7-6.

In Div. III games, Old Mill blanked Milnes Maulers 32-0, the Backfield in Motion whipped the Yukon Petes by a 40-0 score, and the Floppin Crappies flipped Ryder Glass, 29-19.

The final standings and tournament results will be printed next week if they are available.

In Co-Rec Volleyball action last week, match results were not available, but overall standings are as follows. In the Monday Night League, Bump-Set-Spike kept it's perfect record and a hold of first place, by improving to 9-0. The Two-by-Two's 6-3 record puts them in second, edging the Trend Setters who stand at 5-4, and in third place. The Spikers, 3-6, hold down fourth, while DECA and the Bad Habits are tied for last place with 2-7 records.

Then in the Tuesday Night League, Uncle Bill's takes the top spot with an 8-1 record. In a tie for second with 6-3 records are the Crusaders and the Generic Team. One game back at 5-4 and in fourth are Wendy's Winners, followed by Pine Tower in fifth at 4-5. The Cosby's and the Power Play are tied for sixth at 3-6, while KM-Rocks On falls to last place with a 1-8 record.

In Wednesday Night League action, a two team battle is developing between the Young Guns, who at 8-1, are in first place, and at one game back is Sa J's Spikers at 7-2 and in a close second. In third place is WHAM at 4-5, followed by the Smithereens and the Happy Sleepers, both at 2-7 and tied for fourth. The See-OO's take the bottom spot at 1-8.

In Intramural Basketball action last week, there were 25 games among the four divisions that play Monday thru Thursday nights.

In the Monday Night 5'9" & Under league action, the Bucks beat APRO 40-26, while Whangafot turned out the BudLights, 44-33, and the Beerwolves edged the Miller Shorties, 25-24.

Then in Div. III play on Monday night, the Kamikazes dropped the Drunks 46-23, the Beerwolves beat Tony & 6 Others by a 36-23 score. Hooligans nipped the 5 Year Plan 32-31, and the Alter Boys crushed CDU, 56-29.

On Tuesday night in Div.I play, the No Names edged The Spot, 41-39, while the Grad School whipped the NADS, 52-23.

In Div.II action on Tuesday night, the 3F's beat the Monsters of the Midway, 48-37, the Artesian Hops belted the Green Berets, 26-16, while the Pimpsters blew by the TNT's, 30-23, and the Fibs stalled the Laker Express, 53-18.

In more Div.II play on Wednesday night the Black Max tamed the Tigers, 56-36, the PH's beat the Rimbusters 48-29, and the Sphine Muscles whipped the No Morals, 51-25. Spontaneous Combustion downed Electric Blue, 42-26, the Vietnomonie Express rolled over the 3C Rockets, 35-32, and the Discombobulators (who ?), beat the Basket Bombers, 57-36.

Then winding down a hectic week on Thursday night, six more games were played in Div. II action. The Good Guys crushed the Cruisers, 55-43, the Rockets won over the Rippleheads, 48-45, and the runnin' Whiskey Rebels ran over the Caddies, 50-36. The Fast Breakers ran by the Waheenies, 30-26, while the Hoyas dropped the Bad Connection, 37-29, and the BFD's beat the Dudleyville Dunkers 52-21.

League standings and overall season records were not available this week, but will be printed next week along with this weeks results.

Gridders defeated by 1st-place Falcons

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Bluedevils lost this past Saturday to nationally ranked UW-River Falls by the score of 31-17.

River Falls went into the ballgame with a perfect record in conference play. With the hope of clenching the conference title and earning a chance in the national play-offs, the Blue Devils quickly learned why River Falls is ranked seventh in the nation. The Blue Devils went into the game with nothing to lose and everything to lose and everything to gain. The Blue Devils had plans of spoiling River Falls title hopes.

Unfortunately, relying heavily on an aerial attack lead by Tim Peterson, who earned the starting position after a fine performance last week, the elements just weren't in Stout's favor. The one element that would hinder Stout's offense and not even phase the strong running attack of River Falls would be the wind. With winds gusting at game time, it looked to be the start of a long afternoon for the Blue Devils.

Coach Lawerance saw a way of stopping River Falls, which was to control the ball. He commented on this by saying, "We felt the only way we could truely do that was to throw the ball." With the wind conditions the way they were, Stout was only able to effectively control the ball in two quarters of the game.

Opening the game with a different tone seemed to be the key to Stout's early success. This was to be ready from the start as opposed to the slow starts of past weeks.The River Falls defense showed on the first two series that they were ready to play. On the third Stout possession the Blue Devil offense began to show some life. On the second play of the drive that began deep in Stout's own territory, Kyle Gunderson saw daylight and started running at the Stout's 16-yard line and didn't stop until he reached the end zone. The point after by Jim Gorecki was good, giving Stout a 7-0 lead.

The River Falls offense showed no sign of life until the drive immediately following the Stout score. This drive had begun at their own 37-yard line and was mainly a ball control oriented drive. Cota then led River Falls to a score on a fourth and goal from the one. The point after attempt by Keil was good, tying the game at 7-7.

At the start of the second quarter, the River Falls offense had the ball at Stout's 40-yard line after a Stout punt. River Falls also showed they were capable of a quick score. After a five yard drive, Miller busted loose and ran 35-yards for the score, giving River Falls a 14-7 lead.

It looked like turn overs were going to finish Stout once again. First a fumbled snap and then an interception from Tim Peterson ended two Stout drives in a row. Fortunately River Falls didn't capitalize on either and actually fumbled the second turn over right back. This gave Stout the ball back at the River Falls 35-yard line and only stalled the drive they had started. Then the Blue Devil offense took advantage of the break and drove down to the 16-yard line. There they were forced to settle for a field goal by Jim Gorecki. This made the score 14-10.

The River Falls offense showed why they are so highly rated and marched right down field on what seemed to be will. This drive was capped by a one yard run from Corning. The point after by Keil was good making the score 21-10. This ended the scoring for the half.

The second half opened up with Stout's offense trying to start something under quarterback Sean Boho. This first attempt had failed giving River Falls a chance to start something right away. Their first possession of the third quarter was taken all the way down to the Stout four yard line. Here they were forced to settle for a field goal giving them a lead of 24-10. This was the only score for the third quarter.

It was late in the third quarter before River Falls had put together another scoring drive. This time Cota capped the drive with a 15-yard touchdown run. The point after was good by Keil making the score 31-10.

Changing quarterbacks, Stout once again looked for the winning combination. This time it was Bob Lindberg that lead the team into scoring position. This drive was capped by a four yard Lindberg pass to Scott Fredrickson for the touchdown. But it was too little to late for the spoiling Blue Devils this week.

Next week the Blue Devils end up their season in La Crosse for the final game of the year. Once again Stout will be in the spoiler role trying to knock out second place La Crosse, who are looking for a possible national play off berth. This is a big game for the seniors since it is their last. Coach Lawerance said, "We are going down as a football team to play the last ballgame and hopefully give them a win." He later added, "this is a game primarily for seniors and we feel they have helped this program start a lot of good things." Ron Wise, a senior co-captain, is looking forward to his last game and said, "It's a great opportunity for us to go out with a good taste in our mouth."

Blood drive donations reach expectations

by Jill Huppert

UW-Stout students rolled up their sleeves and donated more than 50 gallons of blood at the Red Cross Bloodmobile which visited the campus last week.

On the biennial visit of the Bloodmobile, Nov. 11 and 12, the St. Paul Red Cross collected blood from 430 donors, an increase over the 418 who donated blood at Stout last spring.

Denise Krause, head nurse at the Bloodmobile, was pleased with the turn out at Stout.

> "Colleges are real good producers for us
> —Denise Kraus"

"Typically colleges are real good producers for us," Krause said. She estimated that one fourth of their total donations come from colleges and vocational schools.

Krause speculated that a big draw at colleges could be that "it's a cheap drunk, since you're low a pint," which causes a donor to feel light-headed for a bit.

But, Krause added that she believes "most people give because it makes you feel real good about yourself."

The holiday season is usually a period of increased demand for blood due to increases in the number of traffic accidents, Krause said.

Krause also pointed out that one liver transplant can require over 100 pints of blood.

Most donated blood is supplied, according to Krause, by the dedicated nine percent of the population that donates blood.

Stout ranges below this national average, with fewer than six percent of the total population of students donating blood.

Krause said the main reason others don't give is "a fear of the unknown; they're too scared." She pointed out, however, that most people who donate once, come back again.

Julie Christianson, a freshman, came to give blood, even though she had problems the first time she donated.

"It went fine today," Christianson said. "I gave again because I feel good if I'm helping someone else."

Senior Joe VanElzen was a first time donor at the Bloodmobile this semester who plans to give blood again. He said he was too busy in the past to donate and thought that probably is the same reason other students do not give.

Each unit of blood collected at Stout will be used as components rather than whole units.

Krause explained that separating blood into components allows patients to receive and benefit from only the part of the blood they need.

Because these components must be seperated within four hours of Stout students were generous with their plasma and corpuscles last week. Bob Belau, above, and many others gave of themselves so that the American Red Cross can provide all types of blood to those who need it.

SSA Senator critical of Stoutonia, questions editorial policies

by Kelly Cohorst

The UW-Stout student government president chose not to recognize the chief editor of The Stoutonia during discussion of a motion that proposed a possible freeze of the newspaper's budget at Tuesday's Stout Student Association (SSA) meeting.

Tim Hopkins, editor-in-chief of The Stoutonia, sat at the back of the meeting room during the discussion with his hand raised.

Discussion centered around a motion that asked for a committee to review the editorial policy of the student newspaper.

"I am cautious in regard to yielding the floor, because it has been abused in the past," Nelson said after the meeting.

"The senators have said that, when I have yielded the floor to members of the gallery, they have taken too much time," Nelson added.

Non-members of the SSA must have the floor yielded to them by the senators in order to speak.

The motion to review The Stoutonia was moved by Off-campus Senator Dan Meyers and seconded by Inter-Residence Hall Council Representative Jill Shlimovitz.

"The current editorial policy of The Stoutonia," the motion claimed, "dictates that the editor has the right to edit news and letters to the editor to suit their own personal beliefs, agenda and desires."

The policies regarding letters to the editor are printed in The Stoutonia.

"The Stoutonia editorial board reserves the right to edit letters, delete parts of letters with defamatory or unsuitable content," the policy states.

Meyer's proposal called for a review committee to be formed to "conduct hearings due to the complaints made to the effect that The Stoutonia is not sufficiently serving the university community."

If the review of the committee revealed "support" for "these allegations," the vice-president of financial affairs would be instructed to "freeze all those student segregated fees currently allocated to the Stoutonia."

The Stoutonia Review Committee would review policies regarding the editing of letters to the editor, charging student groups for advertising and finding ways to improve the coverage of news by The Stoutonia.

Meyers said that last week he submitted a letter to the editor of the paper regarding the controversy over Amnesty International. Meyers was objecting to omissions made by the editing of the letter.

Chernobyl started too soon

It is believed that the Soviet Union most likely has resumed operation of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant without making sufficient safety improvements at the facitility.

"Our best estimate is they started Chernobyl up probably too soon to do all the upgrades they said they were going to do," said U.S. Energy Secretary John Herrington on Tuesday.

Nuclear protests lead to arrests

Almost 200 protestors, objecting to nuclear power and arms, were arrested Monday. The protests were staged in Washington, D.C. and Nevada.

140 protestors were arrested when they attempted to block the entrance of workers employed at Energy Department headquarters in the nation's capitol.

Actor Martin Sheen and 58 others were arrested at a nuclear test site northwest of Las Vegas.

Cuts hamper safety research

A commission charged with reducing the potential hazards of nuclear power production has found that federal budget cuts are hampering research into nuclear reactor weaknesses.

An internal memo circulated within the Nuclear Regulatory Commission listed numerous safety uncertainties that will take longer to resolve or may never be explained because of the lack of research.

The memo was made public by Rep. Edward Markey (D — Mass.), chair of the House Energy Subcommittee on Energy Conservatin and Power.

"This memo shows that the NRC is working in the dark when it reviews safety-related regulations and bases its judgments on crude assumptions about basic scientific and engineering processes," Markey said.

Daycare prevents welfare

In order to cut the welfare caseload, the state of Wisconsin would have to do something to cushion the child care expenses of the poor, the top official of Wisconsin's welfare department told a welfare-reform study group on Tuesday.

Linda Reivitz, secretary of the Department of Health and Social Services, has proposed a $30 million day care subsidy program that she said would help prevent poor working parents from becoming welfare recipients.

"It was to that end that we developed a comprehensive day-care proposal for Wisconsin's working families," said Reivitz.

Sexual assault program recognized at UW-Stout

by Kristin Bailey

Student leaders, who were hesitant to participate in a program developed to assist victims of sexual assault, have decided that the program would be valuable to students at UW-Stout.

The project, identified with the acronym STAAR, which stands for Students Taking Action Against Rape, was at first thought to be a duplication of services already available to Stout students.

Last June, the leadership of the Stout Student Association (SSA) announced at the United Council (UC) meeting that Stout had chosen not to endorse STAAR.

The STAAR program had been developed last year by the Women's Affairs Senators from campuses across the state, participating in UC, the statewide student government association.

"We have the resources to cope with the problem already," said Catherine Schneider, of the initial decision by SSA leadership not to participate.

Schneider was elected Women's Affairs Senator in SSA elections last spring, but resigned the position at the beginning of the school year.

Since Stout has counselors with master's degrees available to students, SSA leadership considered the program unnecessary for the campus.

According to SSA United Council Director Robb Zimdars, the question of SSA senators was "why train students to talk to students when we have professionals with four, six and eight years of experience?"

The STAAR program was to be funded by raising $1000 on each of the campuses in the UW-System. These funds would be matched by a grant of close to $22 thousand committed to the project by the Crime Victims Council of the State of Wisconsin.

SSA President Paul D. Nelson said "The senators felt we did not need to allocate $1000 for a service we already have."

After receiving a letter explaining the proposal from the program's author and director, UC Women's Affairs Director Sara Schwartz, the SSA leadership became more receptive to the STAAR program.

The letter from Schwartz explained how the program could benefit Stout and clarified that the $1000 was not intended to come from student's money.

The SSA leadership now fully supports STAAR as a statewide program, according to Zimdars.

Zimdars expressed the feeling that STAAR would supplement our services and not replace them.

Connie Schnelle

"It is a service for students and why not have it, if there is an interest," Zimdars said, describing the change in attitude toward the rape counseling project.

"The worst thing that could happen," Zimdars added, "is it would not do any good."

Zimdars also said the senate feels that Schwartz wrote an excellent proposal and gave it an excellent presentation.

The current Women's Affairs Senator, Connie Schnelle, who was appointed to fill the seat left vacant by Schneider's resignation, is now very enthusiastic about the STAAR project. Her goal is "to help implement the program and to see it greatly improved."

As Women's Affairs Senator, Schnelle plans "to make people aware of the problems that women face and to give women an outlet through me."

Schwartz said that the student share of matching funds for the STAAR program can be raised in a number of ways which do not include the allocation of segregated fee moneys. Schwartz suggested that each campus come up with new ideas for raising the funds.

Women's Affairs Senator for the two previous sessions of SSA, Tracy Lea Landis, pointed out that $500 was raised by her committee last year. The funds were raised to benefit the West Central Domestic Abuse project.

"All they have to do," Landis said, "is raise twice that amount," to contribute the $1000 in matching funds to support STAAR.

Applications are being taken for the STARR coordinator on Stout's campus.

Landis recommended that students in the counseling programs at Stout consider applying for the STAAR coordinator position or become project volunteers to supplement their studies.

The coordinator will earn $900 a semester, giving services to victims of sexual assault and training volunteers. Qualifications for the position call for handling administrative and counseling responsibilities.

Anyone interested may get an application at the SSA office, on the ground floor of the Memorial Student Center.

Fire relief fund to help family of security officer

by Tracy Lea Landis

A relief fund has been set up for the family of a UW-Stout security officer whose home was destroyed in the predawn hours last Friday.

Officer Harold Fosmo was working the 11-7 a.m. shift, when he got a call informing him that his wife and two teenage daughters had escaped without injury, but that the house was completely destroyed.

A fire relief fund has been set up in the name of the Fosmo Family for their immediate needs, at Valley Bank on Main Street.

Bob Hirsch from Protective Services said, "As fellow employees, we are asking you as groups, departments, organizations or as individuals to please help by contributing to that account."

Hirsch has found, in organizing to help the family recover from their loss, that there is a need for much donated clothing for the needy in the county.

"I would encourage people with unused clothing to donate it to the Dunn County Clothing Pantry or area churches," Hirsch said, "because there are many more needy people in this county, besides the Fosmos."

For additional information, please contact Bob Hirsch at 232-1633 (work) or 235-8235 (home).

Benefit shows student concern

by Karen Smith

Several student groups at UW-Stout are making efforts to raise money to help a toddler from Menomonie who needs a liver transplant.

The governing council of Stout residence halls and the auxiliary group of a campus fraternity are organizing fundraisers to aid Jill Weber and her family.

The Weber family is facing the high costs of a liver transplant needed by the 3 1/2 year old Jill.

Jill's mother, Jory Weber, is very pleased with the efforts that are being made to help her daughter.

"I think it's wonderful," Weber said. "Up until now we have been alone on this. Now people are doing so many things for us. Everyone is trying to help. It's really a good feeling."

This is the first community project that the Inter-Residence Hall Council (IRHC) has ever participated in, according to Lynn Ross, vice-president of South Hall.

"We want to show the city of Menomonie that we care about the community, as well as the students and school," Ross said.

"We decided to do this because we think it's for a worthy cause," Ross said, pondering the seriousness of the young Weber's medical problem.

"Jill, like everyone else has a right to live," Ross added.

Jill did not want the transplant at first, according to her mother.

"Because of her (liver) problems she has been on a special diet," Jill's mother explained. "Now she knows that if she has the transplant that she will be able to eat ice cream, so she is ready to have the transplant."

The Little Sisters of Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity have begun a money drive for the little girl, working jointly with the Inter-Residence Hall Council (IRHC).

IRHC has involved all of the residence halls on campus in the project.

The halls will be competing against each other to raise the most money, with each hall having their own fundraiser.

Some of the activities will include penny pitches, ice cream sales and, there will be places to make donations. North Hall is planning a dance and will be selling hot dogs at football games to raise money for the transplant.

Sig Tau will also sponsor a fishbowl in the Cobblestone Court on December 2 and 3. According to Missy Buboltz, organizer for Sig Tau, this is so students who do not live in halls can get involved with the money drive also.

"We really want to help out and get the whole campus involved," Buboltz said. "It is a good opportunity for students to get involved with the community and help out for a needy cause."

Stout food lab keeps pace with trends

by Cosmas A. Whitten

The UW-Stout Fast Food Laboratory is changing to keep pace with trends in the industry.

There is a push for the increased use of computers in the fast food industry, which keeps track of inventories, sales and provides detailed product analysis.

In order to expose students to the current technology used in the fast food industry, the laboratory has recently installed the NCR 2126 6000 Fast Food System.

Worth approximately $13 thousand, the new pieces of equipment were donated by the NCR Corporation.

The NCR system provides greater speed in order taking by simplifying the process.

A CRT display unit, linking the cash register to the food preparation area, helps the students on the laboratory staff keep the proper amount of product in the holding bin at all times.

To provide detailed information concerning the cost of laboratory operations, the computer system tracks such information as the cost of food and supplies, product sales and waste.

Next semester, plans include interfacing the NCR system with personal computers so that student's laboratory operation information can be stored and recalled off of a floppy disc.

The experience gained by students in handling the new computer system prepares them for the special equipment used in the fast-paced industry.

"There are already positions in the fast food industry involving people who deal only with the point-of-sales equipment," according to faculty member Jim Burgermeister, who has been involved with the development of the Fast Foods Operations course.

> "Product research and development has been a means for students to express creativity
> —John Sonnack"

Burgermeister recently completed plans for a course titled "Computer Systems for Food Service." He said that he foresees similar computer courses being developed in the future.

The Fast Food Laboratory is located on the first floor of the Home Economics building. The lab is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Students who work in the Fast Food Laboratory receive valuable lessons, according to student Steve Silbar.

"It is a good learning experience, from a management stand point," Silbar said.

Upon graduation, students like Steve Halverson plan to work in the fast food industry.

"The lab is great experience," Halverson said.

"It teaches students how unpredictable things could be," said Halverson. "The lab is also good practice in working at the fast pace which the industry operates at."

Research and development of new products is another subject of importance that is covered in the Fast Food Operations course.

According to the present instructor of Fast Food Operations, John Sonnack, "This semester, product research and development has been a means for students to express creativity."

On Thursday, Dec. 4, fast food students will sell products that they have created.

The tower burger, created by Bryan Bataille, is a sandwich which has "the works"; bacon, lettuce and tomato. There will also be another student created product, called egg roll nuggets, which will be served with sweet and sour sauce and hot mustard.

Next semester, Sonnack said, product research and development by students will involve more detail.

"Research and development students," Sonnack said, "will do more in-depth product research."

"Who knows," he added enthusiastically, "maybe we will come up with an idea that will be interesting to someone in the fast foods industry."

Paul Kniesz's essay on Residence Hall living wins IRHC contest

by Tracy Lea Landis

A resident of South Hall won an essay contest for submitting the following article on "Why Living in the Residence Halls is a Wonderful Experience."

The essay contest was sponsored by the Inter-Residence Hall Council (IRHC).

"As part of Residence Hall Awareness month, which was held in October," Agnes Duda, vice-president of IRHC said, "we sponsored the essay contest."

Paul Kniesz, who submitted the essay, is also the Stout Student Association representative from South Hall.

"Why Living in the Residence Halls is a Wonderful Experience":

I am sure many of us could come up with some reasons why living in the residence halls is a drag or a pain in the you know what, but living in the residence halls is a valuable experience as well.

All of us come from different backgrounds, whether we come from a small town in Wisconsin, a large city in the Midwest, or even from another country like England.

We are all different, with our own ideas, likes and dislikes and knowledge of our world. We share these with one another.

Through this, special friendships begin to form. This is what makes residence life in our halls very special.

Living in the residence halls creates a world in itself. Yes, we have our rules and regulations that we must follow, but there is also time in which we do a lot of socializing with each other.

Activities like Hall Council, the different committees that are formed from it, and other activities like dances, parties, playing mud volleyball in the rain or having snowball fights in the winter create fun and excitement in our lives.

Since we are all different, we may think our problems are different. Sometimes we try to solve our problems by locking ourselves in our rooms, hoping that an answer slides underneath our door.

The majority of the time, when we do this, we do not find the answer that is needed to solve our problems. Instead, we go into a deep depression. Some find the answer to be suicide. Then it may be too late.

We are lucky here at Stout that the people living in our residence halls care about each other's problems because they or someone they knew went through something similar. They really want to help.

Do not keep your problems inside you. Open up that door and look, seek, pose questions; not only to yourself, but to your friends, resident advisors and hall directors.

You will be surprised to see all the possible answers that await you on the other side of that door.

Yes, living in our residence halls is a valuable experience.

Whether it be making new friends, hall activities that are fun, or finding answers to the problems in our lives; in the residence halls, it can happen - just by opening the doors in our lives.

THANK YOU FOR BEING AWARE!
Sincerely,
Paul Kniesz

"The decision to edit was made by the editorial board of the paper, on the suggestion of their advisor," said Hopkins outside the meeting.

Meyers said that the editing eliminated an important section.

"I feel that by omitting this section of my letter," Meyers said, "it changes the perspective."

"And there was no indication that a section was omitted from the letter," Meyers added.

Speaking against the motion, Jim Falkofske, off-campus senator said, "this sort of action just seems to me like censorship."

"Sixty-five to seventy percent of the paper is advertising," said Senator Damon Smith, in favor of the review. "It's almost all ads."

"What I see is one group of students trying to learn and to do their best job," said Bill Siedlecki, advisor to SSA, "running up against another group of students learning and trying to do their best job."

"Isn't there a better way for us to reach some sort of communication," Siedlecki asked.

The motion was tabled for two weeks.

Consumers taste microwave and conventional cooking

by Cosmas A. Whitten

In an experiment attempting to judge the reactions of consumers to foods prepared through the use of microwave ovens compared to those prepared conventionally, Corner III patrons were, for the most part, unable to tell the difference between the two.

The Quantity Foods Productions (QFP) class, which manages the Corner III food preparation lab on the third floor of Home Economics building, conducted the experiment.

The goal of the experiment was to distinguish the advantages and disadvantages of quantity microwave cooking. This was determined on the basis of a survey of the consumer's comparison of conventional food preparation methods.

On Monday, Nov. 10, two separate service lines were set up in Corner III.

Unbeknownst to the customer, one line had food items prepared in a microwave, while the food served on the other line was prepared by the use of conventional cooking methods.

> "The customers couldn't tell the difference"
> —Stephen Kissler

Questionnaires asking the customer to evaluate food appearance, flavor, temperature and texture were distributed.

With the help of the Microwave Oven class, QFP students evaluated the comments the customers made.

According to QFP instructor Stephen Kissler, "For the most part the customers couldn't tell the difference."

Kissler did mention that conventionally prepared food stayed hotter longer and had a more appealing color.

The students on the Corner III kitchen staff evaluated the preparation, cooking and serving times, comparing the two different cooking methods.

According to Kissler, the preparation and serving time was found to be the same for both cooking methods.

However, students of food preparation discovered that cooking time was longer for the microwave. This was due to the many small batches which had to be prepared, in comparison to the bulk amounts prepared by conventional cooking methods.

Condom-delivery service started by University of Texas students

AUSTIN, TX (CPS) -- Three enterprising University of Texas (UT) students have started a condom-delivery service in and around their Austin campus.

The UT students hope to franchise their idea - called "The Protection Connection" - to other campuses around the country.

It is, says partner Christopher Bray, "the perfect student business."

"Everyone dreams about starting their own business," adds Sid Graef, who along with classmate Christian Taylor, composes the rest of the company.

"Everybody's going to be sexually active at some point, so they may as well be protected," Graef explained.

During most evening and early morning hours, Protection Connection delivers direct to lovers' rooms six to 12 condoms and contraceptive sponges for prices ranging from $5 to $20.

Bray says the idea arose last month when one of the partners happened to mention the Japanese tradition of selling contraceptives door to door. Graef got enthusiastic enough about the idea to print flyers and post them around campus.

Bray says the phone started ringing within 30 minutes.

The campus Health Center at UT soon bestowed legitimacy on the firm.

"We pass out their information on venereal diseases and they distribute our flyers," Taylor says.

"Let the (uninformed) make the jokes," Taylor adds. "We are a serious business."

Mayor proposes development staff cut

by Tracy Lea Landis

The mayor of Menomonie has proposed cutting the funding of a city department which says that it has been working to develop Menomonie and preserve its neighborhoods.

Mayor Chuck Stokke has recommended that the budget of the Community Development Department (CDD) be cut to eliminate the salaries of the two full-time staff people currently running the department.

The department applies for and administrates block grants recieved from the state to make improvements that the community might not otherwise be able to afford.

Block grants for community improvement are provided for such things as curb and gutter or water main installation. Other block grants are used to improve housing in the community by extending loans for renovation.

The continued effectiveness of the block grant programs is an off-campus student housing issue, according to Stout Student Association (SSA) President Paul D. Nelson.

"A significant number of these homes being up-graded are student rental properties," Nelson said.

SSA Landlord/Tenant Representative John Lee predicted that reduction of the CDD could result in deteriorating housing or higher rents.

These homes being upgraded are student rental properties
—Paul D. Nelson

Two full-time staff people, a director and assistant, currently oversee CDD.

"In 1986," the Mayor said, "those positions were run on city tax money."

Stokke said that the "original intent of the whole CDD operation" was that the costs of administering block grants would come from the grants awarded.

Stokke claims the city has not recieved any block grants for community improvements in two years. He said there have been grants recieved for improvments in housing, however.

"We have a difference of opinion about the function of the department," said the director of CDD, Ron Rogstad, of the mayor's recommendation.

According to Rogstad, CDD has been administering the block grant funding that it makes application for on behalf of the city.

Rogstad also said that his department has promoted the conservation of housing in Menomonie neighborhoods and attempted to provide an overall planning function for the city.

For the past four years, Rogstad said, the CDD has "concentrated on economic development."

They have stimulated the industrial park development, he said, through the grants they obtained to improve facitilities there.

"There are no planning job descriptions for the Community Development Director," Mayor Stokke responds.

"The city planning is done by the Community Development Commission," Stokke said. "They use the director as a resource in making their decisions."

City Councilperson Jay Shroeder said he has served on the Community Development Commission (CDC) since 1984.

Shroeder disagrees with the Mayor's suggestion that the functions of the CDD staff be done by part-time staff or contracted out.

"I think it's a terrible mistake," said Shroeder, citing lack of continuity in administering and planning the programs as reason not to cut the CDD budget.

"If you take an analysis of the jobs that have been created and the revenue that has been generated" by the existence of the department, Shroeder said they "more that justify the expense incurred in having the department."

Rogstad said that his department costs the city $65 thousand each year.

"As a direct result of our assistance," Rogstad said, "we have created 311 jobs in the last four years."

The budget containing the cuts proposed by the mayor which would reduce the CDD staff will be voted on at the City Council meeting on Monday, Dec. 1.

The entire budget proposed for the city of Menomonie will be available on Thursday, Nov. 20, for public review.

A public hearing will be held before the vote is taken on the budget.

Bloodmobile

the time blood is drawn, volunteers from Stout drove shuttles back to St. Paul, delivering drawn blood during the two days.

The Bloodmobile was held in the Great Hall of the Memorial Student Center.

The Bloodmobile is sponsored each semester by Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority and the Inter-Greek Council.

Marlys Kellogg, Gamma Sigma Sigma service director and Bloodmobile coordinator, said the day was a success, "especially considering the (cold) weather and the busy schedules most students have."

Gene Kaluza, Mobile Unit Assistant from St. Paul Red Cross, said Stout had organized probably the best college drive he had been on this year.

"You need to do a good job of recruiting to get the donors here," Kaluza said.

Krause agreed that the drive was "extremely well organized."

"That makes our job much easier," she added.

It usually takes 45 minutes to one hour to donate blood. The actual time it takes to draw the blood is less than 10 minutes. A person can safely donate blood, Krause said, every 56 days.

A pint of blood will keep for 28 days. Krause said over 99 percent of the blood collected by the St. Paul Red Cross is used within that time.

The Red Cross collects blood only from volunteer donors. The blood itself is received free of charge to those who need it.

IRHS president resigns

The president of the Inter-Residence Hall Council resigned on Monday of this week.

Jeff Campeau cited health reasons as the reason for his resignation from the on-campus student governing body.

Agnes Duda, vice-president of the organization, said that the resignation was not expected.

"We're looking into our constitution and by-laws," Duda said, to see what the group's procedure for replacing Campeau should be.

Cancelled for future

Ninth period classes have been canceled for the second Monday in December in order that the teaching staff can attend a briefing on a report which may direct the future direction for the UW-System.

All university staff members have been invited to the briefing on a report of the Regents Study Group on the Future of the University of Wisconsin System.

The Future Study Group is preparing to make specific recommendations in areas such as funding, tuition, enrollment management, credit transfers and campus missions.

Chancellor Robert Swanson, who is the vice-chair of the Future Study Group, will deliver the briefing at 4 p.m., Monday, Dec. 8 in the Great Hall of the Student Center.

Grads lose jobs

Ten percent of college graduates are either fired or "strongly encouraged to resign" within the first year they enter the workforce, Business Week Careers magazine reported.

The most common reasons listed were: "failure to fit in," a misunderstanding of the graduate's qualifications, "bad chemistry with (the) boss," and office politics.

Refugees included

A report which could determine the future of the UW-System is expected to be amended to include Southeast Asian refugees in minority student programs, according to a member of the Board of Regents.

Regent Ody Fish, Chair of the Regent Study Group, said that he expects the amendment to be made before final action is taken on the report.

Students from UW-Oshkosh and Madison convinced the regents that the wording of the report should be changed to include Hmong and Laotian students by arguing that they face large language, cultural and financial barriers.

Definition in works

A meeting of ethnic minorities was called to discuss the Minority Affairs Senator seat of the Stout Student Association (SSA) last Friday.

"The first thing that came out of the meeting is a redefinition of the minority affairs position," Robb Zimdars reported at the SSA meeting on Tuesday.

Zimdars is the united council director for SSA and overseer of the minority affairs position.

"We sent out letters only to ethnic minority groups," said Zimdars, explaining the lack of representation at the meeting by groups besides American and international minorities.

"What we have for a definition worked out so far includes the disabled, American minorities, internationals, non-traditional students," but Zimdars added, "I'm not sure about gays and lesbians."

Minority Affairs Senator Adisola Adisa said that participants at the meeting "talked about that SSA does not have a proper definition of minority and a schedule of duty for minority affairs senator has never been defined before."

IRS collects on loans

The default rate on student loans has improved dramatically this year, with a little help from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

U.S. Department of Education Secretary William Bennett attributed the improvement to help from the IRS.

This year the IRS began withholding overdue loan payments from defaulters' tax refunds.

Student funds available

Students and student groups may apply for funding to the Stout Foundation under the regular grants program. The deadline for applications is Feb. 1.

Students or student groups must have a staff member as a project advisor to qualify for grants.

Graduate or undergraduate research projects would qualify under this program.

Guidelines are available from Research Promotion Services, Fourth Floor Bowman Hall.

Fund request cut

The student government of a college in Maryland decided to provide funding for the 200-member Students Against Intelligent Nonterrestials (SAINT).

SAINT originally asked student representatives for four billion dollars in funding, mostly to develop a particle-beam weapon to fight aliens, plus $4,900 for a barbecue.

The student government representatives decided to fund them one dollar to buy matches.

SAINT President Eric Celarier says he will not give up.

"We'll hit them over the head with beer bottles, if that's what it takes," Celarier warned.

WHEN IS THE RIGHT TIME TO CALL YOUR GRANDPARENTS?

a) Five minutes into "The Lawrence Welk Show."

b) About a week before your birthday.

c) When you just want to tell them you miss them, and that you ate the last of Grandma's chocolate-chip cookies this morning.

There's nothing grandparents like better than a call from a grandchild in college. But if you do accidentally happen to interrupt Lawrence, you ought to have something worth telling them.

For example, you could mention that you called using AT&T Long Distance Service because you can depend on AT&T's high quality service and exceptional value.

And then you can tell them that AT&T gives you immediate credit if you dial a wrong number.

And that you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections.

Finally, of course, you should quickly reassure them that you're eating enough, then let them hurry back to the TV to catch the rest of the Lennon Sisters' Blue Oyster Cult medley.

Tuition hikes cause for System's review

As the UW-System Board of Regents works to establish the latest in tuition increases, the focus has been on the need to make up for the system's annual deficit of $116 million.

This focus on the immediate UW–System deficit overlooks the long term impact of forced reduction in student enrollments and significant increases in the tuition level.

UW System students need to stress that they get what they pay for. The recent computer paper controversy at the Library Learning Center indicated the problems that face UW-Stout. Professors are expected to make demands on their students which will bring them up to the current standards in their field. When the cost of computer paper influences these professors to restrict the lessons to the extent that students can afford to complete them, the lesson's impact is diminished.

Wisconsin would be wise to consider the valuable return received by states which invest above average levels of tax dollars on education.

If increasing tuition rates are determined to be the best means of reducing the UW-System deficit, students ought to ask what more they might receive from their investment.

At Stout, students could begin by asking that the library remain open until 1 a.m. rather than closing at 11 p.m. Then more students could use the library at times which better fit their busy schedules.

Since Stout faculty and administrative members recognize the severe writing problems experienced by the majority of Stout students, there is no excuse for the University not to invest more time and money toward improving students' writing skills. These are the skills which will last you a life time and are well worth the investment.

The UW–System is famous for providing practically unlimited access to higher education at an affordable cost to Wisconsin residents. Now is the time to maintain the free access to UW schools at moderate cost so that Wisconsin might progress along with the growth of its educational system.

The needed improvements should be made in the UW-System so the schools provide a better level of education to the students and the state of Wisconsin benefits from these modifications.

I've seen 10,000 violent deaths since I was six. Most of them on three networks. Could this mean that too few people die on public television?

On January 19, 1953, Lucy Ricardo gave birth to Desi Arnaz, Jr. At 9 p.m. EST., that night, she gave birth to "Little Ricky," and for most of the viewing world, the TV babe was as real as the other, probably more so.

The next day, Gen. Eisenhower, the happy President, and Richard Nixon, the once and future unhappy President, were inaugurated. Either event could be described as the "Birth of a Nation."

In 1947, the number of television sets in America homes went from 8000 to 170,000. The next year, NBC Television Network claimed: "1948 marks TV's appearance as a major force. The greatest means of mass communications in the world is with us." (Or maybe against us).

One of my favorite prehistoric, i.e. pre-TV, comedians, Fred Allen was basically driven off the radio dial by TV.

He was never rated lower than tenth by listener surveys. In 1948, his solid Sunday night slot went up against one of TV's new mind-suckers, the Game Show, with Bert Parks. Allen lost. He chose not to join them.

Fred Allen had this to say about TV: "They call television a medium because nothing on it is ever well done."

Another pithy quote about TV by Bertrand Russell — he called it "chewing gum for the eyes."

It is difficult to imagine Current American Life without television. Let's face it, Average College-age Person, TV is your history.

I once had this dream. For no real reason, there was the greatest whirlpool of all time in the North Sea. It was so big that it was sucking up the ocean. The whirlpool started sucking up Wales, Scotland, Iceland and so on.

CBS News teams were flying over the Big Hole in helicopters and the hole was being broadcast over the evening news with Walter Cronkite.

When I woke, I knew this: The End of The World will be televised. You know it's true. It will not happen so fast that some news team won't get it on a Special Report.

I can see it now: "SPECIAL REPORT: The End of the World... The Discontinuing Story. And now, Roger Mudd..."

Thirty years ago, nobody on earth was watching thirty year old movies on television. We are now.

One of my favorite stories about television is really more about a drug-crazed millionaire gospel singer who, towards his final days, used to blast out the screens of his TV with a large handgun. This may be a legitimate reaction to poor programming, (depending on local firearm restrictions).

Elvis answered the musical question "What can I do to combat the damage TV has done and is doing to the sexual values and standards of society, of my family, and of myself?" which is posed in the classic Christian-style attempt at investigation, Telegarbage.

Television can be used for self-realization. Video artist Nam June Pak created a work in which sat a Buddha figure in front of a TV monitor. Standing on top of the screen was a video camera with a live line to the monitor. The camera was pointed at the Buddha, who, in turn was watching his own image on the screen. Endless enlightenment.

In America, there are two versions of the Gospel on television. One is the game show and the other is the revved up video-minister. One is a Chuck Barris creation, and another is an equally crazy monkey like what's-his-name Shuller from the Crystal Cathedral in fabulously well-to-do Orange County, California.

Behind Door Number Two is Malto-Meal Hell. Greed and avarice leads to a new Camaro, shown by an Angel of Mercy, or a condemnation to Eternal Life in the endless, colorless, odorless, tasteless suburbs, without a new washer and dryer.

With one of these new churches, you can scam a big booty with a gutsy weazel maneuver. With the other, you can scam a big booty and eternal glory if you just work hard and order your life. And order a few moderately priced volumes written by some graduates of the Oral Roberts School of Economic

Subject: Addressing student concerns and upcoming changes in student life

by Tim Hopkins

Assistant Chancellor, Dean of Students Sam Wood first arrived at UW-Stout 22 years ago when enrollment totalled just less than 2000 students. His responsibility in 1964 involved the new and the transfer student's registration process which lasted three days at that time.

In 1971, Sam Wood became the dean of students and in 1974 he became the assistant chancellor of student services.

STOUTONIA: A PROBLEM WAS CREATED FOR MANY STUDENTS BY THE LATE RELEASE OF THE COURSE SCHEDULE BOOKLET FOR NEXT SPRING. WILL THIS PROBLEM BE RECURRENT?

I think that's a one year phenomenon, at least I hope it is. One of the things we have tried real hard to do is to give the students the benefit of adequate planning.

I don't think we can have good planning with no time involved. I'm sorry it did come out that late. The new calendar in effect chopped two weeks off from the beginning (of the school year.)

> "I think it will be the students who will create the change. —Sam Wood Dean of Students"

We're going to have to readjust our schedule to the calendar if the September first date remains in effect as law, and it appears that at least it will for another year, and simply move it back into another time period. This makes it very difficult for the program directors for the departments because they haven't even had the chance to figure out what's happening this semester and already they're figuring next semester but that's part of the procedure that happens all the time in advance planning.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO YOU RESPOND TO THE CRITICISM THAT STOUT IS A FIVE OR SIX YEAR SCHOOL?

We still have a majority of students who graduate in four years. Those who take four and one half or five years, generally speaking, are people who have more than one concentration or major. They may have avoided a particular course or series of courses for an extra semester which moved them back.

Sometimes we are at fault, if we don't schedule classes in a timely fashion. In those cases, if we create problems like that, the student should really talk with their program director. Most students are a little bit hesitant to do that. They may reason it's too late, or the program director won't do anything about it, but really they should go to the program director and say, "the course sequence is not set up in such a way that I can complete it in the time allocated." We never intended our programs to be five years or four and one half years. We recognize that 130 credits is more than most schools require for graduation, and that's what most of our undergraduate majors require.

Quite frequently, at most campuses 120 credits are required for graduation. Those 10 credits may not souind like much but if you take those 10 credits it's a fair block.

STOUTONIA: WHAT CHANGES DO YOU SEE DOWN THE ROAD AT STOUT?

First of all, I think it will be the students who will create the change. Right now, they're working very hard to improve the landlord/tenant relationship that exists. There, are close to 4000 students renting in or near the Menomonie area. I think the students are doing a good job in taking the lead and trying to improve the conditions and the contract. There is going to have to be some give and take before anything is resolved on that. That's a typical solution, everybody gives a little so everybody gets a little.

At one time 60 percent of the students lived on campus and 40 percent lived off campus. Now, we have the exact opposite. The bulk of our students are living in the community. There's an example where we can support the students. I have talked with all the city councilmen and we met last week with the community/university relations committee trying to determine our next step. John Lee is taking the lead from the student's side of it and I'd say that's an example of things that are going to happen. They might not be exactly like John's planning them or the City's planning them, but there will be changes that occur which will benefit the students.

I think we have worked very hard and are continuing to on this business of making the transition from the 19 year-old drinking law to the 21 year-old drinking law. I think the students this year, through the leadership of the Senate and the University Programming Board and the Special Events Committee in particular, did a tremendous job with that event at homecoming which they called Bash on the Grass.

It was a real fine event. I was there until they closed and I had a good time. Now, those are the types of things that we want to give support. While they're not critical as far as your getting your degree at Stout, they are critical as far as your mental health and your well being at Stout.

The fact that homecoming was not a fiasco, the fact that you can live off campus with some degree of confidence that your rights are protected, things like that, people will say, "You really don't need that at a university, these people are now adults and they should be able to handle this." We do need this at a university, as much as a 30 year-old needs to have some place to go out for the evening and have a pleasant time. We need to do the same things for the students on campus.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS ONE OF YOUR MAIN GOALS AS DEAN OF STUDENTS?

Appreciation for students

The Red Cross congratulates the UW-Stout students for donating 427 pints of blood November 11 and 12. You exceeded the estimate for the two days by 27 pints.

We want to thank everyone who did anything to help make the Bloodmobile visit a success.

Your cooperation is appreciated!

H & R needs upgrading

As students of the hotel and restaurant management program we should be wondering where the hotel part of the program is, or where it has gone.

Under the 1984 "new program" there are 13 food related classes and only three hotel related classes. The remainder are general hospitality classes. And the only change in the 1984 program is the recently added Nutrition for the Hospitality Industry class, which is replacing Integrated Management. That's interesting, it is another food class. We need another food class like a hole in our heads.

You H & R students who are interested in the food part of hospitality are lucky. You have challenging teachers and well equipped classes to learn your concentration.

Unfortunately, we students who have interests in the lodging industry have blow off classes and we all know what classes those are (Front Office Mgmt. etc.), and ill equipped classes.

Did you know that the Restaurant Operations class just acquired new furniture this semester and new food service equipment? The Front Office class still doesn't have a computer to use as a learning tool. The computer is being used in 80 percent of the hotel industry. I would think that the computer would be the primary tool used in that class. Where is it?

Why is hotel education at Stout so much weaker than our food (service) education? I would like to challenge the directors of the hotel and restaurant management program to focus on upgrading the quality of the hotel classes and maybe even adding more.

There are Stout H & R students who don't want to hold a food service position out in the job market. Unfortunately, these are the qualifications we're leaving here with, not the qualifications to run a hotel adequately.

Since food service is not the all encompassing interest of all the H & R students, our alternative is to go to Cornell and receive a quality education from from their hotel program. Not all H & R students have the funding or desire to fulfill that option. Stout has the resources and quality staff to increase the caliber of the hotel part of the H & R program. Let us help and see it happen.

Beating the issue

Isn't it about time you gave the minority affairs senator issue a rest? If your intention was to create awareness of the lack of continuity of this senator then I believe you got your point across several issues ago.

When you print such articles as was in the November 13 issue, you do a major disservice to these groups who have strived to develop and maintain some cohesiveness. When you have an international student berating an American student for something the American student never said, or was taken out of context, you break down in minutes what has taken months to build up. I think you are being very unfair!

The whole problem lies not in a person's capabilities (or lack of), but in the fact that there isn't a job/position description of what is expected of a minority affairs senator. You say this is to represent "minority" concerns. In what way? And who is a minority?

When the SSA president can answer some of these questions and help develop the responsibilities of this senator more clearly, then I believe you will have a minority senator with staying power. For one person to represent well over 600 people's concerns (and that's only American minority, international and handicapped) effectively, you have to honestly ask yourselves, "Is this possible?"

Maybe once you straighten out that question, you can stop using the divide and conquer techniques that have been prevalent in your other articles.

Actions are questioned

Amnesty International International...again. It seems as though we have all heard the arguments more times than we care to recall. Perhaps another approach demands consideration.

I think that the entire student body owes SSA President Paul D. Nelson and his Tuesday night senators a hand. We all pay the $45 in segregated fees. Do we want our money to be used to protest the inhumane treatment of prisoners of conscience who were imprisoned for pleading (that) governments

Viewer mail

Rich Brueckner

"Maybe, if we're lucky, they will show it again--such a terrible thing to see."--Phil Collins

It's Thursday and time for Viewer Mail. But first, let's do tonight's Top Ten list, compiled as always at our home office in Milwaukee.

Here it is. These are the Top Ten reasons why beer is better than woman:

10. You can share a beer with your friends.
9. When you go to a bar you know you can always pick up a beer.
8. You can have a beer in public.
7. A beer never gets a headache.
6. You always know if you're the first one to pop a beer.
5. A beer will wait patiently at home until you want it.
4. A beer doesn't care when you come.
3. A beer never spends too much time in the can.
2. A Premium beer never acts like it's too good for you.

And now, the number one reason why beer is better than women:

1. You don't have to worry about your friends seeing you with a heavy beer.

Let's move on to viewer mail. Our first letter reads:

"Dear David,

I am appalled by what I see. I can't understand why the SSA doesn't stop you from printing those potty-mouth Top Ten lists.

Shawnee Pamprin"

Well Shawnee, I'm glad you asked that. I guess that the reason that they don't stop me is because SSA President Paul D. Nelson is the one who gave me the list.

Our next letter comes from the other side of the tracks. It reads:

"Dear David,

I think that it is only fair that we women get to respond to your Top Ten list. Here is our Top Ten list of reasons why beer is better than men:

10. A beer doesn't get jealous when you grab another beer.
9. You can have more than one beer in a night and not feel guilty.
8. A light beer doesn't make you look fat.
7. A beer always satisfies.
6. A cheap beer is a good time.
5. Beer will always call you the next morning.
4. A well-treated beer doesn't get a big head.
3. A beer is always smooth.
2. Beer is never late.

And the number one reason why beer is better than men:

1. A beer always goes down easy.

Thank you for giving your viewers both sides of the story.

Name withheld upon request"

Remember that Viewer Mail is here for you, the viewer. Your brief and to the point cards and letters are always welcome. Drive safely, folks.

as possible.

There are certain services we provide that I subclassify saying they have to be done but they really don't effect the educational program of the student such as the record keeping, the registration for the class and the other things that go along with this. Our goal has been for years now to simplify those to the point where they don't consume a disproportionate amount of the student's time.

Now of course, we have much better equipment and we have a system which allows us to run student's records into the system given a minimal amount of their time. Several of our sister institutions have been here to observe our system and we're quite proud of that. I observed in a conference seven or eight years ago the concept of financial aids being able to have on line, in their office, all the data and being able to make the change on the terminal and give the student a print out on the spot. I brought that idea back with me and said all it takes is a little programming and a little hardware, the equipment can handle it. Now, our data processing support equipment for financial aids is many times what it was in the late 60's when everything in financial aids was paper and pencil.

We're still trying to upgrade our financial aid delivery system. I know (Financial Aids Director) Kurt Kindschi has been working very hard.

Letters Policy

The Stoutonia welcomes all viewpoints from readers. Letters must be signed and should not exceed 500 words in length.

Anyone wishing to withhold his or her name from publication may do so if appropriate reason is given.

All letters must be typed, signed and include telephone number for verification purpose. Unsigned letters will not be printed. The deadline for letters is Tuesday noon.

GOING THE DISTANCE WITH US COULD BRING YOU $25,200 CLOSER TO SCHOOL.

If you're right out of high school and headed for additional schooling, one route you might consider is the Army. It's a route that will bring you up to $25,200 for educational assistance, as well as valuable skill training, if you qualify.

It's available through the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. As a soldier, you contribute $100 a month from your first full 12 months' paychecks (for a total of $1,200). The government and the Army contribute the rest (up to $9,600 from the government and up to $14,400 from the Army).

The skill training you receive will challenge you. It'll give you new knowledge, experience and pride. It's tough, but it's worth it.

If you can go the distance, we'll put you closer. With the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. Call your local Army Recruiter for more information.

Theology. Either approach is pure Americana.

One Sunday, after watching the Deluxe Pie in the Sky Preacher Shuller, then later, that cloud of smoke called "Meet the Press," where nobody says anything solid, no matter what Marvin Kalb asks them, or "60 Minutes," where the future is bleakly uncertain, then watching, very late at night, a rerun of "The Gong Show," (which apparently bounced off of Jupiter into my TV,) I came to the conclusion that Chuck Barris is the Prophet of our times.

He may be the only person who is weird enough and tasteless enough to know what is really happening out there in the world. I sure don't. All I know is what is on TV. Then again, maybe that qualifies.

Seeds of Change

Thank you Lord

Gene Emahiser

In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed that we should have a national holiday called Thanksgiving Day. He said it should be "a day of thanksgiving and praise to almighty God, the beneficent Creator and Ruler of the Universe."

As we make preparation for our Thanksgiving Day, let us try to keep in mind the reason that we celebrate. Many of us have read and studied the historical account of the first celebration. But do we really understand what happened that fall day in 1621?

The pilgrims of 1621 who celebrated that first Thanksgiving had much to be thankful for.

1. They were alive! Only half of the 102 pilgrims on the Mayflower made it through the winter that of 1620-1621.

2. God had sent them a friendly, English speaking, Patuxet Indian named Squanto. This Indian had been in Europe for over 14 years and just happened to show up at Plymouth looking for his lost tribe in 1621. Sqaunto spent four of those years with some friars in Spain. It was there, in Spain, that Squanto was introduced to God and Christianity. Squanto taught the pilgrims to plant effectively, to fish, and to hunt. God providentially placed this man among them to show them the basic elements that they would need for survival and prosperity.

3.The pilgrims were free to worship God without the restraints and oppression of government intervention.

The pilgrims set aside three days that year to celebrate the abundance of life that God had given them. Gov. Bradford invited the nearby Wampanoag Indians to celebrate and give thanks to God with them. On that day, Chief Massasoit came with 90 of his men to feast and frolic. The men played games and competed in running, wrestling, and shooting events. The Indians shared a treat with the pilgrims that we still enjoy today — popcorn! Understanding the importance of giving God the praise, honor, and thanks for their success, the pilgrims repeated this festival yearly.

As each of us takes part in our own celebration, we should examine our attitude about what we have. Is our glass half full or half empty? Thank God for what you do have. Don't curse him for what you lack.

Look around at the many things that we have been blessed with. America, in spite of its problems, is still one of the most blessed countries in the world. This will continue as long as we remain thankful and not grow cold, taking things for granted. Failing to give God the credit for the things that he has done would be a serious sin of omission. Let us take the time this year to thank God, our provider, for what he has done for us, what he is doing and what he will do in the future.

"Give thanks to the Lord of Lords. His love endures forever."
Psalm 136:3

grant their people human rights? Of course not!! Instead, let us ignore the torture and starvation occurring even as we read this (letter.) Instead, let us shut out our only means of letting governments know that we do care about how these prisoners are being treated.

I am sure that Mr. Nelson would reconsider were the tables turned. Oh well, they aren't, so why bother considering it? Tomorrow morning, in many countries around the globe, people will awaken to another day of starvation, another day of humiliation, another beating. Until morning, sleep well. Know that Paul D. Nelson cares.

P.S. A special thanks to those senators and students who care. Your reward will be great and your consciences (will be) clear.

Brueckner over paid

Dear Mr. Brueckner:

About your article "LIFER Death," I think the only fact you may have gotten right was the one stating that you spend five out of seven days in the bar (which is where I think you wrote your article.) You obviously didn't do any research for your article, so how about some facts?

There are four people in charge of cleaning the major areas of the LLC for half a night. Our ages range from 25 to (the) mid thirties, far from retirement. Three of us are college graduates and one still attends, doing post graduate studies. The other had his college education cut short by financial troubles, something most students are familiar with. Two of us have also been responsible for shampooing the carpet in all of the academic buildings on campus.

I can't believe that you think we dictate policy for the University of Wisconsin. People with much higher pay than mine are in charge of this magnificent feat. This is a long standing policy made by the management of the library, who has recently decided to enforce it because of damage and budget cuts. We're not responsible for distributing those little yellow slips or implementing the food and drink policy. Also, we never complained about picking up the litter left behind by an infantile few. My three-year-old child cleans up after herself better than some of you.

We all do a good job because we care about our work. And although we're union members, we can get fired for not doing our job. The A.F.S.C.M.E Union doesn't encourage or condone shoddy work performance. In fact, they encourage excellence and pride in workmanship.

It seems you are being punished for something a few slobs are doing. It doesn't seem fair, but it's the same thing you're doing to us. You condemn us all with the label "LIFER" because of the actions or inactions and ignorance of the few. The solutions aren't simple and can't be solved by "bitching." Both the food and drink policy and your ideas on smokers and typewriters have merit. But, unless you organize your ideas, get support for them and present them to management in an intelligent manner, you're left with a choice between noise and smoke, or no food or beverage.

About your $10 per week; I think you're overpaid.

Films to show slapstick views of war

by Jef Maynard

War is for Stooges, Moronica uber alles. War may not be funny, but then again, in the grandest scheme of things, it may be the greatest slapstick routine yet performed.

In their latest film offerings, the Foreign Film Society presents four short works which explore the truly strange tragic/comic paradox that allows creatures of the same species to destroy each other with such zest and flare.

The films, which will be shown at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, in 321 Applied Arts, are from quite different cultural settings. They are: I'll Never Heil Again, Le Jetee, Springman and the SS, and The Floating Coffin.

I'll Never Heil Again is a 1941 short film by those moronic masters of mayhem, The Three Stooges. Not ever having been much of a fan of these legends of the silver screen, I didn't expect much. And given the era of anti-Hitler propaganda in which the film was made, the situation was not unpredictable.

The point of the film was not necessarily anti-war, but anti-fascism. Two attitudes worked suprisingly well in viewing this film. I looked at it as an statement against dictatorship, not as another typical Stooges epic.

Also, what is not immediately obvious is that if one accepts the idea that war is The Grand Slapstick Comedy, who better to portray it in reduced symbolic terms than The Three Stooges.

If whacking the sinister Minister of Propaganda in the nose with a pool cue is funny, then as an artistic ploy, it may serve as a fractional term for a real live bayonet up the snout. Why doesn't that seem funny?

An animated short film from Czechoslovakia, Springman and the SS comes across like a wierd dream and a nightmare.

> "War may not be funny, but then again...it may be the greatest slapstick routine yet performed"

The SS, which stands for Schutzstaffel, was the elite guard for the Nazis. In the film, they were granite jawed and identical and countless. Lead by an evil ferret of a spy, they rooted out various threats to the safety of the Reich as songbirds, pianos, dogs, billboards.

The imagery and sound effects in the film are powerful and frightening. Very strong sensations are created, particularly the feeling of massed troops in motion. The mixture of animated figures and setting with photo-realistic images and actual film overlay techniques showing smoke, for example, have an eerie ambience.

Springman turns out to be a hero in Czech fashion, a simple chimney sweep who extracts two couch springs with his sweeping tools. Attaching them to his feet, and dressed in a soot black costume, he springs around through the SS causing them to collapse in their own massive force.

The Floating Coffin is a silent film from The Perils of Pauline serial. It is excruciatingly crude and just barely fits with the program.

Pauline gets into her fiance's motorboat, sabotaged by her guardian, and ends up in another boat that is being used for battleship target practice. She gets saved by her dog who swims about three miles and attracts the attention of the sailors, while carrying a waterproof note in his mouth. Nice acting by the dog.

The fourth film is not comic. Le Jetee is a poetic French work concerned with the value of mankind as a redeemable species. Its beauty lies in a ghostly presentation of humans as creators and destroyers, as scientists and dreamers.

It is filmed as a series of separate black and white still photos with narration. The photos are more artistic because of the viewing time spent in reflection on each moment, each scene, as it relates to the mysterious narrative.

After the third world war, underground scientists attempt to send emissaries through time, past and future to re-establish life.

Many failed subjects die or are left insane by the experience. Finally, one man with a strong vision from his childhood is found able to make the passage.

His vision becomes a chronological conundrum, being a child's image of the future, lived in the past, lived in the present, then overlapped as his returned adult self appears in his childhood memory, in which he witnesses his own end, finally knowing it as inevitable.

Its one poetic interpretation, the same feeling of mixed visions of future and memory can occur if one thinks of the power of destiny in disguise as nuclear annihilation. The beauty of moments will be lost. To be aware of that possibility may be the intention of the film series.

Vince Kujawa on piano, Tracy Lea Landis vocals, and Tony Kujawa on guitar were among the many talented Stout students and community members participating in the Pawn's Stout Community Talent Night, last weekend. This was the first such event of the year. The other talented performers were Brett Bleuer, who did a variety of songs, while accompanying himself on guitar, and singer Daphne Brown.

Stout has Talent!

The Pawn Coffeehouse showcased some of the musical talent of UW-Stout students and community members last week.

An unannounced participant, Brett Bleuer showed up for the Friday night performance just in time to fill up the slot left vacant by a cancelled performance.

The University Dance Club had been scheduled to perform for the first evening of Stout Community Talent Night, but was forced to cancel at the last minute.

Instead, Bleuer became the surprise guest of the evening, entertaining the crowd by playing a variety of songs and accompanying himself on his guitar.

Saturday evening's performance consisted of two acts that had been advertized on posters for the event, topped off by repeat performance by Bleuer.

The first show was a trio featuring Tracy Lea Landis doing vocals, Vince Kujawa on the piano, with his brother, Tony Kujawa, playing guitar.

The trio titled their act "Doin' the Blues."

The second act of the evening was the Menomonie debut of a talented singer, Daphne Brown, who, for lack of musicians, dubbed her voice over a record for three rythmn and blues tunes.

Brown ended her part of the show with an acappella rendition of the standard "Inseperable."

Jim Hawley, established musician, to appear in Pawn

by Karen Heagle

Becoming an established musician is not an easy thing. In the case of Jim Hawley there is no exception. His journey to musical recognition was full of trials and tribulation. Hawley will be performing at the Pawn coffee house December 5 and 6 at 9:15.

Hawley's roots in music go as far back as his high school years. He and classmate, Mike Barry played at local college coffee houses, and in many high school functions. Generally, wherever they could gather an audience, they performed. This musical pairing ended upon Hawley's joining the Navy.

One might think joining the service would mean an end to a potential musician's career — not Hawley. While he was in basic training he persuaded his company commander to allow Hawley to send for his guitar.

While stationed in Hawaii, on the island of Oahu, Hawley had the opportunity to meet as well as work with Don Ho. Hawley performed before Ho's 34 piece orchestra at the Polynesian Palace in Waikiki. Hawley's performance touched the emotions of many gathered with his singing of "Leaving on a Jet Plane." Ho himself was mighty impressed.

After leaving Hawaii to settle in San Diego, where he frequently played in officer's clubs while stationed there, Hawley was discharged from the service. He still found a following in many officer's clubs but, this soon became routine and Hawley needed to search for more challenging environments. Hawley sought out two other musicians and formed the Jim Hawley Trio.

The trio encountered many interesting experiences while working in Canada,including being fired from a Chinese restaurant for not knowing any Chinese folk music, to playing for not so friendly audiences in extremely cold climates.

Upon returning to the United States, Hawley added three more members. His new band did not last long. Hawley said, "I loved the sound and the harmonies, but I missed the warmth and intimacy that I used to have with the audience. I felt I lost my identity with the group."

> "...I missed the warmth and intimacy that I used to have with the audience
> —Jim Hawley

Hawley had reached a difficult period in his career. He had become unsure of his goals. He decided to travel as a solo act in hopes of regaining confidence. He returned to his home in Miami, Florida to go to school. While studying music Hawley worked a lot, once again, at officers' clubs. He made enough to pay for his rent and buy dog food.

Eventually his luck would change. A motel owner offered him a substantial salary to perform in the motel's lounge. This gave Hawley a real connection with the Miami area, and eventually the word got around. Hawley had found fame in Miami.

He began playing at colleges in the area, and was active with a local radio station. Through the radio station, Hawley had the opportunity to perform with Pat Methany and Gene Cotton. Then he was asked to open for Sha Na Na, at Miami's Gusman Hall. Hawley felt he had his first real taste of the big time.

Hawley took his act to New York in hopes of striking a record contract. Unfortunately, the task was not that easy. Hawley explained, "It was pretty frustrating the record companies didn't want you unless you were represented by an agent, and agencies didn't want you unless you had a record deal."

The experience proved to be discouraging for Hawley. He returned to Miami and was so recharged by the responsiveness of his audiences that he had almost forgotten about New York. Hawley opened for a concert done by Jimmy Buffet, The Little River Band, and The Steve Miller Band. This concert took place at the Miami baseball Stadium. Hawley got the chance to perform before a gathering of 26,000.

After this event, Hawley went to Los Angeles to try his luck. After nine months of struggling Los Angeles proved equally as frustrating as New York. Hawley then returned to familiar ground.

Hawley went back to school to complete his degree in music. He finally got his break. He auditioned at the Old Pacific Beach Cafe, a new club that would soon become one of the main attractions of San San Diego's music fanatics. After three years working with the cafe, he took his act around the United States.

In January of 1985, Hawley released his first album at the same time he launched a tour of college campuses and clubs. Hawley will be sharing his music with those who attend his concert Friday and Saturday (upon returning from Thanksgiving break).

Stout's ambassadors go on tour

by S.J. Lomneas

Some ambassadors wear suits and ties, these ambassadors carry flutes and saxophones. The University Concert, Jazz, and Dixieland Bands recently came back from a Wisconsin tour.

Every semester the band goes on a tour of Wisconsin or Minnesota. This year they toured southern Wisconsin to play their music for two schools, Monticello and Pardeeville, and they also played a concert at the capital in Madison.

Erv Schlik, the band director says, "The tour gives the student a fine educational experience and helps to promote UW-Stout in many area school districts. I think we've had about five tours by now and have played 20-25 schools.

When they returned home, they capped off their tour with a concert for the Industrial Technology banquet.

Jill Heinowski plays clarinet in the concert band said,"Our main purpose for going on tour is to promote Stout, so that area high schools in Wisconsin and Minnesota know about our school."

"We always try to pick smaller school districts," added Heinowski, "those that would not get an opportunity to have a college band, the ones that are usually overlooked."

Jill is the president of the band and has been instrumental in choosing and representing the band as goodwill ambassadors.

"I think Stout is the only Wisconsin college that doesn't have a music major," said Heinowski. "There is a kind of comraderie about the band; it's a real close group."

"The thing about our tour is that it's not just a formalized kind of thing, said Bruce Hoppe, another member of the band. "We don't just play classical music or concert band music, we try to design the show so they can enjoy it. And they do, they really do."

"Every school I've ever played in the years I've been here, I have enjoyed," Hoppe continued. "I feel sometimes, like the Beatles, 'cause they just scream!"

The University Concert Jazz, and Dixieland Bands recently took a tour of Southern Wisconsin. They performed for enthusiastic audiences in Madison, Monticello, and Pardeeville. The concert bands, as goodwill ambassadors, help promote Stout to students in Wisconsin and Minnesota. They capped off their tour with a concert for the Industrial Technology banquet.

Spontaneous Combustion

It's only life

James 'Unk' Falkofske

Normally I pay retail for my record albums. This stands to reason since I can't afford to buy in bulk (nor do I have the need), don't have any friends that give me albums for presents, and ain't dishonest enough to five-finger discount some vinyl under the blue light special. Normally, all I can do is lay down three hours worth of hard earned money to take home a piece of pressed petroleum. Normally, but this week is different.

This week I was surprised to find a flat cardboard box directed to "Entertainment Editor/ The Stoutonia." Well, I may not be an editor, but I consider myself entertaining. I peeked inside to find two record albums of groups I had never heard of. This was a sign from above, I was supposed to review these records for my column this week (actually, I hadn't thought of a topic yet, and this one seemed okay). I grabbed the box and headed out the office door.

Since I have been forced to sell nearly everything I own in order to attend this fine institution of higher learning (they teach you how to write like this in English 101), my stereo has been pawned off to pay the heating oil bill. I ran to the LLC to check out a high fidelity record player with dual monophonic speakers (but the unit says that it is also capable of playing stereo: I felt reassured). I lugged the twenty pound monster back home and sat down for some intense listening.

The first record I listened to was "Pleasureland" by Thilo Von Westernhagen and Band (1984 Wap Records, Wahlstorf, West Germany). The record is a combination of light jazz and contemporary easy listening music. Much of the music that the album entailed was movie musical themes. Electric lead guitar was used to a great extent throughout the arrangements, while soprano and alto sax balanced off the lead riffs of the guitar.

The title track, "Pleasureland," is a piano piece that combines heavy percussion to give an almost "pop-rock" feel. Lead guitar near the end confirms the mood of the piece. A surprise end finds German children laughing and singing to carnival music.

A faster paced song on the album is "Where Is Your Watermelon?" It combines soprano sax and screaming guitar licks to give an almost "south of the border," Tijuana feel.

On side two, "Domino II" is composed around heavy bass guitar lines and spicy lead guitar to end up in the music of a cathedral organ.

Finally, the last track of the LP was "Drachenflug (Kite Flying)." It began as a slow, mellow piano solo and gradually increased in tempo and intensity, adding sax and heavy cymbal percussion.

The second album I reviewed was "Latitude, by Latitude" (1986 The Moss Music Group Inc., New York). It amazed me that this jazz combo contained only two members; Ben Verdery on guitar and Craig Peyton on synthesizer and vibes.

Although the music was relaxing, I found it boring at times. Due to lack of members, the same two instrument voices were often used throughout an entire piece. I thought that some creative switching of synthesizer voices would have added a great deal to this album.

I was also disappointed in the synthesizer work. Much of the keyboard parts were simply repeated major chords with no clear melody line. I attributed this to a beginning musician; however, I must note that the vibes on these tracks were played with much skill.

One song that I enjoyed, if only for its meditative melody, was the opening track "At a Heart's Glance," which placed classical guitar along side gentle vibes and an occasional synth riff.

The other song I liked on this album was an upbeat tune "Spring Training." This is the only track on the album that I feel has the correct balance of percussion in it. Many of the other tracks had offbeat or just plain weird tempo lines. They also, to a great extent used too much percussion in the wrong places.

"Spring Training" is by far the best track on the album, combining upbeat synth percussion along with electric guitar and vibes. The electronic drums are the entire base for this song, which play out the notes of the rhythm track.

I enjoy listening to records, of any type, especially when they are free to review. I hope that this trend of sending records to review continues. Who knows, maybe I can cancel my club membership with RCA.

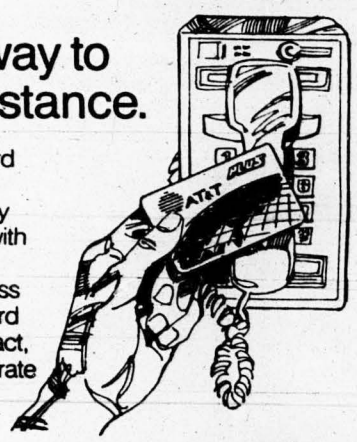
Announcing Four Pluses For Students

A special program
to introduce the new AT&T Plus Card
to the University of Wisconsin System

1. The easy way to call long distance.

The new AT&T Plus Card lets you call long distance anywhere, anytime, from any phone. No more fumbling with coins, no more collect calls.

Calls cost up to 50¢ less than AT&T coin, collect or third party state-to-state calls. In fact, for most calls, it's our lowest rate next to direct dialing.

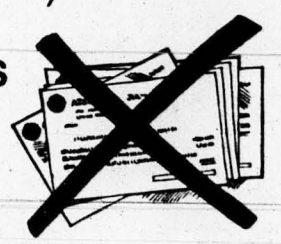


2. The easy way to own an AT&T PC.

With your Plus Card, you can purchase an AT&T high-speed, high capacity personal computer and needed printers, modems and software. The Plus Card lets you pay through convenient monthly payments.

AT&T PC's were designed with expansion in mind and are uniquely qualified for university work, with growth potential to meet the demands of school and a future career.

3. No payments for 6 months.

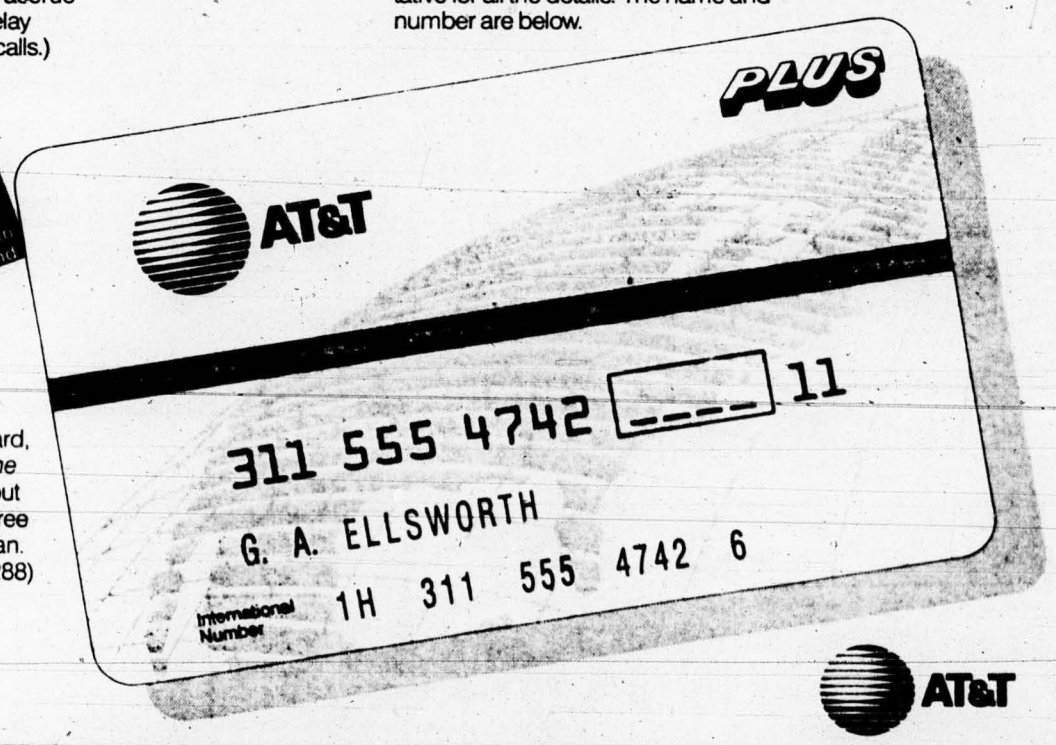


If you purchase your PC between now and March 1, 1987 using the AT&T Plus Card you will not have to make any payments before June 30, 1987. (Finance charges accrue from purchase date. Payment delay cannot be applied to telephone calls.)

4. A chance to win a free AT&T PC.

No purchase is necessary. And it's easy to enter your name. Just visit the AT&T display table in your student union tomorrow, or call your campus representative for all the details. The name and number are below.

Sign Up By November 30th & Get A Discount & If You & Three Friends Sign Up Together Get An Additional Discount



For all the facts about the Plus Card, dial either number below. Only the campus rep can also tell you about the special UWS program—the free PC and the deferred payment plan.

Basketball team to play opener in Iowa

by Mike Roberson

The 1986-87 Basketball season opens for the UW-Stout Blue Devils Friday at Luther College in Decorah, IA. Stout then opens a three game homestand begining on Friday, November 28 where they will play St. John's, then to Mount Senario on Tuesday, December 2, and onto Viterbo on Wednesday December 3.

Head Coach Dwain Mintz will go into the season with thoughts of placing fourth in the conference. The expected top teams will be UW-Stevens Point, UW-Eau Claire and UW-Whitewater in that order. From there the next couple of teams are going to be battling for the middle positions. If fourth place is won as Coach Mintz expects, this will place Stout in the NAIA District 14 playoffs for the third straight year. This could earn them a trip to Kansas City for the NAIA National Tournament.

This years team will look a little different due to the loss of four players. Rick Stephen who lead the league in rebounds was also first team ALL-WSUC. Glen Fischer who won the Mr. Hustle award for the fourth time last year, the only player in the history of Stout basketball to win the award all four years of playing ball. Greg Jansen won the Mr. Defense award for the second time and Chuck Dugger was a District and WSUC player of the week. These are the members that must be replaced from last year's squad.

> "This will place Stout in the NAIA playoffs —Dwain Mintz"

Returning lettermen for the Blue Devils will be Brian Ellingson, a 6'4" Senior, who lead the league in assists last year, looks to be the starting guard. Ron Hunter a 6'0" Senior at the other guard position is expected to offer us some quickness. Also returning is Tom Gomolock a 6'8" Senior that will be starting at the center position. At the forward positions will be Rick Wynveen a 6'6" Senior and David Sandstrom a 6'6" Junior. Also seeing time at the forward position will be John Patterson a 6'5" Senior. Other returning lettermen who will be Mark Stevens, a 6'7" Junior, will start this season on injured reserve. Additions to this year's squad will be Luther Forest a 6'0" sophomore guard, Cedric Howliet a 6'4" freshmen forward, and Dan Shervey a 5'11" senior guard.

Last year the Blue Devils took fourth in the WSUC and made a second straight appearance in the NAIA District play-off. Stout, in addition to beating Eau Claire in the final week of the season, was eliminated 55-53 in the semi-finals by Stevens Point. Rick Stephan lead the WSUC in rebounds and Brian Ellington lead the conference in assists.

This year the Blue Devils are facing a competitive schedule of 25 games. Stout does not face Nebraska or Northern Illinios as it did a season ago. They do have a return of the Red Cedar Classic on December 19 and 20.

The season for the Blue Devils looks to give them a chance at meeting their expected goals. Coach Mintz has been known for promoting a defensive team but does show some weakness in shooting. It has been the teams with the best defense in the WSUC that have placed first in the past five years in this conference. If Stout's defense holds up and they can overcome some of their shooting weaknesses then we could be looking toward an exciting season.

Runners finish 25th at 41 team national competition in Kenosha

by Nancy Janecek

UW-Stout's cross country team finished 25th in Saturday's national championships.

Forty-one teams from across the country entered the men's National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) 8,000 meter race at UW-Parkside, Kenosha, Wis.

The traditional conditions--cold, windy; a hilly, frozen course--seemed to favor the runners from Colorado. In a unique finish, both Adams State and Western State were declared national champions. Ft. Lewis State, also above 6,000 feet elevation, finished seventh.

For the first time in the 30-year history of the meet, two schools gained 78 points. The sixth and seventh place runners on each team were also only two seconds apart.

Rick Robirds, a sophomore at Adams State was the individual winner in 24:10. He led all the way after the leaders were sorted out of the mass start of nearly 400 runners. Robirds broke the course record that had been set nine years ago.

Junior, Paul Bons led the Blue Devils with a time of 25:33, good for 30th place.

Coach Lou Klitzke said, "We were disappointed at first that we didn't do better. But it is such an exciting privilege to participate in a national class event like this that our spirits quickly lifted."

The seven Blue Devils to score were Bons, senior Todd Fox, 26:41; junior Bob Hackley, 26:53; freshman Tom McGavock, 27:11; junior Darron Vanman, 27:22; junior Ben Haney, 27:56 and freshman Kevin Pilarski, 28:19.

"Bob Hackley ran one of his best races of the season," Coach Klitzke said.

Intrinsic to college sports is the loss of competitors to graduation. "We will miss our senior and captain Todd Fox. He has finished four seasons and helped us go to the national championships all four years," Coach Klitzke determined.

Conversely, the coach has much new talent to anticipate. "We have several young runners returning for next year," he said.

Stout has maintained its strong standing in a strong conference, sending a team to the national meet the last six years. UW-Eau Claire, also in the Wisconsin State University Conference, was eighth this year; UW-Milwaukee, 13th and UW-Parkside, 16th.

Tight Rope

Bucks get No Respect

Paul Wydeven

Last year, one of my first columns was on the Milwaukee Bucks and how they were treated as the "Rodney Dangerfields of the NBA."

The Bucks have won the central division for the seventh consecutive seasons and even beat the Philadelphia 76ers in the playoffe more respect and some more media coverage, but unfortunately they do not.

Even some experts do not give the Bucks much respect. Stan Albeck, former coach of the Chicago Bulls, and Tom Heinsohn, a CBS basketball analyst, both estimate the Bucks fifth in the NBA, behind Boston, L.A.(Lakers), Houston, and Philadelphia.

It's funny that the Bucks are given so little respect, especially from the experts. Last season the Bucks played and won without a dominating center like Jack Sikma.

What can a player like Jack Sikma add to the Bucks? Experts rate Sikma as the third best center in the NBA, behind Olajuwon and Abdul-Jabbar. Also at the beginning of the season, Head Coach Don Nelson put it the best when he said, "We have a new man at the most crucial position."

It is true that the Boston Celtics are probably still the best team in the NBA, but the Bucks have beaten both Houston and Philadelphia in their series of games last season. This and the acquisition of Sikma should enable the Bucks to win their eighth central division title, but they still are not getting the respect they deserve.

Other reasons the Bucks should get more respect is their stong line up. Along with Sikma rated as the third best center, the experts rate Terry Cummings as the second best power forward, Paul Pressey as the fourth best small forward, Craig Hodges as the third best point guard and Sidney Moncrief as the best off guard.

With this much talent on the same team, I wonder why other teams such as the Atlanta Hawks or the Dallas Mavericks can get so much attention and for the Bucks it is just the opposite. The Hawks 7-3 are a half a game ahead of the 7-4 Bucks, but the Mavericks are only 5-5.

The only logical reason there is not more coverage of the Milwaukee Bucks is the fact that Milwaukee is not a large city compared to other teams which have NBA teams and that Milwaukee is not an east or west coast team.

The point is why should the Bucks have to come a large city or be on the coast to get decent media coverage? Logically most people would think all a team has to do is win to get media coverage, but it seems media-hype is more important than good talent. So until an earthquake sinks everything east or west of Milwaukee, the Bucks won't get much media coverage or much respect.

Gridders defeated by La Crosse, finish season with a 2-9-1 record

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Blue Devils lost their final football game of the season to nationally ranked UW-La Crosse by the score of 29-21. La Crosse went into this game hoping to nail down a play-off bid.

They ended up surpassing this goal as previously undefeated UW-River Falls was handed its first loss by a very good UW-Stevens Point team. This created a three way tie for first place in the WSUC. La Crosse was the only team from the conference to receive a play-off bid.

The La Crosse team that showed up at game time could not have been the same team planning to be in the national play-offs. Statistics show that Stout led every aspect of the game: first downs (22-14), yardage passing (323-156), total offense (460-315 yards; even in turn overs we were ahead 6-1. This final statistic reflects the reason the Blue Devils came so close to winning so many games this season, but often were unable to gain a victory.

The opening kick off was taken by Stout at their own 25-yard line. Bob Lindberg was the starting quarterback this week. On the opening series, both teams were forced to give up the ball after a quick series of downs. When Stout got the ball back, they were on their 39-yard line. The Blue Devil pass attack seemed the only answer against the highly touted La Crosse defense.

The Blue Devil pass attack was featured in their first drive which ended with five yard touch down pass from Rob Limberg to Scott Fredrickson. Jim Gorecki kicked the extra point, giving Stout a 7-0 lead. Head Coach Rich Lawrence indicated the decision to pass against La Crosse was an easy one. "We just couldn't run against them," Lawrence said.

Stout's defense stopped La Crosse, forcing them to punt the ball to the Blue Devils. Stout resumed its passing attack at their own 27-yard line. This time La Crosse intercepted the ball at Stout's 37-yard line. Two plays later, La Crosse knotted the score at 7-7 with a 34-yard running play.

> "Stout football is on the rise and will go up
> —Ozzy Virgil"

Stout exchanged Tim Peterson for Rob Limberg at quarterback when the second quarter began while the Blue Devils stuck with their passing attack. Peterson's fourth pass was intercepted by a La Crosse defender at their own 40-yard line. Coach Lawrence commented on the fact that the team had turned the ball over so many times (6 turn overs, 5 of them interceptions) by saying, "Any time you throw the ball 66 times you are going to have your share of interceptions."

Starting at their 40-yard line, La Crosse marched right down field for the score. The scoring play was a 20-yard touchdown pass to Alba from quarterback Oberg. This gave LaCrosse a 14-7 lead.

On Stout's next series, Stout came up short on a 40-yard field goal attempt which resulted after an offensive pass interference call moved the ball back 15 yards to the 27-yard line.

The La Crosse offense began from their 27-yard line and started to march down field only to be stopped by an interception by Scott Romanasko. Stout took advantage of this opportunity as Peterson moved the Blue Devils 67 yards featuring a 28-yard pass completion to Ron Wise. This tied up the score at 14-14.

The teams exchanged series with the game turning into a defensive battle. This changed just before the end of the first half as the Blue Devils scored on a 60-yard drive. With completions to Wise, Rothwell and then Fredrickson for the score, Stout showed that they had a well balanced passing attack. The touchdown by Scott Fredrickson gave Stout a 21-14 lead at halftime.

With the La Crosse defense shutting out Stout's offense in the second half, it was only a matter of time before the Blue Devil defense was worn down. Turn overs were the one thing that had plagued Stout all year. Midway through the third quarter, Tim Peterson threw an interception at the 23-yard line. La Crosse returned the ball to the six. It was a matter of two plays before the game was tied up 21-21.

It wasn't until the middle of the fourth quarter before another scoring opportunity arrived. This time, La Crosse began at their own 20-yard after Stout missed a field goal attempt. They ran up the middle for 10 yards and then again for three. Then the play that won the game for them was a 67-yard touchdown pass from Oberg to Altouse. The two-point conversion gave La Crosse an insurmountable 29-21 lead.

UW-Stout flag football intramurals finish season with tournament

by Paul Emerson

The UW-Stout Intramurals leagues completed another busy week. The Flag Football teams finished their season ending tournament this past Monday night (Nov.17) with the 10th St. Tigers taking the Div.II championship, by beating Night Care in a close one, 6-0.

The Div.III champs are the Backfield in Motion who defeated the Flappin Crappies by a score of 25-18. Congratulations to both divisional champions !

The Mens basketball leagues completed the third week of play last week. In the Monday night 5'9" league play the Bucks(2-0) beat the Miller Shorties(0-2), 45-42, while the Whangafots(2-0) also stayed unbeaten by whipping the Beerwolves(1-1), 49-22. The Budlights(1-1) got their first win by downing APRO(0-2), 32-23.

In Div.III Monday night action the Kamikazes(2-0) beat the Beerwolves(1-1),46-31, and moved into first place,while Tony & 6 others(1-1) beat Lets Party(0-1),26-15. In Class B (Mon.-Div.III) action the Alter Boys(2-0) beat the 5 Year Plan 50-32, and the Hooligans(2-0) destroyed the C.D.U.'s(0-2), 56-14.

Tuesday nights Div.I play saw the Gobbs(2-0) edged the No Names(1-2), 52-50, and the Spot(1-1) beat the Grad School(2-1) 45-35. Then in Div.II Tuesday night the Green Berets(2-1) beat the Monsters of the Midway(0-2), 40-38, and the Gunnin Rebels dropped the Artesian Hops(1-2), 40-35. In Class B action on Tuesday night the TNT's(1-2) blasted OFF(1-1), 37-34, and the Pimpsters(2-1) stopped the Laker Express(0-2), 44-33.

In Wednesday night Div.II Class A action the Black Max(3-0) stayed on top by beating the PH's(2-1), 50-42, and the Tigers(1-2) whipped the Rim Busters(0-3), 37-20. And in Class B play the top spot goes to the Spine Muscles(3-0) beat the winless Electric Blue(0-3), 43-39, while the No Morals(1-2) lost to Spontaneous Combustion(2-1), 26-29.

In Class C (Div.II-Wed.) games the 3C Rockets(1-2) downed the Basket Bombers(0-3), 44-30, and the Vietnomonie Express(3-0) won the battle of the unbeatens over the Discombobulators(2-1), 29-28.

Thursday nights Div.II games saw the Good Guys(3-0) hold first place in Class A, beating the Rippleheads(1-2), 31-30, and the Rockets(2-1) nipped the Cruisers(0-3), 41-40. Then in Class B action the Whiskey Rebels(3-0) take the top spot by downing the Breakers(1-2), 45-26, while the Waheenies beat the Caddies(1-2), 32-27. And in Class C action the BFD's(3-0) beat the Hoyas(2-1), 53-41 to move alone into first place. The Connection(1-2) topped the winless Dudleyville Dunkers(0-3), 33-32.

Volleyball results were not available, but final league standings will be printed next week along with the tournament schedules.

Women's basketball team 'on the rise'

by Paul Emerson

On the rise.

Those three words sum up the 1986-87 version of the UW-Stout womens basketball team. Coach Lynda Lee enters her second year at the helm, and being the true optimist that she is, looks to improve on last years 2-21 record.

Lee, a Menomonie native, enjoyed an illustrious high school athletic career; lettering in volleyball, basketball, and track. She accumulated numerous awards including being named all-conference, all-conference MVP, and leading scorer honors, in addition to being a conference champion in track(shotput).

As a 1981 Cum Laude graduate of Concordia College in Minn., she received her BS in Physical Education. and earned letters in volleyball and basketball.

She received her Masters degree in Athletic Administration from Western Illinois University in Macomb, Ill. As a graduate student there, she taught physical education classes and served as an assistant to the Director of Athletics.

Lee sports an extensive coaching experience background, coaching teams at the junior high thru intercollegiate levels in basketball, volleyball, and track. Lee coached this years volleyball team to their most successful season in Stout's history.

Assisting Lee this year will be Valerie Devries, a senior from Pearl City, Ill. Devries was a co-captain on the womens volleyball team this year.

This year's version of the womens basketball team consists of five returnees among the fourteen roster spots. Just two players were lost to graduation from last year's team. In addition to the five returnees, four inexperienced upperclassmen and five freshmen make up the squad.

Heading the list of returnees is 5'11" junior center Renee Kasten from Schofield, Wis. Kasten was last years leading scorer with an average of 13.8 points per game. She also led the team in rebounding averaging 13.3 boards per game, rating 12th nationally according to the NCAA news.

Also returning this year are Senior Patti Cook, a 5'9" forward/guard from Milwaukee, Wis., Junior Mary Britts, a 5'6" forward/guard from Brooklyn Center, Minn., Janet Turowski, a 5'6" junior guard from Grafton, Wis., and Sophomore Sara Zoll, a 5'6" from Green Bay, Wis.

The other upperclassmen out for the team this year include 5'3" guard Tamie Huebner, a junior from Pepin, Wis., Sophomore Barbara Behling, a 5'7" guard from Cumberland, Wis., Suzi Krank, a 5'8" forward/guard from Rochester, Minn, and 5'6" Sophomore guard Sara Zoll from Green Bay, Wis.

Among the five freshman on this years squad include Maarja Aalgaard, a 5'8" forward/guard from Litle Falls, Minn., Justine Becker, another 5'8" forward/guard, from Center Lake City, Minn., 6'1" center Jacki Gilbert from Phelps, Wis., Kristen Knutsen, a 6'0" center from Wheaton, Ill., and Michelle Taylor, a 5'5" guard from Rhinelander, Wis.

Coach Lee stated, "this year's returnees have improved over last years." She then went on to say, "we have a tall team for a change, some good players, some good ball handlers, and some good shooters," and added, "we will be a more well rounded team than last year's."

Lee would also like to win at least two conference games this year, and get out of the cellar up to maybe a 7th place finish. Last year's squad was 0-16 in conference play, so this would be a positive improvement for this years young team.

Reducing last years averages of 21 fouls and 19 fouls a game is something Lee hopes to see a noticeable improvement on this season. Coach Lee stated, "Many turn overs convert to 20 pts. a game, and that's just on the turn over." Last year's team averaged 52 pts. a game and had a 32 percent field goal average. Lee hopes to see improvements on both of those also, especially the field goal percentage.

On the strengths of this year's squad, Lee stated, "they have a strong desire, a good positive attitude, and are a really hardworking group."

The Lady Blue Devils open their season this Friday (tomorrow) night, traveling to Minneapolis, Minn., to take on Ausburg in a 7:00 p.m. contest. On Saturday night, they travel up to Collegeville, Minn., to tangle with St. Benedicts. Stout won last year's contest with St. Ben's, 62-58.

When asked about the game plan for Friday Lee stated, "we just want to play our own game and concentrate on that, rather than on the other team."

And if they can do that, then maybe this year's version of the womens basketball team really will be "on the rise."

Muscle power and brute strength displayed at powerlifting contest

by Slash La Freniere

Sheer muscle power and brute strength were on display last Saturday in the weight room. The UW-Stout Powerlifting Club held an open competition and exhibition in the sport of powerlifting and also to draw attention to the club. Powerlifting is, specifically, the combination of attempting to lift the maximum amount of weight in the squat, the bench press, and the dead lift, for an overall total.

The squat lift is done with the weight bar on the shoulders and dipping at the knees, and then returning to a standing position. The dead lift involves lifting the weight bar from the floor to a standing position and then returning the weight to the floor. The bench press is just a standard bench press exercise.

The combined weights of all three lifts are then totaled and divided by the lifters own body weight. Whoever has the highest percentage of weight lifted in relation to body weight is the winner.

First place on Saturday went to Steve Johnston, (174 lbs.). Steve had a 440 pound squat, 255 pound bench press, and a 475 pound dead lift, for a total of 1170 pounds.

Second place went to Dan Saunduers, (161 lbs.). Dan had a 415 pound squat, 260 pound bench press, and a 415 pound dead lift, for a total of 1090 pounds.

Third place went to Terry Martin, (176 lbs.). Terry had a 350 pound squat, 225 pound bench press, and a 410 pound dead lift, for a total of 985 pounds.

Fourth place went to Jay O'Neil, (193 lbs.). Jay had a 305 pound squat, 235 pound bench press, and a 345 pound dead lift, for a total of 885 pounds.

According to Powerlifting Club President Rob Ciaciura, this meet was organized under the supervision of Lee Grace, the Wisconsin State Chairman for the American Drug Free Powerlifting Association. What this means is that all competing lifters are tested for the use of stimulants and anabolic steroids before every meet. No one is allowed to compete in these meets if they have tested positive for drug use.

Powerlifting Club President Rob Ciaciura said, "I thought that the meet went well and our goal was to help the members of the club get a feel for a powerlifting competition and also to promote the club." Ciaciura also added, "These athletes are respected in the fact that the lifter achieved the true weight of his lifting ability without the use of drugs."

In this age of widespread drug use and abuse, it is refreshing to know that there still exists a small corner in sports where true athletic ability reigns supreme. The satisfaction of knowing that these athletes' strength came from their inner selves and not from a pill bottle makes their achievements seem more important.

Two of the lifters from Saturdays' meet will be competing in the Statewide Drug Free Powerlifting meet in December. They are Dave Henry, and Rob Ciaciura.

With only eight seniors on the team, Stout looks ahead to next season. Senior Ozzy Virgil wished he could come back and play next year as he said "Stout football is on the rise and will go up." He commented on the seniors' attitude as a whole toward the season by saying they definitely were left with a good taste in their mouths in reference to the feeling of respect gained by the team this season.

If you looked at the Blue Devils' season record of 2-9-1 and had followed the team all season, you would know that they were a much better ballclub than the record shows. As coach Lawrence said, "We beat them (La Crosse) in every aspect of the game except the score."

Looking ahead to the season of '87, Coach Lawrence said, "I think with a year of learning the new program and a good off-season of working together and living together, we will be an improved ballclub." He later added, "As for the seniors, it's a shame that they can't enjoy what they helped us build." The seniors may not be able to enjoy what looks to be a promising team for next year but they say farewell to Stout with a 'good taste in the mouth.'

Human rights violations draw local protests

by Masha Roberts

A group of UW-Stout students running a petition drive this week reported that they had collected 1,100 signatures from university and Menomonie community members on a petition protesting the violation of human rights in Chile as of Wednesday morning.

A member of the Stout chapter of Amnesty International (AI), which organized the drive, will deliver the signed petition to the offices of the United Nations.

AI leaders reported that, since the first day of the campaign, the response from both the Menomonie public and the Stout students was extremely encouraging.

They estimated that 65 percent of the signatures collected had come from the Menomonie community.

"I also feel strongly that this type of torture and punishment of people should not be so," said Chuck Stokke, mayor of Menomonie, who was one of those who signed the petition.

"Torture, punishment, mistreatment of prisoners and serious human rights violations have increased in Chile during the past several months," reported retired professor Ed Gold, co-chair of AI.

Gold was granted emeritus status when he retired in 1983 from 18 years of teaching in Stout's chemistry department.

> "Human rights violations have increased in Chile during the past several months
> —Ed Gold"

Gold explained that AI often concentrates on helping people in one particular country at a time and that, in this particular campaign, they are attempting to raise public consciousness about abuses occuring in Chile.

"We are trying to tell the United Nations and others that people in Menomonie and students at Stout, are concerned about human rights violations in Chile," said Ali Vazirabadi, the other co-chair of AI.

Vaziribadi is a Stout student who came from Iran to study in America.

"Our basic goal from this five-day campaign is to collect at least 2000 signatures which will be taken to the United Nations," continued Vazirabadi.

Vazirabadi will deliver the petitions to the offices of the United Nations in New York city during Christmas break.

Members hope to show that the people of the relatively small community of Menomonie, are greatly concerned about human rights violations happening in Chile, Vazirabadi said.

Vazirabadi also said that members hope the United Nations can eventually pressure the Chilean government into changing for the better.

AI's future plans will center around a write-a-thon campaign next semester.

"The write-a-thon would involve a a massive gathering of people to write letters to countries around the world in an attempt to help those whose human rights have been violated," said Gold.

Committee improves courses, programs

by Dale Bohnert

Members of UW-Stout's Curriculum and Instruction Committee said that although they feel student members are an important part of the committee, their one-year terms limit their depth of understanding and involvement as committee members.

Stout alumnus Dr. Donna Albrecht, Chairperson of the 17-member committee, said that the many purposes of the committee include reviewing, developing, and recommending policies and guidelines regarding the curriculum offered at Stout.

The committee also approves and/or rejects proposals for new courses, programs and changes in the courses already available.

Members of the Curriculum and Instruction Committee include 15 voting members and two non-voting, ex-official members.

Representing the committee are 13 Stout faculty members (one from each of Stout's five schools of learning and eight members of the Stout Faculty Senate) who are elected by Stout faculty for two-year terms, and two members from Stout's student body who are elected annually by Stout's Student Senate. Their terms, however, are limited to one year.

Committee member Jeff Campeau, a Stout senior who also served on the committee during the 1984-85 academic year, said that he feels student participation on the committee is important.

"The changes being made (in Stout's curriculum) directly effect the students," said Campeau. "I think it's important," he added, "to have student in-put on the changes being made as it comes from a student's point of view."

> "The changes being made directly effect the students.
> —Jeff Campeau"

Campeau added, however, that due to the short amount of time that students serve as committee members, "we (student committee members) don't necessarily understand all that comes through the committee. That makes it difficult to represent the students."

Albrecht explained that because the committee is occasionally faced with proposals that the student members are unfamiliar with, "they may be very quiet."

"It would be better to have them (student members) for two years," said Albrecht, "because sometimes it takes a certain length of time to get educated and start giving more in-put."

Stout senior, Eric Erickson, a new member on the Curriculum and Instruction Committee, said that he also feels it is important that students have a seat on the committee.

Erickson explained, "It is easy to get into some type of a trend", referring to changes in courses and programs. "Student voices," he added, "offer a different point of view."

Erickson said, however, that it would be difficult for a student to commit himself to a two-year term due to occasional changes in educational plans.

Campeau said that he felt a larger number of student committee members would be beneficial. He suggests that "one student from each of Stout's schools" sit on the Curriculum and Instruction Committee.

Albrecht explained, "If a program comes up and they (the student members) happen to be in that program, they obviously can address and comment on that topic a great deal more."

Former police chief convicted

The former police chief of Buenos Aires, Argentina was convicted Wednesday of torturing a newspaper editor whom he had accused of conducting a Jewish - terrorist plot to take over the country.

General Ramon Camps was sentenced to 25 years in Argentinian prison for 73 counts of torture which occured during the interrogation of Jacobo Timmerman, who was exiled to Israel, after his torment, in 1979.

Sodomy law stricken

A Hennepin County judge struck down a Minnesota law which prohibits sodomy on the basis that the law violates a fundamental right to privacy provided citizens of that state by their constitution.

District Judge Pamela Alexander filed the ruling late Tuesday in a case concerning Richard Gordon Gray Jr., who was charged with sodomy for allegedly having oral sex in his home.

Drinking age law challenged

The constitutionality of Congressional pressure on states to adopt the 21-year-old drinking age will be decided by the Supreme Court.

The high court agreed Monday to hear the challenge from the state of South Dakota, which declared that its 19-year-old age limit promotes safety by providing young people a safe and legal place to drink.

Legendary blues performer passes on

Sippie Wallace, legendary blues writer and singer, died Saturday in a Detroit hospital on her 88th birthday.

Ms. Wallace, who is reported to have said that her nickname came from the fact that the placement of her teeth caused her "to sip everything," had been coaxed back to the stage by blues singer Bonnie Raitt in the 1970's.

An album, titled "Sippie," was produced in 1983 and nominated for a Grammy Award in the blues category. The album included some of Ms. Wallace's most important work, such as "Women Be Wise," "Mighty Tight Woman" and "Suitcase Blues."

"Garbage Pail Kids" banned

"Garbage Pail Kids" cards have been banned by some Appleton - area elementary school principals.

The school administrators said that the satirical cards, which are packaged with a stick of gum and sold much like baseball cards, undermine school objectives for teaching positive attitudes and concern for others.

University waste disposal reviewed

by Catherine Scheider

Hazardous wastes which have accumulated at UW-Stout are going to be inventoried, removed and, in the future, stored in a hazardous waste lab on campus.

This action is a response to the Environmental Protection Agency's classification of universities as waste producers last September.

The UW-System has set aside $500,000 to begin the initial clean-up of accumulated waste. This money will be spent at each university depending upon the amount of waste at each school.

Dean Fankey, hazardous waste management coordinator, attended a seminar in Madison concerning the project, he defined hazardous materials as "any material that is flammable, corrosive, toxic or reactive."

"Once we wish to dispose of these materials, they become hazardous wastes," added Fankey. "We are going to be handling a lot of good materials."

Fankey plans to send out a survey to all departments in order to inventory the types and quantities of waste.

After Stout has determined what needs to be disposed of and accumulated it in lab packages, they will be handled by a company called Chemical Waste Management, Inc.

This company, which operates out of Allzip, Illinois, will be handling waste management for the entire UW-System.

Fankey added that he hoped "each department will get rid of the majority of their waste in the initial effort. In the future, each department may be responsible for their own waste."

Stout will be adding a hazardous waste lab and storage area when a new general services building is constructed.

Fankey noted that, with the exception of Madison and Milwaukee, "Stout will be the first in the system to have such a lab."

Fankey said that most of the wastes are by-products from various procedures, and listed the graphic arts, art, and chemistry departments as some of the target areas.

Concerning the extent of the problem at Stout, Fankey said, "Until I find out what is being used, I can't determine what we need to dispose of."

In addition to his survey, Fankey is currently working with Mark Skutley, director of purchasing, in obtaining material safety data sheets for all products.

These sheets contain information on the behavior of materials and information on their handling and disposal.

Hazardous wastes are generated in numerous ways at UW-Stout. An inventory of chemicals requiring conscientious disposal is being taken in order to assess proper means of storage and removal of such wastes accumulated at the university upon request of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Enterprising Stout students trying their hand at entrepeneurship are hoping to show a profit on the sale of a calendar featuring some of the many attractive women who attend the university. Wilbur Beaton, right, is in charge of the project. His brother, Frank, on left, helped.

Opinions vary on swimsuit calendar featuring attractive women of Stout

by Jill Huppert

The Women of Stout calendar, which features 12 Stout students pictured in swimsuits, has gotten mixed reviews, even from the models who posed for it.

The calendar was produced as an independent study project by Wilbur Beaton, a senior majoring in business administration.

Lisa Hegyi, one of the models, complained that Beaton hesitated to give each of the models a free calendar until they persisted in demanding one. The models were not paid to pose for the pictures.

Discontent with the way she was treated, Hegyi said, stemmed from her feeling that Beaton did not show gratitude for the model's efforts.

Model Daphne Brown also complained that, when Beaton asked her to sign the release for the picture he had chosen, it seemed that her only other option was not to be in the calendar.

Brown had preferred a different picture be printed, but she and all the other models signed releases permitting Beaton to print their photo.

The contract the models signed released the photographer and the printer to print a picture, selected by Beaton and his staff from the many that were taken during photo sessions.

According to Peter Hybben, the photographer hired to do the work, the form the women signed "is a standard form of the trade."

Many of the women pictured have modeling experience and plan to use the calendar as part of their portfolio.

Julie Krenke, another of the models, said modeling for the calendar was a lot of fun and that she has received positive feedback from friends.

Krenke admitted that she probably would not have been a model if she had known the calendar would be out before her graduation in December.

Beaton reported that he sold 120 copies the first day the calendar went on sale, which was November 20.

"We opened this up," Beaton said, "and it was like vultures around the table."

Beaton expects to sell 1500 calendars.

The black and white calendar sells for $5.00 at Stout, but at the bookstore at UW-Eau Claire, it carries a price tag of $8.50.

The money to print the calendars was provided by the Stout chapter of the American Institution of Design and Drafting club.

Hegyi said that she felt Beaton led the models to believe that they might get money for their time.

"And I still believe it," said Beaton. "If the club makes money, I want to give you some of it for your time."

"Everybody signed their release forms," model Stacy Voerding said.

Voerding said she enjoyed participating in the project and could not understand why the others complained.

"I would normally turn down a project like this," said Steve Lampman of Boothby Printing, who did the printing.

"But I believed in Beaton," Lampman added. "This guy really hustled. I think everybody profited, whether they were paid or not."

Of the calendar, Lampman said, "It was like you go to the beach and you see some wholesome ladies. We thought it was very tasteful and everything worked for the good."

The photographer and printer offered to destroy or return any unused plates or prints if the models wished.

Students have mixed reactions about the calendar. Jim Barnard, a junior, bought a calendar for his brother.

"I liked it," Barnard said. "I think it was really well done and in good taste."

Sophomore Rob Kilgore said he definitely will not buy a Women of Stout calendar.

"They're tasteless," Kilgore said, "and shabbily put together."

Color photographs of better quality would have improved the calendar, Kilgore added.

"They are marketing their bodies," said Gretchen Pemberton. Pemberton is a sophomore who feels that the calendar is very degrading to the girls.

The calendar will be on sale through December on the Cobblestone Court of the Memorial Student Center.

International cultures exhibited at dinner

by John Pelishek

An opportunity to learn about the cultures of students from foreign countries who are attending UW-Stout was provided to University and Menomonie community members at the International Relations Club (IRC) annual dinner Saturday, November 22.

The IRC, which hosts the dinner and provides entertainment at the yearly event, is a student organization. The group is composed mainly of foreign students, but it is open to any student who wishes to join.

"We encourage American students to join our club and share their culture with us," said Chu Samudia Abdullah, the group's president.

The annual IRC dinner, he said, is a means of sharing international cultures with the university community.

"The signigance of this festive evening is to share not just the foods we eat, but our way of life," explained Abdullah, who is from Malaysia.

The kick off for the evening's activities was a cocktail hour. People got acquainted with IRC members at exhibits of artifacts and other items from the numerous countries represented by foreign students at Stout.

The dinner included entrees from all parts of the world, made according to recipes submitted by IRC members.

One entree, called "bulgoni," is a Korean dish made of cut pieces of beef, had to be steeped in a soy sauce marinade for two days before it was fried on a stove and served to guests.

Shortly after dinner, song and dance routines from a variety of countries were performed, from Germany to China.

The first was a German fight dance. Frank and Paul Kniesz fought for the right to dance with Jill Schlimovitz.

Their performance had the audience laughing hysterically.

In other songs the German duo performed such as "In heaven there is no beer," many guests, including Chancellor Robert Swanson, enjoyed doing the polka.

A fashion show followed the musical performances. IRC members wore outfits from their native countries, demonstrating the costume's tradition and signifigance on certain occasions.

A former refugee from Laos who is now a Stout student wore a Hmong New Year costume which took 45 minutes to put on and weighed 150 pounds.

Mao Yang's costume was a three piece dress which was hand sown and worn with jewelry. The ensemble cost more than $1,000.

Kuang-Chao Yu, a food science major from China, showed a ritual dance costume of the Chinese Santa Claus.

Made from a silk material and displaying the wealth of the person wearing it, the costume symbolizes an exceptional person who is kind and generous.

"The food was good and quite interesting, and the people were friendly," said Dee Stephans, a Menomonie resident. "The evening was very educational and quite enjoyable."

One of the things that guests learned about their foreign hosts was that in some countries, getting into college was not as easy as it was in America.

In Japan, Taiwan and Korea there are strict academic requirements for entering college. Only the very highest percentage of A students are able to get into college due to the large population and the limited number of universities available.

Therefore, increasing numbers of students from these countries are enrolling in U.S. colleges.

According to Frankie Lam, a student from Tokyo, Japan, majoring in hotel and restaurant management at Stout, students in Japan are pushed much harder than they are here.

Japanese college students have to go to school six days a week.

Most of the IRC members who go to Stout on scholarships from their government return to their homeland to work as teachers.

The evening's festivities lasted from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m., but most of the 450 guests remained throughout the affair.

"Everybody was entertained and put on quite a show," said Chris Nnamso, who was in charge of the fashion show.

Nnamso, a child development and family life student from Nigeria, said of the annual event, "I hope it continues to be successful."

In the picture on the left two visitors to America are shown in the traditional clothing of their homeland, Saudi Arabia. Solarman Dhalaan and his young son, Yaser, are wearing the traditional costume of the Moslem male. The white gown is called a "thobe" and the headpiece is a "ghutra!" Dhalaan is in the undergraduate vocational rehabilitation program at Stout.

Speaker emphasizes importance of networking and contact making

by Rose Shakal

UW-Stout students, particularly women, were advised to make business contacts deliberately, by networking, as soon as possible, in a presentation on Monday, Dec. 1.

Ms. Rosemary Camp Hauschild, president of the Minnesota Women's Network, was invited to Stout by a student group organized specifically for women planning to pursue careers in management.

As she began her presentation, Hauschild gave a formal definition of networking.

Networking is a system of making contacts in the business world, necessary because, as Hauschild put it, who you know in business plus what you know equals the opportunity to achieve your career goals.

Hauschild stated that "70 percent of jobs aren't advertised" and 60 percent of the people now working found their jobs by word-of-mouth.

Students should not depend totally on placement bureaus to find jobs, Hauschild advised. She encouraged students to begin developing business contacts as soon as possible, because they are vital to finding future jobs.

Hauschild also said that using networking to make contacts in the business world to find a job can increase the amount of personal job satisfaction that results.

Hauschild pointed out that, though networking is not a new idea, its image has changed for the better.

One used to visualize the "Good Old Boys' Club," she said — smoke-filled rooms, backslapping, all involving upper-class white males.

"Networking today is a generic process that is for everyone," Hauschild said.

Hauschild explained the basic tools to use when networking.

Business cards are important, Hauschild said, because they are the primary you connect with others in the business world.

Hauschild suggested that businesswomen alphabetize their own collection of business cards and make a note of who they are from and why they are important.

The telephone is also a useful, but sometimes under-rated tool of networking, according to Hauschild. She said that directories from professional groups can also be helpful.

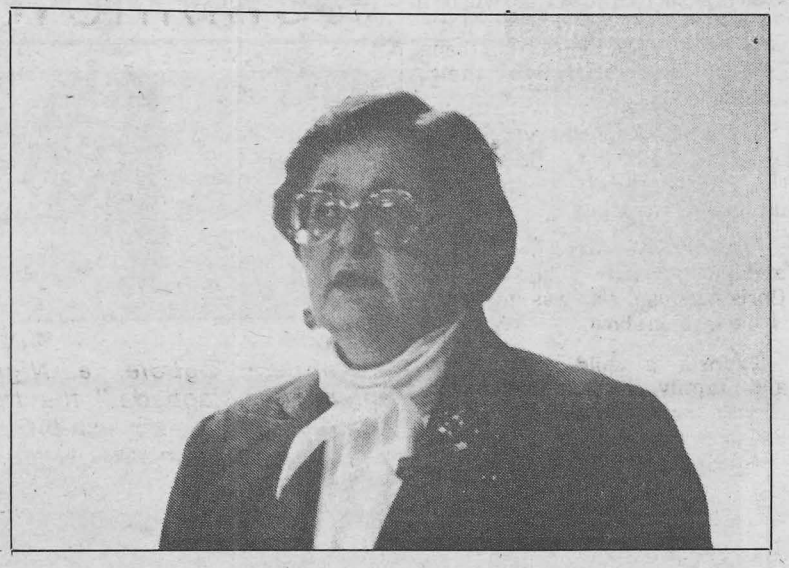
Most importantly, Hauschild emphasized that business people should maintain their contacts regularly or, if they no longer need them, throw them out.

Hauschild's presentation on networking was sponsored by Women in Management, a student organization that has existed on campus since 1980 and was formally recognized by the Stout Student Association (SSA) this year.

Club members explore issues concerning women in the business world and management positions. Their goals include exploring the opportunities for women in non-traditional careers and ways to make the transition to management positions sucessful.

Carolyn Berger, president of Women in Management, said that the club is an off-shoot of the Stout Management Club, which is basically for men.

The Women in Management group was formed, Berger said, because there was a need for a group on campus created specifically to support the needs of women involved in management.



Visiting speaker Rosemary Camp Hauschild encouraged Stout students, particularily women, to begin networking with business contacts as early in their careers as possible to ensure future career satisfaction.

Radiation threatens health

by Eric Johnson

"The health problems of radiation have been grossly underestimated by the health apparatus of this country, basically to protect the Nuclear Power Industry and the Nuclear Weapons Production Industry." That was the message of a multi-media presentation by Harvey Wasserman, a nuclear activist who spoke in the Great Hall on Tuesday evening before a crowd of approximately 500 people who attended the University Speaker Series event.

Wasserman, who has been actively protesting nuclear power since 1973 stated: "The whole chain of nuclear weapons production facilities are causing far more health problems than were ever imagined possible and, I'm affraid the nuclear power industry is doing the same."

While researching a story about the Three Mile Island nuclear accident for Rolling Stone Magazine, Wasserman turned up evidence of a cancer rate seven times the normal rate of cancer in certain areas surrounding the Harrisburg Pennsylvania plant. In addition, hospital records of the Harrisburg area indicate an increase in birth defects, still- births and genetic diseases. Area farmers also complained of decreased milk production from their cows as well as infertility and other reproductive problems amoung domesticated and wild animals.

According to Wasserman, in the event of a nuclear accident, and there have been more than many people realize, the radiation release is calculated so as to describe the release in terms of an average dose received in the area surrounding the accident. These figures are misleading because, as he puts it, "Radiation is not an equal opportunity destroyer." Radioactive fallout comes down in intense 'clumps' and does sever damage.

Research done by Wasserman and many others has indicated that the damage done by intense radiation is not the only type of damage we need be concerned with. A steady dose of radioactity from the combined uses of nuclear power, nuclear weapons production and testing, the over-use of medical and dental X-rays, and a myriad of other inconspicuous sources of radiation is steadily poisoning humanity.

The most vulnerable of our citizens are those still in the womb. Fetuses are especially at risk of contracting a variety of genetic dieseases. Of particular interest is the affect radiation seems to have on developing thyroid glands. Thyroid glands secrete an iodine compound into the blood stream. This compound is easily affected by radioactive isotopes. The result is often times the dwarfing of the body and/or the lowering of intelligence.

Medical research is, at this time, inconclusive and often contested by the nuclear industry. But, Wasserman stressed that as far as he was concerned the evidence was in and he stands behind his claim that more people have died in this country as a result of radiation than were killed in the atomic attack on Hiroshima.

If you or someone you know may have been a victim of radiation write:

Project approved to determine factors inhibiting females in technology

by Cosmas A. Whitten

A three-year project to study ways to eliminate barriers preventing women from entering the field of technology education is being conducted at UW-Stout.

The Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction will provide funding to determine the factors which inhibit females from entering technology fields and piloting a field study in the public school system to eliminate these factors.

"Technology Education is the most sexually segregated area in the technical field. We must find the barriers and eliminate them," said Barbara Bitters, administrator for the Vocational Equity/Single Parent Programs of DPI.

UW-Stout students in the technology education major will be involved in the project and will be informed of research findings through a number of classes.

"We will look primarly at junior high and high school programs to determine why females do not take technology related courses," said Dr. Len Sterry, technology education program director, who submitted the research proposal to DPI.

Sterry believes that if these courses are not taken by females at the high school level, they will not be taken at the college level, either.

Current developments in the research project have involved interviewing females in junior and senior high schools.

Reactions have been recorded and used in creating a 65-question survey that will be used to provide a statistically valid sampling.

Sharon Morcom, a sophomore in the technology education program at Stout, said she entered the field because, "I have worked in the technology area in the past and am interested in machinery."

After talking to other female Stout students in technology-related fields, Morcom reported that they have had problems.

"I have taken a little teasing, but otherwise have had no major problems," Morcom said. "The instructors have been very helpful."

Another female student in the field of technology who asked not to be identified said, "I have been treated good, for the most part, by all but one teacher who is always very reluctant to explain the material to me that I do not understand."

Bitters from the DPI said she is really excited to set a course for Wisconsin on this research.

"In the past the money has not been available to find these multiple barriers or look at good programs," Bitters said. "The nation will look to us for our findings."

Newspaper review motion fails, several resignations announced

by Kelly Cohorst

The proposal asking for the formation of a committee to review the editorial policies of The Stoutonia failed, with four affirmative votes, at the Stout Student Association (SSA) meeting Tuesday evening.

Resignations, which include that of the chief financial officer of SSA, have come to a total of eight this semester.

The president of SSA reported that other members of the state-wide student government organization expressed concerns about problems between student goverments and student newspapers at a meeting that Stout representatives attended in Milwaukee on Nov. 22 and 23.

Senator Dan Meyers proposed a motion at the Nov. 17 meeting of SSA that called for a committee to be formed to review the policies of The Stoutonia.

The review committee would, "conduct hearings due to the complaints made to the effect that The Stoutonia is not suffiently serving the university community," Meyer's motion said.

After extensive discussion on Meyer's proposal, the SSA and The Stoutonia came to an agreement.

"The main issue at hand is the editoral board's policy on submitted letters to the editor," said Brian Kraimer, managing editor of The Stoutonia.

"We have agreed to add to the current policy of The Stoutonia that the editoral board will reserve the right to edit letters due to length or libel," Kraimer added. "In addition, we have agreed to contact persons if we are going to delete parts."

Vice-President of Financial Affairs (VPFA) Gary Harder handed in his resignation at Tuesday's meeting. "I am handing in my resignation as of Dec. 23 because of the extensive time committment of VPFA," Harder said. "I am recommending Catherine Reszka as my replacement."

Kristin Barlet was appointed HKMC Senator at Tuesdays meeting.

The HKMC position had been left open by a resignation.

Mark Kowalski also chose to incur a fifth absence, effectively resigning as Wigen Hall's Senator.

Steve Uslabar will replace Kowalski as Wigen's representative.

Katherine McCarthy's resignation was announced. McCarthy was Off-campus Senator. Course conflicts were cited as the reason for the resignation.

For the first time this year, the Greek Council is being represented at SSA meetings. They chose not to have a representative present until now, though the seat was open to them.

Gene Crooks is the new Inter-Greek Council representative and Carrie Palmer is the new Panhellenic Council representative.

Dan Meyers was approved by the Senate to fill the Applied Student Leadership Instructor position for second semester.

Other applicants were Damon Smith, University Programming Board Senator and Toni Kunstman, president of the Organization of Adult Students Involved in Stout.

The Senate approved the recommendations of the Nomination Committee for the Who's Who Among American Universitys.

Out of 34 applicants, the SSA nominated the following people: Angela Abrahamson, Cheryl DeBaker, Colleen Hartmon, Sandra Kampen, Julie Koller, Timothy Korsmoe, Robert Neitzke, Paul Nelson, Mark Nickels and Laura Rogers.

Opportunity to study in Scotland offered to students second semester

by Gretchen Eke

Not all UW-System students are spending the end of the semester in the brisk December of the Midwest. Eighty-two students and four faculty members from four Wisconsin universities are winding down their term in a castle in Scotland.

Several UW-Stout students are spending the semester at Dalkeith House in Scotland to study and absorb the Scottish culture.

Besides the four faculty members, including Bob Melrose, Associate Professor in Stout's social science department, the students are joined every week by distinguished professors from the prestigious University of Edinburgh.

The average class size is between 20-25 students, with daily attendance above 98 percent.

"That is at least 10 percent better than this instructor has experienced in his 28 years at Stout," according to Melrose.

The "residence hall" for the students is Dalkeith House, a 1703 vintage castle, which also housed Mary, Queen of Scots, Oliver Cromwell, Queen Victoria, and during World War II, 2000 Polish airborne trainees.

The social scene is somewhat similar to that of Menomonie. The closest pub is a five to eight minute walk from the Dalkeith House front door.

In order to participate in this study abroad program, each student must fulfill four requirements. He or she must be a full-time, undergraduate student, in good standing, with a minimum of 2.5 GPA.

The students do not enroll as transfer students because the tuition, room, and board costs are the same as those here in Wisconsin, but the credits are transferable. The airfare is the only extra expense, and this has been negotiated to a round-trip fare of approximately $540, which includes the bus trip from Manchester to Dalkeith House.

"If one expects to shop," said Melrose, "I have tried to assert that restaurant food, drinks, and clothing costs are close to comparable."

The students have the opportunity to take numerous field trips to historical sights, including St. Andrew's Church, Hadrian's Wall in Northern England, and ancient castles and cathedrals, also at no extra cost.

Anyone interested in spending second semester in Scotland should stop by the Office of International Programs, 201G Harvey Hall, and talk to Dr. John Stevenson.

Tutors appreciated

An open house will be hosted by the Volunteer Tutor Program and the Academic Skills Center to thank volunteer tutors for their efforts this semester. The event will take place from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Wednesday, Dec. 3.

Staff at the center extend an invitation to everyone to stop by the Academic Skills Center, Room 201 of the Library Learning Center during the open house.

Hosts needed

Housing hosts are needed for approximately 25 Welsh educators will be needed when the visitors come to the Stout in April.

The visitors from Wales will be attending a seminar on campus from April 9 to 24.

If you have an extra bed or two, you might be able to make available during this time, contact the office of International Programs at 232-1896.

China interest sought

If you have an interest in the study of Mandarin Chinese language and culture, two exchange students from the People's Republic of China have expressed interest in teaching it.

Qiang Han and Yang Guo-shen, visiting students from the People's Republic of China, have offered to teach the subject, if there is interest shown. Anyone interested in seeing this offered, should call Steve Olson at 232-2132.

Students go carolling

The Inter-Residence Hall Council is organizing a group students to go Christmas carolling on Friday, Dec. 12. The carolling group will be meeting a 7 p.m. that evening.

Anyone interested in participating is asked to call the Inter-Residence Hall Council office at 232-1268.

IRHC jams

Members of a delegation of residence hall student leaders won a trophy for their "air-jam" performance of "New York, New York" at the annual conference of the Great Lakes Affiliate of College and University Residence Halls.

The three-day conference was held in Iowa on the weekend of Nov. 21-23.

Inter-Residence Hall Council committee members and other hall residents represented UW-Stout at the gathering. Hall residents from schools in the states of Michigan, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin were in attendance.

New schools considered

A referendum that will decide future directions in the Menomonie School District will be held next week.

District residents are asked to vote on the issue of building new schools to house the increasing population of Menomonie grade schoolers.

A proposal which asks for funding, in an amount not to exceed $3,950,000, which will go toward building two new elementary school buildings and add four classrooms to the elementary school at Cedar Falls.

This plan would close the existing schools of North, East, Knapp, Little Elk Creek and Lucas. Two new schools would be built to replace East and North schools.

The referendum will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 10 from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the gymnasium of the Menomonie Senior High School, 1715 5th Street West.

Absentee ballots may be applied for in person or in a letter which must be signed by the elector. The application can be made to the District Clerk or her designee at the School District Office, 718 North Broadway.

Envelopes containing written applications should be clearly marked "Application for Absentee Ballot" and must be received by the District Clerk no later than 5 p.m. on Dec. 5 and in person no later than 5 p.m. on Dec. 9.

THE MINISTRY

Editorial

Coop. programming needs refinement

As with any newly adopted policy, cooperative programming ought to be reviewed so we can ensure that the utmost is done in order for cooperative programming to achieve its intended goals.

When the SSA approved cooperative programming last February, its stated goal was to intiate and improve cooperation among SSA recognized and funded organizations while increasing the benefits to students through more cost effective and creative programming.

To date, 81 percent of the $9,291 in funding approved through cooperative programming has gone to University Programming Board (UPB) member organizations.

The reason for the disproportionate amount of cooperative programming funds ending up in the UPB coffers can be traced to tha fact that UPB has its office within the SSA office and has the most immediate access to information about cooperative programming.

As The Stoutonia advised in its editorial on February 20, 1986, "Members of the finance committee should ensure that the procedure for securing funds for cooperative programming is as detailed and clear as possible to facilitate financial cooperation between eligible organizations."

Judging from the almost total lack of participation by non-UPB groups in cooperative programming, it is clear that these groups have not received the information needed to best avail themselves of the opportunities which cooperative programming ought to allow.

To date, the finance committee has refused to advertise about cooperative programming and has distributed two memos to group leaders announcing the availablity of cooperative programming funds.

The new vice president of financial affairs will have the opportunity to finish the job created by the SSA when it adopted cooperative programming. The implementation of an effective advertising and publicity campaign for cooperative programming ought to be the final ingredient needed for the program to be best put to use.

Seeds of Change

Merry X-mas?

Gene Emahiser

If there is one any one thing that really steams me, it has to be the commercialization of Christmas and other holidays. For the next month, everywhere you look there will be Christmas sales, special Christmas programs on television, and of course, the constant bombardment with silly, sappy, meaningless muzak.

This is how we celebrate the birth of our savior and king? With all of the hoopla, does anybody take the time to ask Jesus what he wants for his birthday. After all, that is the reason for the season, isn't it?

Millions of people each year are brought through an emotional and psychological roller coaster over the holidays. The media and the merchants are at the helm of the monster ride. Captain Madison gets us going about one week before Thanksgiving Day. His special advertisements arouse the consumer in all of us. The intensity of the advertisements build right up to Christmas Eve. By that time each of us has been through an exhilarating month of ups and downs. During the month Frosty, Charlie Brown, and the Smurfs will have tried their best to keep all of us in the "Christmas Spirit."

Isn't it ironic that the very thing that Jesus gave us authority over has become something that millions of people desire. I am speaking of demons. In this case, a demon of religiosity, or perhaps a demon of self- indulgence. More people think of what they will get on Christmas Day than what Christmas Day is all about. The average person concerns himself more with how he is going to overindulge himself with wine and turkey than how he can serve God.

After the Christmas roller coaster has made its rounds, millions of people find the reality of the emptiness that follows a religious holiday that has forgotten about God, but chooses to center on man.

More people contemplate suicide during the holiday season than during any other time of year. Why is that? Could it be that these people have placed all of their hope and faith in something that turns out to be empty and unfulfilling? Each year more and more people are discovering that religion does not solve problems. The celebration of empty religion only magnifies this emptiness. So why celebrate Christmas?

Christmas is the Holy Day set aside to celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ. He was, by birth, Jewish royalty. Over 750 years before he was born, his virgin birth, 3 year ministry, death on the cross, and resurrection were spoken of prophetically.

Just the fact that all of the prophecies came to pass just as predicted is enough for me to get excited. Add to that the ministry of Christ, past, present, and future, and I start to come unglued.

The whole idea of a Christmas celebration has been adulterated by secular input. Somehow, between the media and merchants, the true meaning of Christmas has been lost.

Jesus Christ, the son of God, came to earth to provide a way of escape from a life of pain and misery. In exchange for your life of misery, he has provided access to an exciting and eternal relationship with the creator. Christmas is the celebration of the entry, or birth, of Jesus into the world. Anything else is just a smoke screen from the pit of hell to try and steal the show from Jesus Christ.

How would you feel if your so-called "friends" threw you a birthday party at which they never even recognized your existence. At this party, they spent more time playing their games than talking to you. Furthermore, each of your friends lavished each other with expensive gifts, yet none of them even bothered to get you a card. You would be ticked!

This Christmas, try something different. Spend some time asking God what he wants as a present from you. Take some time to celebrate the Christ in Christmas.

Subject: The role of the Assistant Student Director here at UW-Stout

by Brian Kraimer

Assistant Student Center Director, Bill Siedlecki primary responsibilities are for student activities as well as some operation cosiderations of the Student Center. On a day to day basis he advises the technical services crew which handles all the speakers and bands in the Student Center. Most his time is spent with student organizations, especially those that receive money from the Student Senate which he advises.

STOUTONIA: WHAT IS YOUR ROLE WITH THE STUDENT ACTIVITIES HERE AT UW-STOUT ?
SIEDLECKI: I basically work on the budget process and expenditure process of the groups and activities but also work on ways to market these groups and activities. In the last year, we have been looking at the activities here at UW-Stout to see if we are meeting the needs of the campus and to see where the student groups and activities need to be more successful.
There is also a great deal of planning needed for the groups and activities here at UW-Stout. The plan is to try to identify what good student activities are on campus and are they a value to the students. Is it more than just fun and games or, should it be more than just fun and games. If it should be more than fun and games, what are we doing to make it more worthwhile to the students? Another plan is to see how information is delivered here on campus, what sources are there on campus and are they effectively used. What are the needs and interests of the students, faculty and the community?

Bill Siedlecki

STOUTONIA: HOW MUCH MONEY DO THE GROUPS AND ACTIVITIES HAVE TO WORK WITH?
SIEDLECKI: From within Student Activities, which covers a wide range of groups and activities, there is about half a million dollars. That includes money directly allocated to groups and revenue generated from ticket sales, subscriptions and ad sales. Much of this money comes from a fee charged to all UW-Stout

Is Brueckner pointless?

I was quite offended two weeks ago while reading Rich Brueckner's "Bottom Line" article in the November 20 edition of The Stoutonia. After talking to the editor about this problem, I learned that it was supposed to be a parody of viewer's mail read by the host of a popular late night television show. In my opinion, the explanation was not satisfactory and I still found the article in poor taste.

This is not just an isolated case. So far this year, Brueckner has been writing articles that are mostly below minimum standards of journalistic ethics. One of his articles last month has already caused one person to write to the editor in the November 6 issue, expressing her anger and embarrassment over a "Bottom Line" article. Looking through past issues of The Stoutonia, I can see why. Most of his articles contained some sort of profanity, obscenity, vulgarity, or degradation of the female gender. This is not something that should be in The Stoutonia. If I wanted to see this trash, I could go to the men's room at a local bar and read it off the walls.

I think it's time that Brueckner has his word processor taken from him. It is obvious that he should not be writing articles for a college-level newspaper, as he seems to have never outgrown high school mentality. His article alone is dragging down the entire image of The Stoutonia. I believe that businesses and organizations that financially support the newspaper deserve to have their funds put to better use.

I encourage readers who have a complaint against The Stoutonia not to hesitate writing to the editor about it. If we choose to remain passive about the content, then we almost certainly will have more people like Rich Brueckner writing poor quality articles and insulting our intelligence with pointless material.

Sincerely, Cristopher A. Perri
UW-Stout Sophomore

Brueckners logic

Rich Brueckner apparently did not read the "yellow slips" in the Library about which he so strongly objects (Stoutonia, 11/13/86). The custodial staff has nothing to do with either the slips or the policy; the reason he assumes for the policy is neither the only one nor the most important.

Considering both sides

I note with interest the letter to the editor that has been circulated in recent newspapers in our area with regards to the Menomonie Community Development Department. There is direct comment in that letter that the department was being abolished.

It was unfortunate that the letter did not reflect both sides of the issue as well as the fact it stated the part on abolishment.

I wish to point up some facts that have not been aired outside the City Council.

First of all, the department is directed by the Community Development Commission and the stated purpose of the commission is as follows: "The Community

CAMPUS SLANT/ If you have a car on campus what do you think of the parking system?

by Brian Kraimer

Richard Manthei,
Marketing and Distributive Ed.,
Junior,

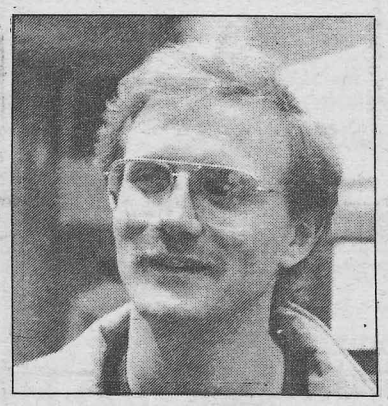
No, I really do not think so. I have no problem finding a place to park every morning, when I come and go. The longer you take to get to campus the harder it is to find a parking place.

Mary Sue Bickel,
Early Childhood Education,
Sophomore,

For me personally no. I have a parking permit and therefore I usually have a parking place. It depends on the time of day how much parking is available. I think the 30 dollar cost of a permit is outrageous.

Sue Falvey,
business Administration,
Senior,

Yes, they do have a parking problem. For the expanding number of students there is not enough parking. More students have cars, so you must park so far away just to find a parking spot.



Ted Miller,
Industrial Technology,
Senior,

I live a block from campus and do not have a place to park my car. The people who drive to campus must have to leave early just to find a place to park. If they do not get here early, all the parking places are taken.

Dr. Donald Chatman,
Associate Dean,

Yes, they do have a parking problem. They do not have enough parking for all the students who have cars. They should get more space for parking or not allow students to bring their cars on campus, which is what happens on most large campuses.

Suckers in the mag market

Jef Maynard

You can't tell a book by its cover. You can tell a magazine by its cover, and I'd like to tell most of them to roll over and die. Give the trees a break; hold the presses.

This is America, where business is the motive and power behind and above most of our civilization, and freedom of speech is rightly cherished. But this combination of business and speech has produced some mutants in the periodical kingdom.

I've had an urge for weeks to read a good magazine, but I can't find too many to choose from. Part of the problem is that many magazines are directed at limited readership, people with special interests. Or they are so generalized that an average sixth grader can read them and not feel challenged.

For example, there is a magazine called Bride's and one called Modern Marriage. Just how many issues do you need to read before you are proper marriage material? I can't imagine needing a two year subscription unless you are planning a series of marriages.

Another part of the problem is where I look for magazines. I want to buy one and read it at convenient times, filling in those dull moments during the parade of life. Most of the magazines I would read cannot be purchased in Menomonie.

It seems that magazines are dependent on a high turn-over of readership. They don't expect people to devotedly read every issue for years. This way they can repeat a stock of meaningless articles and not get caught. Or they can assign rewrites of prior meaningless articles.

The magazine business has a lot of overlap. Women as a target market suffer endless insult, in my opinion, from magazines that supposedly are trying to help them.

While looking at magazines in the University Bookstore (and getting regularly jostled by other customers suffering the mental-as-anything layout of the aisles) I found these magazines: Woman's Day, New Woman, Complete Woman, Working Woman and just plain old Woman.

Browsing one random issue, I found an article, not at all uncommon, about women's search for orgasm. Actually, when I looked, all four magazines had articles about women's search for orgasm. So did Vogue, Madomassielle, and a few others. I didn't realize it was that hard to find.

Trying to read some women's magazines is challenging but not in any educational way. The challenge is in trying to figure out how the article relates to the title.

For example, in an article by everybody's favorite authority, Dr. Ruth Westheimer, the title reads, "What to do when you are too tired, (or too busy), to have sex." She never really said anything about the topic. There was some wierd crap about two people who pretend they are having ape sex when they get bored, but that the women didn't want to do that all the time. Well fine.

Quizzes are frequent in magazines. More wierd crap: What type of man should you be with if you are an auditory woman, a visual woman, or a feelings woman. Tell me there is any type of person, man or woman.

If you lost your car keys, would you: A) Look for them, B) shake your purse and listen for them, C) feel around in your pockets for them. The answer is the same as it is with most any problem and you don't need a magazine to tell you. You do what you have to until you find the solution.

One magazine asked: Is your hair ready for winter? Oh, help. I think a cup of anti-freeze in your cream rinse should do the trick.

Everything in the woman's magazines was geared for a woman who is a meaningful, valuable member of society only if she is a "winner at love, emotions, business and looks." Young, thin, rich, white, and flawlessly good-looking isn't too much too ask.

Women aren't the only suckers in the mag market. One Gucci guy in the bookstore was royally disappointed because GQ, Gentleman's Quarterly, was "so thin." There was not enough stuff in there to make him a proper gentleman. Holy crud, I've only met one gentleman on this campus in four years. He is from Sweden and has probably never heard of GQ.

I am beginning to think that most of the bookstore, drugstore magazines, instead of being life quality enhancing, are actually substitutes for life. I didn't see much that an average person couldn't figure out for themselves if they had a little creativity and courage.

students in the form of a Student Activities fee.

STOUTONIA: WHAT SUGGESTIONS WOULD YOU HAVE FOR STUDENTS WANTING TO GET INVOLVED IN THE GROUPS OR ACTIVITIES HERE AT UW-STOUT?

SIEDLECKI: What I tell new students and freshmen when they come to UW-Stout is that when they get bombarded with all the information on the groups and activities here is not to turn numb and ignore all of the information. They have to make sure they keep their eyes open and a good source of information is the student paper. They have to make sure they get a copy and read it to find out what is happening on the campus and what is coming up. They must also read the bulletin boards. To try to make things easier we put in the video information system, which comes across the TV. This works not only in the student center but also is in the dorms on channel two. The students must make these efforts because there are over 150 organizations, all wanting the students attention. The student must initiate the action in the group that interests them.

STOUTONIA: WHAT WENT INTO TO THE PLANNING OF THE STUDENT CENTER AND HOW HAS THE STUDENT CENTER WORKED OUT?

SIEDLECKI: The Student Center was planned for about seven years before it was actually built. We talked with organizations that use the Center and to students who hang out in the Center to get a feeling how the Center should be designed. Along with this was the desire to have a high tech looking building with a mall type atmospere. For the most part, the facility has turned out really well. It is like many projects, in my opinion, it is not big enough mainly because we could not afford to make it bigger. The students paid for this building, not the tax payers money, which also affected its budget. Although, when more money is accumulated, the unfinished portion of the Center will be completed.

Development Commission is responsible for the conduct of the Community Development Block Grant program."

Under the duties listed for a community Development Director comes the following: "General Statement of Duties: Performs administrative and technical work in conducting the City's Development Block Grant (CDBG) programs."

In my communication to the City Council on this subject, I stated that the City was turned down for its CDBG applications for 1985 and 1986 and the 1984 application was to be completed by this time this year. The City has no CDBGs at the present time to administer and no application has been started for 1987. With such grants come the necessary funds to administer the grants. We have no such funds for this purpose at this time.

The Community Development Director has been called on to furnish the City Planning Commission with facts from time to time from information gathered for the grant program. This type of information is stored in a city computer for such use.

With plans developing for a County-City program along the lines of industrial and business growth and acquisition, the City Planning Commission will work in this area.

With respect to the Housing Rehabilitation Program, that is an ongoing program in the Community Development Department, funds are being requested in the City Budget to provide for such continuance, along with monies for writing grants for the CDBG.

The department is not being abolished and there is a request for $22,190 in the 1987 budget for continuance with a part-time employee or having it contracted out.

With the successful application for a 1987 grant in the future and the planning going on with the County, 1988 budget time will provide a new challenge for the City in both areas and a new direction.

Veteran Stout teacher heads move to new lab

by Jef Maynard

Sitting in a red swivel office chair with well worn wheels, Dr. Terry Ingram checks over his weekly calender. With so many hour squares X-ed out, the calender looks like a bowler's score sheet on the way to a perfect 300 game. This is a busy man.

Telecommunication and photography instructor, Ingram seems to enjoy his work and an occassional joke. When asked what he teaches, he replied, "Students."

Describing himself as "something of an old fixture around here," Dr. Ingram has been at Stout for 17 years.

The photography department is currently, and has been for the last five years,stuffed into about 2000 sq. ft. on the second floor of Ray Hall.

Dr. Ingram will soon lead the department into a new era, and a new building. Due to the move into the newly remodeled "old" student union, the photography department will then have 65,000 sq. ft. to fill.

The renovated building, at this point without a name, is scheduled to open by second semester. "I was supposed to move in second semester," Ingram explained. "They've made some beautiful progress over there."

Like many temporary moves, the stay in Ray Hall was longer than first expected. Originally, plans were that the photography department would move to Bowman Hall but as Dr. Ingram explained, "It was discovered that the necessary humidity levels would deteriorate the brick." Plans were then laid to include the photographic complex in the union remodelling.

Financial outlays for renovations are tied by a percentage to new spending for equipment. This fact led to shortages of nearly two-thirds of Ingram's original requests for photo equipment.

Of the $150,000 requested for photographic equipment, the department will receive only about $40,000. "It would have been nice to go in with 24 new enlargers," Dr. Ingram said, "but we realize that in the university, money is a tight commodity."

"The average age of much of the equipment is 18 to 20 years. Some of the studio equipment was sold to Stout by Bob, [the late Bob Ward] before he worked for Stout, and that was over 20 years ago."

"If I knew of a rich uncle, I might tap him for the money," Ingram said half-joking. "There are other sources, grant foundations, Kodak and others, that we're looking at."

The improvements in spaces will mean exceptional growth for the department. It will increase to two darkrooms, six color printing areas instead of two, classrooms, and more developing stations.

One of the most positive changes will be in the handicapped access. Currently, the upper floors of Ray Hall are impossible reaches for people using wheelchairs. Thoughtful advance planning by Ingram and Ward increased the floor space of one darkroom and lowered various stations for wheelchair access.

"We're very proud that this is something we can offer these students," said Ingram of his design.

Curriculum limitations have also been a problem during the Ray Hall stay. Class sizes and courses were limited. Now, many new possibilities will open. Photography for the food sciences and industrial departments are likely. Further, more sections of the basic courses should become available eventually, as well as nature and landscape photography courses.

One area of foreseeable problems, according to Dr. Ingram, will be in supervision. "We will have more rooms and stations to supervise and will be relying more on grad assistants and work study."

He is optimistic, though outwardly reserved. "I got in a bit of trouble with my boss because he wanted me to be more excited about the new facility. I've been around here long enough to know there is always some small delay. Well, last week I really got excited and guess what, this week I found out we might not get in there on time."

When the time comes, the new building will bring photography students a fountain of exuberance from "an old fixture."

Stout's Choir and band provide sounds of Christmas

Stout's enthusiastic band director, Erv Schlick takes one of the bands through its paces in preparation for the upcoming Christmas concert. The concert will feature performances by Stout's concert, jazz, dixieland bands, and choirs. The concert will be on Sunday, December 7th, 7:30 p.m. at the Johnson Fieldhouse.

by J. Dauplaise

Christmas is in the air. Along with the seasonal lights and decorations comes the music of Christmas. Stout's musical contribution to the celebration of Christmas promises to be festive and entertaining.

At 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, December 7th, the U.W. Stout choirs and bands will present their annual Christmas concert at the Johnson Field House. The choirs will be under the direction of Patrick M. Liebergen, and the bands under the direction of Ervin H. Schlick.

> "There'll be different choirs, and the concert, jazz, and Dixieland band."
> —Tyler Pease

The concert will offer something for everyone. "The Christmas concert is the best chance of the year to experience the musical variety offered by Stout. There'll be different choirs, and the concert, jazz, and Dixieland bands. And it will help people get in the Christmas spirit.", said trombonist Tyler Pease.

The Symphonic singers will begin the concert with F. Melius Christiansen's "Praise to the Lord". Other selections will include Irving Berlin's "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor" and Liebergen's "Cover Him, Joseph." Kris Bielefeld will be the featured flautist in the performance of "Cover Him, Joseph." Dennis Siebenaler, faculty pianist, will accompany the Symphonic Singers as well as the Vocal Jazz Ensemble.

Numerous soloists will be featured in the Vocal Jazz Ensemble's performances of swing, ballad, and Christmas selections. They will sing "Birdland", "When I Fall in Love", "Operator", "You Are So Beautiful" and arrangements of Christmas carols.

The University choir will perform Benjamin Britten's "A Ceremony of Carols" with accompaniment by harpist Serena Foley. Pianist Shelley Heinrich will accompany the choir in their performance of "Blessing" by Karin Moran Bart.

The Stout Concert Band will be featured in "Overture Jubiloso" by Frank Erickson. Other concert band numbers will include "Trumpet Tune" by Henry Purcell "Noel Francois" arranged by William E. Rhoads and "A Christmas Festival" by Leroy Anderson.

Highlights of the Stout Jazz Ensemble will be Duke Ellington's "Caravan" as well as Kris Bielefeld playing a jazz flute solo titled "Blues for a Flautist."

Featured by the Stout Dixieland Band will be Louis Armstrong's "Struttin' With Some Barbecue."

At the concert's end, the choir and bands will join their talents for the performance of the Hallehujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah."

The concert promises to be entertaining and full of the Christmas spirit. Jill Heinowski, the band president, said this year's Christmas concert will be "the best ever". She attributed this to their enthusiastic director, Ervin Schlick. "We couldn't do it without Erv," she said.

Slave Raider on record is like a magic act on the radio

by Jef Maynard

Slave Raider on record is like a magic act on the radio. You have to feel that something is missing. For a band that considers themselves entertainers more than artists, without the wig, it's only half the gig.

They released their first album on Halloween and will be bringing their live show to the Great Hall tonight at 9 p.m.

Some of what is missing from the record comes from not seeing the lady being sawed in half. While individual musical talents are ripe in this band, the canned goods need time to age.

Listening to the first side of this record, Taking the World by Storm, felt like "Bad B Side" night on heavy metal radiorama.

The show makes it go. Most of the originals went like surplus Kiss or Quiet Riot tracks that didn't make the cut.

Slave Raider won Four Minnesota Music Awards. The award for "Best Originals" seems dubious but dependent on competition. The other three: "Best Cover Band," "Live Band," and "New Band," are not.

New they are, live they are, and their cover tunes, especially the Led Zepellin, Rush and Heart are every bit as hot as the originals. Only a shade of the Shake, Rattle and Roll that earned claim to those awards finds the light of play on the five track first side.

The title track is your basic "I'd like to rock & roll all night, and party every day" tune. You have to guess by the lyrics that it was written by the lead singer. Some of the glitter of glam rock self adoration gets in his eyes.

Track two, "Back Stabbin'" is dreary until it shifts away from a chunking, chopping rhythm into a driving guitar lead.

A load of Chainsaw Caine's lead vocals are tuned screaming. On stage, it comes across like molten metal energy, but on vinyl, it doesn't melt wax.

"Make Some Noise" track three features this line: "You me and the boys... make noise," about 16 times. Again, it is the guitar leads, lost in the "noise" that give this tune any guts. The chorus is sung by a backup that sounds like a heavy metal stand-in for Mitch Miller's choir.

"Burnin' Too Fast" has a variation chord structure and it features a few choice lines sung by the outstanding bass player, Leititia Rae. In concert, her lead vocals are pure gold in a world of electroplate silver. Her bass antics, and solo are clean Chris Squire melody, or total funk Louis Johnson.

Side One, Final Cut: "Long Way from Home" is another sing-along way from home sing-along.

Guitarists Nicci Wikkid and Lance Sabin guality leads too easily pass by unnoticed on Side One because of the monotonous rhythms.

Side Two is a different story. "Survival of the Fittest" demonstrates repetition that can be artfully sufficient as a basis for music provided that the music is infused with some honest intentions. A little thoughtful chord change now and then and a beat for the feet is not too much to ask.

The last tune on Side Two is "The Black Hole." If it weren't for this song, that is where this album would end up.

Dominated by a powerful beat and a vocal prowess beyond the perfunctory asphalt jungle shrieking, this song runs through a nice mix of sections, slick instrumental leads by the pound, including a taste of bass.

If you go to the Mall and find the record for $2., buy it for your little brother, (you know the one who won't stop banging his head on the floor). Otherwise:

If you are going to be taken by Slave Raider, it is better to be taken alive.

Christmas gifts found at art sale

by Noreen Spraner

Looking for Christmas gifts that not only have that personal touch, but are beautiful one of a kind objects d' art? The place to find those special gifts for special people just may be the Fine Arts Association's Holiday Art Sale.

> "...a good opportunity to do some Christmas shopping"
> —Bob Neitzke

The art sale will feature original jewelry, ceramics, prints, paintings, and drawings by Stout's talented art students. All of the items are very reasonably priced, especially when one considers that the pieces are not only aesthetically pleasing, but original, hand crafted works of art.

"The purpose of the sale is to give art students an opportunity to sell their work, giving them a sense of accomplishment," said Bob Neitzke the vice president of the FFA, "especially in knowing that their work is saleable. It also gives students a good opportunity to do some Christmas shopping."

The Holiday Art Sale will be held Wednesday, December 10 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the Crystal Ballroom B, at the Memorial Student Center. For questions and entry information contact Wendy Berg at 235-6922.

One Point Perspective

Plagued by Procrastination

Jean Marie Dauplais

It's procrastination time again at the Applied Arts Building here at U.W. Stout. Procrastination, an amazingly terrifying five syllable word, is capable of rousing exasperated sighs from teachers and a universal bond of understanding among students. Although students all over campus are scurrying to meet deadlines, art majors are doubly doomed by the ever nearing end of the semester.

While other students have tests looming on the horizon, or possibly a paper to whip up, art majors have projects due. Lots of them. A test can be managed by randomly guessing at the configuration of -2 penciled-in circles required to pass a class. The World Book Encyclopedia is ready and waiting at the LLC for those burdened with last minute papers. But how does an art major who has been sleeping through sculpture every day produce ten pieces in three weeks, all of which must be at least the size of the Applied Arts building or larger?

How can you console an art major who locks himself in ceramics on December 19th, and emerges bleary eyed the 21st, when all of his pieces explode in the kiln because some no-mind put them in the kiln while they were still damp? And it's totally impossible to B.S. about the whereabouts of five paintings when you haven't yet stretched a canvas.

Regardless of these recurring nightmares, about 98% of us still procrastinate, although in varying degrees. There is the "Invisible Student" who never goes to class until the last week. At this time they suddenly appear on bended knee, requesting mercy, understanding, and an incomplete. They deserve none of the above.

Then there's the "Financially Plagued" who are unable to complete a single one of their 24 studio credits due to lack of funds. Some art majors are so poor in fact, that they are forced to ration macaroni and cheese, and they can only afford the store brand.

This leads to my suggestion that all art majors be allowed a $200.00 per semester deduction from their tuition for art supplies. I don't see H&R majors toting bags of hamburger to their fastfood classes. And I have yet to see a packaging major burdened with a roll of Saran Wrap. The cash outlay of art majors at Stout alone must rival that of the United Arab Emirates.

There is also the category of procrastinators to which I myself belong, that being the "I Wait 'Til the Last Minute and I Still Can't Decide What to Do but Damn It I'll Get it Done if it Kills Me!" group. I, and others like myself, spend days and weeks deliberating upon which solution will be so astonishingly wonderful that the Metropolitan Museum of Art will snatch it up for a cool three grand, obliterating forever the fear of graduating and making money. In the seven and a half hours remaining in which to execute our creation, we stay up all night, drinking twenty gallons of Coke products from the handy machines located within crawling distance of our work stations. Exactly fifteen seconds after class begins, procrastinators such as myself rush into the room bearing attempted masterpieces, and promptly collapse.

Yes, procrastination is an ugly, ugly thing. It would be so much easier if, being stricken with it were an officially recognized disease, like alcoholism. I heard the Surgeon General is contemplating this issue. I'm sending him my left ear in hopes that it will sway his decision, at least in favor of the art majors like myself who are afflicted with the awful disease: procrastination.

Elmer Fudd Hunts

Denise Cain

"Dear Sister: As I faithfully read through all of these inspiring and tummy teasing articles I failed to notice any mention of a particular older individual who has provided you with numerous pieces of advice for a female type person entering college. Needless to say these famed quotes have served you well by apparently putting you into the public eye.

I see no need for a thank you at this point in time. It is the only acceptable thing a nice brother could do to help a younger sibling of the wrong sex. I would like to take this opportunity to give you a recipe I discovered. I know when my flat stomach gets the hankering for a small portion of substance I like to make, that old home favorite "Deer Steaks". Enclosed is $2.00 for beer, postage, handling, and bribery fees. Your brother, Tony"

Deer steaks come from deer hunting which is a "sport" I do not fully understand. The weekend before Thanksgiving I heard every man in the Menomonie bars bragging about how they had their alarms set for 4:00 a.m. to get the big buck. These are the same guys that cannot get up for classes before noon.

The clothes the cunning hunters wear into the wild are a fashion statement. If women ever thought of dressing in such obnoxious orange shades we would be laughed off campus. Then to top the whole outfit off, he wears that special hunting hat that transforms even the most cool guy into Elmer Fudd.

What about the money it costs to participate in such expeditions? You have to buy the long underwear, insulated outerwear, boots, shells and beer. But knowing the cost of shaving cream and razors, I suppose hunters can justify the cost since they do not have to shave for weeks before and after the big kill.

My brother Tony was lucky enough, I understand, to shoot a deer amongst his other keen-shot buddies a couple of weeks ago. He was the first to call Walt Disney Productions and inform them that Bambi was laid to rest in Western Minnesota.

But it was meat in the freezer so

Spontaneous Combustion

Rock, Roll, and Remember Records?

James 'Unk' Falkofske

It shouldn't come as any surprise. State of the art technology changes every year, for Pete's sake! It's a wonder records have been with us this long.

As everyone who shops in record stores must know by now is that compact discs (CDs) are taking over. When first introduced, CD players had a price tag of well over six hundred dollars, but with technological advances, I have seen them for as little as one hundred and thirty five in the last two weeks (which is well within the range of any respectable turntable price).

The advantages that a CD player has over a recorded LP are many. First, a CD never wears out. Secondly, the price of CD discs are falling well within the range of LP records. Finally, dynamic range and frequency response is much better on a CD disc.

A regular record, on semi-modern department store record players (crystal stylus) has a life of under five-thousand plays. Within that time, the tracks in the record wear out and the record loses its clarity and frequency response. This says nothing for the damage that can occur to the record by dropping the stylus on the LP and "trashing" the album.

A CD, on the other hand, has nothing touching it but a beam of light. Once a CD is purchased, if handled with care, it can last a lifetime (or more). The only risks a CD disc has are fingerprints (which can be cleaned away), and scratches to the surface (which are easily prevented with good care).

A move to CDs has come about from the rapid fall in CD prices. Both players and discs have come well within the range of the average consumer. In fact, the price of a CD sells for about the same price as a newly released hit album. The move to CDs has the record industry running to catch up.

Now, Motown records will only release older recordings only under a CD format. Soon Motown hopes to be going strictly CD for all of its recording acts. Other labels that are becoming strictly CD are PolyGram, MCA, and Warner Communications.

For convenience sake, if nothing else, America seems to be going to strictly tapes and CDs. No more scratched albums or broken styluses to worry about. Easy-to-operate equipment is becoming the status quo.

And if you thought convenience took away from quality, you're wrong again. CD players have a much larger dynamic range and frequency response than either records or tapes. Because CDs are digitally encoded, all the music is preserved in its original forms.

Since records have to fit varying volumes and frequencies into a micro-track of an LP, the music is compressed, or squeezed to fit into the small track of the record. This limits both dynamic range (volumes) and frequency response (notes).

Listening to the same song on a CD player compared to a compressed record is almost like listening to the music from a concert hall as opposed to inside a garbage can. There really is no comparison.

What does this hold in store for the future of rock and roll. I see a move by both the radio and record industry to turn completely to CDs. I see record companies no longer releasing records, but instead releasing only CDs under their labels.

Radio stations will play only CDs to insure that the highest quality music is played over their stations. I also see new artists being released together on a "demo" CD once a month, as opposed to the standard 45 rpm promos that come to radio stations weekly.

In the future, I would expect a move from companies such as BSR (which, by the way produces most of the crystal record players for this country) to turn its time and resources toward the home CD player market. Since there now exist CD players for car and personal stereo, I also see a move away from the tape industry, unless it comes up with a cheap alternative for digital audio tape.

Finally, I see a move that the record industry petition the federal government for commissions on all blank audio tape sold, so that CDs will not be recorded and shared with friends.

Tony brought the carcass to the local butcher shop. The butcher asked Tony if he wanted the meat made into steaks or chops. Accepting the mere size of the carcass at hand, Tony replied, "Make it into a hotdog."

Antwan's Deer Steaks

1 roaster full of deer steaks, fat trimmed off
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can cream of chicken soup
1/2 cup Heinz 57 sauce various other spices available

Put deer steaks into a large roaster. Mix ingredients and pour over the steaks. Bake in 350-degree oven for 1 & 1/2 hours, depending on size of steaks. Make sure to bathe steaks in the sauce to avoid dryness. Serve with lots of bread, green beans and ice cold Bud Light beer.

Craig Swanson from 4th Milnes just returned from a successful hunting weekend by nailing a 6 point buck. Craig insists that he has the most fabulous recipe for preparing venison steaks:

Craig's Venison Steaks

1 pkg. Adolph's meat tenderizer champagne, wine, or fruit juices
1/4 cup butter
1 onion

Marinate steaks in according to directions on Adolph's package but substitute champagne for the water. Allow to soak for 15-60 minutes, depending on how seasoned you want the meat. Melt butter in fry pan over low heat, add onions and steaks. Continue to cook over low heat until steaks are tender.

Stout's own baseball coach, Terry Petrie has the venison recipe that tastes superb. People who have never liked the taste of venison like it when it is prepared this way. The secret is to trim off all of the fat and remove all of the bones.

Petrie's Venison Version

Remove all fat and bone from the steaks, chops or roast. Soak meat in a roaster with enough milk to cover the meat in refrigerator overnight. The next day remove the meat and discard the milk. Roll the meat in a flour mixture seasoned with salt and pepper. Brown the meat in a slightly oiled hot fry pan. Line a roaster pan with sliced onions, add a layer of meat and continue with layers of onions and meat. The bottom of the roaster should have a small amount of water or milk added. Bake covered roaster in a 250-degree oven for 2-3 hours until meat is tender. The meat should come out like a Swiss steak meal.

Men's basketball team rolls over Luther College in season opener

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout men's Basketball team opened their season November 21 against Luther College. The game gave Head Coach Dwain Mintz an idea of how well the team will match up against other teams in the conference. Winning by the score of 74-60 Stout looks ahead to the start of the conference.

On Saturday December 6, Stout will be at UW-La Crosse. The Blue Devils will be at home on December 8 to face UW-Superior on scout night. All games will begin at 7:30.

For the opening game of the season, Stout had to find replacements for the starters they had lost, but now looking at the starting line up it is obvious to see that this years team will be a well balanced attack. Against Luther College the starters were off to a slow start shooting only 25.6 percent. This could have put Stout in the hole going into the half, but Luther also shot poorly. With the halftime score 28-27 Stout was lucky to go in with the lead.

When the second half opened Stout came out shooting and this time they were going in. Outscoring Luther by 13 points in the second half Stout shot an impressive 71.4 percent. With fine contributions from forward David Sandstrom who scored 15 to lead Stout scorers, and forward John Patterson who added 13, helped lead Stout to a victory. Ken Heinecke and Scott Kauls of Luther college each had fine games scoreing 16 and 15 points respectively.

"We are going to be awesome this year —Brian Ellingson"

On November 28, Stout went against St. John's College improving their record to 2-0 by beating St. John's 71-67. Leading scorers for Stout were Tom Gomolak and Brian Ellington each with 17, and Ron Hunter with 16. For St. John's the leading scorers were Dingman with 17 and McKenzie with 15.

Stout's first half was quite an impressive one. Starting the scoring and controlling the first half with ease, Stout ended the half with the lead of 36-25. It wasn't until the end of the second quarter that the score started to become close. With constant intentional fouls from St. John's, Stout exposed a weakness in their offense, that being foul shooting. Stout shot 61 percent for the second half but went 3 for 10 in the last three minutes. Stout will be looking ahead for Saturdays game in La Crosse.

Lady Blue Devils on the road beat Augsburg in season opener, 79-56

by Paul Emerson

The UW-Stout womens basketball team opened their season on the road by traveling to Minneapolis, Minn. on Nov. 21 taking on Ausburg College. And after trailing by just 8 points at the half, 26-34, that was as close as the Lady Blue Devils would get as Ausburg took control in the second half enroute to a 79-56 win.

Junior center Renee Kasten took both scoring and rebounding honors for the game by scoring 17 points and hauling in an impressive 18 rebounds. Senior Patti Cook chipped in 14 points and had 5 steals, while sophomore Lisa Blume scored 12 points and was credited with 8 assists from her point guard position.

Ausburg had six players score in double figures with Taunya Tingsley and Michelle Boyer leading the way with 16 points each. Tingsley also grabbed 8 boards, and Boyer had 7 to lead Ausburg in rebounding also.

Ausburg connected on 33 of 69 shots from the floor, 48 percent, and hit 13 of 22 from the free throw line, 59 percent, while Stout shot 44 percent (26 of 59), from the floor, and just 4 of 11, 36 percent, from the charity stripe.

Despite Kastens 18 rebounds, Ausburg also won the battle of the boards, 42-37. Stout was also plagued with 31 turn overs in the game, to 19 for Ausburg.

Coach Lynda Lee commenting on the game stated that, "Ausburg had some talented athletes, they were tough." She then added, "we had good play from some individuals, but the lack of teamwork was what we suffered from."

The following night (Nov. 22), the Lady Blue Devils traveled up to Collegeville, Minn. to take on St. Benedicts. This time a slow start in the first half proved to be their downfall, as they dropped the game to St. Ben's by a score of 66-44.

Coach Lee stated that, "physically we looked better than both teams, but against St. Ben's, they shot really well."

Kasten again led the Lady Devils in scoring with 12 points, she also grabbed 12 rebounds to lead both teams in that category. On the game Stout had 44 rebounds to St. Ben's 42. Janet Turowski, a 5'6" junior guard, chipped in 6 points, while junior Mary Britts had 5 points, as did Cook.

For St. Ben's, Pam Eaton took game scoring honors with 17 points, while Kim Krize chipped in 12 points, and Mary Fisher 9.

For the game Stout shot just 28 percent, 16 of 56, from the floor, (6 of 28, 21 percent in the first half), and 12 of 19, 63 percent, from the free throw line. St. Ben's hit 28 of 72 shots, 38 percent, and was 10 for 20 from the line, 50 percent.

Looking over the final statistics of the game, Lee commented this, "we outshot them in the second half, but we just need to shoot more. They had 24 steals against us, we need to improve our ballhandling and team play."

Then commenting on the opening weekend losses, Lee stated, "our low scores I attribute to a lot of sick players that we had the week before in practice. We had only 9 players practice all week, so it was hard to scrimmage even 5 on 5. This made them hesitant in play and threw us off our game."

Lee announced that starting sophomore point guard, Lisa Blume, has quit the team, and junior Tammie Huebner will be lost for the season because of knee problems.

Looking ahead to this Friday's (Dec. 5) home opener, Lee said, "we will have a good week of practice, just about everyone except for a couple will be back." St. Norbert's is the opponent for Friday's 7:00 p.m. game, Stout then hosts UW-Superior on Monday (Dec. 8), in the conference opener for both teams. Tip-off time is slated for 5:00 p.m. Lee would like to see more student attendance at the home games this year, as they need the support.

Lee noted that sophomore Sara Zoll has looked good in practice and is expected to fill the point guard spot. Sophomore Suzi Krank, and freshman Justine Becker both received praise from Lee, "both players have really good attitudes and are never say die' type of players."

On the young season thus far, Lee stated, "this team is a lot easier to work with, and are a lot of fun, that makes the losing easier." She also added, "for right now improvement more than winning is the name of the game."

Tight Rope

Cheap shot or not

Paul Wydeven

The hottest item in the NFL lately has been the violence on-the-field and the first name you think of is defensive lineman, Charles Martin of the Green Bay Packers.

Martin was ejected from the Green Bay - Chicago game, November 23 when he body slammed quarterback Jim McMahon. This is nothing new, but the players reactions, namely the Bears players reactions have been outrageous as their injured quarterback.

Violence in the NFL is nothing new. Many Pack fans can remember William Gay of the Detroit Lions spearing former quarterback Lynn Dickey in the back. Dickey could not move his legs for a good five minutes and was removed form the field on a stretcher. If Gay would have hit Dickey any harder, he would probably be in a wheel chair today.

Last season in a Green Bay -Chicago game, it was cornerback Mark Lee who was ejected for an unsportsman like conduct call. This happened when Lee and Bear's runningback Walter Payton went over a sideline bench, but the officials failed to see Payton hand firmly gripping Lee's face mask.

A few minutes later, Green Bay cornerback Kenny Stills, who replaced Lee, had a very late hit on runningback Matt Suhey. Stills also receive the unsportsman like conduct call, but was not ejected from the game.

This did not start just last year, if one was to look back at the history of the NFL, they would see the central division games as hard hitting games. In fact, it was nicknamed the "Black and Blue Division".

Even before this season started the words were flying, Bears coach Mike Ditka names Green Bay as the Red Bay Packers in his 1986 autobiography. He wrote that the toughest two games were against the Packers and this year the Bears were going to play them differently. Ditka added "We may just go up there with baseball bats."

Another incident that is over looked is the William Perry body slam to Neil Lomax during the preseason. Perry said, "I realized that I was fined last August... But Martin has no class, and it is just indicative of the way the Packers have played us the last two years - really dirty with a lot of cheap shots." This statement really adds credibility to what Charlie Jones has to say about the Bears later in this article.

It's funny how the Packers are accused of playing dirty by one team. The same team who just had it's very own linebacker Otis Wilson almost remove Louis Lipps chin from his face or as NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle put it after suspending Wilson for one week, "a flagrant forearm blow to the jaw."

Announcer Charlie Jones told the story to all of TV land, so now Wilson is going to talk to his attorney about Defamation of character. After hearing this Jones said, "What the Bears are saying is that it's all right for our guy to do it but not all right for an opponent to do it."

Now Bears are saying that Martin should be suspended as long as McMahon is out. Teammate Doug Flutie wrote an article that said McMahon should be able to take legal action on Martin. I just can't wait until the Bears lose in the playoffs, then they will say that it is Martin's fault that they lost.

Commissioner Rozelle suspended Martin for two weeks without pay. This is pretty fair, some but say he should be out as long a McMahon is crazy. Let's look at the facts. McMahon's shoulder was injured before he went into the game and McMahom is not even sure if the hit caused further injury to his shoulder.

The Packer - Chicago game is an intense game, one where it is likely that the adrenalin would flow. Martin's hit was not a full speed hit, it was more like a bear hug or take down in wrestling. When I first saw the hit a thought it was a hug of joy for throwing the interception, but for some stupid reason he tossed him to the ground.

This one incident will label Martin as a dirty player even though there a lot of players that play dirty every game they are in. It's too bad because from now on Martin will be a marked man, especially when it come to playing the Bears.

Deer kill down

The Department of Natural Resources predicted 230,000 deer were killed during the 1986 season approximately 44,000 less than last season. According to the DNR this is the first season in several years that hunters killed less than the year before.

Knicks fire Hubie

The New York Knicks fired Head coach Hubie Brown. Brown, an ex-Milwaukee Bucks assistant coach, was in his fifth season as head coach for the Knicks. He was fired for the lack of improvement during the last two years.

Colts fire Dowhower

The Indianapolis Colts fired Head coach Rod Dowhower. The Colts are the only winless team this season and with a lose to Atlanta they will tie the record for most consecutive losses in the NFL. Dowhower has a 5-24 record the worst for any active NFL coaches. The Colts named Rod Meyer as Dowhowers replacement.

Layne dies at 59

Hall of Fame quarterback Bobby Layne died of heart attack Monday at the age of 59. Layne played mostly with Detroit and Pittsburgh, but started his career with the Chicago Bears under the late George Halas. During his rookie season with the Bears, Layne was traded to the old New York Bulldogs.

The UW-Stout Swim team went to St. Paul, MN to face St. Thomas on Saturday November 22. Stout's men's team lost by the score of 60-35. The women's team won a close match of 57-56.

The leading scorer on the men's team was Mark Kukuzke who gave Stout a first place in the 1000 free with a score of 10:39.32. Also doing well was Bo O'Reilly who finished second in the 1000 free with a score of 11:39.47. Other top finisher were Kurt Siebert who place first in the 100 free with a time of 52.06 and Stu Boese who placed second in 200 free and 100 back with times of 1:57.21 and 1:02.23 respectively.

The women's team gave Stout its first victory ever over the tough St. Thomas team. With the score close each event was considered important. Starting off with a victory in the 400 medley relay with a time of 4:32.32 Stout appeared to have the team to pull off a victory. Lead by Wendy Heinke, Laura Perkins, Laurie Potter, Stout easily won the 400 relay event.

Stout also placed well in other top events with Jackie Gilbert taking first in the 200 free style with a time of 2:06.28, Wendy Heineke and Laura Perkins placing first and third in the 200 IM with times of 2:23.40 and 2:29.30 respectively. Heinke also placed first in the 100 fly with a time of 1:01.51. Other top finishers were Jacki Gilbert placing first in the 500 free with a time of 5:45.33, and Laura Perkins placing first in the 100 breast with a time of 1:16.92.

At this event the point system used in swimming almost cost Stout the win. With Stout only receiving points for top places, St. Thomas who had many more swimmers would take second, third and sometimes even fourth.This would give St. Thomas more points in that given event even though Stout clearly won the event St.Thomas would have more points. This just credits Stout Swimmers even more with this victory.

This weekend Stout will be in Madison for the Badger invitational.

NEXT THURSDAY DECEMBER 11 WILL BE THE FINAL ISSUE OF THE STOUTONIA THIS SEMESTER

Young wrestling squad striving to rebuild a competitive program

by Slash La Freniere

On Thursday, November 20, the UW-Stout wrestling team went down to defeat by the score of 24-17 to UW-Eau Claire. The final score however did not truely reflect the closeness of the meet. Stout dropped many matches by close margins and the wrestling squad had a fine showing over all.

Results were as follows: Scott Frazer,118 lbs. Freshman, won by a pin. Julius Shockly,126 lbs. Freshman, won by a 17-5 decision. Kevin burbach, 134 lbs. Junior, won by a 5-4 decision. Bruce English, 142 lbs. Freshman, lost by a 7-8 decision. Meitke, lost by a fall. Eric Egstad, 158 lbs. Sophomore, lost by a fall. Wayne Hendrickson, 167 lbs. Junior, won by a 12-5 decision. Bart Milton, 177 lbs. Freshman, lost bya 3-4 decision. Steve Smith, 190 lbs. Senior, lost by a fall. Rich Rupp, Heavyweight. Sophomore, lost by a 5-7 decision.

This seasons wrestling squad is very young and they have set no real concrete goals except to improve with each meet. The wrestling tradition at Stout has been mediocre at best, and this group of wrestlers are hungry for the victories necessary to turn this program around. The wrestling season is long and the whole squad has been working hard to prepare to win.

This season the wrestling team also has a new head coach, Mike Early. Coach Early came from a very successful wrestling program at Loras College in Iowa. Coach Early had this to say about his outlook on the season, "We just want to keep doing our best and keep building and, eventually, to re-establish wrestling as a competitive sport at UW-Stout."

Coach Early seems to be just the man to turn the Stout wrestling program around. With some strong talent and a young squad, plus coach Early's leadership, this squad could be very competitive this season.

The next meet for the Stout wrestlers is tonight against Augsburg College at home in Johnson fieldhouse at 6:30 p.m.

Neubauer "happy with" guilty verdict

by Gretchen Eke

Michael D. Neubauer was found guilty of homicide by negligent use of a motor vehicle Tuesday evening after about eight hours of deliberation by the jury.

"I'm happy with the verdict," Neubauer said. "It's more fitting than first-degree murder ever would have been. That's all I can say."

The maximum penalty for this charge is two years imprisonment and/or a $10,000 fine.

Neubauer, 27, was married late last month and lives in Crosby, Texas, is free on a $100,000 bond.

Neubauer was charged with the first degree murder of Sani Tela,a Nigerian student at UW-Stout, on June 19, 1982. Neubauer allegedly ran over Tela in the alley behind the Den Bar in Menomonie after a confrontation with him earlier inside the bar.

Sani Tela, 28, was a Nigerian student attending Stout on a scholarship from Kano State in Nigeria. He was majoring in technology education and was finishing his course work during the summer session at the time of his death.

The three lesser charges that the jury considered were second degree murder, homicide by reckless conduct and homicide by negligent use of a vehicle. Neubauer was convicted of the last charge.

A conviction on the first degree murder charge would have required the proof of two essential elements. First, the prosecution was required to prove that Neubauer intended to kill Sani Tela and, secondly, that he caused Tela's death.

District Attorney Michael Furnstahl, who represented the state of Wisconsin, led the prosecution. Neubauer was represented by Doug Mulder of Houston, Texas, Donald Fast of Baldwin, Wis. and Richard Wachowski of Eau Claire.

Circuit Court Judge James Wendland presided.

After opening arguments, the prosecution called 11 witnesses.

The first witness was Thomas Morrow, the owner of the Den Bar. He said he ordered Tela to leave the bar because it was "best to have Mr. Tela leave before he got in a fight."

Tela returned to the bar and engaged in an argument with Neubauer, Morrow said.

Morrow evicted him a second time. Morrow said he evicted Tela a third time after he came back and was involved in a fight.

Calvin Garrett testified that he volunteered to help Tela out the back of the bar after the scuffle. He said that Tela took a poke at him.

Garrett said he hit Tela on the side of the head and Tela went down. He laid Tela beside a dumpster and returned to the bar, Garrett told the court.

Joel Merritt testified that while leaving the Flame Lounge, he observed a car run over Tela, stop, and speed off.

Lynn Behling, a friend of Neubauer, said that Neubauer had told him "he thought he felt something under his car. He thought he'd run somebody over."

Raymond Dye, another friend of the defendant, was granted immunity from a charge of obstructing justice, when he came forward with information about the incident.

Dye testified that Neubauer had told him that he had run over the Nigerian.

"He said he didn't see him. All he heard was klunk,klunk underneath his car," said Dye.

The prosecution rested its case after the testimony of Jack Schulte, an FBI agent from Eau Claire, who investigated the incident.

The defense rested its case without calling any witnesses.

In closing arguments Tuesday, defense attorney Mulder questioned the credibility of the state's witnesses and pointed out conflicting testimony.

Michael D. Neubauer walked with the rest of the court as his trial was held during a tour of the parking lot behind the Den, where Sani Tela was killed in June of 1982. The court reporter took down testimony as jurors were shown the spot where Tela was found.

UW-Stout Chancellor Robert Swanson spent Tuesday presenting the results of a study of the future of the UW-System released by a committee on which he serves as vice-chair.

Stout community hears proposals to ensure quality of education

by Bonz Bohnert

Proposals to bridge the gap between the quality of Wisconsin public higher education and the lack of funding available were outlined by UW-Stout Chancellor Robert Swanson Dec. 8-9 during meetings with Stout faculty and student representatives in the Memorial Student Center.

Swanson informed the groups on a report recently completed by the Regent Study Group on the Future of the UW-System.

The committee was formed in 1985 by the UW-System's governing body, the Board of Regents. The Future Study Group recently completed a year-long study of ways to ensure the quality of education in the UW-System.

Members of the committee include all 16 members of the Board of Regents members and two UW-Chancellors — including Swanson.

Swanson stated that the Future Study Group focused on 5 major areas: educational effectiveness; fiscal effectiveness (enrollment management and tuition policy); equity in education (improved status of women and minorities as faculty and students); extension of university resources (educational contributions to Wisconsin's economy); and leadership and administration within the system.

Findings in the group's study revealed that growth in UW-resources has not paralelled the growth in the number of students.

The committee's study also showed, Swanson said, that although Wisconsin's tax spending on public higher education is above the national average, "the state support per student is about $600 below the national average."

One possible explanation for this, Swanson said, is Wisconsin's high percentage of candidates for higher education in relation to the small number of private colleges in the state.

"The result," Swanson said, "is that, on a percentage basis, more students enroll in public universities than in most states."

"It isn't surprising, therefore," Swanson added, "that the support

Journalist expelled

No reason was given when the government of South Africa refused to renew the work permit of an American journalist on Tuesday.

Michael Parks, a correspondent from the Los Angeles Times was told to leave the country by Dec. 31.

Five foreign journalists have been expelled from South Africa since the country was declared in a state of emergency on June 12 of this year.

Pregnancy solutions disputed

The Secretary of Education attacked the idea of school-based birth-control clinics in public schools, saying that it was "a dumb policy."

Willianm Bennett issued his remarks in response to the suggestion, which was made during a press briefing on recommendations released after a two-year study of teen-age pregnancy by the National Academy of Sciences.

The report recommended that "the highest priority" be given to pregnancy prevention, listing current statistics on teen-age pregnancy and suggesting the aggressive use of sex education and contraceptives to solve the problem.

Family life census revealed

The typical first-time bride is 23.3 years old, according to a report from the Census Bureau, dated March 1985.

The bureau also reports that the number of unmarried couples who live together has leveled off at about 1.9 million.

Almost one-fourth of children under the age of 18 live in a single-parent home, according to the census. 12 percent of minor children in 1970 lived with one of their parents and, in 1960, only 9 percent had a single-parent home.

Monkey language useful in research

Future research into the effect of drugs on human behavior could be furthered by the findings of a UW-Eau Claire psychologist's study of monkeys.

Kenneth McIntire, chairman of the psychology department at the Eau Claire campus, spent nine months teaching two monkeys to classify colors, a skill which McIntire called "the bottom line of capabilities necessary for language to begin."

This skill, McIntire said, will make the animals more useful in drug research. The animals can be used to see if a drug impairs the ability to perform such simple classifications.

Stout minority population shows increase

by Rose Shakal

This year the minority population at UW-Stout has shown a 6.4 percent increase, while decreased minority enrollment at other campuses raises concern.

There has been a 6.4 percent increase in the total minority population at Stout.

The enrollment of minorities at UW-Madison has shown a decline, according to a report on the status of minority students and faculty released by the Board of Regents this year.

The enrollment of blacks in colleges nation-wide fell .4 percent last year, according to the Status Report on Minorities in Higher Education, released by the American Council on Education.

A large part of this year's increase in the minority population at Stout comes from an expanding number of Asian students.

Also, the number of minority women has dramatically increased.

The number of minority women on the campus has increased 10.8 percent over last year, while the number of minority males has increased much less.

Stout's population of minority males has increased 3.5 percent.

Blacks represent the largest percentage of the total minority population on the campus, with 35 percent the population. 33 percent are Asian, 20 percent are Native Americans and 11 percent of the minorities on campus are Hispanic.

The career-oriented majors and special services offered to minority students at the university are the reason for the increase, according to Linda Torres, director of the Ethnic Services Center.

"I think it is the responsibility of the whole university to help retain (minority) students," Torres added.

The Ethnic Services Center plays a key role in this effort.

The staff at the center are aware of high schools with large minority populations, Torres said. Center staff go to these and other schools, to recruit and participate in "Career Days" programs.

Torres said that the center provides both personal and academic advising to minority students who attend the university. Advisement focused on whatever will help the minority student stay in school until the completion of their degree.

The center also offers programs with speakers of minority background.

These speakers share personal accounts of how they made it through college, speaking on important issues which effect minority students in college and encouraging minority students to stick it out.

Ethnic Services also sponsors the Guided Work Experience Program, which employs minority students at local businesses.

Students work on this program on a volunteer basis, to obtain the necessary skills of communicating and working with business people.

David Marsh, a Black American student originally from Minneapolis, said, "I chose Stout because of its proximity to home and because of the good reputation of the school of Industrial Technology."

Being close to home, with friends or family is also important.

Lay Jong Tay, a freshman from Malaysia, said that she came here partly because her brother and sister are here.

"My friends at Stout are really good to me," said Tay. "They really help me."

Kinship spreads Christmas cheer at local nursing homes

Students of a discussion class at UW-Stout organized a Christmas carolling exhibition with members of Kinship of Dunn County on Sunday, Dec. 7. Stops were made at two local nursing homes. Barbara McRae, the new director of Kinship, said, "My first priority is the kids and getting them matched with volunteers." McRae said there is a need for male volunteers, in particular, to match with kids in need of a special friend.

Dirt Cheap Auction extremely successful

by Masha Roberts

This year's Dirt Cheap Auction has proven to be the most successful, according to the leadership of the Hotel Sales Marketing Association (HSMA), which was responsible for its organization.

Hundreds of students made their way into the Crystal Ballrooms in the Memorial Student Center, to participate in the auction on Wednesday, Dec. 3.

"This type of activity has been our major fund-raiser for the past eleven years," said HSMA Vice-President Darien Schaefer.

Some of the proceeds from the auction will go toward the Jill Weber Benefit Fund.

Jill Weber is a Menomonie youngster who needs a liver transplant soon in order to stay alive. The HSMA has joined several other groups in the area in raising funds to help the Weber family raise money for the operation.

Approximately $7,500 was made during the four-hour auction and close to $3,000 will be submitted to the Jill Weber benefit fund.

One hundred and nine HSMA members went to various cities in the area, requesting donations from businesses to help the club accomplish the activity.

"This has proven to be extremely encouraging, since most of these businesses are quite willing to contribute," said Tom Roth, the organization's secretary.

Some of the businesses the HSMA approached for donation packages to place on the block during the auction included hotels and sporting goods stores.

"In Menomonie, we go anywhere from office supplies, to the Buck, to hotels and restaurants located outside of Menomonie," said Jodi Innis, the president of HSMA.

The money raised by the club will also go for its other activities. HSMA will be bringing in guest speakers to Stout. HSMA members will also attend the National Student Convention in Las Vegas, Nevada next spring.

"The National Student Convention, being held from April 3 to 5 of next year, includes such things as seminars where HSMA students gain experience and knowledge of the hospitality industry by participation," Innis commented.

New scholarships available for Vocational Rehab students

by Carol Banks

A new scholarship has been made available to UW-Stout students in the field of education who are interested in working with disabled individuals.

Starting this fall, students who are majoring in vocational rehabilitation with a special education certification can apply for the new scholarships. Through a federal grant, students could earn up to $400 per academic year.

One of this year's recipients is Nancy Schneider of Rhinelander, a junior in the special education certification program.

Schneider said she "was pretty happy to get this scholarship," and she noted, "I really needed it."

The scholarships are part of a three-year project grant, funded by the United States Department of Education. The project is being coordinated at Stout by two co-directors, Dr. Dan Paulson and Dr. Mary Hopkins-Best of the Special Education Department.

"We are the only program in the Midwest that has special education within a vocational rehabilitation curriculum," Hopkins-Best noted.

This undergraduate program integrates the three areas of vocational education, vocational rehabilitation and special education. Stout's is the only such program in the UW-system.

The program is unique when compared to other special education curriculum because it is directed towards the secondary grade level of special-needs students, grades 7-12.

The project focuses on the career needs and preparation of these disabled students who will need extra assistance in becoming ready for employment.

The process for selecting eligible candidates for the scholarship, according to Hopkins-Best, is different than that usually followed.

Students will be chosen by merit of commitment, grade point average and financial need.

Hopkins-Best said, "We turned things around for criteria for awarding the winners, so that commitment was first,"

> "We looked at people who have a clear understanding of their career goals.
> —Hopkins-Best"

Usually, financial need is the highest priority criteria.

"Basically, we looked at people who have a clear understanding of their career goals in choosing candidates," Hopkins-Best added.

"We had to write on what our financial needs were, answer questions about our grades and about special education classes we took," observed Schneider.

Each applicant must list outside activities that pertain to their career goals.

"They also asked what extra-curricular projects we were involved in, in which we worked with exceptional people," said Schnieder.

Schneider was a volunteer for Project Turtle in Eau Claire, a recreation program for disabled youth. She also worked as a work activities teacher at the Dunn County Health Care Center with developmentally disabled residents.

"We gave scholarships to eighteen individuals just last week," said Hopkins-Best. "We give them $200 now and $200 next semester to make sure they will continue with the program."

Thirty students per year will be awarded these scholarships through 1989.

GOING THE DISTANCE WITH US COULD BRING YOU $25,200 CLOSER TO SCHOOL.

If you're right out of high school and headed for additional schooling, one route you might consider is the Army. It's a route that will bring you up to $25,200 for educational assistance, as well as valuable skill training, if you qualify.

It's available through the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. As a soldier, you contribute $100 a month from your first full 12 months' paychecks (for a total of $1,200). The government and the Army contribute the rest (up to $9,600 from the government and up to $14,400 from the Army).

The skill training you receive will challenge you. It'll give you new knowledge, experience and pride. It's tough, but it's worth it.

level per student has dropped off."

Further findings in the committee's study revealed decreases in class section offerings and a steady increase in student enrollments. This, the study said, has resulted in over-crowded classes and students taking longer to graduate.

The Board of Regents' initiatives to help resolve funding and over-enrollment problems include self-help measures, such as encouraging transfers to UW-Center schools and putting a cap on UW-enrollment

Stout, said Swanson, plans to reduce its enrollment by approximately 200 students (which would bring the number of students on the campus down to 7,500).

The study group also proposes tuition increases in order to bring the system's standards up to the mid-range of the Big Ten Conference of universities.

This would result in a tuition increase at Stout of about $140 within the next four years.

"After (the study committee) puts all of the self-help measures in place," said Swanson, "the studies tend to show that we'd still be left with a [funding] gap of about $88 million."

The committee concluded in its study that there are three viable ways to make-up the necessary funds: looking for more state funding, raising tuition or lowering enrollment throughout the UW-System.

Swanson stated that solving the problems through tuition increases alone would result in "raising the average tuition per year, per student in the UW-System by $640."

The Future Study Group report recommends that a combination of the three methods be used to bridge the funding gap while maintaining a quality university system in the state.

22.5 percent tuition increase proposed

by Karen Smith

The Board of Regents approved another proposal for tuition increases in the UW-System, with enrollment cuts soon to follow.

"The increases in tuition have been great," said Stout Senate Association (SSA) Vice-President of Legislative Affairs Mark Nickels.

"The number of students allowed in the UW-System," Nickels said, "will decrease during the next few years,as well, due to enrollment cuts."

Tuition is planned to increase 22.5 percent for most of the four-year campuses, including UW-Stout, and 28.7 percent at the Madison and Milwaukee campuses.

Stout students are presently paying $601 per semester. With the proposed increase, they would pay $668.50 per semester in the 87-88 school year, and $736.00 in 88-89, an increase of $271.00 over the current fee.

These figures do not include segregated fees, which could be increased in the future also, Nickels said.

"In two more years, tuition will have doubled from what we were paying in 83-84," Nickels said. "So, we are talking about some pretty hefty increases."

Nickels stated that there will most likely be 6,000 fewer students in the UW-System next year.

"It could even go as high as 28,000 fewer students, if the budget doesn't increase enough," Nickels said.

"There is talk that Stout would go to 7,500 students being enrolled next year," Nickels said, "which is around 260 less students than now."

To limit enrollment, the standards for admission into the university will be much tougher in the future, Nickels claimed.

These measures are being taken, according to Nickels, in response to the findings of the Regents Study Group on the Future of the UW-System.

The Future Study Group found that the state support for the system is $6,000 per student lower than the national average.

In order to bring the university into line with the national average figures a "triangle" of solutions is recommended by the Regent committee.

The "triangle" refers to three methods of bringing UW funding up to the national average:

- tuition increases
- enrollment cuts
- more money from the state

"We have to work on all sides of the triangle, rather than concentrating on just one, to overcome this problem," Nickels said.

A comittee from SSA is making efforts to provide information to students at Stout which will inform them about what is going on in the system, Nickels said.

The committee intends to help students understand what they can do about it, he added.

"We are going to work together to try and combat what we feel are excessive increases in tuition and enrollment cuts," Nickels said.

The students, along with parents of students, will be given the opportunity to write letters to legislators, who, according to Nickels, contol what will happen with the system's budget.

"We are paying for mistakes of the past," Nickels claimed. "In the past, no control was kept on the number of students coming into the UW-System."

Large numbers of students have been registered at the university at low cost, Nickels said, because of a policy which gave more money to schools with higher enrollments.

"This became a problem," Nickels said, "because, while more students were coming in, more classes were being cut, until the average number of students in each class was higher than they wanted."

The proposed budget which calls for the tuition increase still has to go through the legislature and be approved by the Governor, Nickels said.

The budget process, he said, should be completed, and exact changes that effect the UW-System should be known, by July or August of 1987.

Increase in eating disorders here linked to societal problems

by Jill Huppert

Increasing societal pressure on women to be successful, slender and attractive has caused an increase in victims of eating disorders at UW-Stout, according to a counselor who works in a support group which tries to help people overcome the problem.

Eating disorders are definitely a problem at Stout, said Bob Christoffel of the Eating Disorder Support Group.

There are three types of eating disorders; compulsive over-eating, bulemia and anorexia.

Compulsive over-eating is a craving for food that results in an uncontrollable appetite. Bulemia is uncontrolled eating followed by vomitting. Anorexia is willful starvation in the pursuit of slenderness.

Although most cases are women, men can also have eating disorder problems. Some cases of anorexia and bulemia in men are directly related to losing weight for high school sports, Christoffel said.

Christoffel said these disorders are basically psychological. He said that they most often start with a desire to control one's weight.

These disorders "are more an issue of feelings than of food," Christoffel said. Victims generally have difficulty in expressing very basic feelings, he explained.

Christoffel said that many cases have been caused by a combination of societal pressures and a dysfunctional family system.

For a person suffering from anorexia, there is a severe restriction of food, compulsive fasting and relentless exercising. An intense fear and obsession about weight gain usually results in a body weight about 25 percent below average.

An anorectic often has a distorted perception of themselves, Christoffel said, and they may feel fat even when they are actually thin.

For the bulemic, eating will entail a large consumption of calories followed by vomitting, excessive exercising, fasting or sleeping. Dramatic fluctuations in weight are common.

A compulsive over-eater's life revolves around food, weight, and diet. Eating patterns may be characterized by continuous nibbling, bingeing, or a combination of these. A compulsive over-eater's weight may be slightly high to obese.

Bulemics and compulsive over-eaters frequently eat to numb feelings or provide comfort, Christoffel said. They may hoard or hide food, he added.

The effects of these disorders can be dangerous and, in some cases, fatal.

Anyone who thinks they may have an eating disorder can contact the University Counseling Center or Bob Christoffel, Sharon Knopp or Janet O'Brien, all counselors who are working with the Eating Disorder Support Group.

SSA changes responsibilities and raises salaries of execs

by Kelly Cohorst

Responsibility for the operating funds of UW-Stout's student government have been transferred from the Financial Affairs Committee to an appointed executive by a motion passed at Tuesday's meeting.

The motion, proposed by Catherine Reszka, off-campus senator and member of the Financial Affairs Committee, said that "the Administrative Assistant shall administer the Stout Student Association budget" and "propose the Stout Student Association budget to allocations."

The administrative assistant is appointed by the president of the Stout Student Association (SSA).

The job of the administrative assistant, as outlined in Article V of the Legislative By-Laws of SSA is "primarily, though not exclusively, a staff postion to the President."

Under Article IX of the same document, which describes the responsibilities of the Finance Committee, Part 2 states,"The responsibilities of the Finance Committee are to prepare an annual budget" for the organization.

Vice-President of Financial Affairs (VPFA) Gary Harder announced last week that he would resign from his post due to the excessive demands of the position.

No replacement for the resigning VPFA has been chosen. Vacancies are filled by a majority vote of the SSA senators.

The VPFA is an elected position whose principle role is to chair the Finance Committee.

SSA advisor Bill Siedlecki serves as a non-voting vice-chairperson of the committee.

The balance of the committee is made up of five voting senators, whose appointment to the position is approved by a senate majority.

Discussion of the motion to place the SSA operating budget responsibilities of the Finance Committee in the hands of the president's administrative assistant centered around when the motion would go into effect.

The change in proceedure passed by a vote of the senators and will go into effect immediately.

In other business, the SSA senators also passed pay raises for the executive members, which will go into effect for the 18th Congress.

The 18th Congress will begin after the SSA elections in early April.

Salaries for the executives of SSA are listed below:

Position	86-87 Pay	87 88 Pay
Pres.	$1,462	2,000
VPFA	1,462	1,750
VPLA	1,462	1,750
VPAA	1,462	1,500
MAC	1,462	1,500
L/T Rep.	1,462	1,500
Exec. Sect'y	1,462	1,000
UC Dir.	731	1,000
Total	$11,697	$13,750

One stipulation of the pay raise will be that the office hours required of the executive secretary would be cut in half.

The reduction would mean that the SSA secretary would be required to keep five posted office hours per week, instead of the currently required 10 hours.

The past salaries, were set at "the rate of pay for in-state tuition," said VPFA Gary Harder.

Of the pay raise, Harder said, "this really isn't a lot of money, especially when students are from out-of-state."

First Christmas Faire presents craft ideas

by Catherine Schnieder

For those who are still searching for that unique gift, Christmas shoppers can purchase the handiwork of area craftspeople at the First Annual Christmas Faire.

The fair, which is being sponsored by Stout's Center for Craftsmanship, will be held in the Crystal Ballroom of the Memorial Student Union.

The fair will be held from noon to 7 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 12 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 13.

The fair is open to the public and admission is free.

According to James Bjornerud, director of the Center for Craftsmanship, the fair will feature 32 boothes and offer a wide variety of crafts, including items such as stained glass, ceramics, leatherworking, fiber arts and paintings.

The Center for Craftsmanship, which is responsible for setting up the fair, was established in January 1984 through a grant from the University of Wisconsin-Stout Foundation.

The center was "basically set up to assist regional artisans improve their skills, market their crafts and develop design sensitivity," Bjornerud said.

The center is run by the director, an advisory committee consisting of five faculty members and a part-time graduate assistant. It is self-funded and open to anyone in the community.

One of the main goals of the center is the promotion of quality craftsmanship.

By having the crafts vendors carefully screened before the fair, Bjornerud said that the fair could guarantee high-quality selections and help further this goal.

Bjornerud has positive expectations of the fair.

"We hope that the artisans will sell a lot of their craftwork and that people will be able to buy many nice things as Christmas gifts," Bjornerud said.

"If the fair is well attended," he added, "and the artisans feel it is worthwhile, we plan to make the fair a yearly event."

Halls raise funds

The winners have been announced in a fund-raising competition between residence halls, which was sponsored by the Little Sisters of Sigma Tau Gamma.

JTC raised $170, coming in first. South Hall came in second and HKMC was third in the competition.

The combined total of funds raised by the halls that participated came to almost $800.

The funds raised are intended for the Jill Weber Benefit Fund, to help pay for a liver transplant for the 3 1/2-year-old Weber child.

All the funds raised by the residence hall drive have not yet been collected.

"We're still getting contributions coming in everyday," said Missy Buboltz, organizer for the Little Sister's drive.

Thanks for relief

The family of a Stout security officer whose home went up in flames recently has extended their thanks to members of the community who came to their aid.

"Your thoughtfulness and caring is deeply appreciated," wrote the family of Harold Fosmo, Jr. "We are thankful for so many friends."

A relief fund was set up in a local bank by community members after Officer Fosmo's home was destroyed in a pre-dawn fire on Nov. 14.

"Full-time" stricken

The Editorial Board of The Stoutonia voted to strike wording in its constitution which prohibited part-time students from being employed on the student newspaper's staff.

The constitution originally read "the staff of The Stoutonia shall consist of individuals who are full-time students in satisfactory academic standing enrolled at the University of Wisconsin-Stout."

The Editorial Board, the decision-making body of the newspaper, voted to strike the term "full-time," permitting part-time students to be eligible for its state-payroll positions.

"It's unfair to part-time students," said Tim Hopkins, editor-in-chief, "not to allow them the educational opportunity of working at The Stoutonia."

Hopkins also pointed out that part-time and full-time students pay segregated fees, which provide part of the funding for the paper.

Holiday hours

The UW-Stout Library Learning Center will extend its hours during Evaluation Week.

The library will be open until 1 a.m. from Sunday, Dec. 14 until Thursday, Dec. 18. It will close at 5 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 23, the day the semester ends.

The Stout library will remain closed until Friday, Dec. 26, when it will be open from 7:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. It will then be closed during that weekend and open, during the same hours, for the weekdays of Dec. 29-30.

In January, the library will be open, starting Jan. 2, from 7:45 a.m. to 5 p.m., on weekdays only until the semester begins again, with registration on Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 12 and 13.

Staff cuts damaging

Due to the proposed $400,000 reduction in UW-Stout's operating budget for the 1987-88 academic year, Stout's administration faces the tough task of eliminating 16 faculty positions for next year.

The two percent reduction in the operating budget may yet be diminished if the hoped for changes in Wisconsin budget allocations come through, but difficult decisions remain ahead.

Until March 1, 1987 the administration will be reviewing the high priority needs of each department as it determines precisely where the faculty cuts shall be made.

The planned Stout enrollment reduction of 200 students will be considered along with the anticipated retirement and/or resignation of Stout faculty members as the attempt is made to maintain the university's academic status.

The administration must also consider the combined effects of the upcoming 22.5 percent increase in Stout tuition, the elimination of faculty positions and the generally recognized overcrowding of class rooms campuswide.

Stout students must ask the question, what are we paying our money for?

The recent imposition of the cost per page policy for computer printer users has affected teaching policies in computer intensive areas such as applied math.

Hotel and restaurant majors end up spending an additional semester or two at Stout after deciding that a business administration minor is the essential ingredient to getting them onto the career path they have always sought.

The efficiency of Stout's educational process deserves close examination as students are required to spend two semesters taking English classes and yet the majority of students do not begin to comprehend the processes involved in good writing.

Stout needs to expand its focus so that it teaches skills which are applicable in a variety of fields so that students will be employable regardless of which industry is leading the American business scene.

Our hope is that the Stout administration will keep these goals in mind so the ill effects of the faculty cuts will be held to a minimum.

Fine Line

We'll fix you

Jef Maynard

What this paper needs is a good five-cent advice column. Many people are highly disturbed on this campus, don't you know. They are in a quandry or a quagmire about this or that, so of course they write to The Stoutonia. It is well known that we have all the answers.

If your life is a mess or even a stinking dung heap write to us. (Please don't call after 11 p.m. or you'll wake the children.) Our highly strained staff of professional doctors, therapists and busy-bodies will fix your butt right up. Here's a few letters from our dead-letter box:

Dear Ann Slander

My sweet, innocent roommate was married last week to a mortician 10 years older than she is. He dated her for a year. His good manners and restraint were very impressive. He never jumped her or even talked dirty about making uh-uh's, (you know?).

Last week they got married. This morning she called me up on the phone and was a hysterical spastic case. Her wedding night was a total sick Freddie Krueger freak-out nightmare, you know?

First he told her to take a really cold bath for like a half-hour, then told her to lie on the bed and be really still. Then he said, "You might as well know that I am a necrophiliac. I can only make love to dead girls, or girls that look like they are dead."

Well, she freaked you know? She left him and is on her way back to Stout to finish her fashion merch stuff. Is her husband a sicko puke or what you know?

Sincerely, Betty Bridesmaid

Dear Betty:

This is one case where the bride wasn't frigid enough. Tell her to turn him in to the Funeral Directors Assoc. in Milwaukee. There'll be some stiff consequences.

Dear Ann Slander

Last week the most embarrassing thing happened. I live in the dorms on North campus on the first floor. I came home from uptown with a guy and we were both slobbering drunk. He stayed in my room all night because he told me how much he loved me and had something to show me as proof.

About 4 a.m. my roommate came home from a party where she drank about 359 beers. She thought she was going into our room but instead she went out the hall door and set off the fire alarm.

When I woke up, there were two guys in my bed, not one, and I couldn't remember either of their names or where I met them. I was really embarrassed because it was my "first time," well not exactly my first time but pretty close.

Everybody looked at us really weird when we went out for the fake fire alarm, and I couldn't tell if it was because one of the guys wasn't wearing anything but socks, or because they were playing hacky-sack with my underwear. I am too embarrassed to live, what should I do?

Honey Hovlid

Dear Honey:

It is too bad you don't have their names because we'll be running a picture of your little trio in The Stoutonia and we always like to have proper ID in the caption. Maybe someone will write in and help us all out.

Dear Ann Slander

Sometimes my girlfriend comes over and spends the night. We get pretty wild in the sack and make a lot of crazy noises. Does it bother my roommate?

Signed, Sonic Boomer

Dear Boomer:

Yes it does. Try getting a radio or TV in your room and turning it up really loud. This will distract him.

Dear Ann Slander

My best friend is thinking about having a sex change operation. He needs it really bad because he is pretty messed up and it can't hurt, I mean it can't make things any worse. Anyway, he is on the tennis team and wonders if he has the operation, does he have to play on the women's team or the men's team?

Signed, Cross Court Dolly

Dear CCD:

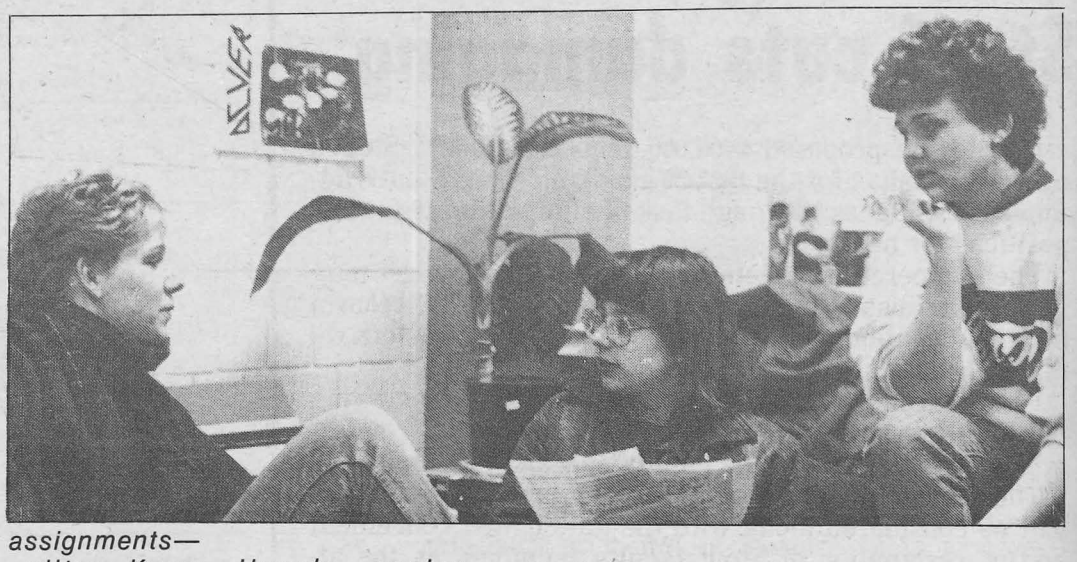
Our resident sports expert, Cosmic Whitener says the NAIA rulebook doesn't expressly deal with this issue but it does say your friend can compete in mixed doubles tournaments alone.

Don't forget, dear reader, if your life is a festering swarm of maggot droppings, write to us. We'll fix you. Happy Holidays...

An informative walk thru The Stoutonia's production

The student newspaper at UW-Stout is put together by a staff of about 40 students, a few of whom are shown here, putting the paper together. Production of The Stoutonia is a time-consuming process which proves to be very educational for everyone who works on it. We see our work as a service to our readers, the students of the university, bringing student news to the campus and community.

1. Tues. 12/2 7:30 p.m.



Story assignments—
Arts editor Karen Heagle, center, discusses the week's art news with reporter Stephanie Weiss, left, and opinions writer Denise Cain. Assignments are made in the news, sports and arts departments on stories. The stories are due at noon the following Tuesday. Many stories require photographs which are also assigned in the photo department.

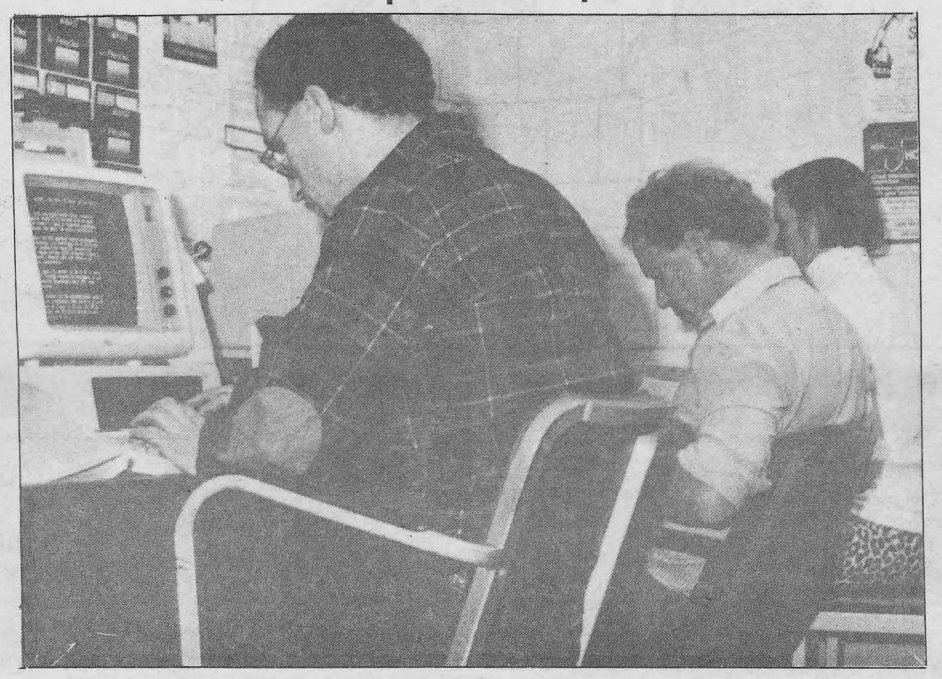
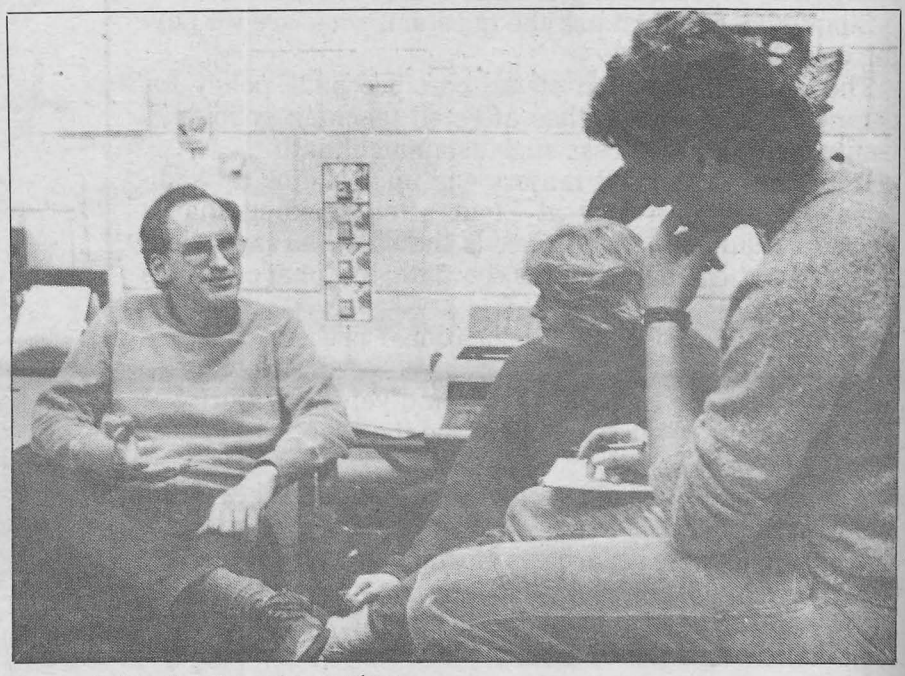
4. Tues. 12/9 12:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.



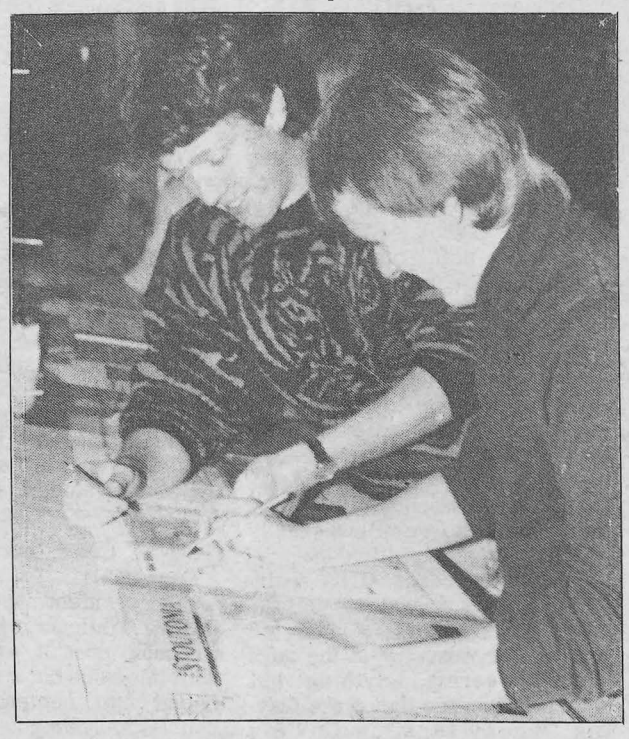
Editors editing —
Editors simplify wording, add clarification and check facts in each story submitted before it goes to press.

5. Tues. 12/9 6:00 p.m.



Editorial Board meeting—
While momentum builds and the deadline for publication of this week's paper looms, the Editorial Board meets to discuss letters to the editor and the topic of the editorial.

8. Wed. 12/10 4:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.



Piecing the paper together —

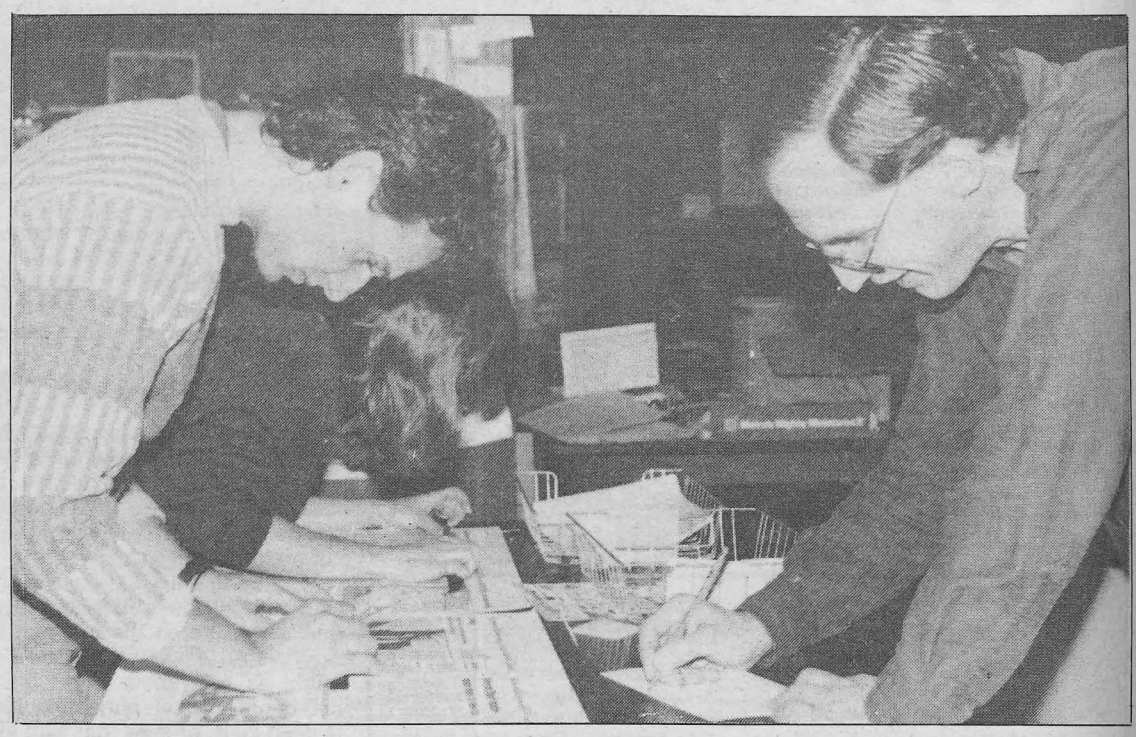
9. Thurs. 12/11 8:00 a.m. - 12:00 a.m.

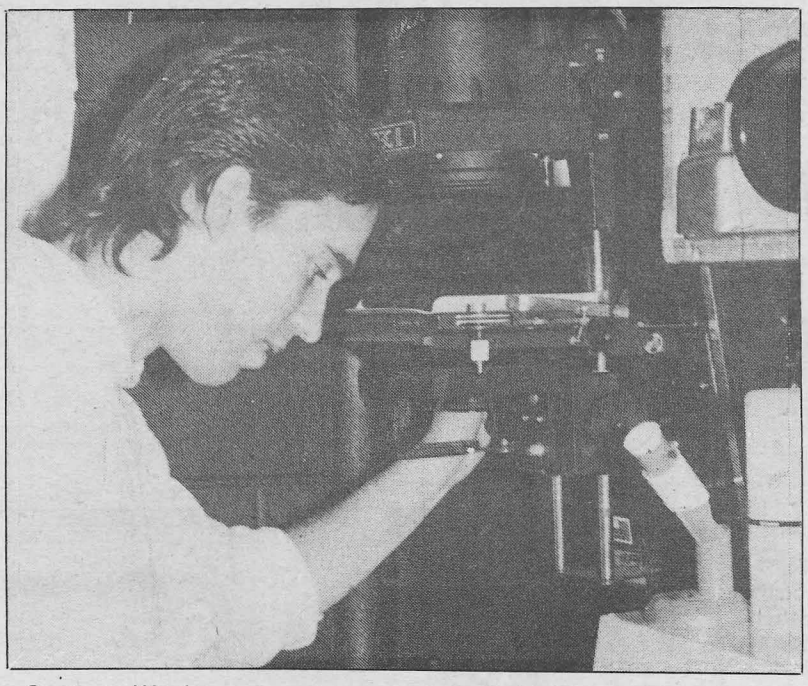


Finishing with essential details —
Hopkins, right, works out a headline that describes the story yet fits the space. Managing editor Brian Kramer, left, makes sure nothing is left out or misplaced. Noreen Spraner, another arts editor, writes cutlines under photos in her department.

2. Tues. 12/2 - Mon. 12/8

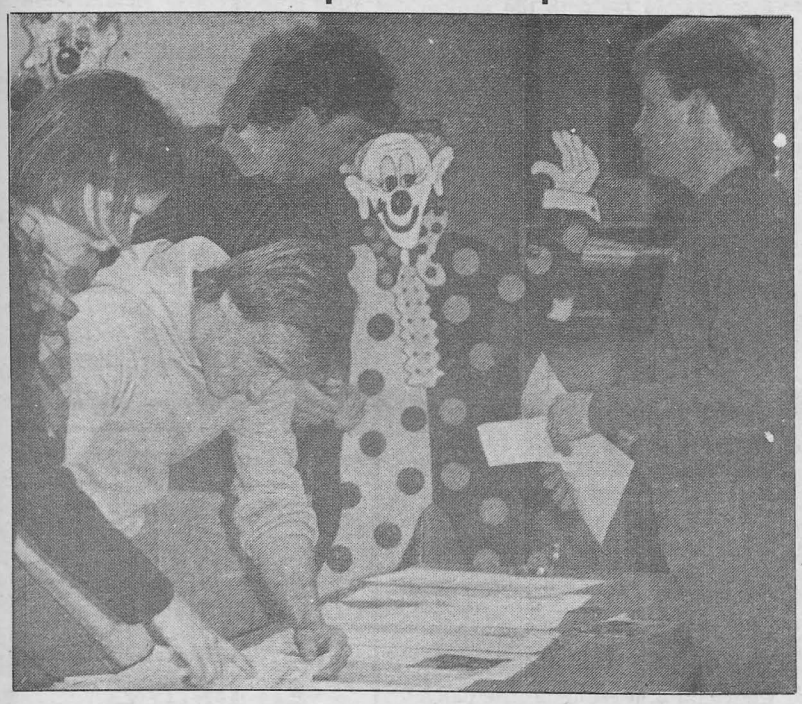
Getting the news—
News reporter Gretchen Eke is shown taking down the remarks of an interviewee. Much of a reporter's time is spent in pursuit of the story. Story assignments may give phone numbers to call and one call often leads to another, as the facts are gathered. Attention to accuracy is very important.

3. Sun. 12/7- Mon. 12/8



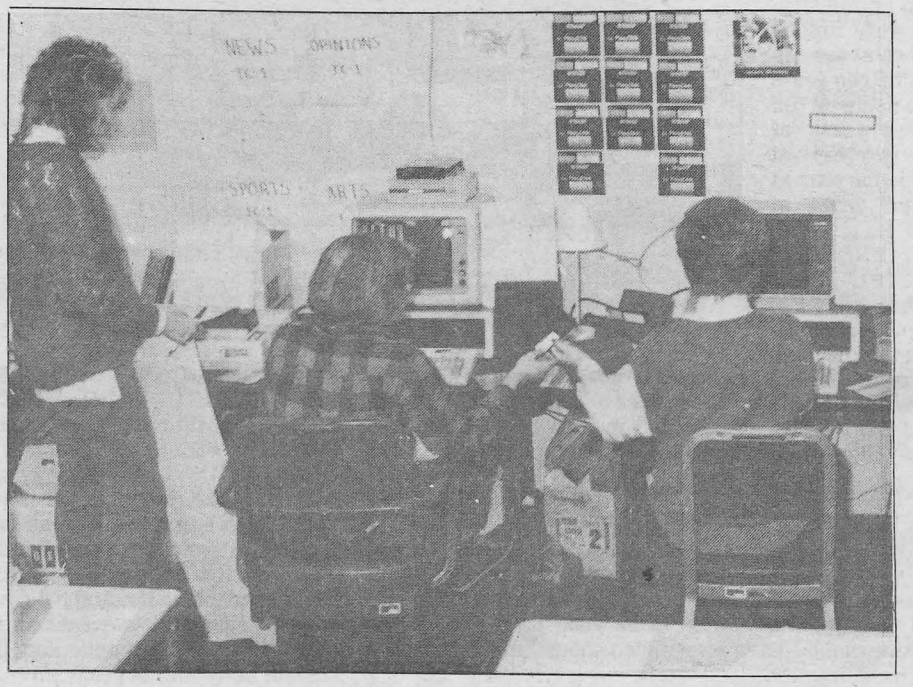
Camera Work—
Photographer Jeff Altenburg spends time in the darkroom when he returns from shooting a picture to go with a story. Each photographer is responsible for developing and printing their own negatives.

6. Tues. 12/9 7:30 p.m. - 11:00 p.m.



Roughing out the paper —
Rick Johnson, advertising manager, right, and Tracy Lea Landis, news editor, left, rely on the layout department to plan so that everything fits.

7. Tues. 12/9 8:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.



Double checking stories—

10. Thurs. 12/11 3:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.

Hot off the presses —
6,500 newspapers are printed at Dunn County News and are distributed to nearly every building on campus within a couple of hours.

11. Thurs. 12/13 6:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.

Beginning again —
As editors of the departments review the final product at the Evaluation meeting, their thoughts focus on improving future issues. Editors participate in a critique with advisor John Maher, journalism instructor from UW-Eau Claire, at this meeting.

Subject: New fieldhouse addition and other changes add to Stout athletics

by Paul Wydeven

Dr. Warren Bowlus

Dr. Warren Bowlus is the chair director of the physical education and athletics here at UW- Stout. Before coming to Stout Dr. Bowlus spent many years in college which started with his bachelor's degree from UW-La Crosse in 1952, then he obtained his master's degree at the University of Colorado in 1957 and finished college with a PhD from Indiana University in 1972.

Dr. Bowlus has had many positions in coaching and administration. These positions were first at the high school and then at the collegiate level. His first fifteen years were in the public schools of Wisconsin, then three years at Western Illinois, then two years at Indiana University, then a year at Kent State and eight years at Davenport, Iowa.

STOUTONIA: WHAT BROUGHT YOU HERE TO UW-STOUT?

DR. BOWLUS: I came to Stout in 1981, I had been here in Menomonie back in the mid-50's at the high school. I coached football there and started both the wrestling and baseball programs. So I knew Menomonie, I knew Stout and when the position came about it looked like one that would be interesting being back into the higher education level.

STOUTONIA: HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT YOUR SELECTION OF THE NEW FOOTBALL COACH?

DR. BOWLUS: I am very happy with the selection that we made with Coach Lawrence. I think that he is an extremely well organized, well qualified, and a very knowledgeable individual, who has done a great deal to create an interest in the community and the student body for his program.

Calendar clarifications

Last week in the Stoutonia an article appeared about the Women of UW-Stout calendar. In it, I was shown to have made many negative comments about the way I was treated by Wilbur Beaton. I would like to clear some of the controversial air about this issue.

First of all, I am not totally unhappy with Beaton and the calendar. I, too, thought that modeling for the calendar was a great experience. I have also gotten mostly positive feedback from friends (and strangers!).

I did this, first as a favor to Beaton. I felt I understood what he was striving for with the project, and trusting him, went ahead.

I knew I wasn't going to get paid positively, but we were promised free calendars, a free party, and maybe a share of potential profits.

The party is still underway, but appears to be an incentive to purchase the calendar. We did receive one free calendar after much heated discussion with Beaton who said he was far too much indebt to even give us one!

What about what we gave to him? We drove on our own time (and gas) to Minneapolis and spent a whole day shooting the calendar. I supported him and told him I would even help him sell the calendars. I supported him on the radio during his interview with Ron Revere of WMNE.

I did this all under the notion that we would at least get a free calendar. Yes, Wilbur has now given us one, but by the time he did, it appeared to me and to some of the other models that his intentions had changed.

I felt used and unappreciated.

I think this whole situation could have been avoided if Beaton would not have hesitated to give us a free calendar. This is what caused the bad feelings to flow and, as soon as they did, he should have immediately reacted by calling a meeting to clear the confursion, instead of waiting.

I think we have all learned a lot from Wilbur's project. We have learned you must also think of the people who helped you make the money, not just the money.

Any entrepreneur should know that if you're employees are unhappy, productivity and morale go down. That is exactly what happeed with the calendar.

I sincerely do want Wilbur Beaton's project to succeed. I think he has made some mistakes, which is expected when you're learning

We all put so much time and energy into this calendar, and I think the public needs to look at that aspect of it before they even look at our pictures.

Do you think having exams close to Christmas will be a problem?

Mary Tarpey,
Graphic Design,
Freshman,

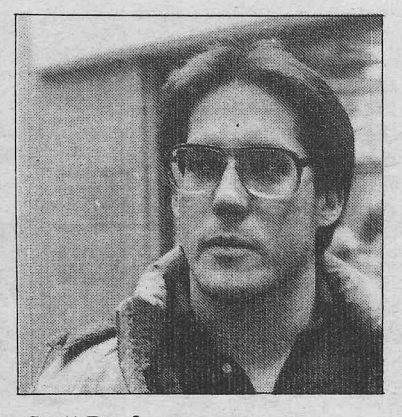
No, it was not a problem this year, but I know that for some people it was a real problem. I also do not like having exams on Saturday. They should have had the exams run from Wednesday to Friday instead of having them on Saturday.

Barry Leis,
Business Administration,
Junior,

I think it is better to have the exams before Christmas, rather then after Christmas. Having the exams so close to Christmas is another thing. It seems like it is so rushed after Thanksgiving.

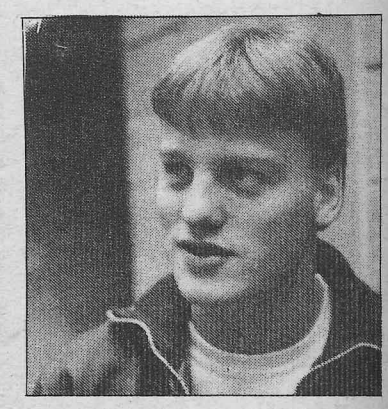
Julie Oliver,
Fashion Merchandising,
Freshman,

I think the exams should be a little sooner, giving us more time before Christmas. The 23rd is to late to be having exams. People do not have time to get home.



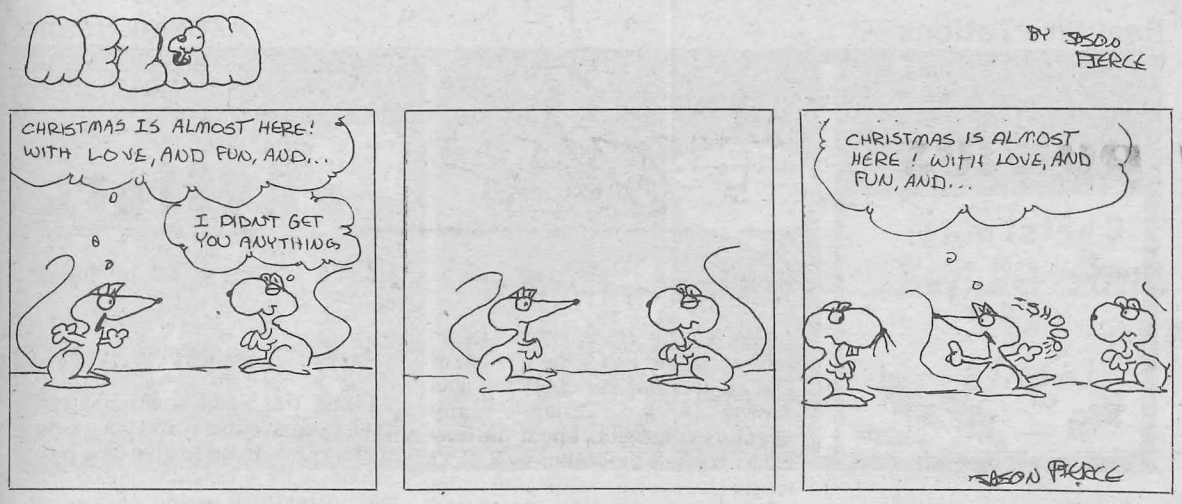
Scott Reed,
Packaging,
Junior,

I am done the first week of exams, so it does not matter now, but I have a Christmas job working for 3M. I would have had to take a week off of work if I had not finished my exams early.



Pete Anderson,
Applied Technology,
Junior,

I think it sucks. How are the people from out of state going to get home. They will have a real problem trying to get everything together before they go home. I also do not like having so many exams in such a short period of time.



Cryptic Notes

Contra indications

Tim Hopkins

The most disturbing aspect concerning the Iranian Arms Initiative is the lack of concern among my young friends about the issue at hand.

"I'm tired of hearing about it," seems the most common response while some ask, "What are they going to do? They can't throw the president in jail."

The most dangerous aspect of this issue is that it has forced the Reagan Administration to consider its own security as far greater in importance than the nation's overall condition.

Those who question the apparent by-passing of the executive and the legislative branches during the implementation of the Iranian Initiative have been labeled as partisan politicians lacking the interests of the nation.

Strange criticism indeed from the executive branch which was circumvented by the Iranian Initiative. The series of checks and balances established by the American legislative, judicial and executive branches have long been thought strong enough elements to ensure the representation of the American people in the implementation of U.S. policy.

If America refuses to demand a truthful explanation of the Iranian Intitiative because the facts appear tiresome or we sense the impugnity of the executive branch which allowed the Initiative via its own negligence, we have given up our democratic right to have a voice in our own government's decision making.

The Reagan Administration would like nothing better than to convince the American people that what they don't know won't hurt them. If that statement is true however, why not tell us the facts anyway. I would like to know what made a Lieutenant Colonel in the Marines so special he could decide U.S. foreign policy without benefit of discussion on the issues with the executive or the legislative branches?

My friends who are tired of hearing about the Iranian Initiative probably never voted in a Congressional election anyway, so they ought not be concerned that their Congressman, whom they probably could not identify, never had the chance to speak on their behalf concerning this intiative.

Maybe we should start counting on the fact that the Strategic Defensive Initiative won't receive any further funding from Congress due to budgetary restraints. There have not been any Contra indications to that theory. So now is the time to start selling weapons to Iran so we can endorse a policy favoring the Contras that has never been approved by the American people as we build up a cash reserve for work on Star Wars.

I think I will start writing about World War III now because I doubt I will get a chance to once the war is over, unless SDI defies all scientific logic and works as planned by Bonzo's buddy. Happy holidays.

Spotlight

I think his work with the booster club has been tremendous and the staff he put together is probably one of the best here at Stout. It is not going to happen overnight that he is going to turn the program around and from what I have seen in relation to the recruiting that he has done, he will improve his record significantly next year and the following year will even be better and so forth. So we are very happy with the way things came out with Rich's hiring.

STOUTONIA: WHAT CHANGES ARE ANTICIPATED IN STOUT ATHLETIC PROGRAMS RESULTING FROM THE NEW FIELD HOUSE ADDITION?

DR. BOWLUS: The new field house addition will allow greater time for student participation in intramural and recreation activities. That was one of the primary reasons for the addition and is certainly is one of the most important reasons. It will allow students involved in intramurals to be able to take part at a time other than ten o'clock or twelve o'clock at night.

As far as athletics go, the spectator indoor sports will still be held in the present facilities because of the seating. There will not be permanent seating in the new addition, so that will not make any changes there except for the times of practices and the over lapping of practices. We will have difficulty in scheduling to get everybody in there at the proper time.

In the new addition there will be facilities for tennis, track and other practices such as baseball and golf which do not have facilities now. Tennis and track will host their indoor meets instead of where they are held now. There is about 27,000 square feet of open space in the present facility and the new facility will have about 50,000 square feet, it will be a little larger than a football field. It is designed so we can conduct practices for tennis or baseball at the same time as track. That also means we can have four basketball games, or six volleyball games for intramurals at same time and still allow activities to be going on outside the netted area.

STOUTONIA: HOW IS THE WEIGHT TRAINING AREA GOING TO BE AFFECTED?

DR. BOWLUS: The weight training area will be extremely improved. One of the new areas of the building project is the women's locker room, which will still be on the lower level. Above that area will be about 36,000 square feet for a weight area, a portion of it will be for free weights and a portion will be for weight machines.

Until this happens we will still be using the Butler buildings, although they will be relocated at the north end of the football field. We anticipate the women's locker room and the weight area should be completed by December, 1987.

CORRECTION

The article on the International Relations Club annual dinner said incorrectly that Frankie Lam is from Japan when, in fact, he is from Hong Kong.

An article in last week's issue inaccurately reported that the "Women of Stout" calendar was printed with money provided by the Stout chapter of the American Institute of Design and Drafting. Wilbur Beaton sold advertising space in the calendar to pay the initial costs of printing. Also, Wilbur and Frank Beaton were misidentified in the photo. Wilbur is on the left and Frank is on the right.

Seeds of Change

Santa is dead

Gene Emahiser

In my never ending mission to expose myths and teach rock solid truth, I have yet to come up against anything more devastating than Santa Claus.

Santa Claus has become more real in the hearts and minds of this generation than Jesus Christ. This is especially evident during the holiday season. During the Christmas season, you will see and hear more about jolly old Saint Nicholas than the risen savior.

Christ's replacement by Santa can be better exemplified by the muzak and television specials that indoctorinate us each December. I was told of a show this year that featured a boys choir singing some traditional carols. Andy Williams complimented the boys when they had finished saying "Santa Claus appreciates your singing boys. I have heard that he has actually come and stood outside the doors of the church to listen to you boys practice." Heart touching isn't it?

Well the fact of the matter is that Santa Claus, if he ever existed, is dead. Santa does not merit the attention that the world gives him. He never has. In a generation that has supposedly rid itself of myths and other types of weak thinking, I find it odd to still see so much hoopla and hub-bub over a superstitional character.

It would seem more credible that we would spend that time and energy celebrating the birth of a real man. I am speaking of no normal man, however. The birth that we celebrate is of Jesus Christ of Nazereth, the son of the living God. The birth, life, death, and glorious resurrection of Jesus are well documented. In fact, more evidence exists today that Jesus rose from the dead than that George Washington even lived. Jesus is real. Santa is not real, yet we still talk and act every year as though the opposite is true.

This is the time of year when the believers of God should be busy explaining the Christmas story to all those who have yet to hear of the miraculous virgin birth. Much to the contrary, they are out buying Santa coloring books, Santa place mats, and Santa Claus lights and candles. If this sounds like you, repent and fly right this Christmas.

I know that by calling Santa Claus an antichrist, which he is, I will make no new friends. I am not here to win your popularity. I am here to tell it like it is. Santa Claus is part of someone or something's plan to steal the show from Jesus. That is the main objective of any antichrist.

If, after all this, you still choose to make Santa Claus your god this season, you will do so knowingly. To make Santa your god, all you need do is let him take control of your money, time, and mind this season. If Santa becomes your god, be prepared for a let down on January second.

If, however, you choose to make Jesus Christ your God, you must do so with all of your strength, soul, and spirit. Jesus is not interested in any wimps. He never has and never will. If this is too much of a commitment, check out Santa. He doesn't ask for any commitment; he never has and never will.

The choice is yours. Choose to celebrate Santa and make him a god or choose to celebrate Jesus and give honor and glory to the king of kings.

May you experience the presence of God in a new and special way as you celebrate the birth of the son of God.

Rich Brueckner

"When you're down on your knees, the whole world is counting."–Paul Rogers

On November 18, the Stout Student Association drew up a motion to review The Stoutonia and possibly freeze its funding. The motion subsequently failed but the Hollywood version of the story may alarm you:

Myths and monsters--"In Search Of..." cameras seek out the world's mysteries. Today we will go in search of...

We begin at the quiet center of Faber University; Ronald Reagan is discussing press policy with the student body president.

"Now listen, Paul," said Reagan, "I want you to keep a lid on that zoo newspaper of yours."

"Yes, you're right," said Paul, "students have complained about the scarcity of information in the paper and the fact that it still charges campus clubs for ads just like it did when I was editor in chief."

As the discussion ends, "In Search Of..." cameras move on to the next student senate meeting.

Numerous allegations about the paper are being tossed around the floor like: "Well, I talked to a couple of girls on my floor and they said that they, like, never read it, you know."

"It is hereby charged that the paper did, with full intent, remove portions of a letter to the editor to suit its own agenda without signifying the said act with three little dots."

The editor of the paper sat with members of his staff in the gallery. "I'd like to address these charges, if I may," he said to the senate.

"You'll get your chance, smart guy!" snapped the president. This prompted the members of the gallery into coughing fits that sounded uncannily like the slang term for "fellatio."

After order was restored, the charges continued. "It is also charged that the paper has printed articles, so perverted and utterly disgusting, that the charter prevents them from being read here."

A motion to freeze the paper's funding was then tabled for two weeks. The maker of the motion came into the newspaper office and offered to withdraw his motion if the paper would change its letter editing policy to include three little dots.

"Why, that's extortion, isn't it?" asked the editor.

"No, its not," he responded, "just give me what I want and I'll forget the whole thing."

At the big senate meeting, the chair was embarrassed into allowing a newspaper representative speak.

"The point here is not whether we cater to your whims or put three little dots in our letters; we don't.

Rather, is this not an indictment of the freedom of the press from government control? And if this motion is indeed aimed at one of our basic freedoms, is this not a condemnation of liberty itself?

Well I don't know about anyone else, but I'm not going to sit here and listen to you badmouth the United States of America! Gentleman!"

The gallery gave him a standing ovation and began to sing the National Anthem as they followed him out the door.

The "In Search Of..." cameras had failed. Even with their years of experience they were doomed to never see the three little dots.

Student art show displays 'private world'

by J. Dauplaise

Walking into the Upstairs Gallery at Applied Arts on December 8th was like walking into another world; the private world of Roger Daleiden. Daleiden, a studio art major concentrating in Painting, opened his senior show this Monday at 2 p.m. The two hundred people attending the opening were treated to an introspective look at the accumulation of artistic achievements Daleiden has made.

It is obvious to anyone entering the gallery that Daleiden is enamored of the human figure. The sensitive renderings of his subjects transpose to the viewer his appreciation and celebration of the human form.

Daleiden, a senior at Stout, spent two years at UW-Marathon Center, a semester at the Milwaukee Institute of Art and Design, and transferred to UW-Stout as an Industrial Design student. Eventually, however, he realized "after a lot of soul-searching," that he would rather paint than be a designer. "Being a painter is my dream, its what I love to do," said Daleiden. "Art is a chance to operate at your fullest. A lot of people live their lives dying in an office. Art is what keeps artists young at heart and young looking."

Daleiden's first artistic pursuit was in drawing, which he said "lead naturally to painting." In painting , "you can achieve a richness of surface and color," says Daleiden. In figure painting, the paint allows me the sort of expression I want."

Daleiden's studies of the human figure convey his love and appreciation for the human form. In painting his nude figures he says his palette "tends to gravitate towards orange and red." His studies generally begin with an orange ground which creates a middle tone from which to work. The dimensional form is created from the addition of darks and lights to the mid-range orange. "Unity is achieved through cool greens and blues in the shadow areas to balance the intensity of the orange," said Daleiden.

When asked how he first arrived at the figure as a subject, he said he first realized "the potential beauty of the figure..." in his life drawing classes. He has found through his work that the "... logical way to express human emotion is with human images."

Maureen Gasek, a model for several of Daleiden's works, finds his work "wonderful." Gasek explained, "The work just jumps at you. The orange tones he uses are wonderful. You're not just a painted nude when he paints you; you're a piece of art," said Gasek.

Daleiden's intense studies speak for themselves. His paintings mirror the sensitivity of his own observations.

Daleiden plans to obtain his MFA, completing his graduate studies at Bloomington, Indiana. "In the future," said Daleiden, "I'd like to see my work become more expressive, but in keeping with the same compositional ideas."

Roger Daleidon's senior show is currently at the gallery in room 309 Applied Arts. Daleidon's show emphasizes his sensitivity and concern for the human figure. He believes that the logical way to express human emotion is through depicting the human form.

"All The Way Home" a heart rending drama opens today

by James Falkofske

A heart rending drama opens today. The Stout production of All The Way Home opens in the Harvey Hall Auditorium. The play, which is written by Tad Mosel, is based on the Pulitzer Prize winning novel "A Death in the Family."

This deeply emotional show centers on the Follet family. The main cast of characters is Jay (the father), Mary (the mother), and Rufus (the son).

The father is a reformed alcoholic finally piecing his life back together. When the first act opens he is working for his father-in-law's law firm. Jay has a strong commitment to his son Rufus and wife Mary, and he is trying to make the best of times on a limited income.

Mary bears the burden in the family of being the support of her husband while having to deal with bringing a new life into the world. She is deeply concerned that Jay might slip back into an alcoholic stupor, and she desperately hates any jokes about alcohol.

Rufus, the son, tends to be the butt of everyone's teasing. The neighborhood boys tease him about having a colored person's name, and also for not having a cap like the rest of the boys. Because he wants to be liked, he tries to go along with what the rest of the boys tell him. His biggest hope is to get a brand new cap, so that he too can be like the rest of the gang.

> "People should see this show because of the lesson to be learned
> —Matt Landgraf

One of the big conflicts within the play is Jay's relationship with his brother Ralph. Ralph is an alcoholic mortician who tries desperately to show that he is better than his brother. Ralph is obnoxious in what he says and does. He teases Rufus relentlessly for wetting his pants and then goes on to say that his brother is less of a man because he drives an old "tin lizzy" instead of a brand new Chalmers.

Another conflict that has to be resolved concerns what Mary thinks of her husband. Although she loves him very much, she cannot be sure of how he can handle himself when confronted with Ralph. She is scared that Ralph will convince him to start drinking again.

Halfway through the show, the audience meets the rest of the family. They meet together in the Follet house in the second act over a family crisis.

Brenda LaMalfa, a sophomore in fashion merchandising says that the basic plot of the story is, "of two families coming together as one to piece things back together."

A line from the play best describes this when Jay says, "people tend to come away from themselves, and in times of crisis they pull together."

Matt Landgraf, who plays the part of Jay, says that "people should see this show because of the lesson to be learned on what is valuable in our lives."

Nine-year-old Sailin Benedum, who plays the character Rufus says that the show tells everyone "to like other people."

All the Way Home plays December 11, 12, and 13 with curtain time at 8 pm. Tickets can be purchased at the show or by calling the University Theater Box Office at 232-1468.Ticket prices are $1.50 for students and $2 for others.

Tad Mosel's "All the Way Home" is a sensitive drama which will be presented by The University Theatre Dec. 11, 12, 13 at 8 p.m. Cast members Steve Crowley (right: Ralph), and Matt Landgraf (Jay) are shown here in a serious discussion.

Faculty artists show 'true stories' at Furlong gallery

Visitors to the Furlong gallery embarked on their own individual journeys while viewing the enigmatic art of Karen Acker and Kitty Kingston. Both Kingston and Acker are new additions to Stout's art faculty. Their show opened last Tuesday evening at the Furlong gallery and is continuing.

by Jef Maynard

There are five of them, raised to their full height, standing in front of me. They won't say a word but they tell a story.

I brought a story in the doorway of the crowded gallery with me and the five silent ones knew it already. They told a different silent story to everyone in the room but when the people all left and I sat alone with them, they spoke to me and told me the story I brought, in silence.

There were many more windows than doors, yet each window was a door to a different story.

They stood as motionless as unlit lamp posts. When I drew closer, they looked no larger; they had colors. At first, they had no color or life, only shape, then form. They were miracles of life and no one could have predicted their appearance before they came.

From miracles to common stock to miracles, their lives took shape in the mind of their creator. Then from common sticks and mud, their forms grew and populated the empty world, filling the void as no others could.

Legs, a spine, with dry leather skin like raw fired clay and belts that held nothing across the middle. Their bones were steel and their joints stiff like welding.

At their feet, gray triangles of different sizes danced without motion as only a creator, a creation and light can dance together. A great creator can make form from nothing and make light dark, and lines dance on white with no motion.

Facing forward, and facing all time with blindness and bravery, they looked forward and past, past me into themselves. They no longer looked at their creator as creations usually do not, and never looked back. They paid no homage, yet were homage in themselves to themselves and all like them, though there are no others just like them.

When I moved around them to look closer, I couldn't. There was no need or reason for they were telling me the story I brought and I couldn't do anything but listen.

The story would never be finished as long as I could remember and I'll never forget because it was my story. They were not alone and I was called by the others.

They were surrounded but not closely by filament clouds drawn by tight lines to the ceiling sky. Squares of atmosphere patched with foil and string through windows of glass iwth no edges hung by themselves together.

There were many more windows than doors. yet each window was a door to another story. There were more stories than dreams because dreams don't last and stories never die.

Some of the stories that were told were not yet born and lived in eggs in a living cradle until one hatched, escaped and was beaten into a perpetual vegetative state by its father/parent. This was the most important story because a life was given, then taken in a way that

One Point Perspective

Gradual Pursuit

Jean Marie Dauplaise

Have you ever asked yourself, "What am I doing here, in Menomonie, Wisconsin, at the University of Wisconsin Stout?" I have with increasing frequency. Actually, the reason I'm here and not playing roller derby in Toledo, Ohio is that I am trying to graduate. Trying is the key word.

My illustrious habit of changing my major, much to the delight of my parents, has left me with exactly 24 credits which are entirely unnecessary in terms of my graduating. I joyfully tabulated this somewhat depressing fact this evening while reviewing my transcript.

During my short-lived stint as a business major I took a Marriage and Family Relations class. Obviously, some individual greater than myself feels art majors do not need to know anything about marriage or family, since I no longer need to have taken this class according to the requirements of my current major, studio art. The only explanation I can find for this is that because, as an art major, I can barely afford to feed or clothe myself, I couldn't possibly be capable of feeding or clothing one or more additional individuals.

So what about the other twenty one credits now rendered useless as a result of my indecision? While in Graphic Design I needed 7 credits of science. I diligently drilled through the chemical intricasies of the photosynthetic process and memorized the life cycles of 17 different mosses in my Botany class. I am now told that because all of my science credits are in one area, and studio majors must "choose from at least two areas," that a Chemistry or Physics class requires my attention before they'll fit me for a cap and gown. Art education students, on the other hand, need only 6 credits of science in any area to graduate. The only stipulation applying to them is that (one must be a laboratory class.) Why this wide range of diversity within one department? I just don't understand.

Luckily, I am not required to take a logic class. My brother, who attends another university in a different state, does. But he's going to be a lawyer. Unlike my sibling, however, I am unable to extract a reasonable explanation for such questions as, "Why the hell should I take Physics anyway?" I know that gravity works. Isn't that enough?

While lamenting my observations aloud, a transfer student brought to my attention another problem hindering graduation. Apparently, trying to get this school to believe you could actually learn something anywhere else, and receive credit for it is a task involving phenomonal difficulty. For some reason, it is exceedingly difficult to transfer credits from one school to another. I guess what holds water at Whitewater won't hold water at Stout.

If a transfer student is, by chance, lucky enough to have some credits accepted, standard procedure is to reduce the number of credits given. A 5 credit Econ. class from the University of Minnesota, Duluth translates, in Stout language, to 3 credits.

My theory regarding this phenomenon is that this is Stout's way of penalizing a student for not choosing Stout first. Also, it insures that this disillusioned migrant be subject to at least another three years of school, necessitating three years of tuition payments, which in turn increases the University's revenue. A fitting punishment for changing one's chosen path in life, is it not?

I will have attained a small victory against Stout at the end of this semester. Having accumulated 24 credits of Literature, I will be officially deemed an English minor. The English department is the only place I know where they're glad to let you in a class.

I'm sure no one at this university has gotten through unscathed by the ridiculous fact that certain required classes are absolutely impossible to register for unless you've accumulated at least 130 or so credits. Waiting lists are only an amusing pacifying agent which many instructors employ to escape being pelted with wadded up add/drop slips.

My biggest nightmare is walking across the stage, probably sometime after "2010, A Space Odyssey" becomes reality, only to have a bespectacled university official charge up to the podium and announce to the crowd that because it has been discovered that I never took "The Socio-Economic Dilemma of Native Eskimos Now Residing in Saskatchewan," I will be unable to graduate with my class.

Menomonie's children's theater delights audience with folk tale

by Noreen Spraner

The Greenwood Players, Menomonie's own children's theater group, presented its original adaptation of a Russian folk tale, The Amazing Adventures of Ivan the Ninny or Salt, to a packed Mabel Tainter Theater this past weekend.

The show was truly inventive and delightful. Each ensemble player, except Ivan, played two to three different characters. The costumes,primarily created by Menomonie resident Jean Biggs were well-made and colorful. They had the feeling of authentic Russian garb, with a big dash of fancy mixed in. They were a treat to see in themselves, and Biggs deserves a lot of credit for using her imagination so adeptly. The costumes were kept on stage in several gayly painted barrels. The barrels also doubled as props, becoming whatever was needed, such as tables, thrones, even a ship.

It was refreshing to see a folk tale presented in such a way that allowed the audience to use its imagination. The dialogue was not overly simplified for children so that an adult could remain alert throughout the performance. Since props were kept to a minimum, the actors became the focus of attention. They were delightful in their rather broad characterizations of the wicked brothers, the hero, the beautiful princess, the giant, and the well-meaning, but daft parents.

It was a fairy tale, the kind of story that seems to have gone out of style in this age of He-Man, Jem and Gobots. The Greenwood Players try to choose plays in which the central characters solve problems, learn about themselves, and ask questions. In this particular story the central character, Ivan, was able to believe in himself when no one else did. He was able to put seemingly worthless items like rags and salt to good use, proving that the value of things depends on how they are used. This is a good message during the rush of the Christmas season.

This tale will be shown in the public schools through February. The Players will do another story during this time next year, perhaps something from Grimm. I, for one will be looking forward to it.

Christmas Cookies

Denise Cain

Since most of us in college are on a very limited budget, it can be difficult to share in the spirit of giving while not taking out another GSL to finance it. One solution to this problem is to make gifts for all of the people on your list, however, who really has enough time to study for finals let alone getting out the saw and making a shelf.

Some of the more talented students at Stout could perhaps knit those sweaters that look as if they were purchased from Dayton's Oval Room. I am not as gifted with the needle and thread. When I was a Freshman at Stout, I decided to "cross-stitch" my way through Christmas. All I ended up with was size 26 puncture wounds and beatle eyes.

Naturally, my solution to the problem of gift giving deals with cooking. Why not bake all of your friends cookies. Cookies taste great during finals, they can be completed in an afternoon or evening, and they can be moderately inexpensive and easy if you choose the right recipes.

The recipes I selected are relatively simple to create, and the ingredients are also reasonable. When the recipe calls for butter, you can still substitute margarine, or Lammer's sells butter by the stick.

Great Sugar Cookies

1 cup pwd. sugar
1 cup gran. sugar
1 cup margarine
1 cup salad oil
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
4 & 1/2 cups flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. soda
1 tsp. cream of tarter (I find this optional)

Cream the sugars, margarine, and oil until fluffy. Add eggs and vanilla. Add remaining ingredients. Chill dough until firm. Roll into small balls and then roll in granulated sugar. Place on ungreased cookie sheet and press down with a glass bottom that has been dipped in sugar. Bake in 375-degree oven for 12 minutes until very light brown. Do not overbake. Feel free to decorate or frost in any manner.

Thumprint Cookies

1/2 cup margarine
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup brown sugar
2 egg yolks
1 tsp. vanilla
2 cups flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup chopped nuts

Mix the and sugar until fluffy, add eggs and vanilla. Combine the flour and salt and add to the creamed mixture. Form into small balls and dip into slightly beaten egg white and then dip into chopped nuts. Place on cookie sheet and bake in a 375-degree for 5 minutes. Remove from oven and poke your finger in the center of each cookie. Return to the oven and bake for 5 more minutes or until just lightly browned. Cool the cookies on waxed paper.

Spontaneous Combustion

4-Play on 4-Track

James 'Unk' Falkofske

First off, Happy Holidays everyone. With snow on the ground and finals drawing near, I felt that I should wish you well before I forget! For any of you who have followed this column closely (heaven forbid), you will see that many articles are about the professional side of music. I would like to take an opportunity to explain the reason for this.

While many people can listen to and enjoy music on the radio, there are many steps between the time that a song is first envisioned and the time WVSS plays it for campus listeners. Many times, listeners cannot appreciate the complicated process of releasing an album. I want to help educate these people to further appreciate the music they listen to.

Some questions that deserve your attention are: 1) what is the future of the record industry; will CD's take over the home audio market? 2) if record censorship comes about (placing warning stickers on albums that may be offensive) who will determine which records will be censored? 3) why aren't there many all-female groups in pop music, and is this a sort of prejudice or discrimination towards women in music? Well, you have something to think about over Christmas break; and now on with today's episode!

Once upon a time there was only mono recording. Musicians were pleased to be preserved, but were dissatisfied that every song had to be exactly right on the first "take." Since most musicians were only human, many "takes" were necessary to get the entire song correct.

After some later time, two track recording was invented. Musicians saw that this was good, since now it was possible for them to record a song in a stereo image (left and right as opposed to just center). But still, the instrumentation had to be correct throughout the entire song, or fate would have it that the recording would have to redone.

Soon to follow was four track recording. Instead of all instruments being recorded together, now instruments could have separate channels. Musicians were overwhelmed. The rhythm section took one track, the lead vocals a second, the backup vocals a third, and musical leads the last. If someone made a mistake, only his/her track would have to be redone. All of this was then "mastered" down onto a one or two track recorder. Salvation had come for the lowly artist.

Then the Doors and Led Zeppelin were born, but that, my friends is another story.

For many years, only professional musicians could afford to have recording studios in their homes. Until five years ago, a multi-track portable recording studio was only affordable by the elite crowd who could invest the thousands of dollars necessary for such equipment. Since then, many portable studios have come about.

The price for porta-studios has dropped to three digits. Many porta-studios can be had for less than five hundred dollars. While these porta-studios only furnish the musician with four tracks, it should be remembered that all the early songs of the Beatles and Buddy Holly were completed on just four tracks. Even with limited resources (a four track machine) great music could be readily produced.

Now rock stars and music students can both enjoy the benefits of cassette multi-tracking. While rock stars can get their ideas down about new material, the musical student can prepare a demo tape without spending hundreds of dollars for studio time (rental). But these are not the only possibilities.

With a cassette multi-track, business managers can produce sound-synched slide presentations. Small rock bands can record practice sessions to see what parts (or people) need improving. DJ's can use a multi-track machine to prepare a tape of "greatest hits" for parties or dances. This list of possibilities goes on and on.

Since the four tracks on a regular cassette are the same four tracks used on a multi-track, the sound quality can become as good as a store bought tape. Dolby or dbx is added to most machines for noise reduction. The price of such equipment can be balanced off against the cost of professional recording studio time (between $20 and $200 an hour).

With prices continuing to drop, soon Santa might bring porta-studios to young musicians on a more regular basis. It is only a matter of time before any aspiring young musician can become his own "Juke Box Hero."

could only seem so much more wrong than if it had never been given at all.

The story lived. It lived a full life like a butterfly lives a full life during one short, hot and stomy summer and takes eternal wing on the cheap chrome grill of a car it can't name or see, maybe a Nova or a Vista Cruiser, but probably a Rambler or a Sportabout. It was a vehicle to a bad place and a sad story.

When I finally realized that all the stories were forever untold in the dark, total differently to each new deaf viewer and watched over by the three with eye, I knew it was time to leave. Others would have to hear their own tales if any of this was to have any meaning.

All the stories can't be told to you and you will only hear mine as yours unless you tell one for yourself.

The true stories are waiting for you, for your telling in the art of Kitty Kingston and Karen Acker, Furlong Gallery, weekdays.

Only when your silence is unbroken can the truth ever knowingly be spoken.

Slave Raider proved last Thursday that live music can make a better impression on a reviewer-or any listener for that matter-than an album. Slave Raider rocked the largest CMP turnout this year.

Slave Raider wildly rocks stage in defiance of a negative review

by Jef Maynard

"Can you print this?" (hand gesture not included), - - Chainsaw Caine. Not without a photo, and not in a family newspaper. (So I guess Slave Raider didn't like my review of their new album in The Stoutonia last week.)

It is difficult to get a good interview when no one will talk to you. But like old Hank Pank and Aerosmith say, "Let the music do the talkin'." When the Twin Cities' premier heavy metal band, Slave Raider, played the Great Hall last Thursday, they did just that.

After checking out the stage and the hall before the show, the lead singer, Chainsaw Caine, went backstage to read the not-so-flattering album review. I had the feeling he was not going to like it.

"He wrote it," said a member of CMP, pointing a finger at me. He seemed like the kind of kid who would pay to see a hanging on a rainy day.

During the interview, or should I say, mutual interrogation that followed, an irate Slave Raider fan joined in and started cursing the author of the review with choice expletives. "Who is this guy to tell me what kind of music I should like? As soon as I find out who he is, I'm going to call him up and tell that sucker what he can do with his paper."

I couldn't resist. "Damn right," I said, "when you find out who that guy is, you call him and tell him what you think."

At this, Chainsaw looked at me and laughed. "You're a nut case, aren't you. He doesn't know you wrote this does he?" "Nope," I said, "but you're going to tell him aren't you." "Yep, you deserve all the credit you've got coming."

During the ensuing argument, Chainsaw slipped away. Although putting a gag-order on the rest of the band, he did, reluctantly but without any undue animosity, answer my questions.

> "So I guess Slave Raider didn't like my review"

He explained that the band was put together by himself and current manager Randy Schwoerer, from musicians around the country. Slave Raider has been together for two years and two months.

The album sales have been exceptional. As far as he was aware, records were selling in excess of 3500 copies since its release on Halloween. "We've had stores reorder five and six times already. I've heard we're like third on requests at KQRS, which is unheard of for a local band." A video is in the works, as well.

Hanging around backstage before the show was a memorable experience — cold stares from some hot rockers in warpaint.

At one after 9:09, the largest crowd at any CMP event this year was treated to rock & roll at its best. Led Zeppelin's classic "Rock and Roll" was first. This tune, for most bands that play it, is a climax, a showstopper. Slave Raider uses it to warm-up.

The next tune was heavy metal locomotion with that big beat, "Train Keeps A-movin'" from the real A-Train, Perry and Tyler's Aerosmith.

Not long into the set, Slave Raider did up another classic tune, "Oh Well" from Fleetwood Mac played with rock moxy and sung by the bass player, Letitia Rae. She added a word or two of her own to the lyrics to let you know a real sweet little kitten she ain't.

This band has stage presence, charming, disarming, crazed or intimidating, to suit. The word "histrionic" doesn't fit, the word "wild" might. I can't remember seeing an audience worked with such ease.

For me, there was a special kick in watching Lance Sabin on guitar. He was out of action for several months due to a bad back injury when I saw the band in the Twin Cities, and he is still cautious on stage. But his attitude is something different.

Lance is a maniac and has a good time at it. He is always laughing and gesturing at the crowd. It is a strange and personal contact, not just theatrics. I was "shot" by his high-powered guitar during the first song. Just another little "thank you for the swell review."

Slave Raider has a personal contact with the audience in general. During the Alice Cooper tune, "No More Mr. Nice Guy," there is a line that goes something like, "I've got no friends 'cuz they read the paper, they can't be seen with me..." Chainsaw looked at me and held up an imaginary newspaper. Just another thank-you.

The Led Zeppelin chain of hits was fabulous music that shook me all night long. Vocal effects were crafted by the sound crew and added much to the tunes which included "Good Times, Bad Times," "Ramble On," "Whole Lotta Love," "The Ocean," and "Moby Dick."

Their originals had a powerful presence. My personal favorite, "The Black Hole," was deeper and blacker than any album version could hope to be.

The highlight of the show for me, besides the good-natured personal abuse, was Letitia's bass solo during "Wild Thing." This solo was twice as long and twice as hot as what I had seen. The added treat of having her do it right in front of me, with a "take that!" look and gesture when she finished made it all the more entertaining.

Guitars are rock & roll and Slave Raider can boast about theirs. Nikki Wikkid plays a screaming guitar and has a look that can kill. Lance Sabin plays guitar leads one-handed or behind his head when he wants a good laugh. His axe leads a rough life on stage. A lot of cosmetic, theatrical bands make up for mediocre musical skills by putting on a circus show. Slave Raider has the musical talent in abundance.

The drummer, known as The Rock, is as steady as the name suggests. His solo was clean, hot science and percussion magic. At one point, he plays with his hands, and the move from sticks to hands to sticks is flawless timing.

There is not much more you could ask from a live band. They have a wildman for a lead singer, and all the looks and musical skills to take them to the top of a tough and competitive business.

The best judge of a Stout reaction to a band is whether or not they head for the bars during the breaks, never to return. People stayed. The Stout crowd might head to the bars another night, a lot of them will head for a club with the sign out front, "Slave Raider Tonight."

Slave Raider proved to be a serious rock band. The band performed material from, Led Zepplin, Alice Cooper, Fleetwood Mac, and many other metal favorites. This band not only looks tough they are tough.

Victories help cagers stay unbeaten at 7-0

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout Men's Basketball team improved their record this week to 2-0 in conference and 7-0 overall. The Blue Devils kept their undefeated status by beating Mount Senario 75-51, Viterbo College 69-51, UW-La Crosse 64-60, UW-Superior 93-59, and St. Scholastica 73-59.

Stout will go on the road starting with UW-Eau Claire on Saturday, December 13. Then the Blue Devils will come home for the Red Cedar Classic on Friday, December 19 & Saturday 20.

The Blue Devils continued their winning streak as they faced Mount Senario on December 2 at home. In this game Stout opened up with a strong offensive attack scoring the first five points of the game. They proceeded throughout the game by scoring in spurts of six and eight points to easily win by the score of 75-51. Lead by Lou Forrest who had 18 in the scoring department, followed by Ron Hunter and Rick Wynveen who each added 12 the Blue Devils easily won.

Stout's next opponent was Viterbo College. This game that was played on December 3, and with a much different tempo. The game began the same, with Stout scorers gaining a lead right away. The lead began at eight and gradually increased to thirteen. It appeared to be another easy Stout victory. Then in the last four minutes of the half Viterbo out scored Stout with a 11-4 spurt. This ended the halftime scoring, leaving Stout with a 34-30 lead.

The game remained close until the seven minute mark. This is the point where Stout's offense exploded and defense prevailed. Stout out scored Viterbo 18-3 in the final seven minutes of the game. This gave Stout a 69-51 victory. Leading the scoring for the Blue Devils was John Patterson with 21, Tom Gomolak added 19, and Ron Hunter with 15.

Stout then played it's first conference game against La Crosse at La Crosse. This game could easily be described as one of hot and cold. In the first half Stout was hot, out scoring La Crosse by the score of 37-18.

The second half was just the opposite, Stout was cold and fans that Brain Ellingson's quote of:," We are going to be an awesome team this year," is proving to be true.

The last game Stout won was on the road at St. Scholastica. This 73-59 win was due to the awesome play of Tom gomolak. Gomolak lead Stout with 26 points and 15 rebounds, eight offensive and seven defensive. Rod Hunter followed Gomolak with 18 points of his own.

These past five games have hopefully given Stout fans the outlook of what the season is to bring for our Blue Devils. When asked about chances for the conference players were reluctant to make any predictions. David Sandstrom on the other hand did say," If we have as good as a game as we did tonight (against Superior) we will have a good season."

A good season looks in store for the Blue Devils. But the true test will be on Saturday when Stout faces UW-Eau Claire. Ron Hunter said," If we can play and do what we do best we can win there."Winning in Eau Claire has been tough to do especially since this year Eau Claire has been predicted to do very well in the WSUC. Saturday we will find out if this is truly an awesome team.

Lady hoopsters show improvement despite losses

by Paul Emerson

After opening the season with two losses on the road, the UW-Stout women's basketball team came home to the friendly confines of the Johnson Fieldhouse last Friday night.

The opposition, however, proved to be not quite as friendly as the Lady Blue Devils may have found the fieldhouse to be. St. Norbert's, an NCAA Division II women's basketball power last year (ranked 20th nationally), started quickly and literally ran over the Lady Blue Devils, winning the game 73-41.

Although losing the game by a 32-point margin, Coach Lynda Lee was still pleased with the improvement she is seeing in the team, noting that last year they lost to St. Norbert's by 47 points, 104-57.

Senior Patti Cook led Stout in scoring with 10 points while freshman Jacki Gilbert played very well, scoring 8 points, grabbing 10 rebounds and blocking 5 shots in 37 minutes.

The offense was slowed somewhat by having to go without the services of Junior Renee Kasten, who ran into foul trouble, spent a lot of the game on the bench and fouled out after just 14 minutes of total playing time. Still, Kasten managed 6 points and 8 rebounds.

Freshman Maarja Aalgaard chipped in 6 points while sophomore point guard Sara Zoll grabbed 5 rebounds and had 3 steals.

Stout shot 33 percent from the floor, hitting 18 of 54 field goals, and made 5 of 8 free throws in the game (63 percent). St. Norbert's got off 82 shots, connecting on 32 of them, for 39 percent and made 9 of 13 free throws (69 percent). They were led in scoring by Lisa Bruss and Joan Watcka with 14 points each.

Stout outrebounded St. Norbert's by a 48-43 margin, but was once again plagued by turnovers, committing 34 miscues to 21 by St. Norbert's.

On Monday, the UW-Superior Lady Yellowjackets came to town for the WWIAC conference opener for both teams. (The WWIAC is the women's version of the men's WSUC.)

For the entire first half and 12 minutes of the second, Stout used a quick and stingy man-to-man defense that gave Superior all they could handle. Superior, however, then used clutch free throws down the stretch en route to defeating the Lady Devils by a 64-50 final score.

Relying mainly on their defense, Stout took its biggest lead in the game at 22-16 with six minutes left in the first half. Superior then went on to outscore the Lady Devil's 14-6 to lead at the half, 30-26.

Superior held leads of 4 to 6 points in the second half until a basket by Kasten at the 8-minute mark brought Stout within two at 42-40. That is where the frustration began for Stout, as they just couldn't get over the hump.

Kasten, who led the team in scoring with 16 points and 16 rebounds, fouled out with 4:37 to go in the game with Superior leading 47-42.

Stout was forced to foul down the stretch and Superior cashed in at the charity stripe to take their biggest lead of the game in the final minute at 64-48. A basket with two seconds left by Stout rounded out the scoring.

Coach Lee stated that, "Our defense was tough, but our zone defense proved to be ineffective so we had to go man-to-man almost the whole game."

Playing that aggressively for that long can take its toll, but according to Lee, "It was the turnovers that killed us. They kept us from getting over the hump."

After Kasten, Jackie Gilbert scored 12 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in 37 minutes. Patti Cook had 11 points and dished out 5 assists while Freshman Justine Becker chipped in 5 points.

Superior's Beth Clark led all scorers with 18 points. For the game Superior shot 39 percent from the floor, hitting 24 of 56 shots and 16 of 24 free throws for 67 percent. Stout hit 21 of 50 shots (41 percent) and 8 of 13 free throws (62 percent).

Stout was again plagued by turnovers. They committed 35 to just 17 by Superior.

Superior Coach Dr. Roger Prescott praised the play of the Lady Blue Devils, stating, "Stout has really improved. They really hustled. The wins will come with all the hard work, but hopefully not at our place."

Stout travels to UW-La Crosse on Friday for a 7 p.m. contest. Lee stated that, "Last year we lost to La Crosse 104-55. They will again be tough this year. They are a fast breaking team and are quick all around."

Tight Rope

Searching for Excellence

Paul Wydeven

When I first became the Sports Editor at the Stoutonia, I promised my self that I would write excellent articles that would really drive a point across to the readers. Now that I am graduating, I looked back and saw unfortunately this was not the case. I sometimes hurried an article or did not have the facts straight and blew an occasional article.

This being my last column, I would like to share some of the reasons people or organizations come up short from being excellent. But before talking about excellence, one first has to define excellence. Webster's Dictionary defines excellence as "1: the quality of being excellent." and "2: an excellent or valuable quality."

This definition was based on the word excellent. So to define this word I again looked to Webster's, which defined excellent as "very good of its kind."

Accepting this definition, I thought where could one find the valuable qualities or the very good things at Stout. The best quality of Stout in my opinion is the people weather they be the students, faculty, or the staff. I learned more from these people than I learned in classes.

Another place to find excellence is in the Stout athletic programs. In general people think these teams are mediocre at best. However, this is not the case, Stout is not that large of a university as compared to the size of most of the other university's in the Wisconsin system.

For example, Stout's size of about 7,500 compared to UW-Eau Claire's 11,000 means Eau Claire has almost three people for every two people at Stout. For the sport programs mean it is likely that there in Eau Claire there is three athletes for every two at Stout, so Eau Claire would definitely have a better selection of athletes.

The football team did not improve their record over last year. But they lost their games because of mistakes and not simply being manhandled by the other team. Next year this team hopefully not make those mistake and have a much improved record.

The men's basketball is really hot this season starting out with a 7-0 record overall. The only thing missing so far for this team is what Coach Dewey Mintz would say is the sixth man or the crowd.

The history of the basketball team can not be comprehended. Back in the mid-sixties and mid-seventies the field house would be packed. There was temporary seating at the ends of the basketball court and people were still lucky to get a seat. Everybody knew about the basketball game.

Now the team is again achieving excellence, but they are still missing the sixth man. To let you people know what you are missing, the last thing I plan to do before I go is to write an article on this team and the past teams, but you will not see this until January, 22 of next year.

I am doing this for several reasons. One I would like to help my successor Cos Whitten get a good start on her first paper. The other reason is to know I left my position as Sports Editor writing a very good or I should say an "excellent" article.

Swimmers face tough competition to prepare for conference relays

by Mike Roberson

The UW-Stout swim team entered last weekend's quadrangular meet with the intention of testing out some hopeful swimmers against upcoming competition. This meet was not one that was scored in the usual team point standings, however the times taken and places finished were enough to give Coach John Miller an idea of how well his team can do. The teams who opposed Stout in this meet were Iowa, Northern Iowa, UW-Madison and UW-La Crosse.

Overall Coach Miller was pleased with the team's performance. He feels that overall Stout beat La Crosse with several of their best times. This suggests that Stout will do very well in the conference relays this coming weekend. Coach Miller stated, "Overall I am quite pleased with the team's progress and we are right on schedule."

If right on schedule refers to Mark Kukuzke's or Lara Perkin's performances, then the team's outlook appears to be quite good. Mark Kukuzke, who placed fourth in the 100-meter backstroke with a time of 59.25 seconds, seventh in the 1650-meter freestlye with a time of 17 minutes, 47.16 seconds, fourteenth in the 500-meter freestyle with a time of 5:06.37 and fourteenth in the 50-meter freestlye with a time of 23.18, is credited with having a very good meet, especially considering who Stout faced in this meet.

Lara Perkins also turned in an outstanding performance, placing seventh in the 100-meter breaststroke with a time of 1:16.80, seventh in the 200-meter breaststroke with a time of 2:45.35, ninth in the 100-meter butterfly with a time of 1:10.31, eleventh in the 100-meter freestlye with a time of 58.54, and fourteenth in the 50 freestlye with a time of 26.84,

Other top performances were in the women's relay teams, who all qualified for the nationals. In addition to this there were some top individual places. In the women's 100 backstroke Wendy Heineke placed fourth with a time of 1:04.08, followed by another Stout swimmer, Stefani Brynstad, with a time of 1:10.21. In the 100 and 200 freestlye Jacki Gilbert placed seventh and thirteenth respectively with times of 58.17 and 2:05.28. In the 100 butterfly Lori Potter placed eighth with a time of 1:09.20. In the 200-meter backstroke Wendy Heineke placed fourth with a time of 2:21.38.

In the 100 freestlye Stu Boese and Kurt Siebert tied for nineteenth with a time of 52.11. Boese also placed sixteenth in the 200-meter indivual relay with a time of 2:09.91. Finally, in the 100 butterfly, Steve Kostrova placed eighth with a time of 54.99.

Gymnasts enthusiastic for upcoming session

by Cosmas A. Whitten

The 1986-87 UW-Stout women's gymnastics team opens their season with a meet against UW-La Crosse at 1 p.m. on Saturday in La Crosse.

"This year's squad is more energetic, more enthusiastic, more talented and more goal-oriented," said Head Gymnastics Coach John Zuerlein.

The gymnasts are psyched up for their first meet. Having practiced at least five days a week since the first week of September, their moves and routines are ready for competition.

One of the team captains, Tammy Dennis, said, "I think that we are going to see a lot of exciting things happen this year."

"Those gymnasts who stuck with us from last year are doing some impressive things in improving both in difficulty and consistency," Coach Zuerlein said.

Returning gymnasts are Seniors Tammy Dennis and Cosmas Whitten, Juniors Nancy Schlener and Debbie Schultz and Sophomores Kim Nelson, Patty Offenbaucher, Carolyn Bjerke and Patti Reonitz.

"The new recruits are a welcome addition. New personalities add a lot to the practices, especially since they are bubbly, energetic and much more aggressive then we observed in last year's recruits." said Coach Zuerlein.

New freshman recruits are Michelle Scott, Kelly Kramer, Meredith Basinger and Jodi Schaefer.

Coach Zuerlein is assisted by Kay Carter and former Stout gymnasts Scott Gay and Lisa Hille.

Coach Zuerlein sees great potential in this year's team. "I think we are about a year away from the type of team we had back in 1984 and 85, and that's a nice thing to look forward to," added Zuerlein.

The 1985 gymnastics team placed fourth in the NCGA national meet.

In conclusion Coach Zuerlein added, "I'm happy with this team and with the individuals on it. They are fun to work with and seem determined to raise their level of skill and knowledge about the great sport of gymnastics."

Wrestlers defeated by Augsburg, 30-6

by Slash La Freniere

Thursday, Dec. 4, the UW-Stout wrestling team was defeated 39-6 by Augsburg College form Minneapolis, Minn. When asked abou the meet, Wrestling Coach Mike Early said, "Augsburg just plain outmanned us."

The Stout wrestlers were up against a school that recuits wrestlers and does offer financial support to it's athletes. UW-Stout does not have this luxury.

Individual results from that meet were as follows. At 118 lbs. Scott Fraser was defeated by a score of 3-11. At 126 lbs. Julius Shockley was defeated 5-8. At 134 lbs. Kevin Burback lost by a fall. At 142 lbs. Bruce English won by a 8-5 decision. At 150 lbs. Jon Auer lost by a fall. At 158 lbs. Eric Eggstad was defeated 3-17. At 167 lbs. Wayne Hendrickson won by a 10-8 decision. At 177 lbs. Steve Smith was defeated 9-16. At 190 lbs. Jon Dworak lost by a fall. In the Heavyweight division, Rich Rupp lost by a fall.

Freshman wrestler Bruce English, who defeated his opponent in the 142 lbs. weight class said, "I was wrestling for the win and I was very conservative." Also performing very well recently is Wayne Hendrickson, who won against Augsburg and in the open meet in River Falls.

The Stout wrestling squad competed in the UW-River Falls open meet Saturday, Dec. 6. An open meet is one in which many teams gather together and compete for overall standings. Coach Early said that the results of the open meet left them with a hopefull outlook.

With 32 wrestlers competing in each weight class, the results that were turned in by the Stout team were impressive. Wayne Hendrickson was first overall in the 167 lbs. class. Bruce English was seventh overall at 134 lbs. Eric Eggstad was seventh in the 158 lbs. category. Steve Smith was seventh in the 177 lbs. category, and Larry Grein was eighth overal in the Heavyweight division.

The next home meet for the Stout wrestlers will be on Tuesday, December 16 against UW-Superior at 7 p.m. in Johnson Fieldhouse. Prior to that home meet, the Stout wrestlers will be very busy with three meets on the road in between. They will travel to UW-River Falls, St. Johns College, and to St. Cloud State University before finally returning home to compete against UW-Superior.

Admission to all wrestling meets is free and the Stout wrestlers would like to invite all of those fans interested in seeing them compete to join them on Tuesday, December 16, at 7 p.m. in the Johnson Fieldhouse.

Wayne Hendriekson Jr. won first overall in the 167 pound class. Hendrickson won this match with a 10-8 decision. The Stout wrestlers were manhandled by Augsburg college, but Augsburg is a college which offers financial support to it's athletes.

Two members of the Power Club qualify to compete in Collegiate Nationals to be held in April

by Cosmas A. Whitten

Dave Henry and Rob Ciaciura, members of the UW Stout Power Club took first place for their division in the State Drug Free Powerlifting Championship held Sunday, Dec. 6 in Osh Kosh, Wis.

All participants of the State Drug Free Powerlifting Championships were tested for drugs such as steriods and amphetamines on the day of the meet.

...the work you do to prepare finally adds up to something
—Dave Henry

Sophmore Dave Henry took first place in the 181 pound class. Henry also won the best lifter award.

"I felt real good about it, I wasn't expecting it. It's good to know all the work you do to prepare finally adds up to something," said Henry.

Henry made all his opening attempts, 575 pounds in the squat, benched 650 pounds, and dead lifted 535 pounds.

Henrys final lifts totaled 1530 pounds with a sqaut of 600 pounds, bench press of 380 pounds and a 550 pound dead lift.

Senior Rob Ciaciura competed at 165 pound class. He completed all three of his opening attempts but was called on the depth for two of them. Ciaciura's qualifing opening attempt was a 580 pound squat.

Ciaciuras final lifts were 580 pounds in the squat, 275 pound bench pess and a 550 pound dead lift for a 1405 pound total.

Even though Ciaciura took first he was not totally satisfied, "I was expecting to do better," commented Ciaciura

Both powerlifters qualified for the Collegiate Nationals to be held in April.

Henry and Ciaciura perpare for competition by lifting two hours a day, three days a week. They put themselves on a 14 week lifting cycle designed to bring our their maximum lifts on the day of the meet.

To prepare for Collegiate Nationals both powerlifters plan to train the same way they did for Sundays meet.

"I'll take Christmas off and start when I get back to school," said Ciaciura.

therefore watched La Crosse out score them 42-27. Luckily Stout was shooting just well enough to win the game 64-60. Leading scorers for Stout was Tom Gomolak with 19, followed by Ron Hunter and Brain Ellingson who each added 11.

Stout hosted UW-Superior on Monday for their second conference match. Stout seemed to have little difficulty in their second conference win. From the opening tip-off to the closing minutes Stout showed complete domination. In the first few minutes Stout quickly gained a 8-0 lead. From then on Stout gradually built the lead up to fifteen to end the scoring for the half, giving the Blue Devils a lead of 48-33.

The second half was more of the same. Stout scored the first five points of the half and continually increased their lead from then on. The final five and one half minutes was quite exciting for Stout fans. Stout went on a scoring streak of 22-8 in those closing minutes. Many of the fans enjoyed such fine plays as the three pointers by Lou Forrest and slam dunks from John Auer and David Sandstrom. When it was over, Stout had a 93-59 victory. Leading the scoring for Stout was David Sandstrom with 21, Lou Forrest with 18 and Tom Gomolak with 17.

When asked about the team's outlook this season, Brian Ellington said, "We are going to be an awesome team this year." After Monday's game many Stout fans may believe him. When asked about their chances in the conference, players were reluctant to make any predictions. David Sandstrom said, "If we have as good as a game as we did tonight [against Superior], we will have a good season."

A good season looks to be in store for the Blue Devils. But the true test will be on Saturday when Stout faces UW-Eau Claire. Ron Hunter said, "If we can play and do what we do best, we can win there." Winning in Eau Claire has been tough to do in the past and probably won't be any easier this year.

WHEN IS THE RIGHT TIME TO CALL YOUR BOYFRIEND?

a) When the president of Phi Gamma Delta asks you to Saturday night's Fiji Formal.

b) After raquetball class, to tell him that the instructor with the Australian accent and those blue eyes did wonders for your serve.

c) When you just feel like telling him you miss him after all.

Maybe you shouldn't tell him everything that's going on. But if you still care about him, why not call and whisper some sweet things he'll never forget?

Like why you call using AT&T Long Distance Service, and why you trust AT&T's high quality service and exceptional value.

When you tell him that AT&T gives you immediate credit if you dial a wrong number, he won't be able to get you out of his mind.

And telling him you can count on AT&T for clear, long distance connections will drive him crazy.

All of which will probably inspire him to drive out for the weekend, giving you an excuse to blow off that silly frat party after all.

The right choice.

Students enter race for council

by Jill Huppert

Three UW-Stout students running for Menomonie City Council are relying on student support to get elected.

Franz Kniesz, James Falkoske, and Paul Kniesz are city council candidates for wards IV, V, and VII, respectively.

This election is the first in which city council candidates will be elected by wards, rather than being elected from the city at large.

This change from the previous method is one of the reasons Falkoske said that he decided to run.

Because their wards are mainly populated by students, with student support, Falkofske said that the student candidates feel they have a good chance of getting elected.

The city council election will be held on April 7.

Franz Kniesz, whose ward includes Antrim-Froggatt and JTC residence halls, expects some support from the community, but, he said, students will have to get out and vote.

James Falkoske, a lifelong resident of the Menomonie area, will be campaigning to represent the smallest of the eleven city wards, which includes South Hall and an area near the Dairy Queen.

Falkoske, an active member of the Stout Student Association (SSA), said he has a strong interest in city government.

"I would like to get more student opinion into law-making," Falkofske said.

More development in the area of tenant rights and encouraging businesses to locate in Menomonie are issues Falkoske is particularly interested in.

Falkoske said he would like to work with the council to welcome industry into the area.

"This would bring more job opportunities for students," Falkofske said.

Paul Kniesz will be without opposition in Ward VII, which includes CKTO and HKMC residence halls.

Also active in SSA, Paul Kneisz believes students should be more involved in politics.

"Politicians don't listen to students because the majority of students don't vote," Kniesz said.

As a member of city council, Paul Kniesz said he could bridge the gap between students and politicians.

If elected to city council, Paul Kniesz would like to work to get traffic lights at the intersection of 13th Avenue and Broadway. He said he is also interested in bringing more tourism into the Menomonie area.

The three candidates are considering working together on a fundraiser to help with campaign expenses, according to Paul Kniesz.

The SSA may also help the candidates by organizing voter registration.

Students contribute to Jill Weber Fund—

A $2,700 check was presented recently by the UW-Stout Chapter of Hotel Sales & Marketing Association to the Maple Hills 4-H Club, custodians of the Jill Weber Transplant Fund. The club raised the funds last December by sponsoring its 11th annual Dirt Cheap Auction. Participating in the check exchange were, front, from left, Darien Schaefer, vice president; Cindi Werner, Deanna Hofacker, Jackie Pickerign and Pat Pickerign, club representatives; Jodi Innis, president; Nancy Johnson, auction chairperson; Thomas Roth, secretary; and Sandy Varva, treasurer.

Afghan cease fire fails

The official radio station of Afghanistan's communist government reported Tuesday that 60 people had been killed or wounded, revealing that the nearly week long unilateral ceasefire declared by the government was not working.

Fighting between Moslem guerillas and the Soviet-backed government continues, with an estimated 115,000 Soviet forces helping to fight the insurgency.

Soviet forces entered Afghanistan in December 1979.

Defense phone use inappropriate

Millions of dollars per year in long-distance phone calls have been dialed by employees of the Defense Department for personal reasons, according to a 37-page internal audit report.

"The audit," said the report, "showed that the use of Department of Defense (DOD) telephones for purposes other than what could be clearly termed 'official' is a fairly common practice."

"The volume of unofficial calls and the inconsistencies noted in telephone-control measures were due," the report continued, "to the absence of a DOD-wide policy to govern the use and control of official telephones."

Divine call claimed in murder

A Milwaukee man admitted murdering his wife and two children on Monday, saying that God told him to kill them and that the devil told him not to.

Keith R. Kalota, 28, was charged Tuesday with three counts of first-degree murder in the stabbing deaths.

Kalota's wife, Debra, suffered 24 stab wounds, the autopsy showed. Autopsies of the two children, Constance, 4, and Jacob, 2, were scheduled for late Tuesday.

Kalota has been ordered to undergo psychological and psychiatric testing to establish whether he is competent to stand trial for the slayings.

Returning to the fun—
Many students had the pleasure of adding more classes during the first week of the semester. Among the students enthusiastically engaged in this activity were Cathy Fideldy, left, and Tom Anderson, right. Other fun things for students to do on returning to school were pleading for overloads and dropping courses that did not live up to the students' expectations.

UW-Stout hosts United Council

by Catherine Schnieder

The student lobbying and informational corporation for the UW-System will be holding its January meeting at UW-Stout this weekend.

The open meeting of the UW Student Governments (UC) will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday, January 23 in the Crystal Ballroom of the Student Center. They will continue on Saturday at 9:30 a.m. in the Menomonie High School.

An increase in the mandatory refundable fee which is charged to students for UC membership will be one of the issues debated at the upcoming meeting, according to Paul D. Nelson, president of the Stout Student Association (SSA).

UC activities and pay for its staff are funded through this fee.

Each UW campus holds a referendum every two years to determine if the students wish to remain members. If so, each student pays a mandatory fee of 50 cents per semester. Any student who objects to the fee may have it refunded by mail.

At the upcoming meeting, a request to raise this fee will be discussed during the meeting of the Presidents' committee.

A proposal to begin taxing the part-time and summer students will also be debated.

The Students Taking Action Against Rape (STAAR) program will also be on this weekend's agenda. STAAR is a peer counseling program designed to involve students in preventing rape and counseling victims.

A proposal placing new restrictive guidelines on student government spending will also be discussed this weekend.

The proposal would establish new spending guidelines for student governments. These guidelines would be based upon the spending of other UW campuses.

SSA President Nelson has opposed the guidelines.

"The student governments should be able to spend their funds

Sentencing set for convicted Texas man

by Tracy Lea Landis

Sentencing for a Texas man found guilty in the murder of UW-Stout student five years ago has been set for Feb. 12.

Michael D. Neubauer was found guilty of homicide by negligent use of a vehicle on Dec. 9, after about eight hours of deliberation by a jury.

The maximum penalty for this charge is two years imprisonment and/or a $10,000 fine. Neubauer is free on a $100,000 bond.

Neubauer was charged with the first degree murder of Sani Tela,a Nigerian student at Stout, on June 19, 1982.

Neubauer was convicted for running over Tela in the alley behind the Den Bar in Menomonie after a confrontation with him earlier in the Den.

City Council approves rent credit for tenants' security deposits

by Karen Smith

UW-Stout students in Menomonie will begin receiving a 5 percent annual return on the security deposits they hand over to their landlords.

The return will come in the form of a credit on the last month's rent of each lease period.

In addition, landlords may not demand a security deposit larger than one month's rent.

These provisions are included in an ordinance the City Council adopted Tuesday night by an overwhelming voice vote.

John Lee, Stout Student Association (SSA) Landlord Tenant Representative, organized a move to push for passage of the ordinance.

"All the time and hard work has paid off to the betterment of Stout students," Lee said. "I believe we will be viewed as more concerned and responsible students in the future."

The proposal, which drew more than 50 people to the City Council meeting in November when it was first presented, originally would have made landlords keep security deposits in a separate account and pay interest to tenants.

However, landlords argued bitterly that this would create an administative nightmare for them.

The proposal was then refered to the University Community Relations Committee for review.

When no agreement was reached after refering the original proposal to the committee, a petition was formed by SSA asking that the proposal be put before the electorate.

The petition attempted to initiate a direct referrendum that would have required the approval of 15 percent of the last voter turnout in previous elections. This would have placed the proposal on the ballot in the April 7 election.

However, legal counsel Kenneth E. Schofield, quoted in a local newspaper, warned that the presence of a referendum vote on the election ballot would have encouraged students to vote in the upcoming election.

Schofield claimed that the SSA was using the referrendum to get students out to vote for the three students who are running for city council positions.

City Council member Jay Schroeder said that the revision of security deposit rules was brought up by citizens at a forum held on the campus before last year's election.

"This legislation is one of the most progressive and far-reaching proposals to meet the student interests in some time," Schroeder said.

"I believe John Lee has come a long way on this issue, and that is to his credit," Nelson said. "Lee's hard work has given the SSA one half of the success it has gained so far this year."

Under the adopted plan, landlords can keep any interest they earn over 5 percent to compensate for additional paperwork, according to Lee.

"One half million dollars of Stout student money is tied up in security deposits," Lee said, "and we're giving interest free loans to our landlords. Now students will be able to collect interest on their own money. This interest will mean $28,000 per year for students."

Lee called the ordinance "a significant step toward bringing fair play to tenant and landlord relationships."

Menomonie is the third city in Wisconsin to pass interest on a security deposit.

"Nothing else we have done or could do would impact on students more positively than the newly-enacted ordinances," Nelson said.

Nelson added "More will need to be done before the voting in April to assure that Stout student voices will have proper representation in city government."

RENT CREDIT FOR RESIDENTIAL HOUSING

- The landlord of residential premises shall provide a rent credit equivalent to five percent (5%) per annum of the full amount of the security deposit.
- This amount shall be credited to the last month's rent of the lease period.
- No rent credit shall be payable, however, for any month or months that rent was paid after the date agreed upon in the rental agreement.
- The landlord has the burden of proving that the rent was not timely paid ofr any month or months.
- This ordinance shall take effect upon the date of publication. Official minutes of the meeting in DCN next Wednesday, Jan. 28.

Welcoming non-trads—

Chancellor Robert Swanson spoke at the Non-Traditional Student Orientation on Jan. 14th. The event was designed to "generate a sense of enthusiasm and concern for the new, in-coming older students," said Toni Kunstman, president of the Organization of Adult Students Involved in Stout.

United Council

on what they feel is justified for their campuses," said Nelson. "They should be working with maximum flexibility."

United Council, which began in 1960, represents approximately 130,000 students. Any school in the UW system may become a voting member. Private schools may become associate members.

Currently, all UW system schools except Madison, LaCrosse, and EauClaire are members. Eau Claire will hold a referendum on United Council membership this spring. It is expected that if Eau Claire joins, LaCrosse will follow.

"United Council gives students a unified voice at the state and national level that we couldn't otherwise access," Nelson said.

The major purpose of United Council is to maintain open communication between the universities and to represent student views at the state and federal level.

A full-time staff in Madison works towards these goals. In addition, an executive board composed of student representatives from participating campuses meets nine times a year.

Some of the recent issues UC has dealt with are the drinking age, tuition increases, and enrollment caps, according to the SSA UC Director, Robb Zimdars.

"The results," Zimdars added, "are hard to quantify. It's hard to see exactly how much impact United Council has."

"But," Zimdars said, "United Council is heard."

At each monthly meeting, student issues are discussed by standing committees and recommendations are made on both internal policies and student concerns.

"At each meeting, concerns are discussed and suggestions are offered," said Nelson. "The full-time staff can take our direction and try to implement our ideas at Madison. Basically, we approve what the full-time staff works on."

Zimdars said, "Even if we only get one substantial thing done at a meeting, we could still affect a large number of students. And I have never been to a meeting that we didn't get something done."

At each meeting, both a Women's Affairs Senator and a Minority Affair's Senator must be present. If they are not, that school will lose voting rights for that meeting and will be placed on probation.

"The goal," Nelson said, "is to be accountable to all students."

Anyone who wishes to attend the upcoming meeting and desires to be briefed beforehand or would like their questions answered, may contact Robb Zimdars at x-2432.

Petition delivered

A petition protesting the abuse of human rights in Chile was delivered to the offices of the United Nations (UN) by the chairperson of the UW-Stout chapter of Amnesty International (AI) during Christmas vacation.

Members of the campus AI group collected 2,400 signatures from students and Menomonie community members during the closing weeks of last semester.

"They were so surprised," said Ali Vazirabadi, student chair person of AI, who delivered the petition to a representative of the Human Rights Department at the New York offices of the UN.

Vazirabadi was told that the petition from Menomonie would be sent to UN headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. A meeting on conditions in Chile will be held there during the third week of January.

"They were very positive that this was going to have some effect on the decisions made there," Vazirabadi said.

Vazirabadi said that he was told that Stout's AI chapter is the second most active organization against human rights abuses in Chile. Cornell University in New York, Vazirabadi said, was the only other campus chapter to rival the Stout group's activities.

Stout AI members were invited to bring the banner they hung on Main Street during their petition drive when they attend the organization's national meeting in San Francisco this summer.

Council formed

The School of Education and Human Services is establishing their own Dean's Student Advisory Council. This will be the first time this school has had such a group.

The purpose of the council will be to provide an avenue of communication between the dean's office and students, and to assist new freshmen and transfer students, as well as continuing students.

The council is expected to be modeled after the successful Student Advisory Council in the School of Home Economics.

Initial members of the newly-organized council are Linda Rogers, Kenneth Jaslow, James Andres, David Olson, Pamela Meredith, Susan Klawitter, Leslie Redmann and Debra Lee.

Opportunity to grow

"Get everything you can from an experience or activity, whether you are required to or not," UW-Stout Chancellor Robert S. Swanson told graduating students during first semester commencement exercises.

Speaking to approximately 580 graduates and their guests in Johnson fieldhouse on Saturday, Dec. 13, Swanson said people often view tasks as "chores" rather than "opportunities" to grow.

"Sometimes we shirk a task for one reason or another," Swanson said. "We don't view it as something to learn from, we view it as something to be avoided."

Swanson said students frequently do this when facing course selection.

"They do not look upon it as an opportunity to learn, but rather a burdensome requirement that has to be satisfied," Swanson said.

"For some people, school isn't an adventure," Swanson said. "It's a brick wall that they must collide with head on before they can get on with their lives and careers."

"Don't put things off," Swanson advised. "Find some challenge even in the simple or unwelcomed task. Opportunity is the here and now."

Water safety offered

Dates for a Red Cross Water Safety Instructor course have been set. The classes will be held at the Menomonie High School pool at 1715 5th Street in Menomonie.

Classes will be held on Tuesdays, Saturdays and three Sunday evenings. The first class will be held Tuesday, February 3, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Requirements for enrolling in the course are:

- Must have a current Advanced Lifesaving certificate.
- Must be a good swimmer.
- Must be 17 years of age or older.

For more information, call the Red Cross office at 235-3700 or District No. 1 Vocational School at 232-2685.

Campaign recognized

The UW-Stout United Way donation campaign was awarded the 1986-87 President's Award for Outstanding Effort at the Menomonie Area Chamber of Commerce Banquet on December 3.

Campaign chairpersons Cynthia Welch and Marvin Kufahl coordinated the efforts of 23 building captains, contacting 1,045 employees of the university.

The team's efforts yielded contributions totalling $16,273 from 313 people.

This is the third consecutive year that the Stout campaign has earned the award recognizing their efforts.

Student advice sought

State Senator James E. Harsdorf (R-Beldenville) is seeking members for his Student Advisory Committee, to begin in February of 1987.

The group of ten members will consist of five students from UW-Stout and five from UW-River Falls.

Qualifications for membership are:

- Students will have a strong interest in legislative and state government matters.
- Students will have a minimum grade point average of 2.75.
- Students will be in regular communication with Senator Harsdorf's office, both by mail and telephone, to advise him on matters of concern.
- Students will have a strong understanding of issues in state government effecting education and the university environment.

To apply for membership on this committee, students should submit a letter of application and a resume, along with any other qualifying credentials, to Senator James E. Harsdorf, P.O. Box 7882, Madison, Wisconsin 53707-7882.

The road to the dream

It is tragic the way Martin Luther King Day has come and gone once again this year with the most common comment on the occasion focusing on the way the holiday interfered with the beginning of this semester.

Many Americans choose to ignore the road we traveled as a nation to reach our current status in human rights.

Today, affirmative action programs are attacked for alledgedly creating reverse discrimination. Since Martin Luther King's death, America has become lazy in its pursuit of civil rights.

Dr. King's dream was that pursuit of civil rights would bring all people together in a common cause. We are a long way from realizing this dream because we are so hesitant as a nation to recognize our own racism.

In honor of Martin Luther King, we ought to spend the day examining the benefits which would result throughout our society if we practiced civil rights.

UW-Stout represents a microcosm of the problem which distressed Martin Luther King. Each year the Minority Affairs Senator complains about an inability to do anything because he/she must represent such a wide range of groups, each of which is battling for prominence in the Minority Affairs Senator's agenda.

The first step toward achieving Dr. King's dream involves recognizing the existence of racism. "Things aren't bad here," is a common comment by those who don't want to work to improve race relations.

The battle for civil rights has been long and hard and the improvements have been incremental at best. To proceed toward Martin Luther King's dream, we need to educate ourselves about the sacrifices made by so many to continue the march toward a shared equality from which we as a nation can benefit as a whole.

America is fractionalized by racial prejudice to the point that it damages our productivity due to our disunity. Dr. Martin Luther King directed America on the path toward honoring human rights and we owe to the man and to ourselves to follow through on the work he started.

Fine Line

Gossip News

Jef Maynard

I couldn't find the National Enquirer so I bought The Weekly World News, and the National Examiner. The Examiner costs 59 cents. (I didn't think that anything cost exactly 59 cents.) I've never bought one of those weeklies before but it seemed like a good idea at the time.

I have seen them at supermarket checkouts for years, but never felt the urge to throw down the change to own one. I never felt it difficult to resist those fantastic headlines: Bizarre Island Cult Worships Elvis as a God, or Billy Graham's Proof of Life After Death, or Banish Disease and Pain with the Magical Power of Jewelry.

One article of interest is about the rock band Judas Priest. The Weekly World News says that a lawsuit claims that two teenage boys tried to kill themselves after listening to Priest albums for six hours. Who wouldn't?

One boy stuck a shotgun under his chin and fired. He didn't die but according to one lawyer, "blew his face off," in the corner of a church playground. The boy will be prohibited from playing in hockey games after he recovers because of an illegal face-off.

Another article claims that scientists have interpreted a radio transmission from alien warriors' spacecrafts indicating that they intend to attack our planet on July 6, 1993. In Brazil, sightings are taking place in huge numbers, and Brazilian officials think the war of the worlds has started already. Sometimes, I hope the other side wins.

Both magazines featured stories on proof of life after death. One is about kids who were clinically dead being resuscitated and telling about some woman named Elizabeth taking them to sit on the knee of Jesus. I wonder if he asked them what they wanted for Christmas?

Billy Graham, the man with a thousand nice suits, is on the cover of the Examiner with this headline: Billy Graham's Proof of Life After Death.

It turns out that all the proof Billy needs is what is said in the Bible about the subject. It's a gift to be simple, isn't it, and Billy Graham is as gifted a man as there is.

The great part about the article is that the writer never talked to Billy, but just read some of his books and then wrote a nice meaningless article for the faithful readers. The accompanying photos make it look like Graham was the subject of a real interview.

That is the miracle of tabloid journalism. The articles rarely give standard journalistic facts, like exactly where something occurred, or what the source actually was. How the staffs of these magazines uncover the endless volume of bizarre events and miracles is hard to imagine.

Medical phenomena of miraculous proportions are common, like the Brazilian woman who got a kidney transplant and her sex changed. Within days, her voice changed and she began to sprout hair on her face and chest. Hormone treatments were no use and her breasts began to disappear.

Later she finished off the transformation with additive surgery, has taken up body building and plans to join the army.

Get this: in the 1970's, 200 crates of Elvis memorabilia were lost at sea on route to Korea. After the junk washed ashore on some nameless remote East China Sea islands, the tribespeople declared Elvis Presley a divine being and expect him to return from the sky to guide them to paradise. (Maybe Paradise, Hawaiian Style, just like the Elvis movie of the same name.)

Elvis has been renamed Du Wa Waka, and many of the natives try and dress like him, including greased pompadour hairdo's, and clothing with imitation rhinestones made from sea shells.

Apparently no records washed up in the junk or none of this would have happened. The Dutch anthropologist who is credited with the "discovery" tried singing some Elvis tunes to the folks but they didn't get the translations.

Can you imagine a Dutch scientist singing a Polynesian dialect version of "You ain't nothin but a hounddog," to a swarm of fat, pompadour-sporting natives in fake rhinestones, bell-bottoms and big, turned-up collars, all doing Elvis pelvis dances?

The ads in these papers are as wierd as things can get. Ads often revolve around miraculous tokens you can own. For a pretty cheap price you can buy the Power Shield which guarantees you a share of All the Power in The Universe. That's a heck of a deal.

It contains some element from each of 20 religious power centers, including stone from the tomb of Jesus, Blessed Linen from Fatima, water from Lourdes of France, etc., guaranteed miracles or your money back.

For a little less money, you can get six miniature Blessing Dolls from Guatemala. These little dolls look about the size of your thumbnail, and they too come with guaranteed miracles including "the person you adore or any exciting person you choose, becomes devoted just to you and brings you

Subject: The never-ending task of tidying up after students brings caring friendships

by Tracy Lea Landis

Margie Smith

Margie Smith has been a custodian at UW-Stout for the past twenty years. Part of that time, she also held a part-time job cleaning hotels, working seven days a week.

During her interview with The Stoutonia she laughed often and spoke fondly of students she had known.

Margie began her own interview by reminiscing about the sixteen years she spent cleaning in the residence halls before she transferred to Harvey Hall four years ago.

MARGIE SMITH: I been to weddings. I been to floor parties. I've joined them. If you can't beat them, they say join them.

I like them kids. I'd make each floor home-made candy every once in a while. You know, they'd have parties and they'd invite me and stuff.

I had boys for fourteen years; all boys. You'd be surprised. They'd come and ask you how to do this or do that, and can I wash this this way, can I do that?

Oh, they had to buy their mother something. Well, she's your size; what size do you take? Then they'd have to do something for class. They come and ask me all these questions, like you're doing.

Well, then I had another surgery and my girlfriend retired up here. She said, "I think it would be a lot easier for you here."

See, here you got the elevator and you stay on one floor and you don't tear the beds apart when spring comes like you do for housecleaning.

I had to do alot of lifting there and after my operation, see, I couldn't do it.

If you can't do it, there's no use lying to yourself and trying to stay there and not do your work, you know what I mean?

You have to look out for your Verdict or not?

Neubauer must be a very happy individual now; knowing that he has another or several chances of using his motor vehicle to commit another first-degree murder. Of course he is cognizant of the fact that his next chance of killing another international student would be most welcomed, especially by the jury system of Menomonie, knowing that their (verdict) would be negligent use of a motor vehicle.

It is appalling to watch democracy and the court of the land at work.

Is Menomonie or Stout safe for international and/or American students of color? Does the jury system of the court need to be examined?

I am sure Christ must have paced the Milky Way several times in search of the stars. I vividly see him collecting stars and piling them into a basket, like a woman who collects lizards and piles them into her pot. She piles them up until the pot overflows with light; until the basket overflows with light.

I am so encouraged now to use my car and kill any student at Stout. Knowing that, I have $10,000 stashed away to pay for the death or I could accumulate about $100,000 to pay for the deaths of 10 students at Stout.

Although it is a lot of money, I guess that is what student lives are worth in Menomonie.

What role does the university play in the death of students by such methods? What offices are concerned with international or American students of color?

Does the death of a student by such a violent violent method mean nothing to us?

Is this the type of impression we intend to portray to the international scene?

Are we more concerned about color than humanity?

Is nine months plus several additional years of child rearing worth $10,000 to a mother?

These are questions that need specific answers.

America's Watch

You are (whoever you are) a group of nice liberal people. You have carefully and laboriously collected a considerable body of statistics on human death and have concluded that there is something funny about them. Indeed, you have accused other countries of having such a high level of violence that (it) calls for official investigation.

Of course, you are unlikely to get an official investigation which means anything, or you are unlikely to get the truth from any official source.

Careless

I must remind you, also, that in view of the general anarchy in your country, the dangerous and careless driving on the roads and the widespread thievery, to say nothing of the prevailing rate of mayhem, rape and murder, men trying to do nasty and dangerous jobs as best they can.

Could you please, instead of tying one hand behind their backs, tie two to relieve them somewhat of an excess naive zeal.

Isaac Robinson

Ridiculous "Verdict"

If, after death, one were cognizant of the living world, it would be a grievous thing not only to know that you had been murdered, but that your life was considered so unimportant that your murderer got off with a ridiculously reduced charge. It is fortunate that death brings oblivion.

CAMPUS SLANT/ Do you think the Super Bowl gets to much publicity?

by Brian Kraimer

Mary Selkey,
F ldhood Education,

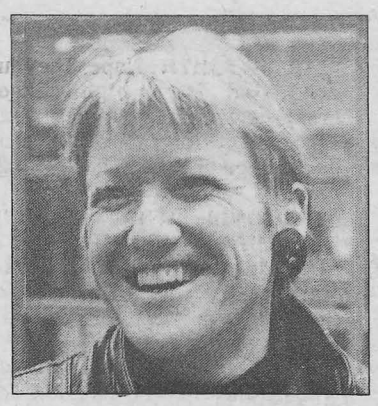
I am not really aware of a lot of Super Bowl promotion except for some displays in the stores. I really do not think it is over promoted. I basically just think it is a good time for everyone to party.

Eugene Van Roy,
Technology Education,
Sophomore,

I think football is a brutal and barbaric sport and all it teaches our young people is a nonsportsman type attitude. The Super Bowl just adds to this promotion.

Mark Daniels,
Business Administration,
Senior,

I like the way they promote the Super Bowl and I like watching the game. I think the Super Bowl is all right, everybody around the dorm gets into it and drinks a lot of beer, it is just a good time. It is just a good excuse to party.

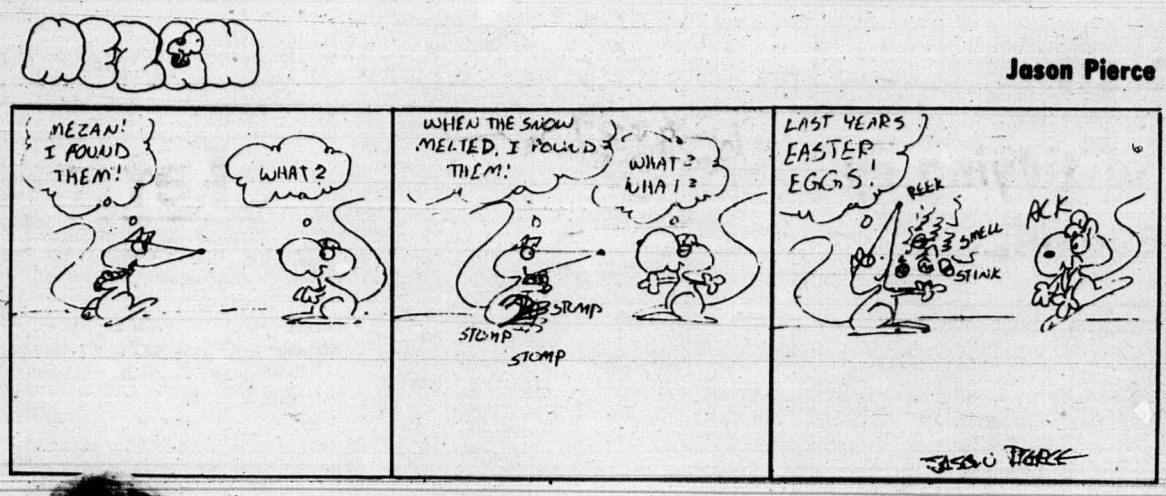


Kitty Kingston,
Teacher,
Applied Arts,

I have no interest in football. All the promotion for the Super Bowl does not really bother me, I usually just turn it off. It would be nice to have contra media on other things that are going on like art, music or theater.

Noreen Spranger,
Art,
Senior,

I do not care. I like football and will watch the Super Bowl, but I do not even care what they do with the Super Bowl to promote it. I think America is hype and the Super Bowl is just another example of this.



Seeds of Change

The Leading Cause of Death

Gene Emahiser

"I will give no deadly medicine to anyone if asked nor suggest such counsel, and in like manner, I will not give to a woman a pessary to produce abortion."
The Oath of Hippocrates

If you take a good look around yourself today, you will see the result of a world that has thrown away all absolutes. Good and bad, right and wrong, correct and incorrect, life and death; few try to hold on to the absolutes of yesteryear. If you do, you are old-fashioned, square, or worse yet, a fanatic. Well, I am proud to say that I am all of the above. In fact, I frequently refer to anyone who is anything less than completely committed to his convictions as a wimp or a fake.

Today, January 22nd, people who have conviction will demonstrate their commitment at state capitols, churches, colleges, and medical facilities. This year, many will speak up for the rights of the unborn. There will be many more who will choose to "mind their own business."

To you callous ones who can calmly sit back and relax while 1.5 million children are murdered each year, I will give you the honor of carrying the title of inhuman. Even a dumb dog cannot and will not sit by and watch a murder. On the other hand, you "superior humans" feel no shame, sense no guilt, and suffer no shame.

I fear for your souls.

Even more apathetic is the American Medical Association. As you read in the quote from The Oath of Hippocrates, each doctor who performs an abortion is guilty of breaking the very oath that each of them swears upon. They have seared their consciences.

What power could cause one of the most respected professions to look the other way on an issue it has had a clear view on? The same power that has corrupted our legal system, the political area, and the business world. Money.

The Bible says, "The love of money is the root of all evil." Here in the A.M.A. you can see Evil sticking up its ugly little head.

It's just a matter of mathematics. A million and a half abortions each year at a cost of $150 - $350 each comes to about 375 million dollars that would not have been there before.

Legal abortion on demand opened the floodgates for other hideous acts, all in the name of medicine. Fetal Experimentation was unheard of 25 years ago. Now it is commonplace. The hideous part is that the fetuses are taken from their mothers alive, kicking and screaming.

Former anesthetist at Magee-Women's Hospital in Pittsburgh, Mrs. W. Dick testified to the Pennsylvania Abortion Commission that "it was repulsive to watch live fetuses (premature infants) being packed in ice while still moving and trying to breathe, then being rushed to a laboratory." Mrs. Dick requested to be excused from helping with the abortions. Her request "was denied... with threats of being fired, harassment, intimidation, restrictions in assigned duties, etc." She finally quit her job.

The A.M.A. maintains that as long as it is legal, it must be ethical. That kind of thinking would have kept the Blacks as slaves in 1865 and would have never given women the right to vote.

If the A.M.A. does not pull its head out of the sand soon, the United States will start enduring a self-inflicted judgement.

Already, we can see the effects of the shortage of young mouths to feed. Ask a farmer. Schools are shutting down all across the country. The cause? Lack of enrollment.

So today, tomorrow, and next week, make a decision to speak out for the unborn. Stand up and be counted for the rights of the innocent.

Abortion is not only a crime that kills not only the child, but the consciences of all involved.

health sometimes.

In the dorm we used them big vacuum cleaners. Have you ever seen them?

STOUTONIA: NO.

MARGIE SMITH: Well, they're about two hundred pounds. They don't have an elevator in the dorms and you had to carry all the heavy equipment up the stairs.

So when my girlfriend retired, then I stepped in here.

STOUTONIA: ARE YOU FROM MENOMONIE?

MARGIE SMITH: Yes. Been here all my life. Graduated from Menomonie High. Didn't go to college though. I didn't care for school like you do.

STOUTONIA: DO YOU HAVE CHILDREN?

MARGIE SMITH: I have two girls.

STOUTONIA: DID THEY GO TO COLLEGE?

MARGIE SMITH: Nope. They just graduated from high school; crazy, got married right away. They always promised they were going to go on. I said once you get married, you won't do it.

STOUTONIA: WHAT KIND OF PAY DOES A CUSTODIAN GET?

MARGIE SMITH: They usually start you out with a little bit over the minimum wage and you have to work your way up.

I think I started at $1.68 an hour when I started twenty years ago. So you just keep working your way up a little bit.

You get two weeks paid vacation after five years and then after five, you get three weeks. So I get four weeks paid vacation now.

Well, the men make more money than I do and I been here longer than one.

STOUTONIA: WHY?

MARGIE SMITH: I don't know. We've often wondered that.

I do the same thing he does and yet the men get more money than we get. Some that started ten years ago, they don't get any more. But the ones that started before; they told us one time they were getting 60 cents an hour more than us women were getting.

Yet, I have to go out and shovel, I have to wash windows, just like he does.

But then they said that was Women's Lib.

STOUTONIA: YOU MENTIONED THAT YOU GET A PAID VACATION. WHAT DO YOU DO WITH YOUR VACATIONS?

MARGIE SMITH: Last year I went to Florida and New Orleans. I went with eight girls from Menomonie. Our husbands wouldn't go because it was too long to be with us yakking women.

We spent most of our time on Bourbon Street and it was fascinating.

One glimpse of the jury left no doubt that Michael D. Neubauer was being judged by a jury of his peers. There is no doubt that Neubauer could receive a "fair" trial in Dunn County, but did the murder victim receive a fair hearing? I think not. Nowhere, it seems, was the sympathy with the murdered. Most news articles on the subject informed the reader of Neubauer's recent marriage. Neubauer's mother sat in the courtroom during the trial.

Did Sani Tela's family need to be flown over to sit in the courtroom for this case to be heard? did the jury need to see the tears and grief in the eyes of Tela's mother to feel sympathy; to understand humanity regardless of color or national origin?

A week before Sani Tela's murder, a friend was having a quiet drink in the same bar. A "delegation" of four came to where he was sitting, threatened him, and said, "We don't allow Niggers in this bar." He left. Sani Tela did not leave. Sani Tela's murder was a culmination of unchecked racism and American arrogance. Why did the owner of the bar or the bartender allow this "delegation" to continue? Why were the police not called to the bar during the time Tela was beaten up?

The brutality of that night is frightening. Neubauer put a cigarette out on Tela's nose. Another man smashed the back of Tela's head against a table at least 10 times. Later, Tela was run over by a car driven by Neubauer. Neubauer, who claims to have heard the "Clunk, Clunk" and then driven off. Might Sani Tela still be alive if Neubauer had stopped to assist him? In his final argument to the jury, District Attorney Michael Furnstahl said it would be impossible not to see a man lying in the alley before driving over him.

Merry Christmas, Menomonie. Peace on Earth, Good Will to Humanity. We need it in this town.

Bottom Line

The New Sex?

Rich Brueckner

"There is a deeper world than this."--Gordon Summer

The guy next to me in the bar is telling his buddy that that he's had at least 12 Stout women in bed. They both agree that this is an acceptable record that needs improvement.

Tom Brokaw is on the television above us. He is saying that anyone who has been sexually active should have himself or herself tested for AIDS and that fewer singles are picking up strangers.

He says that blood banks now have singles' nights where you can meet potential dates and get to see the results of each other's blood tests. The people they show look too anemic to be interested in sex.

My companion says children shouldn't be able to watch all this explicit sexual discussion on television. The bartender agrees and changes the channel to a Madonna video that flirts with child pornography.

Somehow we get on the subject of capital punishment. We surmise that AIDS will eventually make any prison term a death sentence.

A friend comes up to me with a supermarket tabloid that he says should make good column material. It says that Mr. Blackwell has named Vanna White as one of the worst dressed women of 1986.

"If I ever see that girl without a pushup bra, I won't believe it," he says. We joke that men all over America would pay handsomely for the opportunity.

Vanna makes for good conversation. My friend knows some guys who made a videotape of nothing but Vanna coming out and rotating.

Blackwell says she looks like a blow-up Barbie doll in a Ziegfeld costume. This gives me the idea for a Teddy Ruxpin/Vanna doll that propositions you and rolls its eyes.

"Wheel of Fortune" has some kind of subliminal sexuality. The tabloid says it is a combination of cleavage and Pat Sayjak's uncanny resemblance to Larry on the Dr. Ruth Show.

Next to the Vanna article, I notice a story about the new "contragestation" pill that aborts early pregnancy by inducing a period.

I heard Brokaw say that this pill could drastically alter the sexuality of our entire society. The tabloid's headline has a different angle: "The death of PMS?"

I look over at the guy with the dozen notches in his bedpost; he is leaving with a drunken girl who hangs all over him. Ironically, she is wearing a -13 football jersey. I guess Menomonie is just slow to catch the monogamy wave.

As the evening draws to a close, I notice a girl I've been seeing come in with a different date. I sadly smile and wonder if this too is progress.

ARTS

Onofrio found order in sticks and squares

by Jef Maynard

About the Judy Onofrio Exhibit:

The walls of your beautifully colored house collapse, topple down in sticks, squares and layers.

Coming home that night you see the walls in pieces on the ground and you say: "this is not my beautiful house, this is not my beautiful house."

Your neighbors' brown and gray and white houses are all perfect in every 90 degree way, and in every 90 degree sense.

You spend the night at the Howard Johnson's because the Holiday Inn is booked full up with a convention of cedar post salesmen. Every room is perfectly arranged and all the items match in a way that is frightening and numbing at the same time.

You say to yourself, "This is Howard Johnson's," and you go to sleep.

The next morning you arrive with the sun to sort through the red and turquoise and blue fragments of your walls looking for your cat, clean socks and unbroken cereal bowls.

Having travelled through your perfectly ordered neighborhood, you see the brown and gray and white homes of your friends and neighbors all standing in wholesome rows and outstanding in their perfect correctness.

But when you arrive at your address and you see the place when your house stood, there are your neighbors staring at your once upon a time beautifully colored home.

They stand in perfect rows near your rose bushes. They see the colored sticks and squares and layers, rearranged not like walls any longer, but like flattened bits from a kaleidescope seen from the "wrong" end.

They feel sorry for you because your house is a wreck, it is not in order, it is divided against itself in every possible way and direction.

Where there were once walls, now lay colored flats gragments and sticks, window squares and layers of wall boards.

Your neighbors are firm in their beliefs that right angles are the right angles, that parallel is paramount.

Pausing for a moment with a cup of hot coffee from the local Red Cross disaster team that has set up on your front lawn, you think back to your childhood.

You remember your mother's dislike for your untidy room where freedom was the order of the day and disorder was the practise made perfect.

On Saturday mornings she would say, "Clean your room or else..."

The end, the goal in her eyes was straightening. The scheme was to achieve parallel lines or right angles wherever possible.

Papers, magazines and books in a helter skelter heap were a "mess." The same sequence of papers, magazines and books, reordered into a stack with parallel edges and right angles aligned was "straight."

You know the same holds true for the Western World and your neighbors, this perfect sense of order.

Their tables are set with placemats, silverware and napkins all set parallel to each other and at right angles to the edge of the table.

Coffee table books about the Grand Canyon and the history of postage stamps in America are arranged in the same way. Bath towels are hung parallel to each other, His and Hers.

But when you lift the fragments of your beautifully colored walls off in layers, the broken sticks, squares and window frames are no longer square, parallel or ordered.

You sense another order is possible. In some ways it is a random order, but more resembling an unknownable, fatalistic order of consequential happenstance. You feel acceptance of this new order.

You take the layers off and start to nail the walls back together combining the random with the select until you achieve an assemblage never seen before. You add paint to enhance the shapes and spaces of this new order.

Judy Orofrio has found a new order to her liking and has hung it in Furlong Gallery for our viewing pleasure through Feb. 6.

Students view the opening of Judy Onofrio's Exhibition at J. Furlong Gallery. The show features Onofrio's achieved assemblage's "never seen before" consisting of layered sticks, squares and color. The show will run through Feb. 6. There is no admission. Gallery hours are from 10 am - 5 pm. Onofrio's work proves to be exciting.

Marty Bear speaks on: dating sex, music and . . . . "passing gas"

by Stephanie Weiss

Four of the most popular topics of conversation in the college world today seem to be dating, sex, music and passing gas.

These four items were the focus of comedian/musician Marty Bear's performance. Bear joked about the fears of dating, flatulating on a first date, falling in love (or lust) and other such anxieties Thursday, January 15 in the Union's Great Hall.

According to Bear there are four stages of love "relative to passing gas." During stage one of a romance, you and your date are the two only "non-farting humans." Moving into the second stage of love, you or your date may "fart by accident and giggle about it." As you progress into the third stage of love "you begin to fart at each other in spite," and in the fourth stage of love, "nobody cares anymore about farting." Sound familiar?

Bear didn't only get the audience laughing, he got them involved. The audience, with a bit of sweet talking, was persuaded into crooning, in off key voices, the chorus of Don McCleans' "American Pie."

During another song, Bear got five guys from the audience on stage. These gentlemen were called upon to "gyrate like Elvis Presley." Once past their initial embarassment the guys cut loose and received a nice round of applause. One Elvis impersonator, Tim Schulstad, simply said of the evening, "It was great!" Gail Doerr, a laughing audience member, said Bear's performance was "very titillating."

Beneath the surface of Bear's lighthearted attitude lurks a serious man. Bear is a supporter of SUDS (Students Understanding Drinking Sensibly), who co-sponsored his show with the Performing Arts, and also owns a company--Alcohol Awareness Promotions.

He has become more involved with BACCHUS (the mother organization of SUDS) in the past two years since the drinking age has been increased and said about 25% of his shows are done through BACCHUS or are kick-off events for non-alcoholic establishments. Bear enjoys doing alcohol awareness promotion performances, but wishes "more schools, in Wisconsin especially, would take note that there was fun here (at Stout) without alcohol."

Bear hopes his company, which prints t-shirts and bumper stickers with slogans such as "Drunk drivers do it in the Emergency Room," will increase alcohol awareness. He said the company's products are meant to shock the public and "get them to react," because whether it is "good or bad, it opens a door so they can talk (about alcohol and its abuse)."

Called "one of the most recommended acts in the country" by /Newsweek/ magazine, Bear has recorded two albums, "Road to Home" and "Marty Bear Live." These albums may be purchased by sending $6 "check, money order or quarter rolls" to: Marty Bear, Box 816, Norwalk, Connecticut, 06852.

Marty Bear provided an audience at the Great Hall with a lot of fun--without alcohol. Bear is recognized for his efforts to promote alcohol awareness. The event was co-sponsored by SUDS and the Performing Arts Commission.

Eggert artistically connects poetry with economics in latest book

by Noreen Spraner

Ever thought that economics and poetry had a connection? Jim Eggert thinks so, and that there should be one. Connecting the sciences and art would be beneficial to everyone, making the world a better place. It is up to the writers of today and tomorrow to bridge the gap between such timeless themes as love, and the beauty of nature, and the more concrete concerns of our industrialized world, such as the bottom line.

In his book, Milton Freidman, Thoreau & Grandfather Pine, Eggert attempts to bridge that gap.

It's a collection of essays, and poetry thinly disguised as another economics book. Hopefully by putting Milton Freidman's name on the title people who are more concerned with the bottom line may be tricked into reading a little poetry.

"I think that there is a lot of suffering going on out there. We have mergers and buy outs, unemployment and anxiety over unemployment. There is a lot of pain caused by economics. Where can people express themselves?

I am trying to provide a vehicle that those individuals can respond to. I am trying to invite people who normally wouldn't read poetry or essays in, give the powers that be a look at a more life-enhancing viewpoint."

This book is quite a collection of essays and poetry. The book is arranged somewhat chronologically, the poetry and essays that relate to Eggert's youth are more in the front, with work relating to to the later years in the back.

The essays and poetry seem to encompass a lot of life's aspects, from some economic theory. (Eggert is an admirer of Friedman) to high jumping as a personal sport. There are also poems that deal with life's quiet moments, alone, in company or in nature.

It is very important for today's business people to be in touch with the issues that effect people's lives. "I would think a liberally educated business person will make a better executive. They will be more sensitive to economic and environmental issues.

I think the Japanese have more of a tradition. They have executives who write haiku poetry for example, and it doesn't seem to hurt their economic prosperity."

Eggert's essays and poems cover a wide range of human experience. They may make one take another look at some long held beliefs, attitudes, and even habits. Or they will make a reader more appreciative of their own experience during a quiet and reflective moment.

Any woman can nod her head over "On the Uselessness of Men," a very thought provoking essay on who really does the work that keeps life going.

How many people bother to fix anything beside their car anymore? Any American should be compelled to read "The Coming Repair Age," because it captures the essence of the idea of preciousness in objects. That the things of this world are precious, to be treasured cared for fixed over and over again, acquiring in the process beauty, and character like art objects, or perhaps the kind of beauty that only age can give.

What is real beauty, value, and what are the things that really enhance one's life? Eggert attempts to answer those questions. His poems, especially toward the end of the book, are thoughtful, and very sensitive reflections of life's events. The quiet moments, that not too many of us have time for anymore, in our hectic traipsing about lives, plugged into our Walkman's or what not, trying to create enough noise to drown out the sound of our own thoughts.

There have been two other books published by Eggert. They are short books that really do simplify economics. There is also another book about constructing low-cost earth sheltered housing.

He is dismayed at how hard it is for new, unpublished writers to be published. "You have to have a track record, have some successful books, which is a dilema. I'm a little annoyed that good writers have a hard time getting that first book in print."

Milton Friedman, Thoreau and Grandfather Pine can be purchased at area bookstores, Walden, and the bookstore in the Student Center.

"The Super Chili Bowl"

Denise Cain

One of the high points of my Christmas vacation was the removal of my four wisdom teeth. It all came true when my friend of eleven years, Mr. Orthadontist, informed me that I had to have them surgically removed before I resumed my college career.

Actually, I think every teenager and young adult tingles with excitement anticipating this mile stone of life. I certainly was no exception. The best thing about my big day was that it occured only two days before I was to return to Stout.

Getting my wisdom teeth out was not as painful as the horror stories I was entertained with by my dear friends. There were some good points to the experience. I got looped on the anesthesia, the medication made me spacey, and I got to eat ice cream all of the time.

The only side effect I suffered from the surgery was the nausea brought on by excessive football games on every network station. I would by laying on the couch, ice packs all over my head, and there would be Jay Schroeder of the Redskins playing the most important game of his life. The announcers are screaming with excitement, my dad and brothers are jumping with excitation, and I am spitting blood into a plastic pail.

I am delirious that the super bowl is this weekend because it marks the end of another football season. To help celebrate this occassion, I thought it would be a great time to plan a chili get together. Chili get togethers are easy because you can have all the food prepared ahead of time; they are fairly inexpensive, and they produce only a small amount of dirty dishes.

I got my first chili recipe from Bill Karrmann, a senior in H & R at Stout. Bill said that Chicken Chili is "simple as hell" to make and perfect for parties. Bill feels he developed his nack for cooking from the years he spent cooking side by side with his mother, Suzanne, in Manitowoc, Wisconsin. Bill recommends serving his chili with grated sharp cheddar cheese and 34-degree Kingsbury beer.

Bill's Chicken Chili
32 8-oz. servings

5 lbs. pull chicken
3 oz. margerine
2 oz. chicken stock
3 cloves fresh garlic
3/4 lb. chopped celery
4 & 1/2 cups salsa sauce
1/2 lb. yellow onions
1 Tbsp. salt
1 tsp. basil
4 oz. green chilis
12 oz. tomato paste
46 oz. tomato juice
15 oz. kidney beans

Take chicken and cut into cubes or strips and sautee in margerine. Have the rest of the ingredients ready to use. Transfer all ingredients into large pot. Cover and simmer over low heat, stirring occasionally. Cook 30 minutes or until celery is tender.

Next we return to the home of Bob O'Reilly. Bob as you remember, gave some delightful recipes for new off-campus cooks last fall. Bob said that his cooking has been coming along nicely and his first cookbook should be on sale by Summer Session II at the famed University Bookstore.

Bob's 10-Alarm Chili

1 lb. ground beef
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 can stewed tomatoes
1 can dark red kidney beans
1 can tomato paste
2-4 Tbsp. chili powder
2-4 Tbsp. cayenne pepper various flavors such as oregano, garlic, basil, cumen or Dijon mustard to taste
2 bottles Old Milwaukee beer

Brown ground beef with onions and green peppers. Combine in large pot with rest of ingredients except for beer. Simmer all day adding small amounts of beer as it cooks. Keep one beer for yourself to drink as you are sweating over the hot flame. Top chili with parmesian cheese and cheddar cheese and Goldfish crackers.

One Point Perspective

All in a name

Jean-Marie Dauplaise

"What? Tina Marie Who?" These were the words spoken to me over the phone at Merle Norman when I tried to reserve an appointment there last week. No, I was not meeting EVERYONE'S favorite pop artist, Tina Marie at Merle Norman for an interview during a manicure session. I was trying to tell the woman at the other end of the receiver my name.

Being called Tina Marie is not the worst misinterpretation I've ever been confronted with. I was once referred to by an instructor my freshman year as Jean-Marie Duplex in front of about 200 people in 210 Applied Arts. Thanks a lot buddy. Do I look that much like a two family dwelling?

Even the Stoutonia, my beloved employer, has so far failed to print my by line correctly. It's Jean-Marie (Yes, that's a hyphen, and yes it belongs there) Dauplaise, which is pronounced Doo-plaze. It's not Doo-play, or Dow-plozz, or Duh-pless or Duplex. The Stoutonia's err is minor however, in comparison to the fact that it was not until this November, during my fourth year of attending this fine learning institution, that Stout's Registration and Records Dept. has agreed to spell it properly.

The only way I've found to combat such problems is to not use my name at all. This is highly impractical of course and does not particularly appeal to me. It's not that I don't like my name, I just don't like it mutilated.

When on the phone, especially with persons of limited mental capacity, I lie. Yes, I've been forced to borrow the names of innocent people to avoid personal inconvenience. For instance, my roommate, Julie Smith, has ordered many more pizzas than she's aware of. I paid for them, and ate them of course, but I did order them under false pretenses. Sorry, Julie.

When face to face with someone in need of my name, I must spell it with great care, as if I were a first grade teacher speaking to a slow student. "J , E , A , N , hyphen..." "Huh?", I'm interrupted. "Hyphen, like a dash. It's like Bobby-Sue or Jim-Bob. Jean hyphen Marie." And so it goes.

Of course by now you're wondering what all this has to do with the arts and why this is an arts column. My point is that I think it is unfair that unless you are very famous, if your name is foreign or unusual its just too damn bad.

Who'd be dumb enough to slaughter Mondrian's name? Or Botticelli's, Degas', Casatt's, Klimt's or Munch's. Negating some freshmen in Intro to Art History, few people would dare desecrate the names of such masters.

I'm certainly not comparing myself or anyone else whose name is abused daily to artistic geniuses. I'd just like a little of the patience people take when learning their names to surface when they are learning my name. I'm sure many people will agree with me.

Would Da Vinci's name be as enduring, I wonder, if his last name was Johnson and his first name Fred? Of course his talent and genius would not go unnoticed, but his name possesses a mystery and intrigue not connoted by a generic or common name.

The elegance and mystery of foreign and unique names does not only apply to individuals. Would you rather buy Dom Perignon or Cold Duck? Chicken Cordon Bleu or Chicken Breast stuffed with Moldy Cheese Rolled in Bread Crumbs?

I have nothing against the Nelson's, Jones', and Johnson's of the world, I'd just like them to appreciate and take the time to learn different names. Because of my own sufferings I've been a lot more patient learning the names of our Finnish neighbors at our cabin in Brule, WI. If you think French is tough try Finnish.

If you've got an art history class this semester, try to learn and appreciate the names of everyone you study. At least to spare your instructor the agony of hearing Mondrian referred to as Montry-Ann. And if you can't do that, at least don't call Jasper Johns "J.J."

Spontaneous Combustion

Sue me, sue you

James 'Unk' Falkofske

Everyone wants to get in on the act. Lately, everyone and his mother screams "I'll sue!" and off they go to court. Suing others has become a national pastime. It is now so popular that we now have two television shows devoted to it. I'm sure that every true-blooded American has sat before his television set to watch an episode or two of Judge Waptusies People's (is ignorant) Court, or the ever popular (You were a lousy lover, so I'm going to) Divorce (you) Court.

Insurance companies love the idea of everyone suing each other. They get to raise their premiums, and they can blame it all on lawyers! The lawyers don't care, they're all out having lunch with the judge. The judge doesn't care, he's planning his new television show.

Well, here we go again, but only with the record companies. A small rap label (alias Sugar Hill Records) is in the process of suing a large record label (alias MCA records) for a reported $240 million. The story grows as one of the key figures in the suit is already serving a prison term.

How did this soap opera start? In 1983, a man by the name of Salvatore Pisello (allegedly tied to organized crime) was acting as a representative for MCA records. He "negotiated" with Sugar Hill to allow MCA to distribute and promote records for the Sugar Hill label.

Now Sugar Hills is accusing MCA of selling 3000 promotional records for cash and for charging for promotional services never rendered. They are also accusing MCA of failing to deliver $191,638 in royalties for the Sugar Hill song that appeared on the first MIAMI VICE soundtrack album.

MCA said that it was "outraged" over the suit. MCA went on to say that the suit was a ploy by the smaller record label to avoid dealing with its own "massive fraud and material breaches" in dealings with the MCA label. The statement went on to say that the suit was an avoidance tactic against MCA Records' claims and other "real" issues.

Sometimes I have to laugh at what goes on behind closed doors. MCA has not filed a counter suit. Does this indicate that they really have not "real" issues to settle. Furthermore, just like the negotiations over the Challenger space shuttle claims, the suit is suggested to be settled out of court.

What does this mean to the consumer, the college-poor record buyer. Nothing, except another excuse for both labels to raise their record prices once more. I know I may be pushing the point, but after all, "it's only money!"
